MOSCOW, MONDAY, JUNE 19-(AP)-FINLAND'S NAZI-AID AND LAST MAIN DEFENSE SYSTEM, THE OLD MANNERHEIM LINE, BROKE YESTERDAY UNDER THE POWERFUL ASSAULT OF RUSSIA'S LENINGRAD FRONT TROOPS WHICH SEIZED THE LINE'S WESTERN COAST ANCHOR AT KOIVISTO AND STORMED TO WITHIN 17 MILES OF VIIPURI, A COMMUNIQUE ANNOUNCED LAST NIGHT.

THE SHATTERING OF THE MANNERHEIM FORTIFICATIONS AND QUICK SEIZURE OF VIIPURI IN THE 1939-40 WINTER WAR ENDED THAT STRUGGLE WITH FINLAND'S CAPITULATION. THE SWIFT PENETRATION OF THE LINE THIS TIME INDICATED THAT FINNISH RESISTANCE WAS FAILING RAPIDLY.

AMONG MORE THAN 100 POINTS CAPTURED BY THE RUSSIANS DURING THE DAY WAS RAUTU NEAR THE END OF THE KARELIAN ISTHMUS FRONT WHICH EXTENDS EASTWARD FROM THE GULF OF FINLAND TO LAKE LADOGA.

THERE ARE SIGNS THAT THIS OFFENSIVE, WHILE OF MAJOR IMPORTANCE IN THE AIM OF KNOCKING FINLAND OUT OF THE WAR, WAS ONLY A SIDE SHOW TO THE RED ARMY AS A WHOLE.

A SUPPLEMENTARY BULLETIN SAID THE RED ARMY AIR FORCE HAD BOMBED GERMAN AIRDROMES IN THE BARANOVICHI, PINSK AND MINSK REGIONS OF WHITE RUSSIA, SOFTENING UP AN INVASION ROUTE TO WARSAW IN POLAND.

A FURTHER OFFENSIVE, CARRYING OUT THE RUSSIAN PART OF THE TEHERAN PLEDGE OF COMBINED BLOWS AT GERMANY FROM EAST, WEST AND SOUTH, IS EXPECTED.

RUSSIA'S LENINGRAD FORCES ALREADY HAD BROKEN TWO STRONG FINNISH LINES AMID THE LAKES AND FORESTS OF THE KARELIAN ISTHMUS BEFORE BREACHING THE MANNERHEIM BELT.

I HAVE JUST RETURNED FROM A VISIT TO THE ISTHMUS. I WAS WITH THE FIRST PARTY OF FOREIGN CORRESPONDENTS TO PENETRATE KARELIA SINCE IT BECAME A BATTLEFIELD IN 1939.

RUSSIAN TROOPS USED A "BLOCKADE METHOD" TO SUPPRESS INDIVIDUAL POSITIONS, CRAWLING UP UNDER COVER OF AN ARTILLERY BARRAGE AND SMOKE SCREEN, POURING IN INCENDIARY FLUID AND PLACING DYNAMITE AT VULNERABLE SECTIONS TO BLOW UP THE FORTS.

JUN 19 1944

AFTER SLICING THROUGH THIS LINE, THE RED ARMY BY-PASSED TERIYOKI TO THE EAST, CAPTURED THE TOWN, AND QUICKLY PRESSED FORWARD TO THE MANNERHEIM LINE.

THE FINNS WERE UNDERSTOOD TO HAVE DONE LESS WORK REPAIRING THE MANNERHEIM LINE THAN THEY HAD IN BUILDING THE RAIVOLA-YOKI LINE, WHICH THEY STARTED IN 1942 AFTER THE BATTLE OF STALINGRAD AND CONSIDERED THEIR MAIN DEFENSE.

THE MAIN RUSSIAN ADVANCE WAS MADE ALONG THE COAST OF THE GULF OF FINLAND, WHERE ONE COLUMN DROVE FROM TERIYOKI TOWARD THE COASTAL MANNERHEIM FORTRESS OF KOIVISTO.

ANOTHER COLUMN BROKE THROUGH A DEFILE BETWEEN TWO LAKES, AND PASSED THE ROAD JUNCTION OF USSIKIRKKO LESS THAN TWO MILES FROM THE MANNERHEIM LINE WHILE A THIRD PRESSED ALONG THE TERIYOKI-VIIPURI RAILROAD.

JUN 19 1944

RED ARMY OFFICERS SAID THE FINNS WERE FIGHTING LESS FIERCELY THAN DURING THE FIRST WAR. THEY ARE MORE POORLY CLOTHED AND ARE SURRENDERING MORE EASILY. ONE THOUSAND PRISONERS WERE TAKEN IN THE FIRST TWO DAYS OF THE OFFENSIVE.

THE MAIN MANNERHEIM FORTRESSES OF SUMI, KHOTINEN AND ILVES STILL BLOCK THE RUSSIAN PATH TO VICTORY.

ONLY FINNISH TROOPS HAVE BEEN MET SO FAR BUT THE PRESENCE OF SOME GERMAN OFFICERS HAS BEEN DETECTED. AS THEY WITHDREW INTO THE MANNERHEIM LINE THE FINNS RESORTED TO THEIR OLD TACTICS OF LEAVING SNIPER GROUPS BEHIND.

THE FINNS ARE UNDERSTOOD TO HAVE SOME BRISTOL BLENHEIM (BRITISH) BOMBERS AND SOME MESSERSCHMITT FIGHTERS, BUT THE CONSTANT DRONE WE HEARD OVER THE FORESTS CAME ENTIRELY FROM RUSSIAN PLANES WHICH DOMINATED THE SKIES.

THE SOVIET AIR FORCE HAS TREMENDOUS AIR SUPERIORITY, EVEN IN THE FACE OF GERMAN FORMATIONS STATIONED ON THE KARELIAN ISTHMUS, THE FINNS SAID. THEY REPORTED THE RUSSIANS WERE THROWING AS MANY AS 2,000 PLANES INTO THE CAMPAIGN FROM 10 AIRFIELDS IN THE LENINGRAD AREA. FINNISH COMMUNICATIONS WERE REPORTED BADLY DISRUPTED.

IN STOCKHOLM PREDICTIONS WERE FREELY VOICED THAT THE FALL OF VIIPURI MIGHT CAUSE THE FINNS TO SUE FOR PEACE.

NAZIS RETREAT TO LINES OUTSIDE BIG FRENCH PORT

Veteran American Troops Push to Within Eight Miles of City.

TAKE MANY PRISONERS

Bricquebec Is Captured, Montebourg By-Passed by Advancing Forces.

JUN 20 1944

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Tuesday, June 20.—(AP) Veteran U. S. troops in a swift 10-mile smash through crumbling resistance hurled thousands of trapped Germans back onto their main hill defense line only six miles south of Cherbourg yesterday as big American guns began the siege of France's third largest port.

Unofficial estimates said from 25,000 to 50,000 Germans were trapped at the end of the second week of Allied invasion.

Headquarters Communique No. 28 said of the American sweep: "The Allies' stranglehold on the Cherbourg peninsula has been strengthened by a series of local advances."

Eight Miles from City

Dispatches direct from the field at 7 p.m. last night (1 p.m. Eastern War time) said American spearheads were within eight miles of the prize port after doubling the width of their steel band shearing off the top of the peninsula.

The Americans were on the verge of their biggest victory since the invasion, bearing down swiftly on the primary German defense line outside Cherbourg.

The headquarters communique said a German attack had been repulsed near Tilly-Sur-Seulles and noted increased enemy shelling at Caen, on the British-Canadian end of the front in the east. Allied warships continued to give support on the eastern flank by engaging enemy mobile batteries.

An officer in the field predicted the fate of Cherbourg would be decided on the German defense line which American troops now had practically reached.

Front dispatches said the Americans pushing up from the south had captured more than 1,000 Germans during the day and were overrunning the few machine-gun posts and sniper nests forming rearguards for the Nazis fleeing into the hills.

The Americans captured Bricquebec, a sizeable town five miles below the main German defense line around Cherbourg, and because of the general Nazi disorganization it was considered probably that Valognes, a few miles to the northeast and 10 miles from Cherbourg, also had been taken by other units which suddenly by-passed Montebourg.

The next few hours should disclose whether the Germans have only improvised defenses below Cherbourg, and whether their port batteries facing out to sea can be turned inland against the advancing Yanks.

"They may try to make Cherbourg another Sevastopol," an officer told Associated Press front correspondent Don Whitehead. "There is little doubt they have been ordered to fight to the last."

Although headquarters did not identify the troops racing in from the south, it appeared they were the Ninth division, which captured Bizerte 13 months ago.

Wheeling northward from St. Jacques de Nehou and Barneville near the west coast, the Yanks in an overall gain of 10 miles rolled through Bricquebec, an important highway town 11 miles south of Cherbourg, and hurled the Germans three miles beyond the city.

The badly mauled German 77th and 709th divisions did not even contest Bricquebec, whose capture outflanked the strong German position at Valognes, 6 1-2 miles to the northeast.

Valognes, 10 miles southeast of Cherbourg, itself was being threatened by the regular U. S. Fourth division, which defeated 16 German divisions in various actions in the first World war. The Fourth bypassed Montebourg, leaving units to fight a street battle inside the city, and pushed on toward Valognes.

Yanks Exploit Break-Through

Whitehead said of the push up the west coast and middle of the peninsula: "In three campaigns I never have seen an army take such swift and decisive advantage of a break-through as the Americans have done in the past two days.

"They are exploiting the breakthrough to the hill and not giving the enemy time to recover from the paralyzing blows they received when the doughboys knifed their way with stunning suddenness across the peninsula."

Sweating American infantrymen, some of whom have fought almost without pause for more than four days, had smashed one German break-out attempt Sunday, and in an overnight action had taken 700 more prisoners.

American artillery began an intensive shelling of German gun emplacements and installations at Cherbourg, exercising maximum care for the civilian population.

German demolitions at Cherbourg were not expected to long delay Allied use of the port once it is seized.

Whitehead told of seeing a stream of prisoners slogging along the roads, bewildered expressions on their faces and guarded by American tommygunners.

"In some sectors it is like Tunisia when German resistance broke suddenly and confusion swept through the ranks of Col. Gen. Jurgen von Arnim's and Marshal Erwin Rommel's armies."

La Haye Threatened

Other American units swinging southward were threatening La Haye de Puits, 24 miles below Cherbourg, field dispatches said, and the Monday morning Allied communique said the belt across the peninsula was being "strengthened and widened."

On the western side of the peninsula the Americans now hold a cordon at least 14 miles wide, from the area north of Bricquebec south to St. Lo-d'Ourville. The latter town is six miles northwest of La Haye.

A dispatch from Associated Press Correspondent William Smith White at Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's 21st army group headquarters said it was estimated unofficially that the trapped Germans around Cherbourg might number as high as 50,000.

American airmen who already have killed or wounded at least 800 Germans in the Cherbourg trap still were strafing the enemy. The roads were strewn with Nazi dead and wrecked equipment, including horse-drawn guns and supply carts.

This combined infantry-artillery-aerial slaughter will continue until Cherbourg is captured.

Nazis Shell Carentan

The only sign of a major German counter-attack aimed at relieving the trapped Nazis was the rising thunder of an enemy shelling of floodgirt Carentan at the middle of the American line, 28 miles southeast of Cherbourg. Carentan is only six miles inland from the sea.

American troops holding Carentan have hurled back the Germans four to six miles west and south of Carentan. Any German counter-thrust must be made through areas which the Germans themselves flooded in the original effort to hold Carentan.

On the eastern end of the 100-mile front the British made slight gains at Tilly-Sur-Seulles, fighting their way into the northern part of the shell-torn hillside town. The Germans were clinging doggedly to the southern half.

A slugging match continued in an arc around Caen, 11 miles east of Tilly, with positions unchanged. But in the British salient across the Orne river northeast of Caen a field dispatch said the enemy had been thrown out of a wooded section. Many Germans were captured after being flushed from the underbrush. Artillery duels continued.

Nazi Defenses Stiffen

German defenses had stiffened six miles northeast of St. Lo, mid-Normandy communications city threatened by the Americans who had taken the Cerisy forest between Tilly and Carentan. The situation there has been static for days.

At 21st army group headquarters the German operations in the Tilly area were termed an "active defense," but at the same time they were considered an uneconomical use of German armor. While the point was not officially made, it was obvious the Germans were suffering a shortage of anti-tank guns in the sector.

The end of the second week of the invasion found the weather still hampering Allied beachhead unloading. Strong winds sent big waves crashing against the Normandy shores.

Allied unloading areas on the coast now were out of range of all but a few remaining flanking batteries. The British battleship Ramillies apparently had silenced a difficult German battery near Houlgate, east of the Orne river estuary, and American warships also were in action.

This job of battery clearing, it was disclosed by headquarters, is under the direction of Rear Admiral Morton L. Deyo of the U. S. cruiser Tuscaloosa.

Desperate Nazi Attempt To Escape Trap Foiled

By J. W. Gallagher

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 19 (AP)—Lieut Gen. Omar N. Bradley's American troops squeezed within eight miles of Cherbourg today and shelled the port with their big guns tonight.

Steadily strengthening their hold all across the peninsula, the Yanks turned back a desperate German attempt to break out of the trap, struck out both north and south to widen their cordon and captured Bricquebec, only 11 miles south of the southern edge of Cherbourg. The American-held zone across the base of the peninsula has grown to twice its width since yesterday, it was said.

Dispatches from General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's 21st Army Group Headquarters said as many as 50,000 Germans may have been caught in the Cherbourg net.

The Nazi attempt to break out was made at a point about 13 miles due south of the port.

The Germans lashed out in the darkness in a heavy local attack near St. Jacques de Nehou, but were thrown back with heavy losses.

Toward the eastern flank of the 116-mile Normandy front, British forces battled into the northern end of the shell-torn Tilly-sur-Seulles, with the Germans still holding in the southern part of that town between Bayeux and Caen.

Carentan Shelled By Nazis

German guns laid a heavier barrage on American-held Carentan, stronghold near the eastern base of Cherbourg peninsula.

Other Americans on the northeastern end of the line choking off Cherbourg fought toward the port from the Montebourg area, 14 miles to the southeast.

(Berlin radio said United States forces had made a "slight advance in the direction of Valognes," ten miles southeast of Cherbourg, indicating that the German stronghold of Montebourg possibly is being by-passed.)

Local Advances Elsewhere

Local advances were made in other sectors of the beachead, headquarters said.

The Americans quickly broadened the corridor flung across Cherbourg peninsula.

The trapped Germans appeared to have the choice of fighting to the death or surrendering.

The spearhead of Lieut. Gen. Bradley's spectacular drive to capture this big port was the United States Ninth Division. Capture of a French naval base would be an old story for this division, for the Ninth broke through German defenses to take Bizerte, Tunisia, 13 months ago.

Another Trap In Prospect

United States forces that severed the peninsula were busy widening their breakthrough path to the Atlantic coast, which even last night was seven miles wide. They were driving the Germans down toward La Haye du Puits, big road junction seven miles south of St. Sauveur le Vicomte, into what appeared to be another trap, for one American cross-peninsula spearhead has been within four miles of La Haye for several days.

If this spearhead takes La Haye, the Germans in that area will be in another pocket—between St. Lo-d'Ourville and the Atlantic coast.

A third American column under Bradley's command struck south of Lison to within six miles of St. Lo, important rail and highway junction in the Vire river valley.

British Get Into Tilly

Almost all the advances on the Normandy beachhead reported today by supreme headquarters were on the American side except at Tilly-sur-Seulles, 11 miles west of Caen, where a British division broke through German defenses in a small breach and was fighting in the streets of Tilly.

(A Reuter dispatch said British forces have also made limited gains in minor attacks wast of Tilly and have beaten off German counter-attacks in the woods there. Reuter also reported small gains by British and Canadian troops in the area around Gaen.)

All along the rest of the beachhead front there were brisk small actions as Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, Allied ground commander, built up his forces for a typical "Monty" punch backed up by thousands of big guns.

Beach Areas Quiet, Busy

Beach areas were quiet and unloading of men and material proceeded at a rapid rate.

One officer returning to Britain said it was quiter behind the lines on the beachhead than in southern England, where the Germans sent over hundreds of rocket bombs, causing casualties and damage, particularly among the civilian population. But in six days of incessant bombardment with the new weapon, the Germans had failed to halt the dispatch of a single ship to the beachhead.

On the beachhead side the German air force had virtually disappeared, which might be an indication that Marshal Erwin Rommel was conserving his forces for an all-out attack.

Cherbourg And Bizerte

As for the drive on Cherbourg, it may be recalled that Bradley was in command of the Second Corps, with the Ninth Division as the spearhead, at the time it smashed through to take Bizerte last year—in country very much like that through which the Ninth drove in the past few days to reach the Atlantic.

The capture of Bizerte was expected to be difficult, but Bradley's carefully engineered attack cut through German lines like butter and made straight for the port, leaving pockets of resistance behind to be cleared up later.

German troops in the Cherbourg area are not of the highest quality and they have been using many horse-drawn guns, many of which have been knocked out by Allied strafing planes.

Channel Isles A Probelm

The Germans have a strong perimeter defense around Cherbourg and undoubtedly Hitler's orders will be to hold to the last. There is no chance for the German garrison to escape, since the Allies control all sea and air routes.

The German-held Channel islands, which have many heavy guns, may give the Allied western flank a good deal of trouble, but so far American and British battleships have been able to deal with all coastal defenses encountered. For example, the troublesome German battery at Houlgate, east of Ouistreham and the mouth of the Orne river, was believed to have been silenced by the British battleship Ramillies. It was one of the few German batteries left that could rake the invasion beaches.

(The German Transocean News Agency this afternoon quoted a spokesman for the German high command as saying the Americans cannot use the west coast of the peninsula for disembarkations because the heavy artillery on the German-held Channel Islands bars access to it. Reuter picked up this broadcast.)

While the Germans were expected to attempt destruction of the port of Cherbourg, they are unlikely to prevent its use by the Allies. The naval docks, especially, are hewn out of solid rock and there is little the Germans can do against these.

Nor is it likely that they can seriously cripple the great mole, which dates to 1686 and is largely a work of Sebastien de Vauban, marshal of France who became a great engineering authority on sieges and fortifications.

It was disclosed today that on the eastern end of the beachhead Montgomery has under his command the British Seventh Armored Division, famed as the "Juba", or "Desert Rat," division.

"Monty" Biding His Time

"Monty" apparently was biding his time, as always, to launch an all-out blow to beat a way out of the beachhead and into the open country of France. When the time comes, it is more than likely that the "Desert Rats," who Montgomery insisted be brought to England, will be playing a major role in the assault.

Meantime, the Ninth division's sudden break-through to the sea over difficult country took many officers at Supreme headquarters by surprise. It had been expected that the Germans would react more violently.

The Americans burst through the neck of the peninsula near Barneville-sur-Mer—just as the Allied command planned it.

The Nazi 77th Division tried determindedly to break out—and was cut to pieces by American assault forces in a seven-hour battle. The Nazis attacked in waves and ran into the heaviest concentration of mortar and artillery fire laid down since D-day. Their shattered remnants finally retreated to the north, harassed by Allied fighters and fighter-bombers.

Nazis Retreat in Disorder As Yanks Near Cherbourg

By DON WHITEHEAD

WITH AMERICAN TROOPS ADVANCING TOWARD CHERBOURG, June 19 — (AP) Swiftly seizing the advantage, American troops drove northward today to within eight miles of Cherbourg and began shelling the port with big guns.

There was hardly a pause from the time the doughboys smashed their way across the neck of the peninsula and beat back a frantic German effort to escape from the trap of steel, until they wheeled and swept toward Cherbourg.

700 Prisoners Captured

Last night alone they captured 700 prisoners, whose units had been disorganized by the American break-through.

In three campaigns I never have seen an army take the swift and decisive advantage of a breakthrough as the Americans have done in the last two days. They were exploiting the break-through to the hilt and not giving the enemy a chance to recover from the blows the Germans suffered when the doughboys knifed their way across the peninsula.

A stream of prisoners slogged along the roads, doughboys covering them with tommy guns. The prisoners' faces showed their bewilderment.

The roads were littered with the wreckage of German vehicles and equipment.

Some sectors resembled the scene in Tunisia when German resistance broke suddenly and confusion swept the ranks of von Arnim's and Rommel's armies.

Hitting northward from Barneville, one of the main points on the main west coast road cut by American troops Saturday night, the doughboys swept through Bricquebec. The Germans were pulling away so fast, trying to get away from the Allied advance, that they did not even put up a fight for the town.

Highway Cut

Cutting of the Bricquebec-Valognes highway denied the Germans another major communications route and made the American supply problem much simpler for advance units which had been fighting almost without pause for more than four days.

Dejection and confusion were apparent among some of the enemy troops. They simply were not prepared for the drive which trapped them, and they were unable to react to the situation. One division made a desperate escape attempt, but it was so badly mauled that it fell back to the Cherbourg line.

This last-ditch defense line before Cherbourg will be the battleground deciding the fate of the city. Its old positions possibly have been improved by the Germans recently. But already the Americans are bombing and hurtling explosives on enemy objectives in the city of Cherbourg itself.

Cherbourg, however, was not being shelled indiscriminately. Definite targets, such as fuel dumps, ammunition stores and strong points had been selected.

The German-prepared positions before Cherbourg are on high ground about six miles from the port.

"They may try to make Cherbourg another Sevastopol," an officer said. "There is little doubt but that they have been ordered to fight to the last."

Little Opposition Met

Between Barneville and Bricquebec the Americans had little opposition except from small groups of 20 to 30 men who had been cut off from their units.

Bricquebec virtually was unscathed.

At one railroad crossing north of the town self-propelled 88s and mortars were trying to hit our transports rolling along the road, but were unsuccessful.

Prisoners coming back from the front rode on fenders and hoods of trucks and were coming so fast the units do not know how many they have. Today's bag alone ran over 1,000.

Moved Three Times

The advance was so swift one unit's command post was moved three times during the day. Once they found 13 Germans hiding where the command post was to be set up.

One group of doughboys captured a field hospital and found 35 wounded American air-borne troops who had been captured on D-day. The men said they had received good medical treatment and their wounds were well dressed.

Bulldozer Drive Plowed Under Nazi Pillboxes

JUN 25 1944

British Assault Engineers Also Used Tanks to Break Up Foe's Strong Points

TWENTY-FIRST ARMY GROUP HEADQUARTERS, June 19 (AP).—Allied assault engineers were annoyed while at work by firing from a string of German pillboxes, so a party of British bulldozer drivers opened the throttles, dropped the blades, charged straight at the German positions and smothered them with fresh earth, and then went on with their regular jobs.

Before a sloping four-foot concrete wall, Allied infantry wavered and threatened to break. A party of assault engineers appeared in tanks. "Full speed ahead," their commander ordered. The tanks lurched forward, clung drunkenly to the top of the wall, then dropped safely to the other side. The astonished German defenders ran.

These were two invasion incidents related today by a senior staff officer describing the work of the American, British and Canadian assault engineers.

His report, though necessarily indistinct in some degree for security reasons, gave an idea of how it was that the French beaches were so successfully stormed in the face of the strongest and ugliest defenses ever met in an amphibious operation. Many military men, including non-engineers, regard it as the greatest achievement of the invasion to date.

The Allied engineers had one job: to clear a way through very formidable obstacles, obstacles which had caused the most intense worry for fear of enormous casualties among the landing force.

In the first wave of the invasion American combat-engineer battalions and British field companies landed with bulldozers—big machines that function like snowplows—and special explosives. They could not be well supported at all times, and in some sectors they worked under constant fire.

In addition to having to clear away heavily mined obstacles that often weighed several tons, they had to worry about peat and clay soils and had to lay steel carpets over stretches that might bog down Allied tanks. Specially trained engineers used varied secret equipment to match each problem. The equipment included explosive-carrying tanks used against anti-tank obstacles.

Having cleared the pathways by destroying or dragging away German installations, these men then opened the way for more conventional engineers to open roads and lay bridges.

'Jungle' Battle In Orne Sector Won by British

Troops Fight in Woods and Mud, Hack Way Through Underbrush to Hit at Foe

WITH BRITISH FORCES IN FRANCE, June 19 (AP). — British troops fighting in muddy, rain-drenched woods, drove the Germans from a section of forest southeast of Escoville across the River Orne today and captured numerous prisoners in a fantastically confused battle. A staff officer described the fight as a "jungle party," rivaling action in the Pacific, with snipers in the trees and troops hacking their way through underbrush.

RECORD TROOP SUPPORT

JUN 20 1944

Advanced Landing Ground in France, June 18 (Delayed) (A. P.). — American fighters and fighter-bombers began operating from this base today and by suppertime Thunderbolts had run off seven missions, a record for this theater, in close support of troops.

The planes took off as fast as they could be refueled, remed and strung with bombs.

Lieut. A. G. Vanu Risswick, Havre, Mont., flew two bombing missions as did Lieut. David Fuller of Warehouse Point, Conn.

Capt. Denver Porter, Oklahoma City, had been on three missions.

"As soon as the Huns see us they pull up under a tree," he said. "Then when we turn to make a pass at them they scuttle for a different tree. Sometimes we go up and down both sides of the road and blow them out."

NAZI RED CROSSES TOO NUMEROUS

JUN 20 1944

An Allied Airstrip in France, June 19 (A. P.).—American fighter pilots grew suspicious today of the relatively large number of vehicles behind German lines bearing Red Cross markings. Pilots said the Germans either have an abundance of wounded or are traveling under false colors.

"About eight out of every ten vehicles we sighted had a big Red Cross on them," said Lieut. David Fuller, Warehouse Point, Conn., "that seems an unusually high percentage to me."

Pilots meticulously avoid firing on automobiles with Red Cross insignia. The only way they can make sure they are genuine is to drop low while flying 300 miles an hour. This is dangerous with flak batteries around.

Beachhead Busiest Port

By Howard Cowan

On an American-held Beach in Normandy, June 19 (AP)—This has suddenly become France's busiest port.

More shipping was landed here Sunday and sent into the American lines than passed through Cherbourg during an entire month of normal operations.

And still it is pouring in. Liberty ships, LST's and converted ocean liners lie offshore by the scores with their umbrella of barrage balloons.

Their cargo bears a simple stenciled code word for their destination. To thousands of sailors and soldiers who toil here day and night this beach is their temporary home town. All it needs is a chamber of commerce.

Tents And Foxholes

There are no houses—just tents and foxholes.

The foxholes with boards and dirt thrown over the top are more desirable residences. The canvas GI tents aren't flak-proof. Jerry comes over as soon as it gets dark and trigger-happy gun crews on the ships offshore join with the anti-aircraft lads on the beach in an ack-ack show rivaling London's.

"There have been more killed and hurt from falling flak than from bombs," said Lieut. Col. William Hunnel, Buffalo, N. Y., director of operations for the army transportation outfit at headquarters here.

One raider came in too low last night.

"He must be bucking for a sergeant or something," said Private Sam Pollock, Brooklyn, N. Y., as the German plane flew through a field of tracer fire.

A minute later the flaming plane started a long dive into the sea.

The engineers still are digging German mines out of the ground. Three fellows were killed by one yesterday.

Capt. Edward Ellsberg, navy salvage expert, narrowly escaped when his jeep backed into another.

German fortifications attract the most interest. Elaborate oil paintings on the walls of a tunnel alongside a gun show the beach and landmarks with the exact range noted alongside. The gunners didn't have to be able to read to operate an 88-millimeter gun.

Shells Stored There

Inside the tunnel under about feet of earth are thousands of rounds of 88-mm. ammunition. The big shells were stored like bottles of wine. They are 1943 vintage. Four Germans still lie sprawled in front where American Rangers killed them on D-day.

The signs of fierce battles on the beach are rapidly disappearing.

Twenty bulldozers are busy clearing roads. A detail of prisoners is collecting stray pieces of clothing, helmets and canteens and sorting them into huge piles. Trucks haul them away for salvage.

Road signs have gone up. Yank MP's keep the traffic moving on the right side of the road, instead of the left.

4TH DIVISION'S 9-DAY BATTLE

Story Of Fight Without Rest Told In Army Paper

JUN 20 1944

London, June 19 (AP)—How the Fourth United States Infantry Division fought nine days and nights without rest from the Normandy beach on beyond Montebourg and on up the Cherbourg road was told in today's issue of Stars and Stripes.

A story by Charles F. Kiley dated June 17, "with the Fourth Infantry in France," says: "The Fourth arrived on D-day with assault forces and fought its way under, through and over some of the toughest obstacles in the Cherbourg peninsula until it completed its primary mission."

"Not once did the ivy boys stop until this first job was done," his field dispatch continued. "Now they have a little time to lick their wounds and get a breather.

Fought Through Marshes

"One regiment of the Fourth hit the beaches at H-hour on D-day, with the other two following an hour or so later. Theirs was the unenviable mission of scrambling through marshland flooded by the Jerries before the enemy backed up from the coastal defense zone. . . .

"The Third Battalion of another regiment, commanded by Lieut. Col. Arthur S. Teague, had to advance four miles through these inundated areas, most of the time up to their hips in mud and water.

"They made such rapid progress against these odds that some units closed with the retreating Germans to engage them in hand-to-hand combat.

"When the Fourth consolidated its units, it tossed regulation tactics into the Channel. Normally, a division moves with two regiments abreast with the third in support.

Three Regiments Abreast

"In order to move swiftly and according to schedule the division put all three regiments abreast and started the struggle that made them fight uphill all the way.

"Paratroopers had been in Ste. Mere Eglise one and a half hours after they dropped from sky transports, and the Fourth had to reach them in a hurry so as not to leave them stranded behind the enemy lines without communications.

"The ivy boys got through to the paratroopers after fighting past numerous strongly fortified positions all along the coastal strip from the landing point to Ste. Mere Eglise.

"The Jerries' 88s raised hell with the ivy boys as they moved, but for every man who fell hundreds kept the drive in high gear."

Summer Victories Will End Hitler Curse Churchill Says

JUN 20 1944

LONDON, June 19—(AP) Allied victories this Summer may bring "full success to the cause of freedom," but the longer the struggle continues the "more terrible" it will be for the enemy, Prime Minister Winston Churchill declared in a speech four days ago at the Mexican embassy.

In a luncheon address, permitted to be published only today, Britain's leader sounded his most optimistic note since Dunkerque and struck strongly at any lingering Nazi hopes of winning a compromise peace by putting up stubborn resistance to the invasion. He said possibly 1,000,000 men were engaged in the present struggle in France.

"It is a great moment in the history of the world," Churchill said, "and it may be that events will occur in the next few months which will show us whether we are soon to be relieved of the curse which has been laid upon us by the Germans.

"Whether it be this year or next, the British and American peoples will never falter or withdraw their hands from the task which they have undertaken. Together with our Allies, we will go on to the end, and the end will be the more terrible for our foes the longer their struggle continues and the longer this war is protracted."

The Prime Minister said that, after the war, he looked forward to the establishment of some sort of world accord "in which the rights of small nations will be upheld and protected and in which the strong will use their power under the law for the protection of the weak."

Churchill said the invasion of Normandy, carried out in full accord with the Russians, was a complete tactical surprise to the Germans, who had no idea when or where the Allies were going to strike until they saw the great armada coming out of the morning mists.

The execution of plans drawn up at Teheran was being steadily carried out, he said, and "the months of this Summer may by the victories of this Allied campaign bring full success to the cause of freedom."

Touching upon the political aspects of the war will strengthen the bands between all our nations and will succeed in preserving peace."

"We look forward to the future in which the rights of small nations will be upheld and protected and in which the strong will use their power under the law for the protection of the weak."

Terrible End for Foe

Whether the Germans are defeated "this year or next, the British and American peoples will never falter or withdraw their hands from the task which they have undertaken," he declared. "Together with our allies we will go on to the end, and the end will be the more terrible for our foes the longer their struggle continues and the longer this war is protracted."

Churchill added:

"I am afraid that our friends in the diplomatic corps have suffered very much inconvenience from the ban which we thought it necessary to impose. We thought it was absolutely necessary so that we could say afterward that nothing had been left undone to keep the secret of military preparations, and, therefore, we had to put you to this inconvenience. But we know that you share our interest to a very high degree that this secret should be kept.

Secrets Kept

"There is no doubt that secrets can be kept. The secret of landing in North Africa was kept although several thousands were aware of it. Many more have been aware of this one. In both cases tactical surprise of the enemy was achieved, and he had no idea until he saw the ships coming out of the mists of the morning, when he was going to be hit, how he was going to be hit or where he was going to be hit.

"This great struggle in which the lives of a million men may be engaged now on both sides requires extraordinary precautions."

Victory Possible This Summer.

Of course, we have not embarked on this great adventure without being in full accord with our Russian Allies, and the decisions taken in Teheran, and although the execution of the plans adopted there is far from being complete, it is being steadily unrolled, and the months of this summer may by the victories of this Allied campaign bring full success to the cause of freedom.

Your Excellency, it is a great pleasure for us to come here and to express to your country, Mexico, warm regard and respect. We are prevented by the exigencies of war from carrying on trade and offering to your country many of those products which we supplied previously, but immediately after the war is over we hope to resume an increase trade between this country and Mexico.

We know no fear, we stand together, we have our American brothers fighting side by side with us, as if we were one and not only Allies, each representing and helping the other.

Even during this war, in strife in Normandy, far away in the jungles of Burma, in Italy and in the Pacific Ocean an effort is being made to achieve a permanent co-operation and to build up an organization which after this war will strengthen the bonds between all our nations and will succeed in preserving peace, an organization which will not exclude innocent and fruitful arrangements between individual nations, nor relations within the American continent, nor relations of the British Commonwealth, nor internal relations of Europe. We look forward to a future in which the rights of small nations will be upheld and protected and in which the strong will use their power under law for the protection of the weak.

Summer May Bring Full Success, Churchill Asserts

London, June 19 (AP) — Prime Minister Churchill, in a speech delivered at the Mexican Embassy four days ago and permitted to be published only today, said the months of this summer may "bring full success to the cause of freedom."

He said the invasion of Normandy was a great tactical surprise to the Germans who did not know it was coming until they saw the ships and "it may be that events will occur in the next few months which will show us whether we are soon to be released of the curse which has been laid upon us by the Germans."

Accord With Russians

The invasion was launched "in full accord" with the Russians and the decisions reached at Teheran, he added, "and, although the execution of the plans adopted there is far from being complete, it is being steadily unrolled and the months of this summer may by the victories of this Allied campaign bring full success to the cause of freedom."

Touching on political aspects of the war, the Prime Minister said efforts were being made "to achieve permanent cooperation and to build up an organization which after the gathering of Latin diplomats that efforts were being made now "to achieve permanent cooperation and to build up an organization which after this war will strengthen the bands between all our nations and will succeed in preserving peace, an organization which will not exclude innocent and fruitful arrangements between individual nations."

Text of Address.

The text of the address follows in full:

Your Excellencies, My Lords and Gentlemen: I must express my sincere gratitude for the extremely kind terms in which his Excellency, the Ambassador, has proposed this toast to me and for the evident lack of repugnance with which you have supported it.

It is a great moment in the history of the world, and it may be that events will occur in the next few months which will show us whether we are soon to be released from the curse which has been laid upon us by the Germans. Whether it be this year or next, the British and American peoples will never falter or withdraw their hands from the task which they have undertaken. Together with our Allies, we will go on to the end, and the end will be the more terrible for our foes the longer their struggle continues and the longer this war is protracted.

It is a very important thing that there should be gathered around this table, thanks to his Excellency, the representative of that famous conference in Rio de Janeiro in January, 1942, where Latin America associated itself with the United States in their stand against the Axis. I am glad to see here the Ambassadors of the United States and Brazil, whose countries played leading roles at that conference. Your Excellency's Foreign Minister was also there, and the general opinion is that the conference was swayed by the speech of Senor Ezequiel Padilla, Foreign Minister of Mexico, who carried away honors by his statements.

Time has passed, and after the initial attack launched by an enemy after a long scheme of rearmament and of aggressive plans with well-prepared armies, and the natural suffering at the outset, we have moved on from that to a band of brother States all over the globe, all gathered against this enemy, and showing that peaceful peoples, if they have time, can with their industries and their heart produce all the weapons and equipment of war necessary for this fight. Here we are now, free peoples, who have shown to the world that they can put into the field men well-trained and equipped with all the necessary weapons of war.

It gives great pleasure to me and to my colleagues to be here at your table today to express in a definite form the great regard which the peoples of the British Islands, the British Empire and the British Commonwealth of Nations, as we are, the very warm regard we feel toward Mexico, and I drink with greatest pleasure the toast to your esteemed and honored President. I have never been to Mexico. I hope I shall be able to do so in the span of life left to me. But all I have seen and heard about her attracts me as one of the most beautiful parts of the world, with all her old traditions of history, and with a climate where one has much more sunshine than your Excellency is likely to experience during your stay here.

I am afraid that our friends in the Diplomatic Corps have suffered very much inconvenience from the ban which we thought it necessary to impose. We thought it was absolutely necessary so that we could say afterwards that nothing had been left undone to keep the secret of military preparations, and therefore we had to put you to this inconvenience. But we know that you share our interest to a very high degree that this secret should be kept.

Pre-Invasion Ban Lifted By Britain

JUN 20 1944

London, June 19 (AP)—The Foreign Office tonight lifted the pre-invasion ban on diplomats' travel and restrictions on their communications.

Facilities had been suspended for the transmission of cipher telegrams and diplomatic bags, and members of diplomatic missions were not allowed to leave Britain under the terms of restrictions imposed April 17.

The United States, Britain and the Dominions and Soviet Russia were exempt from the regulations during the two-month period, but a few exceptions were made for other nations. Gen. Charles de Gaulle, French leader, came to London and left there; and Premier Mikolacjyk, of the Polish Government in exile, visited the United States.

AMERICAN FLIERS REPULSE ATTACKS ON U.S. CARRIERS

YANKS TAKE AIRPORT

Troops Drive Across Saipan to Shore of Magicienne

JUN 20 1944

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, June 19—(AP) United States Marines and Army troops have captured Aslito airdrome and driven eastward all the way across Saipan island to the shore of Magicienne bay, while an estimated 300 Japanese planes attacking the offshore American carrier task force were destroyed in the greatest Pacific air battle since Midway, Adm. C. W. Nimitz announced today.

NIGHT

Sea-bees already are at work putting the Aslito airstrip on the island's major airbase in operation for United States planes.

Japs Used Carriers

The communique said it was believed a portion of the Jap planes making the attack extending over several hours on aircraft carriers Sunday were flying from Japanese carriers and using nearby shore bases for shuttle landings.

The Jap attack was successfully repulsed in a large scale aerial battle by our carrier fighter planes and ships' anti-aircraft fire.

"Information presently available indicates that only one of our surface units was damaged and this damage was minor" Nimitz said.

No estimate is yet available on American aircraft losses in the first indicated engagement with planes flying from the Jap fleet's aircraft carriers since the battle of Santa Cruz in October, 1942.

The communique said our systematic bombing and strafing of airfields on Guam and nearby Rota "sharply limited" the effectiveness of the Jap's use of shuttle shore fields to launch their carrier planes against our task force.

This designation of Rota and Guam, 116 miles south of Saipan, as probable shuttle points indicates enemy carriers were operating a considerable distance from the Marianas but were reluctant to close within range of U. S. carrier bombers.

The carrier task forces' great battle overshadowed the decisively important successes in the Saipan ground fighting.

American assault troops drove on a fairly wide front completely across the island to the shore of Magicienne bay, 3 1-2 miles from the western landing beach.

This sweeping advance of about a mile and a half since Friday cut off some of the enemy defenders in a tight arrow-shape sector on Saipan's southeastern corner on Nafutan point.

The communique said the Japanese continued counter-attacking American ground forces but all enemy attacks have been successfully thrown back.

Two pockets of enemy resistance remain to be cleaned out east of Lake Susupe. The lake lies in the marshy area in the middle of the island east of Charan-Kanoa, a sugar mill town quickly overrun after the initial landings north and south of the town.

The report that Sea-bees had gone to work on the airdrome while Marines and army troops were still battling both north and southeast of the Aslito landing strip forecasts that American planes may start flying from the field as soon as the Japs have been pushed back out of range of small field guns.

The way the Saipan fight now is shaping it looks as though our ground force commanders are trying to clean out Saipan's southern end quickly and then turn northward for the wiping out of the balance of the enemy defenders.

Capture Ridge

On Biak island, largest of the Schoutens, Americans captured an important ridge north of Mokmer and inched closer to two remaining airfields, Borokoe and Sorido.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's communique added:

"Since our occupation of Owi island 18 days ago, we have constructed an airfield which is in operation." Owi lies just off Biak, where Mokmer strip, captured June 7, has been put into operation. Borokoe and Sorido have been out of operation for many weeks, but the Japanese are defending them fiercely nonetheless.

American infantrymen, supported by tanks, launched the vital attack against the ridge 2,500 yards north of the west end of Mokmer airstrip at 11 a.m. Saturday. Two and a half hours later the enemy had been driven from the position.

Instant Touch With Front

WASHINGTON, June 19 (AP).—The War Department praised the Signal Corps today for planning and operation of communications which has kept the top command in touch with the invasion of Normandy as it develops.

"Army commanders in the front line, in England and in the United States," said the department, "are in instantaneous contact through ultra-high speed radio channels that insure perfectly co-ordinated control of the operations.

"Information on the progress of our troops at scores of points is flashed in a matter of seconds to General Eisenhower's headquarters in England and on to the War Department in Washington."

The communications system, described as "unrivaled in the annals of warfare," was built up during the months before the invasion, using various types of radio, telephone and telegraph equipment installed at strategic points, with alternate channels available immediately in case of equipment failure.

WAR PRISONERS BALKY

Trenton, June 19 (A. P.).—News of the Allied invasion of France perturbed German prisoners of war held at two South Jersey camps to the point where they refused to work, Army authorities at the Fifth Military District of the Second Service Command said today. Approximately 600 prisoners at Parvin State Park and a similar number at a temporary camp in Bridgeton became restless on D day, the announcement asserted, and "momentarily received the summary punishment provided under the Geneva convention for the handling of such situations."

"Within twenty-four hours the situation was again normal," the announcement concluded, "and operations have been progressing normally since then."

An Army spokesman who had been at one of the camps on D day said that the prisoners' restlessness amounted to a virtual sitdown strike. The Geneva convention provides that prisoners of war may receive only that punishment which an army would inflict upon its own men.

BOMBERS BATTER NAZI ROBOT ROOST

SINGLETON

Winged Bombs Continue to Rocket Across Channel.

JUN 20 1944

LONDON, June 19—(AP) U. S. heavy bombers struck twice today at the Robot roost around Pas De Calais as the Air ministry disclosed that six months of ceaseless air attack knocked out so many launching platforms that the pilotless bombs finally were loosed on less than one-fourth the scale planned.

The United States strategic air force for the first time called these emplacements—now bombarded nine times in four days and nights—"pilotless plane launching platforms."

NIGHT

Nazis Continue Assault

The Germans continued to launch the noisy jet-propelled winged bombs across the channel for the fifth successive day in an apparent attempt to divert Allied air might from the Normandy battle field and Germany itself.

But this strategy was only fairly successful, for some of a morning force of at least 500 heavy bombers ranged far south, striking at least four German air fields in France while lighter bombers and fighters rained bombs and bullets on German troops and communications along the front.

Seven bombers and 16 fighters failed to return from the morning assaults. All were victims of flak, for in the bad flying weather not a single German fighter was seen.

Late in the afternoon a second formation of Fortresses and Liberators returned to the robot-launching area and bombed visually.

The Air ministry said the pre-invasion attacks not only cut down the scale of the attack the Germans had planned but also caused a serious delay in the opening of the attack—probably explaining why this secret weapon was not used before.

Many Shot Down

Fighter aircraft and anti-aircraft defenses have been making many successful attacks on the projectiles in the past few days and large numbers have been shot down, the announcement said.

"Other offensive measures to frustrate the enemy's plans for attacking our cities from across the channel are being adopted without detriment to the Allies' main purpose of relentless air assault on enemy military targets," the announcement said.

The extent and nature of these methods, the Ministry concluded, were not being divulged and the enemy is "making strenuous attempts both to discover the steps being taken to defeat his latest form of attack and to learn how effective this assault has been."

For all the boasting of German propagandists—one of whom asserted a second "secret weapon" would be unleashed soon—the fact remained that these explosives had failed to halt a single ship en route to Normandy.

German Troops Pounded

In addition to the heavies' attacks fighter-bombers struck at the rate of one a minute, pounding trapped Germans in the Cherbourg pocket and enemy communication lines.

Part of the U. S. heavy bombers went on south and hit air fields at Bordeaux-Merignac, Cassaux, west of Bordeaux, Corne Ecluse, near the coast west of Cognac, and Landes-Bussac.

The Germans raised the possibility that the Allies might storm the beaches around Calais to try to knock out their rocket ramps and the Berlin radio commentator Ludwig Sertorius gave southern France as a potential locale for another major landing.

DNB claimed London was bearing the brunt of the robot attack because it was a communications center for the invasion.

U. S. soldiers with bucket brigades helped subdue fires caused by the robot projectiles, and dug victims from the ruins of damaged buildings.

Their consensus was that the secret weapon was not secret enough since it flies so low and slow enough that the people have time to take cover after seeing one approach.

One group of fighter-bombers attacked an airfield at Rennes, some 80 miles south of the battle area at the base of the Brest peninsula, and fighters maintained patrols over both teh beaches and Channel.

9th Now Based In France

Meanwhile, Lieut. Gen. Lewis H. Brereton announced that United States Ninth Air Force Thunderbolt fighter-bombers now are permanently based in France. Thunderbolt units, the first elements of any United States air force to establish stations on French soil, are under direction of Maj. Gen. Elwood R. Quesada who established headquarters in Normany last week.

General Brereton said other units would move into France behind the advancing Allies as new landing strips are finished.

The Air Ministry news service announced the robot planes take off from the ramps with the aid of jet propulsion and are not radio controlled but are operated by an automatic pilot set before launching. Once in flight the enemy has no control over it, the news service declared.

The range is about 150 miles, the speed in level flight from 300 to 350 miles an hour. The fuselage is 21 feet 10 inches long with a maximum width of 2 feet 4½ inches and a wing span of 16 feet. Explosive carried in a warhead is equal to a 2,200-pound German bomb.

The Germans planned to launch these attacks nearly a year ago, the Ministry said, and countermeasures were promptly taken. The German experimental station at Peenemunde in Prussia was attacked by RAF bombers August 17 and 18 last year, causing serious damage and casualties.

U. S. TWICE HITS ROBOT COAST

JUN 20 1944

Bombers Return to Batter Rocket Area.

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 19 (AP).—American Fortresses and Liberators, taking up the challenge of German robot bombers, struck twice today at the platforms in the Pas de Calais area from which the pilotless craft are launched.

In the first official announcement calling these emplacements anything other than military installations, the United States Strategic Air Forces said flatly that the two attacks today were made on pilotless plane launching platforms.

It was the ninth attack in the last four days and nights since the Germans began launching their jet-propelled explosives at England. More of the strange weapons streamed across the Channel and exploded at random today.

As one part of the escorted formation totaling nearly 500 fortresses and Liberators was attacking the flying bomb installations in the Pas-de-Calais area during the morning, other four-engined bombers thundered deep behind the Normandy battle zone to hammer at least four air fields in the Bordeaux region.

These were located at Bordeaux-Merignac, Cassaux, Corme, Ecluse and Landes-Bussac. Clouds which again hampered Allied air operations over the battlefront, forced the Pas-de-Calais raiders to use the overcast technic, but the airfield attackers were able to drop their loads visually.

Seven bombers and sixteen fighters failed to return from the two-way forenoon assault. All were victims of flak, which ranged from moderate to intense. Not a single German fighter was seen.

DAY

Late in the afternoon a second formation of Fortresses and Liberators returned to that sector of northern France separated from Britain by the narrowest strip of water to send more explosives crashing down on the robot launching ramps.

This time some bombs were aimed visually at the emplacements which had some of their long-standing mystery stripped from them by the events of the past few days.

Fighter-bombers, attacking at the rate of one a minute, drove home a three-ply assault in direct support of the invasion forces. One wave pounded trapped German forces on northern Cherbourg peninsula. Another battered communication routes to the southeast over which the Nazis were trying to reinforce their armored divisions in the Tilly-Caen sector. The third stream bombed the area north of Paris, disrupting enemy reinforcement lines.

Three Airfields Attacked

The American heavies slashed at rocket installations after a night assault by the RAF, in which one plane was lost, and a raid in the same area yesterday by 250 big United States bombers.

Other formations hit airfield targets including Bordeaux-Merignac, Cazaux, west of Bordeaux, and Corne Ecluse near the coast west of Cognac.

A rare stretch of bad June weather still was hampering air operations.

The German radio, heard by Government monitors in New York, said that "single enemy aircraft" were over southern Austria and northern Germany.

The Paris radio reported that Lyons and Avignon have been bombed, according to Reuter in London.

Parade Of The Shays

Fighter bombers blasted to pieces one concentration of several hundred Germans. Col. Donald Blakeslee's American Mustang group saw what looked like a big procession of citizens out for a ride in horse shays, but when the pilots "buzzed" the cavalcade for a closer look German soldiers dived for cover.

The ammunition-loaded shays were sent up in a string of firecracker explosions, while horses scampered across the fields.

The Germans apparently are making increased use of horse-drawn vehicles, indicating perhaps a shortage of motor vehicles or necessity of using horses to go over or around battered roads.

Refineries Blasted

More than 1,300 American heavy bombers hammered oil refineries and storage plants in the Hamburg area and three enemy airdromes in northwest Germany yesterday.

The western air war now has developed into a three-sided battle, with Allied air units engaging in a cross-channel duel with German rocket bombs, maintaining ceaseless support of the invasion troops in Normandy and mounting strategic attacks on the Reich itself.

Although the Germans threw up a flak barrage described as one of the heaviest yet encountered, not one enemy fighter challenged the Yank aerial fleet yesterday. About 500 American fighters accompanied the heavies.

Only two German aircraft were sighted all day yesterday by Ninth Air Force Thunderbolt, Lightning and Mustang pilots, who made more than 1,000 individual flights.

ROCKET BOMBS ASSAIL BRITAIN FOR FIFTH DAY

JUN 20 1944

Attacks Are Lighter, but Casualties Result From Robots.

BRITISH DEFENSE IMPROVES

London Papers Feature Berlin's Claims of Panic and Nazi Threat to U. S.

JUN 20 1944

London, June 19 (A. P.).—Germany's rocket bomb assaults on southern England continued for the fifth successive day as a number of the fire-spitting, jet-propelled robot planes zoomed across the coast just after daybreak today.

Intermittent activity was reported over the same area during the night, with some resultant casualties and damage, though the attacks did not seem as heavy as the previous night.

DAY

The element of newness attached to Hitler's latest "secret weapon" was wearing off rapidly, however, and British defenses against these blind bombs were taking shape.

The British Air Ministry news service announced that the Robot planes are jet-propelled and are launched from a ramp with the aid of a takeoff rocket.

They are not radio-controlled but are operated by an automatic pilot set before the launching. Once the missile has been launched the enemy has no control over its movements.

A Wing Span of 16 Feet.

The Air Ministry announced that the pilotless craft has a fuselage of 21 feet 10 inches in length, with a maximum width of 2 feet, 4 inches. Its wing span is 16 feet.

"The range of the type at present in use is about 150 miles; the speed in level flight between 300 and 350 miles per hour, and the explosive power is equivalent to a German 2,200-pound bomb," the Air Ministry said.

"The explosive is carried in the warhead, mounted in thin casing in the front part of the fuselage. The engine is driven by petrol, and the noise heard in flight is due to intermittent explosions within the jet-propulsion unit. Constructed almost entirely of steel, the projectile is colored with the usual type German camouflage—dark green on top, light blue underneath."

Nazis Now Warn U. S.

The Nazis now suggest that the new weapon might be turned against the United States, one Berlin broadcast saying:

"It is to be regretted that only southern England has so far been affected by the new pilotless plane. We hope that New York will soon get a taste of the new reprisal weapon as a punishment for deliberate air crimes in Europe and East Asia.

This theme was not enlarged upon in subsequent broadcasts, however.

All over southern England large reinforcements of anti-aircraft guns are being moved to special spots in efforts to explode the rocket bombs in the air as near the coast as possible.

Not since the battle of Britain have English anti-aircraft gunners—many of them women—worked so hard, but there is no complaining.

Meanwhile, Britons view as comic relief the lurid accounts which German propagandists are broadcasting concerning the panic caused by the rocket bombs in England. London newspapers are giving as much if not more space to wild German propaganda stories of the bombings as they do to British reports.

It was noted that the Germans had toned down their claims in the past 24 hours, perhaps fearful lest their whooped up propaganda concerning the effectiveness of the robot planes might backfire. Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels's latest line was:

"Our pilotless planes will not decide the war, but they are a rather hard test for the Englishman's nerves."

'Doodle Bugs' Favorite Quarry, Can't Shoot Back

JUN 20 1944

London, June 19 (AP)—The Germans' vaunted comet bombs—dubbed "doodle bugs" by unawed fighter pilots—have become the favorite quarry of Americans because, as one Mustang pilot put it, "they can't shoot back at you."

The Ninth United States Air Force announced today Mustang and Thunderbolt pilots had destroyed a number of Adolf Hitler's pilotless projectiles and said this now was a favorite sport in the Ninth.

NIGHT

United States ground batteries also have knocked down a sizable total of the rocket bombs over the south coast, official advices said. One was blasted by a warrant officer using an improvised .50-caliber machine gun.

ROBOTS DUBBED BUMBLE BOMBS

JUN 20 1944

London, June 19 (A. P.).—Adolf Hitler's new secret weapon—the pilotless plane or rocket bomb—already has more names than Reichsmarshal Goering has medals, and others are being added daily with suggestions coming from both sides of the English Channel.

"Buzzbomb" and "Winged Comet" seem to be the catchiest names offered in Britain thus far, although London headlines writers have contributed such descriptive titles as "Bumble Bomb," "Flying Bomb" and "Whinney."

DAILY

"Robot Raider" is a favorite with some who like alliteration, while 'P-Plane" also has attained some popularity.

German propaganda broadcasts have come up with some fetching names, such as "Hell Hound," "Hell Dog," "Dynamite Meteor" and "Kivik Rocket." Just what the latter means is not clear.

ALMOST LOSES 2 PLANES

Flier Unhit in 62 Missions 'Gets It' Twice in Day

JUN 20 1944

LONDON, June 19 (AP)—The law of averages and German anti-aircraft fire and bullets caught up today with Lieut. Lynn W. Cocker of Ferndale, Mich., United States Ninth Air Force pilot.

He was forced to use all his ingenuity to bring two crippled planes home to his base in a single day. Previously he had flown sixty-two missions without having a plane hit.

In his first mission today, dive-bombing railway installations, the piolt came out with gaping holes in the wings and tail of his Thunderbolt. But he nursed the ship home.

Four hours later Lieutenant Cocker was out in a new Thunderbolt in support of advancing beachhead troops and "got it" again. This time his craft was hit in the fuselage and radiator and the right-wing flap was torn off by machine-gun bullets. But again he managed to bring his plane back.

Pilot Gets 7th Since D-Day

A United States Eighth Air Force Fighter Base in England, June 16 (AP)—Pickings were few for Allied fighter planes over the Normandy battlefields of France today, but Flight Officer Steven Gerick, of Pittsubrgh, Pa., shot down his seventh German plane since D-Day.

REDS SHELL SHIPS FLEEING VIIPURI

LANDSTROM

Troops Pour Through Break in Finnish Lines 10 Miles from Big Port.

LONDON, Tuesday, June 20. — (AP) Russian troops pouring through the broken Finnish Mannerheim line on a 30-mile front swept to a point less than 10 miles from Viipuri yesterday as Soviet airmen and long-range artillery began bombing and shelling Finnish ships attempting to flee the seaport at the top of the Karelian isthmus, Moscow announced today.

The London News-Chronicle's correspondent with the Soviet troops said Marshal Leonid A. Govorov's spearheads already were fighting in Viipuri's suburbs, and added that the Russians "shortly will be in a position to dictate terms" to the Finns.

Predict Finns Will Quit

Amid reports that Finland was about to quit the war, the Stockholm newspaper Svenska Dagbladet predicted the Finnish cabinet would be revampel today. It said Premier Edwin Linkomies and Finance Minister Vaino Tanner, the two men largely responsible for Finland's rejection of Soviet armistice terms three months ago, would retire.

A midnight Russian communique said Soviet airmen had sunk 16 ships in Viipuri harbor, including six transports, and that one Russian infantry unit alone wiped out 1,000 Finns yesterday.

Soviet planes on Saturday night again heavily raided Kirkenes near the Finnish border in northern Norway, a supply port for German divisions stationed in Finland, the bulletin said.

The Finns, battered by tremendous Rusian artillery barrages, fell back all the way from Muola, important road junction 30 miles from the Finnish gulf, to the coast, the broadcast communique recorded here said, while other forces swept into Rokkala, less than 10 miles from the port of Viipuri, whose fall ended the 1939-40 Russo-Finnish war.

More than 70 populated places and four railway stations were taken on the way, the Russians announced.

Large Finnish resistance centers at Summa, half-way between Muola and the coast, and at Leipatoa and Muola fell in tne path of the Red army, which cleared the defenders from the southern shores of two lakes along the line.

Finnish Plight Depicted

The Finnish plight was depicted in Stockholm reports as critical Moscow pictured the headlong retreat as more often a route, and the Finns' own communique offered virtually nothing to relieve the grave tones of other official statements and exhortations.

Military observers in London, noting that the capture of Rokkala represented a gain of five miles during the day for the driving forces of Marshal Leonod A. Govorov, said they believed Viipuri might fall within two days or less, assuming the Finns were unable to stiffen their resistance.

Moscow comment and the London Press read significance into the report from Stockholm that Baron George Gripenberg, Finnish minister in Sweden, had returned to Helsinki, intimating it implied governmental shifts in the Finnish capital, with the possibility that Gripenbert would assume the post of foreign minister.

RUSSIAN FORCES SMASH TO WITHIN 10 MILES OF VIIPURI

Widen Gap in Mannerheim Line in Drive to Knock Finland Out of War.

London, June 19 (A. P.).—The Russians have captured a point less than ten miles south of Viipuri and widened the breach in the Mannerheim Line to more than thirty miles along the front from Moala to the Finnish gulf coast, Moscow announced tonight.

Russian troops captured large enemy resistance centers at Suma, Leipatoa and Muola, and also seized more than seventy populated places, including Rokeller, less than ten miles south of Viipuri, the communique said. Four railway stations also were captured.

DAY

The communique also said that the Russians had cleared the southern shores of Lakes Kugantojarvi and Julaktsijarvi of the enemy.

RED AUTHOR PREDICTS DEFEAT OF JAPANESE

JUN 20 1944

MOSCOW, June 19. — (AP) Outright defeat of Japan was predicted for the first time today by a Russian author in a "War and the Working Class" article sharply criticizing Japanese imperialistic ambitions.

The writer, Klementi Popov, declared, "Japan has repeatedly occupied different territories on the Asiatic continent, but always has been forced to retreat. In the present war, Japan is in the camp of the Hitlerite coalition which is doomed to inevitable defeat."

NIGHT

There has been no change in Soviet-Japanese relations, but the publication carried a blunt, frank discussion on "Japan and the occupied countries of eastern Asia."

When Hitler invaded deep into Russia, Popov, the Japanese "included Soviet far eastern Siberia and even middle Asia into their 'sphere.' These delirious plans of the Japanese imperialists found their gloryless end with the defeat of the German army at Stalingrad."

Red Writer Hits Japs

JUN 20 1944

Moscow, June 19 (AP)—The Soviet publication War and the Working Class said today that in the days when Hitler's forces were driving into Russia the Japanese "included Soviet far eastern Siberia and even Middle Asia into their 'sphere,' and these delirious plans of the Japanese imperialists found their gloryless end with the defeat of the German army at Stalingrad."

DAY

In a blunt discussion entitled "Japan and the occupied countries of Eastern Asia," the writer, Klementi Popov, said that Japan repeatedly has occupied different territories on the Asiatic continent, but always has been forced to retreat.

Soviet Forces Near Threshold Of Viipuri

JUN 20 1944

CASSIDY

Stockholm, June 19 (AP)—Swedish newspaper dispatches from Helsinki today described the position of the Finnish army as "critical" as a result of the latest Russian advances up the Karelian Isthmus.

Viipuri was acknowledged to be directly menaced by Red Army troops, whose weight of men and materials was said to be "crushing," the dispatches reported.

Moscow, June 19 (AP)—Soviet field dispatches declared today that the Red army had smashed forward to the threshold of Viipuri, key city in southern Finland, after breaking the Mannerheim line and capturing Koivisto fortress, at the mouth of Viipuri Bay.

Farther inland, on the Karelian Isthmus, the Russians were reported to have driven two and a half miles past the Mannerheim line in the Murila sector.

While the Red army's left flank had made the most progress along the Gulf of Finland dispatches said that the right wing on the opposite side of the isthmus now was advancing along Lake Ladoga, capturing numerous points.

DAY

Three Lines Pierced

Gen Leonid A. Govorov's Leningrad forces which launched the offensive nine days ago appeared to have broken the back of the Finnish army after piercing the enemy's three lines in the defense of Karelia and prospects for an early complete victory over Finland seemed bright.

The Russians' quick success was attributed largely to tremendous artillery barrages which pulverized Finnish positions. Front dispatches disclosed that the Katiusha, the Red army's secret gun, was used for the first time in Finland in the present drive.

The Red army reached the Mannerheim line Saturday, three days after breaking the Raivola-Yoki line, and breached the old Mannerheim forts yesterday in a single swift rush.

Mannerheim Pillboxes

A Pravda dispatch said Soviet army men were "electrified" by their first view of the Mannerheim pillboxes which they had blown up in the Soviet-Finnish war of 1939-1940.

The Russians attacked at dawn yesterday, smashing enemy pillboxes and trenches with artillery fire. After the barrage only granite tank barriers remained intact.

Red army infantry chased the survivors out of the fortifications, took the villages of Murila and Makiriola and pushed two more miles beyond the line until checked by fire from Koivisto fort.

Warships of the Red Baltic fleet promptly shelled Koivisto Island and the mainland fort.

The Russians were reported advancing up Viipuri Bay, with infantry moving in trucks and artillery towed by tractors pressing closely on the heels of the Finns.

General Govovov was promoted to the rank of marshal for leading the campaign.

Dispatches relayed to London from Helinski via Stockholm this morning said Soviet troops already were working their way along the shores of Viipuri Bay, and predictions were freely voiced in the Swedish capital that should Viipuri fall the Finns probably would sue for peace.

Red Success Admitted

Finnish Premier Edwin Linkomies acknowledged last night the Russians had scored "considerable success" in efforts to knock Finland out of the war, but nevertheless he called upon his people to fight to the death.

"We are fighting for our freedom," Linkomies said in an address to the nation broadcast from Helsinki. "We cannot imagine life here except as a free and independent people."

The fall of Koivisto represented a 53-mile advance in nine days along the western coast of the Karelian isthmus for the Russian army.

2,000 Planes

Swedish dispatches from Helsinki quoted the Finns as saying the Russians had hurled more than 2,000 planes into the Karelian offensive and that Soviet air superiority was overwhelming, despite assistance offered by German airmen based in Finland.

There were no reports of large-scale action elsewhere on the Russian front, but the Karelian campaign generally was regarded as only a prelude to greater Russian blows elsewhere. In this connection, Associated Press War Correspondent Henry Cassidy said in a dispatch last night from the Karelian front:

"There are signs that this offensive, while of major importance in the aim of knocking Finland out of the war, is only a sideshow to the Red army as a whole. A further offensive carrying out the Russian part of the Teheran pledge of combined blows at Germany from east, west and south is expected."

REDS WANT TRADE AGREEMENT WITH U.S.

JUN 20 1944

MOSCOW, June 19.—(AP) Eric Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, told a press conference today that Foreign Trade Commissar Anastas Mikoyan had authorized him to say the Soviet Union wants to buy "many billions of dollars worth of American goods on purchase terms mutually advantageous to the two countries involved."

"Furthermore," Johnston said, "the Russians would pay for these purchases strictly on agreement and time purchases. There is no question about their not paying in full."

Asked for specific figures on business which the Russians wished to do with the United States, Johnston replied that "I haven't got the figures. All I could get was many billions'."

NIGHT

Johnston said he had seen a very great amount of American equipment around Moscow, and that it was of the very latest design.

The American business leader visited Leningrad and is planning to visit industrial areas in the Ural mountains. He is expected to return to the United States by July 8, by way of Teheran.

Johnston said that in talks with Mikoyan, which preceded his press conference by only a few minutes, he obtained the impression that the Russians principally want capital goods.

LONDON, June 20 (Tuesday) (AP).—Ten Allied airmen were freed from Nazi captivity in a Yugoslav Partisan offensive gaining momentum in Hercegovina, a communique broadcast from the Yugoslav headquarters of Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) said last night.

The bulletin, recorded by the Ministry of Information, said the Germans were bringing up reinforcements in the Lika district and reported fierce fighting in Korencia. An enemy armored train was said to have been destroyed in attacks on Axis communications in Slavonia and a large railway viaduct was demolished near Vero

Gale Sweeps Channel

JUN 20 1944

DAY

London, June 19 (AP)—The wind rose swiftly in the Strait of Dover today and by noon was blowing a gale from the north-northeast, with gusts registering up to 60 miles an hour.

Conditions at sea, especially in mid-Channel, were extremely bad as the gale piled the sea into a mass of high, broken waves. There were occasional sunny intervals with improved visibility but temperatures remained low.

The wind was coming from one of the worst possible quarters for Allied unloading operations on the beaches of Normandy.

Germans Shell Dover Area

FOLKESTONE, England, June 20 (Tuesday) (AP).—German long-range batteries between Boulogne and Calais shelled the Dover vicinity for twenty minutes early today. Flashes from the six-gun salvoes lit up the Strait of Dover like day and the thunderous echoes were heard for miles along the coast.

All Enemy Resistance Wiped Out on Historic Island Near Corsica

JUN 20 1944

EIGHTH ARMY GAINS

British Troops Three Miles from Perugia, Mainland Communications Center.

NIGHT

ROME, June 19 — (AP) French colonial troops completed the conquest of historic Elba island today and captured 1,800 prisoners while on the Italian mainland Eighth army forces pushed forward to positions less than three miles from Perugia, the major communications center between Rome and Florence.

Capture of the island was disclosed in an Allied African headquarters communique released at Algiers which said that the French, despite stubborn enemy resistance, drove the Germans from position after position during the past 24 hours and wiped out all resistance with capture of Porto Longone.

Few Germans Escape

"The vigorous and rapid advance of the French troops prevented the evacuation of all but a small portion of the enemy garrison," the bulletin said.

The majority of the 1,800 troops taken were Germans, it was announced. Also taken was a large quantity of materiel.

It was disclosed that Gen. George C. Marshall, U. S. chief of staff, and Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the American air forces, had visited Rome and the Italian front and had conferred with Allied commanders in this theater.

American Fifth army troops driving up the Italian west coast ran into some of the stiffest opposition since the capture of Rome as they thrust onto high ground north of Grosseto. The Germans threw reserves of artillery into an effort to check the Yank advance and fought tenaciously for each natural defense position.

Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark's troops continued to make progress, however, a headquarters communique said, driving the enemy from several strong points, capturing Campagnatico and sending advance units 10 miles north of Grosseto. French forces in the same general area seized Roccalbegna and approached Radicofani.

Resistance Stiffens

The enemy, though still falling back steadily toward the Pisa-Rimini, or "Gothic" line, north of Florence, was putting up noticeably stiffer rearguard resistance all the way across the peninsula. The Nazi garrison of Perugia, big road hub 85 miles north of Rome and about 72 miles southeast of Florence, was fighting with particular stubbornness.

Eighth army troops driving toward the city from the east captured Assisi, 12 miles away, and thrust on another four miles through Bastia. Assisi is noted as the birthplace of St. Francis. From the south Allied armored units captured San Martino Delfico, less than three miles from Perugia.

Heavy fighting was reported at Citta Della Pieve, 22 miles southwest of Perugia. Along the Adriatic coast Allied forces captured Bellante, 14 miles southeast of Ascoli and only eight miles from the Tronto river. There was no Allied confirmation of a German report of raids by Allied Commandos along the Adriatic coast.

Heavy rains hampered ground and air ouerations in Italy. In one sweep into southern France Allied fighters destroyed six locomotives and damaged three others. A squadron of French fighter pilots participated in these attacks.

French Capture Most Of Elba; Assisi Falls

JUN 20 1944

HEINZERLING

Rome, June 19 (AP) — Gen. George C. Marshall and Gen. Henry H. Arnold have visited Rome and the Italian front, conferring with Allied military chiefs here.

Rome, June 19 (AP)—French colonial battalions captured Portoferraio and now hold the "greater part of the island of Elba," headquarters announced today, while on the Italian peninsula Allied troops made gains on both flanks and in the center of their line taking Assisi, the birthplace of St. Francis.

Beating down determined German resistance on Elba, the French have rounded up several hundred prisoners, including several high officers, a communique said.

A field dispatch said the French had seized more than two thirds of Elba.

Strong Resistance

Before taking Portoferraio, the capital on the north coast, the French captured Napoleon's villa. The invading forces brought artillery against the Germans bitterly contesting control of Porto Longone on the east coast.

(The German-controlled Paris radio said that the Allies made a second landing on Elba yesterday near Capolivieri on the southeastern corner of the island. There was no confirmation of this report from Allied sources.)

More Villages Taken

30. 24 — 16 377

Fifth and Eight Army troops in Italy are meeting increasing resistence as they drive the Germans back toward the Pisa-Rimini line, but more villages have been taken and strong pressure is being exerted against the subborn German garrison at the central sector road hub of Perugia, 85 miles north of Rome and about 72 miles southeast of Florence.

A German withdrawal to the north of Perugia, indicating that the Eighth Army may already have occupied the town, was reported by Karl Praegner, Italian correspondent of the German DNB news agency, according to Reuter.

Evade Tank Thrust

Praegner wrote:

"In the Perugia area the German lines had to be withdrawn to evade British panzer thrust. The tank attack was finally held in closer range fighting north of the town."

(Earlier, the Algiers radio said the Eighth Army had entered the southern suburbs of Perugia).

Near Tronto River

Eighth Army troops who captured Assisi, 12 miles southeast of Perugia, also took Deruta, south of the bitterly contested road junction town. A communique said that heavy fighting also had occurred at Citta Della Pieve, 22 miles southwest of Perugia. In the Adriatic sector, Allied troops are approaching the Tronto river.

Referring to fighting along the west coast, the communique said: "West of Highway 2 Fifth Army troops have driven the enemy from important defensive positions and in the coastal sector have taken Campagnatico and are now some 10 miles north of Grosseto."

The weather also hampered Allied air operations from Mediterranean and Italian bases yesterday, but fighters of the First Tactical Air Force made a sweep over enemy communications in southern France, destroying six locomotives, while Spitfires hit objectives in Elba.

Bastia Captured

The Eighth Army captured Bastia, which has a population of 5,700, eight miles southeast of Perugia and established a bridgehead across the Chiascio river. Armored units pressing on Perugia from the south pressed on to San Martino Delfico, less than three miles from Perugia.

Nazis Throw Down Arms

Nazis who had been holding out on the southeastern peninsula threw down their arms, leaving only isolated snipers still resisting in the northeastern peninsula's mountainous defiles. The one remaining Nazi artillery battery had been wipd out a few hours before.

Senegalese and Goums are proceeding to clear the area while Allied air forces and naval craft are patrolling against attempts of enemy soldiers to escape toward Livorno (Leghorn).

Only slightly damaged during the brief, fierce struggle, Napoleon's villa in the central mountains was requisitioned for officers' billets. Most mementos of the great emperor had been crated, apparently for shipment to Germany, when French troops waded ashore.

Frenchman Gets Wish In Attack On Elba

Stephen Barber, Associated Press war correspondent, went in with French assault troops when they landed on the island of Elba and suffered painful but not serious wounds which necessitated his removal to a hospital, where he dictated the following story on the attack.

By Stephen Barber

An American Field Hospital, Bastia, Corsica, June 18 (AP—Delayed)—Commandant Maurice got his wish—there were Germans on Elba and moreover they were well armed, well positioned and ready to fight.

As an impressive Allied armada assembled in the fading light Friday night within sight of Elba's peaks, Maurice—a French battalion commander—said:

"I hope there are some Germans there, for if there are not we shall not be able to kill any."

I was riding aboard a craft packed tight with French Senegalese troops, wearing American field equipment.

As we pulled in we could distinguish the white cottages of a fishing village.

Then It Came

DAY

There was still 20 minutes to go and no opposition.

Then it came. From either side of a mile-wide inlet the Jerries opened up. We were caught in a murderous crossfire. Red, yellow and green tracers and mortar shells whipped overhead.

It seemed only seconds before we found ourselves in the water, then on the sand, lying flat while the Senegalese touched off Bangalore torpedoes to detonate a path through the minefields and barbed wire.

We began crawling along the guide tape with mortar shells bursting all about us. The Senegalese never faltered, even though many fell.

There was a blinding flash just in front of me. I was tossed into a clump of weeds.

Leg Wouldn't Work

I got up and tried to walk a few yards and found I couldn't. My left leg wouldn't work and I was hit on the right side.

About 100 yards away one infantry landing craft which followed the assault troops was burning fiercely, lighting up the whole bay.

Hauling my typewriter, I crawled inland. I hand't gone many yards when I fell into a mine crater where a Senegalese was crouching. He also was wounded in his right arm but otherwise was okay, so—like a six-legged bettle—we linked arms and crawled to a stonewall for cover.

First-Aid Station

There an impromptu first aid station was set up in the shelter of a splintered handcart. Soon after daylight we moved to the bed of a dry stream half a mile away.

The riverbed became a collecting point for wounded. We wondered when the doctors would arrive, only learning later that the burning LCI we had seen had carried most of our medical personnel.

Minutes later Corporal Francis staggered into our refuge. He had two bullet holes in his chest. He had walked three miles in this condition after silencing with a flame thrower an enemy blockhouse.

Gradually captured Germans, who said they had arrived on the island only a few days before, filtered itno the riverbed. All seemed happy to be out of it.

German Doctors Aid

Francois—who spoke German—interrogated them, translating for me. I remonstrated with him, but Francois said:

"I want to hear how miserable they are. They think Germany will be beaten in three months. . . . You see, I am dying."

Shells Plaster Village.

The Senegalese carried us into a village which was believed safe from shellfire. But as soon as we arrived the Germans began plastering us again. Captured German doctors dressed our wounds.

Fresh from three hours in the water after the medical ship aboard which he was a passenger had been hit, Frank Coniff of International News joined me and suggested lunch. Frank helped me to a nearby bakery where we helped ourselves to onions, cucumbers and bread.

Vehicle landing craft began beaching as the shellfire ended.

I was placed on a stretcher for the trip back to Bastia. The last thing I heard before leaving the beach was that Commandant Maurice's troops had penetrated the island to the northern coast. His wish had been fulfilled.

Capt. Ralph Stephens of Oak Hill, N. Y., operated on my left leg this afternoon, taking out the last piece of steel.

Marshall Tours Battle Areas, Arnold Inspects Airfields

JUN 20 1944

Rome, June 19 (AP)—Myron Taylor, President Roosevelt's special representative to the Vatican, arrived tonight. He last was in Italy in November, 1942, and was asked by the President to return to his old position after the liberation of Rome. He declined to comment on his mission.

Rome, June 19 (AP)—Gen. George C. Marshall, United States Army chief of staff, and Gen. Henry H. Arnold, United States Army Air Force chief, flying on from a personal inspection of the Normandy battlefront, have visited Rome and the Italian battle areas, it was permitted to be disclosed today.

It was Marshall's first visit to the Italian front, and he not only toured the area where United States troops have chased the Germans some 100 miles above the Eternal City, but also the former Anzio beachhead, and flew over the Liri Valley, Cassino and its shattered abbey.

Arnold left Marshall after the first phase of the tour to go to various air bases in Italy.

Marshall Talks With Wilson

Marshall conferred with General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Mediterranean commander in chief; his deputy, Lieut. Gen. Jacob L. Devers; General Sir Harold Alexander, ground commander in Italy; Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark, Fifth Army commander, and Lieut. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, Allied air commander.

Yesterday Marshall toured the battlegrounds over which American troops chased the remnant of the German 14th Army 100 miles northwest of Rome.

He made the tour by staff car, jeep and cub-plane, advancing so close to actual combat that he was able to see United States artillery shells bursting on enemy positions on a hill above Grosseto.

DSM Awarded Gen. Juin

At a brief ceremony at Clark's headquarters, Marshall presented Distinguished Service Medals to Gen. Alphonse Pierre Juin, French commander, and Maj. Gens. John B. Coulter, John E. Sloan, John W. O'Daniel and W. W. Eagles.

Clark and Devers and all division commanders of the Fifth Army attended the ceremony in the field.

"It is an honor to present these medals in appreciation and admiration for the United States Government," Marshall said.

Allies Okay Italy's New Cabinet

JUN 20 1944

Rome, June 19 (AP)—The Allied governments, after delaying a week, have approved the Cabinet formed by Premier Ivanoe Bonomi at the request of Prince Umberto, and it has now begun to function as Italy's new Government.

The Allies insisted that the new Government assume all responsibilities undertaken by the former Government headed by Marshal Pietro Badoglio regarding the fulfillment of the terms of the Italian armistice and make no change in the monarchial institution.

DAY

Accord Reached

The cabinet agreed to this.

An accord also has been reached on the form of oath the Cabinet members will take, but the exact formula was not disclosed. A large part of the Cabinet has been reluctant to take an oath to Crown Prince Umberto as King Vittorio Emanuele's lieutenant general.

Allied approval of the Cabinet, given at a meeting of the Allied Advisory Council in Naples Saturday at which the United States, Britain, Russia, France, Yugoslavia and Greece were represented, was long delayed because the ouster of Badoglio came as a surprise and time was needed to consult home governments.

Badoglio May Return

It appeared that not until the Armistice is replaced by a peace treaty will Italy enjoy full freedom in forming new governments.

There is the possibility that Badogligo will reenter the Cabinet. His ouster was regarded in some capitals as unfortunate.

It is expected that the entire Government will leave Salerno before long to establish itself in Rome.

Allied officials said there no longer was any reason why secret clauses of the Italian armistice could not be made public, but said they were without authority to disclose them.

Allies Appro JUN 20 1944
Bonomi Cabine

Rome, June 19 (AP)—Premier Ivanoe Bonomi's new Cabinet has been approved by the United States, Britain, Russia, France, Yugoslavia and Greece, and is expected to move to Rome shortly from Salerno, it was announced today.

A large part of the Cabinet, it was understood, was reluctant to take the oath of Prince Umberto as King Vittorio Emanuele's lieutenant general, but an accord was reached. Its nature is not disclosed.

The Bonomi Government was required to accept the armistice obligations assumed by Marshal Pietro Badoglio, an authoritative Allied source said, and thus it appeared the Allies tood the view that not until the armistice is succeeded by a peace treaty will Italy enjoy full freedom.

TITO AND PETER REACH AGREEMENT

JUN 20 1944

DAY

Bari, Italy, June 19 (A. P.).—The Royal Yugoslav Government of youthful King Peter and the fighting Partisan movement under Marshal Tito have announced an accord on many problems with a view to strengthening relations with the Allies and aiding the Yugoslav peoples in their fight for liberation.

The agreement was reached in discussions inside Yugoslavia by Dr. Ivan Subasic, representing King Peter, and Marshal Tito himself. Preliminary meetings took place here. A communique on the mutual accord was announced yesterday from advanced Allied headquarters.

Discussions took place between June 14 and June 17, the communique said. It notably specified that the New Yugoslav news agency had been authorized to issue the communique.

The communique named the conferees as Dr. Subasic, the Presidium of the Yugoslav Anti-Fascist Council of Liberation and the National Liberation Committee.

"The goal to unify to the broadest extent possible was the spirit which motivated both sides to institute these negotiations," said the communique.

Rome's Water Supply Improved

ROME, June 19 (AP)—Col. Walter L. Medding, chief engineer for the Rome Area Command, said today Rome's damaged water supply now was 60 per cent or normal and that electric power would be increased from 26,000 kilowatts to 45,000 kilowatts by July 15. The normal Rome power requirement is 120,000 kilowatts daily. Colonel Medding is a native of Malden, Mass.

One nice thing about this race, if you are looking at it from a horseplayer's point of view, is that a gee-gee can throw his rider and if it still can come in first his number is hung up as the winner.

GI's In Italy Turn Sights On Siena's "Race Meeting"

By SIDNEY FEDER

With the Fifth Army North of Rome, June 19 (AP)—The horse players traveling with the Fifth Army are thinking of organizing a task force against the time we get to Siena, some 30 miles up the road, which is famous for its two-day meet of the gee-gees every year.

This is no ordinary race meeting so we would like some special racing characters for our task force. For instance, we would like Ben Jones, of Parnell, Mo., and have him bring along Whirlaway. And we'd also like Don Meade and Herb Fisher so that they could dust off some of that stuff from the 1933 Derby which, if you recall, was no worse than a good main bout for Madison Square Garden.

The Siena track is the Piazza Vittorio Emmanuele in the center of town, which is like having the ponies run around Times Square, the Loop or maybe Capitol Hill in Harrisburg, Pa.

They have racing every year in Siena and there are two festival days—July 2 and August 16. The gallopers have four legs but that is about the only resemblance to Matt Winn's whizbang at Churchill Downs.

The race itself is called the palio, which means "race" in Italian, only it is spelled in capital letters. A cannon booms to start the parade to the post, and another cannon springs the barrier. Then the ponies just run around the square until a bell goes ding-dong. That means school is out.

The piazza is decorated lavishly and thick mattresses are hung against the ancient buildings around the track. These aren't decorations. Most always some of the jockeys are tossed by their mounts, and the mattresses are there to prevent the fellows from denting their skulls against the walls—or vice versa.

Seventeen horses—one each from the 17 different parishes—are in the field, and there are no added starters.

Japs Press Upon Hengyang

threat of enemy encircling moves, and that new Chinese positions were taken up east of the town.

Had Reported Town Cleared

Only yesterday the high command had announced that all Japanese had been cleared from the strategic Burma road town, the second most important Japanese base in Yunnan, 20 miles west of the Salween river.

The Chinese command said the offensive toward Burma continued to be pressed by forces which had reached the outskirts of Watien, 20 miles north of Tengchung, the main Japanese Yunnan base, Tengchung is 40 miles northwest of Lungling, and probably is the base from which the Japanese launched a rescue drive toward their secondary bastion.

Still another Chinese reverse was disclosed in today's official bulletins. In the maritime province of Chekiang on the east China coast, Japanese troops based at Kinhwa in the central part of the province drove westward and captured Lungyu, a railway town 30 miles away. This loss, announced belatedly, occurred June 12, the communique said, adding that a Chinese counter-attack was under way.

Japanese who by-passed the city appeared definitely to have Hengyang as their goal. Their protective columns were branching out both east and west of the Canton-Hankow railway.

In the maritime province of Chekiang, the high command admitted belatedly, westward-driving enemy forces have taken Lungyu, a railway town about 30 miles west of the enemy base of Kinhwa.

Meanwhile, the Japs, 400 miles to the north, in Honan province, have made gains along the Peiping-Hankow rail line.

Held Big Aid To Japs

Conquest of both rail lines would give the Japanese a complete north-south line of rail communications, would neutralize some Allied airfields and would facilitate enemy operations against any future American landings on the China coast.

In the Hunan drive the Japanese also captured Siangtan, on the west bank of the Siang river, 25 miles southwest of Changsha, and Liuyang, 30 miles east of Changsha.

Enemy troops in Honan province have retaken the important city of Kioshan, 135 miles south of Chenghsien.

As Chinese Yield Lungling

Chungking, June 19 (AP)—Japanese drive pointed at the vital railway junction of Hengyang in lower Hunan province, has made still more progress, the Chinese high command admitted tonight. It also acknowledged a sudden setback in Yunnan province, far to the west, in the loss of Lungling, on the Burma road.

With Changsha encircled, the Japanese main body which bypassed the city drove several miles beyond captured Chuchow, less than 75 miles northeast of the Canton-Hankow railway city of Hengyang. Protective columns for this offensive movement spread out east and west of the strategic railway.

Second Column Checked

Chuchow is about 25 mies southeast of Changsha. About the same distance to the southwest, enemy troops who captured Siangtan continued a push to the west, but later were checked, the Chinese communique said.

Fierce fighting continued unabated in the suburbs of Changsha itself, ordered held at all costs. Thirty miles to the west, in sanguinary fighting around Ningsiang, the Chinese claimed to have inflicted more than 1,500 casualties on the enemy.

[The Japanese Domei agency declared tonight in a wireless dispatch for American consumption that Japanese troops had "completely occupied Changsha late in the afternoon of June 18," but that these troops were fighting "enemy remnants in and around the city."]

As for the Yunnan province setback, just east of northern Burma, tonight's communique announced a Chinese withdrawal from Lungling, captured June 10 in a drive proclaimed by the Chinese as the greatest victory of the Salween river offensive. The bulletin said the withdrawal was made to avoid Chungking, June 19 (A. P.).—The Chinese High Command announced tonight the withdrawal of Chinese troops from the Burma Road town of Lungling.

The Chinese recaptured Lungling on June 10. While admitting the loss of the town twenty miles west of the Salween River, the Chinese continued to press their offensive toward Burma and announced that other forces reached the outskirts of Watien, twenty miles north of Tengchung. Tengchung is forty miles northwest of Lungling.

Japs Drive Nearer Key Rail Center

Chungking, June 19 (AP)—Japanese forces have made a further advance southward toward the vital Canton-Hankow railway junction of Hengyang, driving several miles below captured Chuchow in their Hunan province offensive, the Chinese high command said tonight.

This force reached the north bank of the Lu river, less than 75 miles northeast of Hengyang, the high command said, also reporting that in the suburbs of encircled Changsha, fierce fighting continued. Across the Siang river from the besieged Chinese bastion, in the foothills of the Yuehlu mountains, other fighting was reported in progress.

Virtually Hopeless

Although the Chinese portrayed Changsha as still in their hands, the situation appeared virtually hopeless, and the main body of

CHANGSHA CAPTURED

NEW YORK, June 19—(AP) The Japanese Domei agency declared tonight in a wireless dispatch for American consumption that Japanese troops had "completely occupied Changsha late in the afternoon of June 18," but that these troops still were fighting "enemy remnants in and around the city." The dispatch, recorded by the Federal Communications commission, represented this fighting as "mopping up operations."

JAPS HURLED BACK IN ASSAM PROVINCE

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, June 19—(AP) Allied forces have swept the Japanese completely from Assam province in northeastern India and hurled all the enemy from a 20-mile stretch of the road from Kohima to Imphal in Manipur, farther southeast, it was announced today.

Despite Monsoon conditions, which necessitated use of rubber boats to maintain some positions and evacuate casualties, the Allies pressed a determined drive in the Imphal region. Large-scale withdrawals of Japanese south and east toward their main supply base at Ukhrul were observed and RAF planes strafed some of the congested columns.

Allied units have advanced to the neighborhood of Maosongsang from the east and others now are astride the Tuphema-Kharasom track, Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's headquarters said.

In northern Burma, Chinese and Chindit troops have driven closer to Mogaung and have made local gains in the area around the besieged enemy base of Myitkyina.

The Chinese, last reported about a mile above Mogaung, have reached the north bank of the Mogaung river opposite the town. At the same time, headquarters said, Maj. Gen. W. D. A. Lentaigne's Chindit forces were holding a village bordering Mogaung on the east.

In the Myitkyina area, a Chinese unit was reported to have tunnelled to the rear of a Japanese unit, destroying it. American and Chinese forces continued to apply pressure on four sides on the Japanese holding Myitkyina.

were observed and the congested columns were strafed by the RAF, Allied headquarters said.

Rain Slows Drive

The monsoon was slowing Allied operations, however, and rubber boats were employed to maintain some positions and evacuate casualties.

(An Allied setback at Lungling, 100 miles southeast of Myitkyina, was announced at Chungking, however, where it was said Chinese troops had been forced to give up that Burma Road town. The Chinese announced its capture on June 11 and declared it was their biggest success of their offensive west of the Salween river.)

In northern Burma, Allied troops compressed further the Japanese defensive arcs at Mogaung and Myitkyina.

Chinese troops are now about a mile north of Mogaung, after gaining two and a half miles since their capture of Parentu to the northwest, it was announced last night. A junction of the Chinese with British air-borne Chindits east of Mogaung appeared imminent as Maj. Gen. W. D. A. Lentaigne's forces penetrated to within 200 yards of the Mogaung Valley bridge.

Kamaing Cleaned Up

Mopping-up operations were continued in the newly captured Japanese supply base of Kamaing, 20 miles north of Mogaung.

Storming the main enemy bastion of Myitkyina, 40 miles east of Kamaing, American troops killed more than 100 Japanese in an advance in which flame throwers and Bazooka rocket guns destroyed enemy strong points around the city. This was the first announcement of the use of Bazookas in the north Burma fighting.

Last Of Japs Hurled Out Of Assam In India

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, June 19 (AP)—The last Japanese have been thrown out of Assam, in northeastern India, and operations are proceeding satisfactorily to drive the rest off the Kohima-Imphal road in Manipur, it was announced today.

Large-scale withdrawals of Japanese south and east toward Ukhrul, 24 miles northeast of Imphal,

Strike At Jap Rear

The communique from Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's headquarters said concentrated artillery supported operations around Myitkyina, and just west of the city Chinese harassing patrols struck at the Japanese rear. One Chinese force was reported to have cut the Waingmaw ferry in the railroad yards.

(On the Yunnan province front in China, where the Salween river offensive already has made its first token juncture with Kachin Levies from north Burma under Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, capture by the Chinese of Chiaotou was announced in a Chungking communique.)

YANKS DRIVING ACROSS SAIPAN

Repel Jap Attacks—Advance on Naval Base.

Pearl Harbor, June 19 (A. P.).—American soldiers and Marines, fighting their way through hot canefields halfway across Saipan Island in the Marianas after repelling Jap assaults by tanks and by landing craft, drove down toward the island's principal harbor and naval base at Magicienne Bay today.

Slightly more than 100 miles southward, American warships bombarded Guam heavily for the first time in the war. Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, in announcing that this former American base had been shelled last Thursday, gave no indication as to whether an invasion was in prospect.

Fifteen hundred miles to the south, just below the equator, Mitchell medium bombers and escorting P-38 fighters temporarily neutralized Japan's last remaining effective airbase in New Guinea. They destroyed fifty enemy planes at Sorong and sank five enemy merchantmen and half a dozen smaller vessels.

Admiral Nimitz also announced that Army Liberators and Navy Venturas bombed in the Kurile chain Wednesday and Thursday and shot down one of thirty-four intercepting planes. Radio Tokyo reported that hundreds of bombers and fighters attacked two islands in the Kazan group 750 miles northwest of Saipan, Friday. American planes raided the Kazan and Bonin Islands for the first time on Wednesday, destroying forty-seven Japanese planes and sinking or damaging more than a dozen ships or small water craft.

The Saipan beachhead established by Marines, with the support of Army infantry units, at last reports extended from Agingan Point on the southwestern tip, where the Americans landed last Wednesday, five and a half miles up the west coast almost to Garapan, the island's largest town.

Jap units strongly counter-attacked with tanks before dawn Friday, after the Yanks had pushed north and east for two miles and captured the coastal village and airstrip of Charan-Kanoa, and the island town of Hinashisu, more than halfway across the island. Holding stanchly, the Americans forced the enemy back, inflicting heavy casualties and knocking out twenty-five Nipponese tanks.

Japs Try New Tactics.

Early Saturday the Japs attempted new tactics, a landing assault south of Garapan. The attempt was smashed and thirteen troop-laden enemy barges destroyed. There was no indication whether the barges came from Saipan, where an estimated 30,000 Japs are intrenched, or from Tinian Island three miles to the south.

American warships shelled the island in support of the invasion. The fighting line at last reports skirted the western edge of the 3,600-foot Aslito airstrip and was less than three miles from Magicienne Bay on the east coast.

The Jap radio claimed yesterday that since the Marianas invasion July 11 the Nipponese had sunk an American battleship and a "warship," seriously damaged two battleships and two carriers, and destroyed 124 planes.

Japanese aircraft off the Mariana Islands.

The Japanese previously had claimed, without Allied confirmation, to have sunk a United States battleship and another American warcraft.

Move For Finn Peace Urged

Washington, June 19 (AP)—Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) expressed hope today the United States still might bring about an 11th hour armistice between Finland and Russia, while Representative Coffee (D., Wash.) proposed that this country break its ties with Spain and help overthrow the Franco regime.

The "human aspirations" voiced in the Atlantic Charter, Vandenberg told the Senate, would be vindicated if the United States used its "great voice and power" to obtain an armistice and then later try to see to it that Finland gets a chance to carry on in the post-war world.

Coffee, proposing a severance of diplomatic relations with Spain, accused the Franco Government of sending troops and materials to the German war machine and the Spanish Falange of fighting against the good neighbor policy in South America.

Charges Crimes Against U. S.

Advocating aid to guerrillas to oust Franco, Coffee declared that Franco's "crimes against the people of the United States, against the democracies of the world, have not been forgotten."

Vandenberg, one of his party's leading spokesman on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, brought up the subject of the Finnish-Russian armistice in expressing regret that the Government had found it necessary to order Finnish Minister Hjalmar Procope to leave the country.

While emphasizing that he was standing by the Government's action on such a matter in time of war, he defended Procope as one who has "never harbored so much as one vagrant thought that was consciously hostile to our own United States." Any "inimical" actions attributed to Procope, the Senator asserted, could only stem from the "distraught anxiety" of his country.

Hull Sheds No Light

Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, at a news conference declined to shed any light on the "inimical" actions which the State Department said prompted the Government to hand Procope and three attaches their passports.

Explaining that any amplification would be harmful to the war effort, Hull said the activities of the Finnish diplomats should be viewed in the light of Finland's role in the war. He said the Finnish Government has adjusted its policy to fit the aim of the Nazis.

Procope and his aides are under guard at their homes. While there is a possibility that their departure may be delayed because Madame Procope is expecting a baby within a few weeks, Procope may return and let his family make the trip later.

Taylor Returns From China

WASHINGTON, June 19 (AP).—The State Department announced today that Floyd Taylor, former assistant city editor of "The New York World-Telegram," has returned from China where he served with the Chinese Ministry of Information as a specialist in cultural relations. Since last October he had been chief editor of the Ministry's international department.

TO RECOGNIZE NEW BOLIVIAN REGIME

Washington, June 19 (A. P.).—The United States and other American republics have decided to recognize the new regime in Bolivia before July 2 elections are held there, it was learned here today.

The decision was taken to mean that this Government feels that President Gualberto Villarroel has cleansed his revolutionary government of the pro-Nazi elements which helped him to power six months ago.

One of the most important actions, in the eyes of diplomats here, was Bolivia's expulsion of over fifty Axis agents or nationals who were sent to this country for internment.

It is expected that all the American nations, with the exception of Argentina which already recognizes Bolivia, will extend recognition to Senor Villarroel at the same time.

HALSEY'S NEW JOB

Washington, June 19 (A. P.).—Admiral William F. Halsey Jr., who fears that the war might end before he lands in Japan, has a new scrapping job and a fleet of his own to lead into battle.

Admiral Halsey even now may be steaming with his fleet into action in the Pacific. There is a strong possibility that his battlewagons and carriers may have played a big part in the strikes deep in Japanese territory at the Bonin and Volcano Island groups, or in the Mariana Island operations.

Assignment of the 61-year-old scrapper as commander of the Third Fleet under orders to operate in the Pacific was announced over the week end. Admiral Halsey had virtually worked himself out of a command by driving the Japanese from the South Pacific area.

A fellow officer summed it up this way: "If Bull Halsey has his way the Third Fleet will be based in Yokohama before he's through."

Filipino Ind... Is Backed By House

Washington, June 19 (AP)—A resolution assuring the Philippine Islands complete independence once the Japanese are thrown out was adopted by the House today.

The measure was returned to the Senate for concurrence in an amendment which provides that the independence is to be granted as soon as the constitutional processes are restored in the islands.

Representative Bell (D., Mo.) told the House the measure would counteract the "propaganda of the Japanese who set up a puppet government there with great fanfare about giving the Philippines their liberty, which everyone knows is not true."

FUNDS FOR ALASKA OIL HUNT DENIED

Washington, June 19 (A. P.).—A $49,107,785,795 War Department appropriations bill passed unanimously by the House last Thursday won swift approval today of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

The Senate group made only three changes, one an amendment deleting a $1,127,000 House allowance for further oil explorations in Alaska.

Another struck out a House provision which would have prohibited additions to the specialized program for training doctors and dentists by the Army.

The third added a provision authorizing payment of travel expenses to their homes or camps near their homes for soldiers returned to this country for recuperation.

Senator Thomas (D.-Okla.) told reporters he would call up the measure as soon as the Senate completes action on a bill to finance war agencies for the fiscal year starting July 1.

Demobilization Bill Expected To Wait

Washington, June 19 (AP)—The Senate Military Committee today abandoned hope of enactment of a comprehensive post-war demobilization and adjustment bill until after the summer recess.

It instructed a subcommittee headed by Senator Murray (D., Mont.) to redraft final legislation reconciling conflicts in viewpoint over unemployment as well as the scope of a contemplated office of demobilization. The subcommittee, Murray said, would try to have a bill ready for passage after the Republican and Democratic conventions.

STUDY ARMY PAY

Washington, June 19 (A. P.).—Members of the House Military Committee indorsed today the general principle of some day revising Army hazard pay scales to correct inequities that have developed during the present war.

Their thoughts, they said, were prompted by the fact that infantrymen fighting on beachheads throughout the world receive no extra pay for the extra hazard to life and limb, although such bonus pay is given to paratroopers, members of the Air Corps and submarine crews.

Legislation to boost by a maximum of $10 the monthly pay of foot-soldiers is under consideration by the committee, with War Department backing, and may be reported to the House tomorrow.

It does not provide, however, that the extra money be paid for the hazards faced by an infantryman but rather that he receive the bonus for becoming proficient at his work.

Under its provisions, an "expert infantryman" serving in the United States would receive $5 extra monthly, while one in a combat area would receive $10.

Would Liberalize GI Bill Of Rights

Washington, June 19 (AP)—Less than a week after passage by Congress of the GI bill of rights, Senator Murray (D., Mont.) today introduced a bill to liberalize its unemployment insurance allowances for jobless veterans.

The GI bill, now awaiting President Roosevelt's signature, allows unemployment insurance at the rate of $20 a week for a maximum of 52 weeks in the first two years after discharge. The Murray bill would allow an additional $5 a week for each dependent of an unemployed serviceman, up to a maximum of $35 weekly.

Senator Murray's amendment also would eliminate the requirement of the GI bill that a serviceman must have been in the armed forces at least ten months to be eligible for the full 52 weeks of insurance.

Senate Group Approves War Department Bill

Washington, June 19 (AP)—A $49,107,785,795 War Department appropriations bill passed unanimously by the House last Thursday won swift approval today of the Senate Appropriation Committee.

The Senate group made only three changes, one an amendment deleting a $1,217,000 House allowance for further oil explorations in Alaska. Another struck out a House provision which would have prohibited additions to the specialized program for training doctors and dentists by the army. The third added a provision authorizing payment of travel expenses to their homes or camps near their homes for soldiers returned to this country for recuperation.

HIGHER NAVY POST FOR BARD

President Nominates Him For Forrestal's Old Job

Washington, June 19 (AP)—Ralph A. Bard, now Assistant Secretary of the Navy, was nominated by President Roosevelt today to be Under Secretary.

The nomination to put Bard into the position left vacant when James V. Forrestal moved up to succeed the late Frank Knox, was sent to the Senate.

Bard's elevation leaves vacant the post of Assistant Secretary, and Presidential Secretary Stephen Early said Mr. Roosevelt would await a recommendation from Forrestal before filling that post. Forrestal recommended Bard's promotion, Early said.

Native Of Cleveland

Bard, 59, is a native of Cleveland. Much of his business career before entering the Navy Department February 15, 1941, was devoted to financing and developing smaller manufacturing concerns. He was an organizer of the Chicago firm of Hitchcock, Bard & Co.

Bard's navy work has been concerned chiefly with labor relations and similar administrative activity.

Promotes Marine Officer

The President also sent to the Senate the nomination of Brig. Gen. Clifton C. Cates to be advanced to major general in the Marine Corps.

Cates commanded the First Marine Division in the Solomons Islands landings in 1942. The general, 50 years old, was born at Tiptonville, Tenn. His home now is Philadelphia.

Cates Named Major General

WASHINGTON, June 19 (AP).—President Roosevelt today sent to the Senate the nomination of Brigadier General Clifton C. Cates to be advanced to major general in the Marine Corps. Cates commanded the 1st Marine Division in the Solomons Islands landings in 1942.

"It has been announced in Tokyo that the Japanese navy in the near future will win a great naval victory in the Central Pacific. We are all waiting for the news."

It is in the Central Pacific that powerful United States naval task forces have been daring the so-far reluctant Japanese to come out and fight.

GOV. KERR PREDICTS ROOSEVELT WILL WIN

JUN 20 1944

WASHINGTON, June 19—(AP) Visiting here on state business and to gather material for his keynote address before the Democratic national convention, Gov. Robert S. Kerr of Oklahoma, said today he had no fear of a third party or dissident Democrats.

The Democratic party, he said at a press conference, is big enough for every American, whether he be a New Dealer, anti-New Dealer, or neither.

As for the situation in the South, where elements of dissatisfaction have appeared in Democratic ranks, the governor declared that while the news from Dixie today may be giving the Democrats some concern, the news from the South in November "will give the Republicans the creeping paralysis."

He pronounced the Republican party "dead" and said he hadn't the slightest doubt that Franklin D. Roosevelt would be the next President.

CONGRESS ENTERS DISCUSSION

Foreign Policy With Reference to Spain Also Is Brought Up in the House.

JUN 20 1944

Washington, June 19 (A. P.)—United States foreign policy was discussed in both houses of Congress today as Secretary of State Hull declined to disclose the specific matters which led him to hand Hjalmar J. Procope, the Finnish Minister, his passport last week.

Asserting that a specific answer to questions about the Minister's dismissal would be harmful to the conduct of the war, the Secretary added at his press conference that we must always keep in mind that the pro-Nazi Finnish Government is actively fighting on the side of Germany and has adjusted Finnish policy and actions to suit the aim of the German Government.

The activities of the dismissed Finnish diplomats, Mr. Hull declared, must be viewed in that light.

Mr. Procope and his three councilors of legation, T. O. Vahervuori, Urho Toivla and Risto Solanko, were under guard at their homes today with members of their families.

Mrs. Procope is expecting a baby within the next two or three weeks. Department officials declined to confirm reports that this had complicated arrangements now under way to send the diplomats home.

Procope Would Start Home.

It was learned that Mr. Procope has expressed a desire to start home as soon as possible, and some diplomatic officials suggested that he might leave Mrs. Procope and their two children here to follow at some later date.

Senator Vandenberg (R.-Mich.) brought up the Finnish action in the Senate, expressing deep regret over the State Department's action and voicing hope of eleventh-hour intervention by this country to bring about a Russian-Finnish armistice.

Across the Capitol, Representative Coffee (D.-Wash.) proposed a resolution recommending that the United States sever diplomatic relations with Spain and extend aid to Spanish guerrilla armies to permit them to overthrow the Franco regime.

Senator Vandenberg, one of his party's principal spokesmen on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said he believed that Mr. Procope, "a gallant Finnish patriot," was not guilty of anything which did not "stem solely" from "distraught anxiety" for his homeland.

He added, however, "I stand by my own government in such matters in time of war."

Asserting that the war against Germany must be fought with every weapon, and that Germany's satellites — "willing or otherwise" — cannot expect to escape unscathed, Mr. Vandenberg added.

Vandenberg Hopeful for Finland.

"But, though it may be dismissed as wishful thinking at this late hour, I would still hope that the great voice and power and authority of the Government of the United States could still intervene to compose a permanent armistice upon those unequal Finnish battlefronts; and then, come what may, I would hope that the official voice of America, in proper time and place, will speak out for a reincarnated postwar republic of Finland which may carry on once more in what has been and can be again one of the world's greatest adventures in proud, effective, enlightened, self-sufficient democracy."

Such a course, he said, "would vindicate the human aspirations voiced to the world in the Atlantic charter."

Mr. Procope's devotion to his country may not excuse his "unnamed acts," the Senator continued, adding that he was "morally certain, in the absence of proof to the contrary, that he has never harbored so much as one vagrant thought that was consciously hostile to our own United States."

In the House discussion of Spain, Representative Coffee said German and Italian troops had helped Franco gain control of Spain and asserted the Spanish government now was furnishing supplies and troops to Germany. He contended the Spanish Falange engineered the overthrow of the Bolivian Government and had carried on propaganda in South America in opposition to this country's good neighbor policy.

"Now that we have invaded France," Mr. Coffee said, "Franco's day of judgment is near at hand. His crimes against the Spanish people, against the people of the United States of America, against the democracies of the world have not been forgotten."

DEFENSE LAWYERS ARGUE MOTIONS IN SEDITION TRIAL

JUN 20 1944

WASHINGTON, June 19—(AP) Attorneys in the mass sedition trial today argued all day on a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal for the 29 defendants, and when it was over Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher of U. S. District court reserved his decision.

Defense attorneys contended the Supreme court's recent decision in the Hartzel case meant there "must be an end to this prosecution." Chief Prosecutor O. John Rogge countered that he was prepared to show "specific intent" on the part of the 29 defendants to undermine the morale of the armed forces.

The Supreme court last week reversed the conviction of Elmer Hartzel, Chicago statistician, on charges of violating the Espionage Act of 1917, saying that the government had not proven Hartzel specifically aimed at inciting insubordination and other disturbances in the armed forces. The charges were based on three pamphlets written and circulated by Hartzel.

E. Hilton Jackson, counsel for Gerald B. Winrod, Wichita, Kans., who led defense arguments, contended that if the Hartzel decision had been handed down before the start of the sedition prosecution "there would have been no indictment."

"We have now a solemn decision from that court which clarifies the right of free speech guaranteed by the first amendment to the constitution," Jackson said. "It spells inevitably the end of this prosecution as to all of the defendants."

Rogge said the evidence would show the defendants "joined in a world-wide movement to destroy democratic government" and "to undermine the morale of the armed forces so that the Nazi movement could be successful."

"We have more facts and circumstances than were shown in the Hartzel case," Rogge continued. "The defendants were not merely citizens expressing their views. They co-operated with people known to be Nazis in Germany, England, Canada and South Africa."

On the other hand, Rogge contended, Hartzel "was a single, unconnected American citizen. If the prosecution had been able to show that Hartzel joined a Nazi movement, the result in the Supreme court would have been different."

Justice Eicher did not indicate when he would announce his decision.

BILL WOULD PROVIDE FOR EX-PRESIDENTS

Washington, June 19 (A. P.).—Former Presidents would be made voteless members-at-large of the Senate for the remainder of their lives under a bill introduced today by Representative Canfield (R.-N. J.).

They would receive the same pay and allowances as an elected member.

Mr. Canfield said in a statement: "Except for William H. Harrison, Polk, Taylor, Lincoln, Garfield, Arthur, McKinley, Wilson and Harding, every President has survived his term long enough to have to face the problem of 'and now what?'—and without help from the people."

He said that Gov. Thomas Dewey of New York had expressed himself as favorable to the idea.

200,000 WORKERS

30. 24 — 16381

ARE NEEDED IN WAR PRODUCTION

WASHINGTON, June 19—(AP) Donald M. Nelson asserted today that the next three months will be "highly critical" ones for war production and that 200,000 workers should be shifted immediately from their present locations to make "badly needed" war materials.

But despite this situation, the War Production board chief told Senate investigators, he thought it was "essential" to the country's welfare to make concrete plans for restoring civilian production. He testified before the Senate War Investigating committee which is looking into prospects for stepping up the output of scarce civilian products such as pots and pans.

Nelson sketched some of the steps already taken toward reconversion and declared that he knew of no case in which such moves had resulted in any letup in the manufacture of war goods. Senator Ferguson (R-Mich.) had raised the question whether there might not be a tendency by labor and industry to slow down so that labor shifts would not be required.

As a matter of fact, Nelson said, war workers probably are inclined to work harder since they know that consideration is being given to them in the reconversion set up.

But, he emphasized, if any of the reconversion steps do prevent labor shifts, "I will not hesitate for one minute to back up on what I've done."

Nelson described Detroit as the most critical labor shortage area and told the committee he would submit a list of places and industries where the 200,000 workers are needed now.

Explaining that the manpower problem is more difficult to handle than materials supply, he said it was necessary to depend upon transfers of workers from one region to another to meet demands.

Nelson's list of articles needed most by civilians ranged from funnels to electric refrigerators. Farm radio batteries, he said, have been placed in an urgent category and steps are being taken to increase their production.

Looking forward to a resumption of full scale civilian production, Nelson said he thought it was necessary to give manufacturers an opportunity to make working models of the items they want to produce and to make it possible for them to begin now assembling machine tools to facilitate a quick changeover.

FEPC RAPPED, THEN PRAISED

Racial Issue, Communism Debated In Senate

JUN 20 1944

Washington, June 19 (AP)—The President's Fair Employment Practices Committee was alternately condemned and praised in Senate debate today.

Southern Democrats, led by Senator Eastland, of Mississippi, pictured the agency set up by President Roosevelt to handle racial discrimination disputes as a vehicle of Communism, while Senator Chavez (D., N. M.), called it a valuable link in the chain of good will the nation is seeking to forge with Latin American neighbors.

$500,000 Allowance Is Topic

Speech-making eliminated possibility of a vote before tomorrow afternoon on an amendment by Senator Russell (D., Ga.), to strike from the $1,030,000,000 war agencies appropriations bill a $500,000 allowance to finance FEPC activities beginning July 1.

Asserting Sidney Hillman, chairman of the CIO Political Action Committee, is the "driving force" behind the FEPC, Senator Eastland described Hillman as "just as much a Communist as Stalin himself," and added that if given the appropriation, the agency would use it to "deprive management of control of business" by a course of "intimidation and coercion."

Senator Chavez, asserting that opposition to the agency is based upon "a misunderstanding of its fine work," declared its activities have done more to bring about actual good will from Latin America "than the many millions spent by the coordinator's office, by lend-lease agencies, or by the former Board of Economic Warfare combined."

Cites Results In Southwest

He declared he had witnessed commendable progress by the FEPC in ending racial discriminations against citizens of Mexican and Latin-American extraction, particularly in the Southwest.

Senator Eastland, asserting the agency proposed to tell industry whom to hire, whom to fire and whom to promote, added:

"We are much closer to a dictatorship by the Communist CIO than the people of this country realize." He said the FEPC personnel was loaded down with employes termed "subversive" by either the Attorney General or the Dies Committee on Un-American Activities. An informal agreement was made to keep the Senate in session until 6 P. M. tomorrow in an effort to dispose of the issue.

After the giant ship, refitted for use as a troop transport, had been raised at a cost of $3,750,000, her hull was repaired and she was taken to the Todd shipyards in Brooklyn, where the ship rests today, the Navy said.

Future plans for reconstructing the ship have not been announced by the Navy, which said that manpower and materials which could have been used to refit the LaFayette have been diverted to more urgent needs.

DEADLOCK LOOMS ON OPA MEASURE

JUN 20 1944

Senate, House Groups Fail to Agree on Price Control Extension Bill.

WASHINGTON, June 19—(AP) Senate and House conferees, failing to agree on terms of the Price Control Extension bill, at a day long session, worked tonight amid growing prospects of a deadlock on one or more controversial amendments.

Rep. Spence (D-Ky.), chairman of the House conferees, told reporters he doubted that an immediate agreement could be reached.

Senator Wagner (D-N.Y.) more optimistic, said he thought "we should be able to agree," although he said the conference was at "loggerheads" on one amendment when the day session broke up.

Other conferees said the amendment in dispute was the proposal of Senator Bankhead (D-Ala.) to require revision of OPA price ceilings on cotton textiles. The Senate approved it by a 39-35 vote, but the House rejected it 191-87.

The conferees had hoped to be able to submit a satisfactory measure to the Senate tomorrow. This would make possible action by both houses in time for an anticipated recess late this week.

PLANS FOR RE-BUILDING BIG LINER CANCELLED

JUN 20 1944

NEW YORK, June 19—(AP) Shortages of manpower and critical materials have caused cancellation of plans to re-build the U.S.S. LaFayette, formerly the luxury liner Normandie, which burned and sank at her pier in February, 1942, the Navy department announced today.

Editor Of Yank Awarded Citation

New York, June 19 (AP)—Master Sergeant Joseph W. McCarthy was awarded the Legion of Merit in ceremonies at Fort Jay for "exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding service" as managing editor of "Yank," United States Army magazine.

The citation honoring McCarthy, a resident of Cambridge, Mass., and former sports writer for the Boston Post, was read during the ceremonies on Governor's Island by Col. George S. Burkett, commander of Fort Jay.

McCarthy joined the staff of "Yank" when it was founded and served as its sports editor until he was named managing editor in August, 1942. Under his direction, three United States editions and ten overseas editions were established for distribution in all theaters of American operations.

Inventor Ridicules Bomb Use On U. S.

Boston, June 19 (AP)—John Hays Hammond, Jr., internationally known inventor, was quoted today by the Boston Traveler as saying that the Nazis' hope of bombing New York with its new rocket projectile was "ridiculous."

"Don't forget wind drift is an important factor," the paper quoted Hammond. "And the rate of fuel consumption, as far as I know, is so great for rockets and jet propulsion that I don't see how a bomb could make the trip. It sounds ridiculous to me."

He said that unless a bomb of that type were launched within 50 miles of its objective there was no assurance that it would fly to its target.

Saladrigas En Route Here After Defeat

Miami, Fla., June 19 (A. P.)—Dr. Carlos Saladrigas, recently defeated candidate for the presidency of Cuba, said last night that he wil give all co-operation to Dr. Ramon Grau San Martin's new administration, and that he plans to remain active in politics on his return to Cuba.

Dr. Saladrigas, his wife, his 19-year-old daughter, Gloria, and his sister, Adriana Saladrigas, arrived here by clipper en route to New York for a six-week vacation.

"We have now reached a high degree of political education in Cuba, we're giving a good example to the rest of the world," the titular head of the Cuban Coalition party commented on the election.

New York Leaders Launch Drive to 'Draft' Dewey

Sprague, Jaeckle Predict Governor Will Accept Bid at Convention

JUN 20 1944

CHICAGO, June 19 — (AP) New York state Republican leaders officially announced for the first time today that it is their opinion Gov. Thomas E. Dewey will be nominated for President, that he will accept here before the convention adjourns—and that he will be elected in November.

J. Russell Sprague, Republican national committeeman for New York, spoke for the entire state party organization at a news conference. He said flatly that he and Edwin F. Jaeckle, state chairman, and Herbert Brownell, Dewey's campaign manager for the governorship in 1940 and 1942, came here to "draft" the 42-year-old governor now serving his first term at Albany. The convention opens June 26.

In Albany, N. Y., Dewey had no comment on Sprague's announcement.

The Sprague news conference brought the campaign to nominate Dewey out in the open for the first time since talk of the former New York racket buster for the presidency started two years ago. Dewey has insisted from the beginning that he is not a candidate, and his New York backers previously had indicated — although not for quotation—that he would accept a proferred nomination.

The New Yorkers were part of a growing, pushing stream of delegates arriving in Chicago for the preliminary committee meetings and lobby conferences which always mark the last week before convention time.

Bricker Group Active

Activity was stepped up on behalf of Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio. Bricker headquarters—through Roy D. Moore, one of the Ohioan's managers—predicted Bricker's nomination on the "sixth or seventh ballot." Announcement was made also that backers of Lieut. Com. Harold E. Stassen would meet the press for the first time in the pre-convention excitement tomorrow.

Asserting there is an "overwhelming demand" for Dewey throughout the country, but stating the governor had not been consulted on what the three would announce here, Sprague read from notes:

"We are here representing the Republicans and the Republican organization of New York state to draft Dewey and nominate him. In our opinion, when he is nominated Governor Dewey will, the same as any true American would, come to the convention, accept the nomination, and in November will be elected to the presidency."

Sprague insisted throughout a stream of questions that Dewey still is not a "candidate" in the true sense of the word, and that Sprague and his colleagues are here to "draft" him. Sprague hinted that there might not even be a speech placing Dewey in nomination. At least, he said, there are no definite plans.

He announced "New York headquarters" will be opened on the 25th floor of the Stevens hotel tomorrow, and that "it will not be a Dewey headquarters."

The 93-vote New York delegation to the national convention will caucus here Sunday to organize and probably discuss the question of a floor manager and other major appointments in the "draft Dewey" setup.

Sprague said that 92 of the 93 New York delegates are "unanimously" for the drafting of Governor Dewey.

Cites Standing in Polls

He recounted the results of various polls throughout the country which he said showed Dewey was "demanded" by a much greater percentage than that shown for any other possibility. He placed this at 60 per cent as against nine per cent for the next highest, whom he did not name.

He noted Dewey's victory in the Wisconsin primary, where delegates "were entered against Dewey's wishes," the write-in vote for Dewey in Pennsylvania, and evidences of what he called Dewey support in Nebraska, Oregon and South Dakota.

"Did Dewey tell you he would accept before you came here?" was one of the first questions put to Sprague.

"I think I have told you that, in our opinion, he will accept," was the reply.

Sprague said the New York leaders had conferred with Dewey frequently. Finally, though, he declared Dewey had not been consulted with respect to this statement.

He would make no prediction as to what ballot a nomination would be made, nor would he be drawn out on what, if any, talk had been going on in the Dewey camp about the vice presidential nomination.

"No Candidate"

Asked whether anyone else had been authorized to "speak for your candidate," Sprague smiled and replied: "There is no candidate."

Clarence Budington Kelland, Arizona national committeeman, arrived today and forecast that "generally speaking, the West will be rather preponderantly for Dewey." He included "the 11 land-grant states and Oklahoma and New Mexico" in the states he had in mind.

Representative Carroll Reece of Tennessee, a delegate and member of the Resolutions committee, told reporters his state delegation would be "practically all" for Dewey.

John D. M. Hamilton, former Republican national chairman and now practicing law in Philadelphia, was another arrival. He insisted he represented no one, but came to "give my assistance" to anyone who might need it.

Platform talk will start in earnest Wednesday, when the unofficial Resolutions committee meets to organize and chart hearings preliminary to the actual drafting of a platform for submission to the convention. One private organization, the National Negro Council, already has drafted a proposed "equal rights" plank endorsing among other things a constitutional amendment to abolish poll taxes.

Ike's Letter, Insignia Make Boy Scout Happy

Chicago, June 19 (AP) — Irwin Walzer, 12, a Boy Scout, is just about the happiest boy in Chicago.

With youthful confidence, Irwin wrote Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower asking for a copy of the invasion insignia—and the supreme commander of the Allied invasion forces didn't disappoint him.

"Irwin was thrilled speechless," said Irwin's mother, telling of the arrival of a letter from General Eisenhower and a picture of his new shoulder patch insignia.

Our Forces 'Months Ahead' On Pacific War Schedule

By The Associated Press.

SPOKANE, Wash., June 19—Brig. Gen. Ray L. Owens, who commanded the Thirteenth Air Force in the South Pacific from last June until January, told The Chronicle today the American forces were "months ahead" of schedule in the war against the Japanese in the Pacific.

"The South Pacific is completely cleaned up in the air," he declared.

General Owens, home on leave, said "when we first went down there it looked anything but good." He added that Guadalcanal now is so far behind the front line" it is as safe as Kansas City."

Alaska Air Transport To Be By Navy Service

JUN 20 1944

Seattle, June 19 (AP)—The navy's contract with Pan-American Airways for air-transport service from the States to Alaska will be terminated July 31, with a resulting displacement of about 900 employes in the airways' Pacific Alaska division, the 13th Naval District announced tonight.

Pan-American will continue commercial operations between Seattle and Alaskan points after the naval air-transport service takes over the military operation.

IN TWO MISSIONS SATURDAY, THE AMERICANS STRUCK A DOZEN LANDING FIELDS BEHIND THE NORMANDY BATTLE ZONE, IN ADDITION TO HEAPING NEW DESTRUCTION ON THE PAS DE CALAIS AREA, WHICH ALSO WAS HIT BY RAF FIGHTER-BOMBERS.

RAF BOMBERS BATTERED ENEMY INSTALLATIONS IN NORTHERN FRANCE AND LAID MINES IN ENEMY WATERS SATURDAY NIGHT, WHILE MOSQUITOS STRUCK TARGETS IN BERLIN AND WESTERN GERMANY AND ALSO ROAMED BEHIND THE NORMANDY BATTLE FRONT. THESE OPERATIONS COST ONE PLANE.

THE LATEST TABULATION ON SATURDAY'S COMBAT SCORES SHOWED 37 GERMAN PLANES DOWNED OVER FRANCE. THIS REPRESENTED ABOUT 10 PER CENT OF THE TOTAL AIR FORCES THE ENEMY RISKED DURING THE DAY AND NIGHT. THE LIST ALSO SHOWED 44 ALLIED LOSSES -- AROUND ONE PER CENT OF THE SORTIES (INDIVIDUAL PLANE FLIGHTS) FLOWN.

"THE WEATHER WAS ROTTEN ON THE WAY TO THE TARGET TODAY BUT CLEARED TO ABOUT THREE-TENTHS CLOUD COVER THERE," SAID FORTRESS WING LEADER LT.-COL. CONWAY HALL, NORTH LITTLE ROCK, ARK., "WE SAW NO ENEMY FIGHTERS ALL DAY."

"THE FLAK WAS TERRIFIC AT OUR TARGET," SAID CO-PILOT LT.JOSEPH ROOT, MCKEESPORT, PA. "THERE WERE BURST ALL AROUND US. I SAW ONE FORTRESS GET A DIRECT HIT AND BREAK UP IN MID-AIR. I'D RATHER GO OVER BERLIN FLAK THAN GO OVER THAT TARGET AGAIN."

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, TUESDAY, JUNE 20-(AP)-THE SWIFT AMERICAN GROUND ADVANCE TOWARD CHERBOURG'S BACK-DOOR SHOULD DISCLOSE IN THE NEXT FEW HOURS WHETHER THE PORT-CONVERTED INTO ONE OF THE MIGHTIEST NAVAL STRONGHOLDS ON THE FRENCH COAST--HAS BEEN PREPARED WITH MORE THAN IMPROVISED DEFENSES AGAINST LAND ATTACK.

THE PORT'S CONCRETE-EMPLACED LONG-RANGE GUNS WOULD MAKE SUPPORTING ALLIED NAVAL SHELLING A RISKY UNDERTAKING. THE ALLIES WOULD HAVE TO USE THE HEAVY BATTERIES OF CAPITAL SHIPS AND RUN THE RISK OF LOSSES FROM THE POWERFUL NAZI LAND GUNS.

THE AMERICAN GAINS AGROUND ARE SO FAST THEY HAVE KEPT FULLY 12 HOURS AHEAD OF OFFICIAL REPORTS CLEARING THROUGH HEADQUARTERS, AND THE FATE OF CHERBOURG APPEARS TO BE SEALED.

SHELLING OF THE PRIZE PORT SHOWS THE STRENGTH OF ALLIED ARTILLERY SUPPORT BACKING THE ASSAULT. ALTHOUGH 155-MILLIMETER HOWITZERS ARE ABLE TO POUND THE TWO MAIN AND TWO SECONDARY ROADS OF GERMAN WITHDRAWAL ON THE APPROACHES TO CHERBOURG AT RANGES OF 8,000 TO 12,000 YARDS, IT IS OBVIOUS THE AMERICANS HAVE 155-MM "LONG TOM" RIFLES OR OTHER HEAVY GUNS IN ORDER TO REACH CHERBOURG FROM A POINT EIGHT MILES OR MORE AWAY.

IT IS KNOWN THAT THE REMNANTS OF THREE GERMAN DIVISIONS ARE CAUGHT IN THE CHERBOURG AREA, IN ADDITION TO THE REGULAR GARRISON FORCE AT LEAST EQUAL IN STRENGTH. ANOTHER ENEMY DIVISION MIGHT HAVE BEEN SENT INTO THE PORT SOMETIME BEFORE THE AMERICANS SEALED IT OFF.

THERE HAVE BEEN A FEW UNCONFIRMED REPORTS OF GERMAN SHIPPING

OFF THE WEST COAST OF THE PENINSULA, BUT THERE IS NO TANGIBLE EVIDENCE THAT THE GERMANS WERE ATTEMPTING A WHOLESALE EVACUATION OF THE PORT, WHICH GERMAN PROPAGANDISTS IN THEIR BROADCASTS HAVE BEEN DISMISSING AS UNIMPORTANT.

THERE WAS NO INDICATION THE GERMANS WERE MASSING FOR A MAJOR COUNTER-ATTACK. MARSHAL ERWIN ROMMEL APPEARS TO HAVE ABANDONED HIS CHERBOURG GARRISON AS HE DID HIS ITALIAN TROOPS AT EVERY TROUBLE SPOT ACROSS NORTH AFRICA.

JUN 20 1944

SPARKLING SUNSHINE DRENCHES THE NORMANDY COUNTRYSIDE THIS MORNING AND AS YOU ROAR ALONG A TREE-SHADED ROAD IN A JEEP IT SEEMS ALMOST LIKE A PEACEFUL SUMMER DAY IN CALIFORNIA OR NEW ENGLAND.

LARKS ARE SINGING IN THE FIELD AND FAT BROWN-AND-WHITE CATTLE LAZILY BROWSE ALONG A WINDING BROOK.

THEN SUDDENLY THERE'S A SHATTERING DIN THAT SETS YOUR TEETH ON EDGE --A BATTERY OF HEAVY GUNS FIRING BEHIND A CLUMP OF BUSHES A FEW YARDS AWAY. TONGUES OF FLAME LEAP FROM ANOTHER BATTERY DOWN THE ROAD AND NOW THERE IS BEDLAM ALONG THE WHOLE SECTOR.

GIANT BOMBERS TUNDER OVERHEAD, WINGING INLAND TOWARD THE ENEMY. OFFSHORE GREAT NAVAL GUNS JOIN IN THE RACKET, DROWNING OUT EVERY SOUND WITH THEIR DEEP-THROATED BLASTS. TANKS CLATTER BY AND FIGHTER PLANES SNARL AND SCREAM IN THE SKIES.

THEN, JUST AS SUDDENLY, PEACE RETURNS ONCE MORE TO THIS GREEN AND PLEASANT LAND. THE GUNFIRE DIES AWAY WITH A LAST FAINT DISTANT BAR-R-RUMP. THE PLANES DISAPPEAR AND AGAIN THE LARKS ARE SINGING IN THE SUNLIT FIELDS.

WAR IS LIKE THAT. LIKE A VOLCANO IT SLEEPS QUIETLY, THEN ERUPTS WITH VIOLENT FURY.

--DASH--

AT NIGHT YOU LIE HALF ASLEEP, FULLY CLOTHED, ON BARE BOARDS OR THE STONE FLOOR OF A FARMHOUSE, AND IT BRINGS BACK THE DAYS WHEN YOU

WERE A BOY "ROUGHING IT" ON AN OVERNIGHT HIKE SOMEWHERE.
YOU GET TO THINKING ABOUT THINGS THEN. HOW YOU SQUIRMED AND SLAPPED AT WHINING MOSQUITOES ALL NIGHT LONG--BUT KNEW YOU WOULD BE HOME IN A GOOD SOFT WHITE-SHEETED BED TOMORROW.
THOSE ARE THINGS YOU THINK ABOUT HERE AT THE FRONT. MEMORIES COME DRIFTING BACK. YOU SOAR UP ON A MAGIC CARPET OF DREAMS--AND THEN ALL AT ONCE YOU SIT BOLT UPRIGHT TO THE RUSHING SCREAM OF A GERMAN DIVE BOMBER OVERHEAD.
YOU HEAR THE SPLATTER OF ACK-ACK AND THE CR-UMP, CRUMP, CRUMP OF JERRY'S BOMBS COMING TOWARD YOU. YOU GET UP. IN PITCH DARKNESS YOU GRAB YOUR TIN HELMET, FUMBLE FOR YOUR COAT, CLUTCH A BLANKET AND GROPE YOUR WAY DOWNSTAIRS TO THE CELLAR.

A18
DOWN THERE IT IS REASONABLY SAFE. IT IS DAMP AND COLD. RATS SCURRY ABOUT AMONG EMPTY WINE BOTTLES, STACKED ROW ON ROW AS THE GERMAN LEFT THEM, AND THEY TOUCH THEIR COLD FEET ON YOUR CHEEK IN THEIR LEAPFROG FLIGHT. AND AFTER A WHILE YOU FALL ASLEEP. DREAMLESS AND DEEP.
--DASH--
HARDEST THING I EVER DID: WALKING DOWN THE HEAVING SHELL-SWEPT DECK OF OUR SMALL LANDING CRAFT ON D-DAY WITH A 65-POUND RUCKSACK ON MY BACK...THEN DOWN THE STEEP AND SWAYING GANGPLANK INTO THE SEA WITH SHELLBURSTS LIFTING BLACK GEYSERS ALL AROUND, STAGGERING 50 YARDS TO THE SHORE IN WAIST DEEP WATER PAST UNIFORMED BUNDLES FLOATING FACE DOWN.

MEANWHILE, MAJOR GEN.LEWIS H.BRERETON ANNOUNCED THE U.S. NINTH AIR FORCE THUNDERBOLT FIGHTER-BOMBERS NOW ARE PERMANENTLY BASED IN FRANCE, AND OTHER UNITS WOULD MOVE INTO FRANCE CLOSE BEHIND THE ADVANCING ALLIES AS NEW LANDING STRIPS ARE FINISHED.

AMONG THE SOLDIERS FIGHTING THE FIRES CAUSED BY THE ROBOT PLANES WAS BEGRIMED PVT.CHARLES IBENTHAL, 1816 LAKE ST., OMAHA, NEB., WHO SAID IT WAS "A THROW-BACK TO THE DAYS WHEN I WAS CHASING FIRES BACK HOME--I'M CHAUING BOMBS NOW, THAT'S ALL."

PVT.ELLIOT OLINSKY, 45 KOSSUTH ST., NEW HAVEN, CONN., LOOKED UP BRIEFLY FROM THROWING MASONRY AND SHATTERED PLANKS INTO TRUCKS TO SAY: "PERSONALLY, I'D RATHER HAVE SOME PLANES WITH PILOTS. THESE THINGS COME TOO LOW AND SORT OF SNEAK UP ON YOU."

AS THE DIGGING INTO THE DEBRIS WENT ON, SGT.ALVIN BRIDGES, BAY CITY, MICH., BECAME PHILOSOPHICAL AND OBSERVED: "GREAT THING, HUMAN NATURE. MAYBE WE'D BETTER ALL GO BACK 3,000 YEARS AND START ALL OVER AGAIN."

SOME PILOTS HOVER OVER AREAS WHERE THE FLYING BOMBS ARE LIKELY TO PASS AND TAKE AFTER THEM WITH ALL THE ZEST OF A DOG-FIGHT WITH A GERMAN PLANE.

RETURNING FROM A DIVE-BOMBING MISSION IN NORMANDY, ONE PILOT SCORED SEVERAL HITS ON A "BUZZ BOMB" AND WATCHED IT CRASH. THE BLAST LEFT A HOLE 25 FEET ACROSS AND 12 FEET DEEP.

ONE MUSTANG PILOT WHO HELPED A BRITISH PILOT KNOCK DOWN ONE SAID HE SAW FOUR TYPHOON PILOTS BLAST SEVERAL IN LESS THAN 15 MINUTES.

THE NINTH U.S. AIR FORCE REVEALED THAT ITS MEDIUM AND LIGHT BOMBERS ALSO HAD A HAND IN THE PROTRACTED PRE-INVASION ATTACKS ON THE LAUNCHING RAMPS, RETURNING DAY AFTER DAY TO DUMP ALMOST 11,000 TONS OF EXPLOSIVES ON THE TARGETS.

SOME 7,000 INDIVIDUAL ATTACKS WERE MADE AGAINST THE ROCKET INSTALLATIONS AND 26 MARAUDERS AND 11 HAVOCS WERE LOST.

TODAY'S ATTACKS ALL ALONG THE NORMANDY FRONT WERE FOLLOWED UP THIS EVENING AND FOR MORE THAN AN HOUR ALLIED BOMBERS AND FIGHTERS

WERE SEEN RETURNING TO ENGLAND FROM MISSIONS ALONG THE FRENCH COAST.

"THERE WAS PLENTY OF ACTION ON THE GROUND TODAY," SAID LT.ABEL DAHGRAN, RIVERTON, IOWA, A FORTRESS CO-PILOT ON AN AIR FIELD RAID. "WE SEEMED TO BE MOVING UP TROOPS AND SUPPLIES FROM ALL SIDES. ON ROADS THERE WAS ONE CONTINUOUS LINE OF ONE-WAY TRAFFIC."

"WE DIDN'T SEE A SINGLE GERMAN PLANE IN THE AIR AND THERE WAS PRACTICALLY NO FLAK FOR SUCH A LONG TRIP," SAID TECH.SGT.BRUCE OEDEWALDT, MAPLETON, ILL., A FORTRESS GUNNER IN THE SAME FORMATION.

THE ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY AIR FORCE DISCLOSED THAT RAF FIGHTERS OF THE SECOND TACTICAL AIR FORCE AND THE AIR DEFENSE OF GREAT BRITAIN GROUP HAD FLOWN NEARLY 25,000 SORTIES IN SUPPORT OF THE NORMANDY OPERATIONS BETWEEN THE DAWN OF D-DAY AND MIDNIGHT LAST NIGHT.

RAF FIGHTERS DESTROYED 239 GERMAN PLANES AND DAMAGED MANY MORE WHILE LOSING 161 FIGHTER PILOTS.

MANY PERSONS HERE ARE STILL BEWILDERED AS TO WHY HITLER WAITED UNTIL NOW TO USE HIS ROBOT PLANES INSTEAD OF LAUNCHING THEM AGAINST THE GATHERING ALLIED INVASION FORCES BUT LORD STRABOLGI ADVANCED THIS THEORY:

"THE ROCKET PLANE INSTALLATIONS WERE SET UP ON THE CALAIS COAST TO MEET AN EXPECTED INVASION THERE. THE INVASION IN NORMANDY WAS A TACTICAL SURPRISE, SO THE PILOTLESS PLANES WERE USED AGAINST SOUTHERN ENGLAND AS A LAST GAMBLE TO PANIC CIVILIANS."

THE GERMAN RADIO, HOWEVER, CONTINUED TO PUT OUT HIGHLY COLORED REPORTS OF THE DESTRUCTION WROUGHT IN LONDON, DECLARING THAT "ALL ROADS LEADING FROM THE CITY ARE BLOCKED WITH REFUGEES IN ALL MANNER OF VEHICLES, HUGGING WHAT FEW BELONGINGS THEY HAVE RESCUED FROM THE FLAMES OF BURNING LONDON."

THE GERMAN-CONTROLLED PARIS RADIO QUOTED A BERLIN ANNOUNCEMENT AS SAYING THAT IN ADDITION TO LONDON, TARGETS HIT BY THE ROCKET BOMBS INCLUDED PLYMOUTH, SOUTHAMPTON, PORTSMOUTH, WEYMOUTH, THE ISLE OF WIGHT, BRIGHTON, [illegible]TLEHAMPTON, HASTINGS, FOLKESTONE, DOVER, MARGATE AND GRAVESEND.

LONDON, JUNE 18-(AP)-BRITISH AND FRENCH LEGAL AND MILITARY EXPERTS ARE READY TO OPEN DISCUSSIONS ON PROBLEMS ARISING IN ADMINISTRATION OF LIBERATED FRENCH TERRITORY, IT WAS LEARNED TODAY.

THE FIRST TALKS ARE EXPECTED MONDAY, INFORMED QUARTERS SAID, AND THE

JUST WHAT LINE THE NEGOTIATIONS WOULD TAKE WAS NOT REVEALED, BUT IT APPEARED POSSIBLE THEY WOULD BE MUCH THE SAME AS THOSE BRITAIN HELD RECENTLY WITH NORWAY, HOLLAND AND BELGIUM.

IN THESE CASES THE UNITED STATES SIDE-STEPPED DRAFTING FORMAL TREATIES WHICH WOULD REQUIRE RATIFICATION BY THE SENATE BUT BRITAIN SIGNED AGREEMENTS WITH EACH OF THESE COUNTRIES AND THE PACTS WERE ACCEPTED AS A "MILITARY MEASURE" BY GEN. DWIGHT D.EISENHOWER, SUPREME ALLIED COMMANDER.

THESE WERE SEEN BY SOME QUARTERS AS PRESENTING A POSSIBLE METHOD OF DEALING WITH THE PRESENT FRENCH SITUATION.

LONDON, JUNE 19-(AP)-THE BRITISH AIR MINISTRY NEWS SERVICE TODAY ANNOUNCED THAT HITLER'S ROBOT PLANES ARE JET-PROPELLED AND ARE LAUNCHED FROM A RAMP WITH THE AID OF A TAKE-OFF ROCKET.

THEY ARE NOT RADIO-CONTROLLED BUT ARE OPERATED BY AN AUTOMATIC PILOT SET BEFORE THE LAUNCHING.

ONCE THE MISSILE HAS BEEN LAUNCHED THE ENEMY HAS NO CONTROL OVER ITS MOVEMENTS.

THE AIR MINISTRY ANNOUNCED THAT THE PILOTLESS CRAFT HAS A FUSELAGE OF 21 FEET, 10 INCHES IN LENGTH, WITH A MAXIMUM WIDTH OF TWO FEET, FOUR INCHES. ITS WING SPAN IS 16 FEET.

"THE RANGE OF THE TYPE AT PRESENT IN USE IS ABOUT 150 MILES; THE SPEED IN LEVEL FLIGHT BETWEEN 300 AND 350 MILES PER HOUR, AND THE EXPLOSIVE POWER IS EQUIVALENT TO A GERMAN 2,200-POUND BOMB," THE AIR MINISTRY SAID.

"THE EXPLOSIVE IS CARRIED IN THE WARHEAD, MOUNTED IN THIN CASING IN THE FRONT PART OF THE FUSELAGE. THE ENGINE IS DRIVEN BY PETROL, AND THE NOISE HEARD IN FLIGHT IS DUE TO INTERMITTENT EXPLOSIONS WITHIN THE JET-PROPULSION UNIT. LONDON, JUNE 19-(AP)-SMASHING THROUGH THE OLD MANNERHEIM LINE--INLAND'S THIRD AND LAST MAIN DEFENSE SYSTEM--WITH A SPEED WHICH NDICATED FINNISH RESISTANCE WAS FAILING RAPCDLY, THE RUSSIAN ARMY LOSED IN TODAY ON THE PORT OF VIIPURI, WHOSE FALL ENDED THE 1939-40 AR BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES.

CRACKING OF THE MANNERHEIM LINE WAS ANNOUNCED BY THE SOVIET HIGH OMMAND LAST NIGHT IN A COMMUNIQUE WHICH SAID THE RED ARMY HAD ADVANCED O WITHIN 17 MILES OF VIIPURI YESTERDAY AFTER SEIZING KOIVISTO, ESTERN ANCHOR OF THE SHATTERED FINNISH DEFENSES.

DISPATCHES RELAYED FROM HELSINKI VIA STOCKHOLM THIS MORNING SAID OVIET TROOPS ALREADY WERE WORKING THEIR WAY ALONG THE SHORES OF IIPURI BAY, AND PREDICTIONS WERE FREELY VOICED IN THE SWEDISH APITAL THAT SHOULD VIIPURI FALL THE FINNS PROBABLY WOULD SUE FOR EACE.

FINNISH PREMIER EDWIN LINKOMIES ACKNOWLEDGED LAST NIGHT THE USSIANS HAD SCORED "CONSIDERABLE SUCCESS" IN EFFORTS TO KNOCK FINLAND UT OF THE WAR, BUT NEVERTHELESS HE CALLED UPON HIS PEOPLE TO FIGHT O THE DEATH.

"WE ARE FIGHTING FOR OUR FREEDOM," LINKOMIES SAID IN AN ADDRESS TO THE NATION BROADCAST FROM HELSINKI. "WE CANNOT IMAGINE IFE HERE EXCEPT AS A FREE AND INDEPENDENT PEOPLE."

THE FALL OF KOIVISTO REPRESENTED A 53-MILE ADVANCE IN NINE DAYS ALONG THE WESTERN COAST OF THE KARELIAN ISTHMUS FOR THE RUSSIAN ARMY UNDER MARSHAL LEONID A.GOVOROV WHICH LAUNCHED ITS OFFENSIVE AT BELOOSTROV ON JUNE 10.

THE RUSSIANS SAID THEIR FORCES HAD CRACKED THE MANNERHEIM LINE AT MURILA, 12 MILES SOUTH OF KOIVISTO, AND HAD DRIVEN ON THROUGH THE LATTER PORT TO MAKSLAHTI.

THEY DECLARED THEY HAD SCORED IMPORTANT GAINS ALL ALONG A 72-MILE FRONT EXTENDING EASTWARD FROM KOIVISTO TO VALKJARVI AND RAUTU. VALKJARVI IS 25 MILES FROM LAKE LADOGA, ON WHICH THE EASTERN END OF THE MANNERHEIM LINE IS BASED, AND RAUTU IS ABOUT 14 MILES NEARER THE LAKE.

ALTOGETHER THE RED ARMY CAPTURED MORE THAN 100 POPULATED PLACES IN ITS SWEEPING ADVANCE YESTERDAY, A MOSCOW COMMUNIQUE SAID.

SWEDISH DISPATCHES FROM HELSINKI QUOTED THE FINNS AS SAYING THE RUSSIANS HAD HURLED MORE THAN 2,000 PLANES INTO THE KARELIAN OFFENSIVE AND THAT SOVIET AIR SUPERIORITY WAS OVERWHELMING, DESPITE ASSISTANCE OFFERED BY GERMAN AIRMEN BASED IN FINLAND.

A15

BEFORE SMASHING THROUGH THE MANNERHEIM LINE THE RUSSIANS HAD DRIVEN THROUGH TWO OTHER INTRICATE DEFENSE BELTS WHICH MOSCOW ADVICES QUOTED RUSSIAN OFFICERS AS SAYING WERE THE STRONGEST THEY HAD ENCOUNTERED IN THIS WAR.

SOVIET DISPATCHES, HOWEVER, SAID THAT THE FINNISH TROOPS --WHOSE FIGHTING QUALITIES THE RUSSIANS ALWAYS HAVE RESPECTED--WERE NOT OFFERING THE SAME DESPERATE RESISTANCE AS THEY DID IN THE WINTER OF 1939-40.

THERE WERE NO REPORTS OF LARGE SCALE ACTION ELSEWHERE ON THE RUSSIAN FRONT, BUT THE KARELIAN CAMPAIGN GENERALLY WAS REGARDED AS ONLY A PRELUDE TO GREATER RUSSIAN BLOWS ELSEWHERE. IN THIS CONNECTION, ASSOCIATED PRESS WAR CORRESPONDENT HENRY CASSIDY SAID IN A DISPATCH LAST NIGHT FROM THE KARELIAN FRONT:

"THERE ARE SIGNS THAT THIS OFFENSIVE, WHILE OF MAJOR IMPORTANCE IN THE AIM OF KNOCKING FINLAND OUT OF THE WAR, IS ONLY A SIDESHOW TO THE RED ARMY AS A WHOLE. A FURTHER OFFENSIVE CARRYING OUT THE RUSSIAN PART OF THE TEHERAN PLEDGE OF COMBINED BLOWS AT GERMANY FROM EAST, WEST AND SOUTH IS EXPECTED."

(AB) A U.S.SUPERFORTRESS BASE IN WESTERN CHINA, JUNE 9-(DELAYED)-(AP)ONE GROUP OF THE SUPER-FORTRESSES WHICH RAIDED JAPAN BORE AS INSIGNIA A CANVASBACK DUCK COPIED FROM THE FLAG OF THE LATE GEN. BILLY MITCHELL'S YACHT.

SEVERAL YEARS AGO, MITCHELL GAVE THE FLAG TO COL.LEONARD (JAKE) HARMAN OF BOISE, IDAHO, WHO LANDED THE FIRST SUPER-FORTRESS IN INDIA. HARMAN BROUGHT THE FLAG ALONG AND ORDERED THE INSIGNIA PAINTED ON EACH PLANE OF THE GROUP WHICH IS NOW KNOWN AS THE "GENERAL BILLY MITCHELL GROUP" ALTHOUGH THE NICKNAME HAS NOT YET BEEN OFFICIALLY APPROVED.

THE GROUP IS COMPOSED PRINCIPALLY OF VETERAN FLIERS, SOME OF WHOM WERE AIRLINE PILOTS BACK IN THE STATES. CAPT.RICHARD MC GLINN OF BELLINGHAM, WASH., FORMERLY WITH UNITED AIRLINES, IS CREDITED WITH THE MOST FLYING TIME, 10,500 HOURS. THE GROUP'S PILOTS AVERAGED 1,000 TO 1,500 HOURS FLYING TIME BEFORE THEY STARTED SUPER-FORTRESS TRAINING.

LT.COL.F.J.MC GINITY (524 SHERMAN AVE) ROSELLE PARK, N.J., GROUP OPERATIONS OFFICER, SAID "THIS DEFINITELY IS NOT A GLAMOR OUTFIT. THE BOYS ARE SERIOUS AND LEVEL-HEADED. THEY DON'T GET OUT AND RAISE HELL WITH AIRPLANES LIKE SOME OUTFITS. THEY HANDLE THE SHIPS AS IF THEY WERE THEIR PERSONAL PROPERTY. THESE FELLOWS ARE OUT HERE TO DO A JOB AND DO IT AS QUICKLY AS POSSIBLE."

THE YOUNGEST PILOT IS 24, THE OLDEST 37. ALL ARE COMPLETELY SOLD ON THE SUPER-FORTRESS, "IT'S A HELLUVA LOT EASIER TO FLY THAN THE B-24," MC GINITY DECLARED.

MAJOR HENRY LUNA OF PORT WASHINGTON, N.Y., ASSISTANT OPERATIONS OFFICER WHO AMASSED 6,500 FLYING HOURS WITH AMERICAN AIR LINES, POINTED OUT THAT THE SUPER-FORTRESS IS THE WORLD'S FASTEST AS WELL AS THE WORLD'S BIGGEST BOMBER.

"ONLY THE BEST PURSUIT PLANES CAN KEEP UP WITH THE SUPER-FORTRESS," LUNA SAID. "THAT'S WHY THE CREWS ARE CONFIDENT OF THEIR ABILITY TO HANDLE THE INTERCEPTORS."

COLONEL HARMAN HAS BEEN IN THE FOREFRONT OF AAF DEVELOPMENT FOR MANY YEARS AS A PILOT AND TECHNICIAN. HE WAS CHIEF OF THE AIRPLANE BRANCHES OF WRIGHT FIELD WHEN ASSIGNED TO SUPER-FORTRESSES. HE PILOTED THE ECOND B-29 ON ITS NEARLY-FATAL MAIDEN FLIGHT AND FLEW THE FIRST SUPER-FORTRESS FROM THE FACTORY TO THE ARMY.

IN 1939, HARMAN AND COL.STANLEY UMSTEAD ESTABLISHED AN INTERNATIONAL SPEED RECORD BY FLYING A B-17 FROM BURBANK, CALIF., TO NEW YORK CITY NON-STOP IN 9 HOURS, 14 MINUTES.

NEW YORK, JUNE 19-(AP)-ERNIE PYLE, SCRIPPS-HOWARD WAR CORRESPONDENT, IN A DISPATCH FROM THE NORMANDY BEACHHEAD PUBLISHED TODAY DESCRIBED HARDSHIPS ENCOUNTERED BY HIS FELLOW CORRESPONDENTS, WHO, ARMED ONLY WITH THEIR TYPEWRITERS, STORMED ASHORE WITH THE INVASION FORCES AND CAME THROUGH IT RED-EYED FOR WANT OF SLEEP, ACHING IN ALL THEIR MUSCLES AND WONDERING WHY THEY STILL WERE ALIVE.

JUN 20 1944

BEFORE INVASION DAY, PYLE WROTE, THE CORRESPONDENTS "HAD ACCEPTED IT AS A FACT THAT NOT EVERYBODY WOULD COME THROUGH ALIVE," BUT MOST OF THEM CAME THROUGH UNSCATHED.

AFTER THE LANDINGS, HE SAID, THEY CHECKED AMONG THEMSELVES FOR NEWS OF HOW THE CORRESPONDENTS GENERALLY HAD FARED. THEY HAD HEARD ONE WAS KILLED. (ARTHUR THORPE, NAVAL CORRESPONDENT OF THE EXCHANGE TELEGRAPH, BRITISH NEWS AGENCY, WAS KILLED IN A SEA ACTION JUNE 11.) SOME HAD NOT BEEN HEARD FROM AND ONE OR TWO WERE REPORTED WOUNDED.

WRITERS WHO HAD GONE TWO DAYS WITHOUT SLEEP DROPPED EXHAUSTED ON THE GROUND AND SLEPT IN WET CLOTHES WITHOUT BLANKETS.

"TWO OF THEM IN PARTICULAR HAD BEEN THROUGH ALL THE FRIGHTFUL NIGHTMARES THAT THE ASSAULT TROOPS HAD EXPERIENCED -- BECAUSE THEY HAD COME ASHORE WITH THEM," PYLE WROTE.

"DON WHITEHEAD (ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENT) HIT THE BEACH WITH ONE REGIMENT JUST AN HOUR AFTER H-HOUR, THOMPSON (JACK THOMPSON OF THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE) AT THE SAME TIME WITH ANOTHER REGIMENT. THEY WERE ON THE BEACHES FOR MORE THAN FOUR HOURS UNDER THAT HIDEOUS CLOUDBURST OF SHELLS AND BULLETS.

"JACK THOMPSON SAID: 'YOU'VE NEVER SEEN A BEACH LIKE IT BEFORE. DEAD AND WOUNDED MEN WERE LYING SO THICK YOU COULD HARDLY TAKE A STEP. ONE OFFICER WAS KILLED ONLY TWO FEET AWAY FROM ME.'"

PYLE ALSO MENTIONED JOHN (TEX) O'REILLY, NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE CORRESPONDENT, WHO HAD RIDDEN AROUND FOR SIX HOURS IN A BOAT WAITING

TO GET ASHORE. PYLE'S DISPATCH WENT ON:

"WHITEHEAD WAS STILL ASLEEP WHEN I WENT TO HIS FOX-HOLE. I SAID, 'GET UP, YOU LAZY SO-AND-SO.' HE STARTED GRINNING WITHOUT EVEN OPENING HIS EYES, BUT HE KNEW WHO IT WAS.

"IT WAS HARD FOR HIM TO WAKE UP. HE HAD BEEN UNABLE TO SLEEP, FROM SHEER EXHAUSTION, AND HAD TAKEN A SLEEPING TABLET.

"DON HAD MANAGED TO STEAL ONE BLANKET ON THE BEACH AND HAD THAT WRAPPED AROUND HIM. HE HAD TAKEN HIS SHOES OFF FOR THE FIRST TIME IN TWO DAYS. HIS FEET WERE SO SORE FROM WALKING IN WET SHOES AND SOCKS THAT HE HAD TO GIVE THEM SOME AIR.

"FINALLY HE BEGAN TO GET HIMSELF UP. 'I DON'T KNOW WHY I'M ALIVE AT ALL,' HE SAID. 'IT WAS REALLY AWFUL. FOR HOURS THERE ON THE BEACH THE SHELLS WERE SO CLOSE THEY WERE THROWING MUD AND ROCKS ALL OVER YOU. IT WAS SO BAD THAT AFTER A WHILE YOU DIDN'T CARE WHETHER YOU GOT HIT OR NOT.' X X X

"WHITEHEAD HAD PROBABLY BEEN IN MORE AMPHIBIOUS LANDINGS THAN ANY OTHER CORRESPONDENT OVER HERE. I KNOW OF SIX HE MADE, FOUR OF THEM MURDEROUSLY TOUGH, AND HE SAID:

"'I THINK I HAVE GONE ON ONE TOO MANY OF THESE THINGS -- NOT BECAUSE OF WHAT MIGHT HAPPEN TO ME PERSONALLY, BUT I'VE LOST MY PERSPECTIVE. IT'S LIKE DREAMING THE SAME NIGHTMARE OVER AND OVER AGAIN, AND WHEN YOU TRY TO WRITE YOU FEEL THAT YOU HAVE WRITTEN IT ALL BEFORE. YOU CAN'T THINK OF ANY NEW OR DIFFERENT WORDS TO SAY IT WITH.'

NAZI SOLDIERS ARE GRANTED ONLY SHORT FURLOUGHS AND THEIR WOMEN-FOLK ARE ANXIOUS TO MAKE THEIR BRIEF STAYS PLEASANT AS POSSIBLE. THUS, WHEN A GERMAN WOMAN PICKS UP THE FAKE FOOD CARD, SHE IS EITHER KEENLY DISAPPOINTED OR INDIGNANT WHEN ITS VALIDITY IS QUESTIONED BY THE GERMAN RATION AUTHORITIES.

DETAILS OF THE RATION-CARD BOMBARDMENT OF THE REICH WERE NOT DISCLOSED BUT IT WAS INTIMATED THEY HAVE CAUSED RIOTS IN EXTREME CASES AND SERIOUS DISCONTENT IN MANY PARTS OF GERMANY.

LAST RIDGE TAKEN IN DRIVE TOWARD BIG FRENCH PORT

Nazi Garrison Begins Demolition of Installations Valuable to Allies.

FALL OF CITY IMMINENT

Enemy Has no Hope of Successful Siege Stand against Invaders.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Wednesday, June 21—(AP) American troops stormed to the top of the last ridge barrier to Cherbourg last night, and were within sight of the great port less than four miles away where the explosions of hasty German demolition threw a smoke shroud over the city and thundered the collapse of any Nazi hopes of a successful siege stand.

A NBC broadcast from London said that American troops were within two miles of Cherbourg's city limits and that the fall of the port "seems imminent." The correspondent said Allied warships were pounding the Germans around Cherbourg and also in the Cap de la Hague area at the northwest tip of the peninsula 15 miles above Cherbourg.

An Allied spokesman called upon the tens of thousands of trapped Germans to surrender. There was no other choice, he said, except death.

American long-range artillery laid a powerful drum fire on the Germans around the city, and also hurled shells into the roads leading northeastward to Cape Levy and northwestward to Cape de la Hague at the tip of the peninsula.

Attack Outer Defenses

Headquarters Communique No. 30, issued just before midnight, said Allied troops now were "attacking the outer defenses of Cherbourg," and were engaged in heavy fighting on three sides of Valognes, 10 miles southeast of the prize port.

Field dispatches already had reported American capture of Valognes, ruined Monteborg, four miles to the rear, and St. Martin le-Greard, four miles south of Cherbourg, and late reports told of the attainment of the top of the last hill outside the city.

Of the eastern end of the front the Allied communique said: "Our positions in the area of Tilly are firm. Heavy fighting continued near Hottot."

After mid-day yesterday the bad weather which had limited air operations somewhat and fighter-bombers and bombers pounded the German flying-bomb bases in the Pas de Calais area, the bulletin said. German communications also were attacked over a wide area behind the Normandy front.

Fan Out Around City

Spearheaded by the veteran U.S. Ninth and Fourth divisions and led by French patriot scouts in the final assault, thousands of American troops were fanning out on all sides of Cherbourg.

On the west coast one unit was reported as far as Vasteville, 15 miles north of Barneville and only six miles southwest of Cherbourg; on the east coast other units had pushed as far as Eglise de Grenneville, three miles north of Quineville and 13 miles southeast of the port. Both these columns were making steady gains to outflank Cherbourg and the pace of the western column suggested a Nazi rout along that coast.

Cornered German troops, estimated from 25,000 to 50,000, were taking a terrific mauling from a massive infantry, artillery and aerial onslaught as a German-speaking British officer stepped to a BBC microphone and asked them to surrender.

"Little more than a year ago," he reminded them, "other German soldiers commanded by General von Arnim were driven into the sea by this same 9th infantry division. The soldiers of Arnim's army (on Cap Bon in Tunisia) who then realized that it is not dishonorable to surrender when one is defeated and can no longer escape, gave up the fight and they have not regretted their decision."

Tanks Held in Battle

Any hope of the German Cherbourg garrison that Marshal Erwin Rommel's tank forces could break through to it was "out of the question" he told them. "Rommel's main tank forces consist of four divisions which are engaged in heavy fighting against Allied units in the St. Lo-Caen sector on the eastern end of the front," he said.

The Allied spokesman said he was addressing himself to the remnants of the trapped German 709th, 66th, 91st, and 243rd infantry divisions, as well as "approximately 10,000 men of the reserves and coast guard."

Field dispatches filed from France shortly before 7 p.m. (1 p.m. Eastern War time) said the Americans could not yet see Cherbourg from the first captured ridge of hills, but could sight the smoke pall hanging over the port where the desperate Germans were engaged in extensive wrecking—an indication the enemy had abandoned hope of a long stand.

On the eastern end of the front the British in hand-to-hand combat fought their way through long-contested Tilly-sur-Seulles to a point two miles southwest where they captured the village of Hottot-les-Baques and beat off two German counterattacks.

The Americans on the British west flank also pushed patrols within two miles of St. Lo, cross roads key to the whole of the middle Normandy peninsula, and one German broadcast said some units had fought their way into the city but later were forced to retreat.

One front dispatch from the Caen sector, 11 miles east of Tilly, said that while the Germans still held strong perimeter positions around that old Gothic city there were indications that the Germans may have evacuated Caen itself because of a heavy Allied bombardment which has wrecked it over a two-week period.

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, Allied ground commander, was using his troops on that end of the front, including his famous "Desert Rat" units which whipped Rommel in North Africa, in a holding operation while the Americans closed in on Cherbourg for the kill. Montgomery also went ahead steadily building up weapons with which to launch a major offensive. Beachhead positions were declared crammed with armament.

Artillery Shells Cherbourg

Cherbourg and the battered German divisions withdrawing into it were under fire of American 155-mm. long Tom rifles, 105 howitzers and medium to light U. S. field guns.

The 9th divi[illegible]ed by Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley who directed their victory at Bizerte, rolled through Rauville La Bigot, Breuville and St. Martin in a swift advance from captured Bricquebec, and seized hilltop positions overlooking the valley of the Divette river which cuts through the last ridge outside of Cherbourg.

Moving across hedge rows and green fields past rose-covered peasant cottages the veteran troops cut Germans into little groups, and dispatches said many high Nazi officers had been slain to contribute to the enemy's rapid disorganization.

In small groups French patriots drifted into the American lines, begging to assist in Cherbourg's capture, said a field dispatch from Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead.

"They know the country well and we see no reason why they couldn't help," an officer said. "They are in a weird assortment of uniforms, but they know how to fight."

Patriots Guide Yanks

Some of these Frenchmen, veterans of the first World War, immediately began directing American troops over hill trails.

The Supreme command said "coordinated attacks" meant that Gen. Bradley had thrown other divisions into the final drive. "The enemy has some advantages in terrain, but it can be assumed he is more tired than we are," a spokesman said.

So speedy was the Ninth division's advance from the south that some German positions on the first line of hills six miles south of Cherbourg were found to be unmanned.

On the southeast, the American Fourth division of the regular army which had by-passed Montebourg on Monday, plunged four m[illegible]ward where the same thi[illegible]was done at Valognes, 10 miles from Cherbourg. Wrecked Montebourg was completely captured during the day, by units left behind for that purpose, and when patrols were sent into the strongpoint of Valognes it was found the Germans had abandoned it. At noon the Americans were a mile beyond Valognes.

To the east American units were more than two miles north of Quineville, moving up the eastern coastal road on a line 13 miles east of Cherbourg. This column aimed to seize German coastal batteries along that rim of the Seine bay.

Other American troops were pushing up the west coast from Barneville, 18 miles southwest of Cherbourg, but the extent of their gains was not immediately determined.

In the south the Americans were holding a line near La Haye Du Puits and St. Lo-D'Ourville as Gen. Bradley threw most of his weight against Cherbourg for a quick test of German defenses there.

Ninth Division Strikes Deep Into Enemy Defenses—Valognes, Key Road Hub, Also Falls—Foe Draws Back.

JUN 21 1944

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 20 (A. P.).—American troops drove within four miles of Cherbourg late today in an all-out offensive and also seized Valognes, ten miles southeast of the great harbor. GALLAGHER

[Berlin radio said tonight that Allied forces have reached the fortified area of the city and added that Allied spearheads already are in contact with the German defenders.]

Air reconnaissance disclosed the Germans have been demolishing the port and that it is in bad shape, indicating the Nazis have given up hope of holding it for very long.

The Germans had three semi-circular defense lines around the city, with the biggest stretching out six miles from the port. Lieut.-Gen. Omar N. Bradley's offensive has pierced this line and apparently has reached the second defense wall. The Germans were falling back upon the inner perimeter, a dispatch from United States field headquarters said. It added that the Germans fell back from Valognes without attempting a major stand.

DAY

Ninth Gained 6 Miles.

The veteran United States Ninth Division spearheaded the deepest drive directly south of Cherbourg—a death pocket for perhaps up to 50,000 Nazis—advancing to St. Martin le Grand only four miles away. The drive carried the Ninth nearly six miles north of Bricquebec, which was captured yesterday.

Other Americans on the southeast approach to Cherbourg seized Valognes and pushed a mile beyond. They also cleared the Germans out of by-passed Montebourg, four miles from Valognes. Montebourg, won and lost in bitter street fighting, now has been completely occupied, Supreme Headquarters said.

On the eastern coast of the trap an American column drove two miles north of Quineville.

United States forces on the west coast made progress north of Barneville, where the first break-through was made sealing off the top of Cherbourg peninsula. Opposition in this sector was reported light. There were indications that the Germans were weaker on the western side of the peninsula than in the east.

Drawing new strength from other sectors of the Normandy beachhead, Gen. Bradley sent his troops northward in what Supreme Headquarters called "co-ordinated attacks along the entire north front."

Yanks Shell Cherbourg.

Over the heads of the advancing doughboys American big guns hurled streams of shells into Cherbourg, France's third largest port, defended by possibly 50,000 German troops now caught in the closing Yankee trap.

The deepest wedge was driven into the German line of fortifications from the southwest. A column sweeping forward from captured Bricquebec, 11 miles below the port, hurled the Germans back to the outskirts of Rauville la Bigot, a village between 6 and 7 miles south and slightly west of Cherbourg.

Communique No. 29 from Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters said other American columns to the east were driving forward in twin moves to flank Valognes after sweeping around Montebourg.

The communique said the highway southwest to Bricquebec was cut 2 miles from Valognes.

Further Advance Likely.

Supreme headquarters said that undoubtedly further advances have been made this morning, of which news has not yet arrived.

(German broadcasts today acknowledged that the Allies had isolated the port of Cherbourg, but the Nazi high command itself reported "no major fighting" on the peninsula and said "the enemy confined his activity to probing the southern front of the fortress of Cherbourg with armored reconnaissance forces."

(The official Nazi bulletin made no mention of the Allied sealoff of Cherbourg. It declared strong Allied infantry and tank blows between Tilly-sur-Seulles and Caumont ... ing the central sector in Normandy were "frustrated," with one Allied battalion "completely smashed." There was no Allied confirmation.

(Nazi accounts intimated the German garrison at Cherbourg was ready for a prolonged siege.)

British Take Tilly Again.

While the Americans were steadily marking up new gains, the British on their sector toward the eastern end of the beachhead once again drove the Germans from Tilly-sur-Seulles, which has changed hands several times.

The American wedge across the Cherbourg Peninsula now is 16 miles at its widest point and 8 miles at its narrowest.

It was expected that a matter of hours would show the strength of the German defenses below Cherbourg and whether the Germans can manage to swing the muzzles of the port's long-range guns from the sea to repel a land attack.

The German-held Channel Islands have guns capable of shooting to the Cherbourg Peninsula at extreme range, but headquarters said there is no reason to believe "they can seriously interfere with the American advance."

Other Divisions Thrown In.

This morning's communique gave a tipoff that a big American offensive had begun by reporting "co-ordinated attacks all along the north front."

The supreme command said "co-ordinated attacks" meant Gen. Bradley had thrown other divisions into the drive on the port under a curtain of fire from 105-millimeter howitzers and 155-millimeter "Long Toms."

"The enemy has some advantages in terrain, but it can be assumed he is more tired than we are," a headquarters spokesman declared.

The American 9th Division, advancing from Bricquebec, encountered only spasmodic resistance.

German troops all along the north front were reported apparently badly disorganized. Front dispatches declared many of the high Nazi officers had been killed and in some sectors units had been cut to pieces.

Carentan Front Inactive.

No gains were reported in the Carentan area to the south, and it seemed apparent that Gen. Bradley was content merely with holding actions there while driving for Cherbourg.

American fighters and fighter-bombers swung into the fray in considerable numbers, sweeping along the few roads left the Germans around Cherbourg and cutting their military movements to pieces with machine guns and bombs.

After the capture of Tilly-sur-Seulles, British patrols pushed as far as Hottot, 1½ miles to the south, without encountering any serious resistance. The situation remained static around beseiged Caen still farther east, where Allied forces are being methodically built up for a strong drive.

The building up of the beachhead forces and supplies was hampered yesterday, however, by a wind of 25 miles an hour which whipped up 5-foot waves along the beaches. A 60-mile gale swept the Channel.

1,000 More Prisoners Taken.

More than 1,000 prisoners were taken yesterday. Associated Press War Correspondent Don Whitehead, with the American forces, said last night that Germans were surrendering 'so fast the units do not know how many they have."

Mr. Whitehead quoted an officer in the field as saying there "is little doubt" the Germans have been ordered to fight to the last and consequently they "may try to make Cherbourg another Sevastopol."

The correspondent said most of the enemy resistance came from small groups which had been cut off from their units.

Nazis Believed To Have Begun Demolitions In Harbor

By DON WHITEHEAD

With American Forces Before Cherbourg, 6.58 P. M., June 20 (AP)—American troops driving within only four miles of Cherbourg today heard the thunder of explosions from the port, and civilians straggling through the lines said the Germans had begun demolitions in the harbor.

The deepest point of the spectacular break through had not yet reached the highest ground from which forward elements could see the city itself.

Trap Slowly Closing

Moving across hedgerows and green fields, and past peasant cottages with roses in bloom, the doughboys slowly closed the trap on Cherbourg.

Already the Americans are within ... on the outer rim of Cherbourg fortress—prepared position where the enemy is expected to make a final bitter stand on order of the high command to fight to the last.

But strangely enough, some positions were unmanned when our troops approached them.

Sea Route Alone Left Nazis

Artillery began pounding the last east-west lateral road over which the Germans might move their troops and equipment to Cape Levy, east of Cherbourg, or to Cape de la Hague, jutting out on the west tip of the peninsula.

Our guns rolled to engage the Germans in and around Cherbourg itself.

The enemy's last chance for escape is by sea at night from Cherbourg fortress—the escape route four years ago for British troops trapped on the peninsula by the German break-through in France.

But they must escape at night if at all, and in small craft. The Allied air forces rule the air by day and the navies would be able to deal with any large-scale escape by sea.

DAY

6,000 Civilians Stick On

With the enemy trying to ruin the port facilities by demolitions, the smoke of explosions hung over the city.

Despite efforts of the Germans to evacuate civilians, about 6,000 French citizens were reported to be clinging to their homes, ready to take their chances.

The Americans were receiving aid from French patriots. Many Frenchmen, some of them veterans of the last war, volunteered their services as scouts and guides—even as front-line troops to fight alongside the Yanks.

"They drifted in by ones, twos and threes, begging us to let them help in the capture of Cherbourg," one officer said as we stood near where the guns were booming at the front. "They know the country well and we see no reason why they couldn't help fight for their homes and country. They are in a weird assortment of uniforms, but they know how to fight."

Harder Fighting To East

The final push on Cherbourg from the western side of the peninsula began early this morning. Doughboys encountered light opposition in the advance except for scattered strong points, but they expected the fight to become bitter as they closed in on the Cherbourg Line.

On the eastern side of the peninsula the enemy was putting up ... stronger rear-guard action, ... the troops apparently were not ... disorganized as those on the ... r side. Doughboys by-passed ...gnes and then sent a unit in to ... it out. But they found that ...nemy had fled.

... we stood at a command post ... in a quiet orchard near the front, a high-ranking officer suddenly said: "Listen!"

Then the artillery broke out in a roar. They were playing a "serenade" for the enemy—every gun in the area being turned on one part of the Cherbourg Line.

"And in a few minutes the air force will bomb hell out of several of their positions," the officer said.

Nazis Mass Their Remnants

The Germans have been making a desperate effort to jrepare Cherbourg for a last stand, with army, navy, air corps and labor troops. They ordered all civilian men out of the town Saturday night and instructed women to leave by Sunday.

Apparently the Germans had pulled together remnants of everything left on the peninsula for the defense of the port. But hundreds of troops were unable to get out of the Allied trap; they were wandering around waiting for someone to pick them up.

Late this afternoon the Yanks had not run into any well-coordi...ated defense.

Driving toward this front one ...uld see sharp contrasts of peace ...d war. War, it seemed, had leap...gged across this lovely country-...e.

Shattered Houses Seen

...n some places there were ugly ...attered houses, burned fields and ...arred vehicles—the evidence of ...e savagery of battle.

Around the curve of the road you felt you were in another world. Children waved gayly from trim yards of peasant cottages where roses bloomed in profusion. Cattle grazed in the fields and there was not a sign of destruction. Civilians waved at each passing jeep or truck and sometimes children tossed roses at us.

But there is something sad and depressing about driving through such a lovely country and seeing what war can do to the people. And perhaps the saddest sights of all are to be seen in the wrecked towns.

Civilians Returning

Civilians are returning to their ruined homes now. They fled when the war neared but they are straggling back with pitiful bundles and carts full of household goods.

In one town a child sat on a pile of debris laughing and waving gayly at the passing ...voys. Behind her a woman, obv... sly her mother, picked aimlessly in the debris looking for something to salvage from the wreckage.

NAZIS CLAIM ARMY WAITING FOR NEW

ALLIED LANDINGS

JUN 21 1944

LONDON, June 20. — (AP) Nazi propagandists told the German people today that watchful waiting for new Allied landings from Britain and North Africa was the guiding principle of the high command in combatting the Normandy invasion.

This attempt to explain battlefield reverses suggested that the narcotic effect of the news that robot bombers were being used against England was wearing off within the Reich.

Nearly all Paul Joseph Gobbels' commentators, who had been busy for nearly a week with tales of the buzz-bomb's prowess, admitted tonight that it was of little strategic value and spent most of their time on a theme expressed by Capt. Ludwig Sertorius.

NIGHT

"A cool wait-and-see policy of husbanding our own forces and inflicting the greatest possible damage on the enemy still forms the guiding principle of the tactical and operational strategy of the German defense on the Normandy coast."

Lt. Gen. Kurt Dittmar, another commentator, said: "Several other invasion armies are known to be in Britain and our strategy has to take its bearing from this fact. At present our strategy is essentially a defensive one."

Dittmar added that the robot plane "can never bring about a decision." However, a broadcast by Martin Von Hallensleben insisted that "more secret weapons will be used when the time comes."

Of the invasion prospect, Karl Pragner chimed in:

"Sixteen enemy divisions are now poised in North Africa for an attack against the south coast of France."

A German war reporter, Karl Ebert, said in a broadcast dispatch that Allied reconnaissance planes had not found the launching bases of the robot bombers and that none had been hit in the mounting bomber attacks.

With the United States Ninth Troop Carrier Command, June 10 (AP)—Delayed)—Brig. Gen. Don F. Pratt, a commander of air-borne troops, was killed in France on D-day when his glider—one of the first down—made a crash-landing, pilots returning to this base reported.

Text Of Surrender Demand

JUN 21 1944

New York, June 20 (AP)—A British army officer speaking in German from London over the facilities of the British Broadcasting Corporation tonight told the German defenders of Cherbourg that their position was hopeless and called on them to surrender.

The text of the warning as reported to the Office of War Information follows:

"I am addressing myself to the German soldiers who have been cut off on the Cherbourg peninsula, to the approximately 10,000 men of the 709th Infantry Division, the 66th Infantry Division, the 91st Infantry Division and the 243rd Infantry Division, as well as the approximately 10,000 men of the reserves and the coast guard.

Cut Off From South

"Soldiers, I want to inform you about the situation in which you find yourselves. You are cut off from the main German forces in Normandy by a strong wedge, which has been established by the troops of the Ninth American Infantry Division.

"You hope, perhaps, that Rommel is going to relieve you by large-scale counterattack from south. But in order to carry such a plan, Rommel would have to use strong tank formations, and that is out of the question. Rommel's main tank forces consist of four divisions which are engaged in heavy fighting against Allied units in the St. Lo-Caen sector.

"You are being driven back steadily toward Cherbourg and the sea. The American wedge is being strengthened, while the prospects of a German counterthrust from the south are diminishing. The further you are being driven back, the more the pocket in which you are trapped and which is surrounded by the sea on three sides is being tightened, the more your concentrations of troops and vehicles become vulnerable to bombing and strafing by Allied planes and the destructive fire from Allied naval guns.

Air Superiority Cited

"If you hope for protection and support from the German air force, you are indulging in vain expectations. Your experiences during the last fortnight must have taught you that the Allied air superiority cannot be disputed.

"Some of you may nourish a last hope. You may believe that you can be evacuated from Cherbourg by sea. The very same hope was nourished by several thousand German soldiers who had been cut off on the Cap Bon peninsula during the last phase of the Tunisian campaign. Allied naval and air superiority in the Mediterranean soon crushed this hope.

"The coordinated might of Allied naval and air power ready to foil a German evacuation by sea from Cherbourg is immeasurably greater than that which prevented an escape from the Cap Bon peninsula.

Evacuation Called Suicide

"Any attempt to evacuate you through the costal waters of the Cherbourg peninsula would thus be pure suicide.

"Soldiers on the Cherbourg peninsula: Allied naval, air and ground forces have cut you off. Units of the Ninth American Infantry Division are close on your heels.

"Little more than a year ago, other German soldiers, commanded by General von Arnim, were driven into the sea by this same American Ninth Infantry Division. The soldiers of von Arnim's army who then realized that it is not dishonorable to surrender when one is defeated and can no longer escape, gave up the fight and they have not regretted their decision."

Gen. D. F. Pratt Killed in Action

JUN 21 1944

Linneus, Mo., June 20 (A. P.).—Brig.-Gen. Don F. Pratt, 51 years old, was killed in action on June 6, the day Allied forces invaded France, his parents, Judge and Mrs. A. L. Pratt, were notified today.

His widow and a brother, Lieut.-Col. Fabian L. Pratt, live in San Francisco.

Gen. Pratt was born at Brookfield, only a few miles from the birthplace of Gen. John J. Pershing. He attended the Universities of Minnesota and Wisconsin, and entered the Army on August 9, 1917.

Rommel Reported Suffering Relapse

JUN 21 1944

London, June 20 (AP)—An informant with close European connections reported tonight that Marshal Erwin Rommel, German field commander in western France, had suffered a relapse and that it had been suggested he give up his invasion-front command, at least temporarily.

There was no confirmation from any other quarter of this report, which said that Rommel has never been in the best of health since leaving Africa last year.

A possibility existed that this report could have been inspired by the Germans. It was recalled that when the Germans faced defeat in Africa the Axis leader was recalled by Hitler on the grounds of ill health.

Hitler Paper On Invaders

JUN 21 1944

Madrid, June 20 (AP)—The Monday edition of Hitler's newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, received here today, said: "The troops fighting against us in Normandy are the only good troops the Allies possess—if we destroy that army we have won the war."

All Men In Bellegarde Arrested By Germans

JUN 21 1944

On the French-Swiss Frontier, June 20 (AP)—The Germans have arrested all males in Bellegarde, center of last week's raid by the French Marquis, and held several hundred of them today as hostages against further Partisan violence.

Over 100 were reported executed in northern France after a series of sabotage attacks.

Vichy Officer Reported Kidnapped And Killed

JUN 21 1944

New York, June 20 (AP)—The Nazi-controlled Vichy radio, recorded by United States Government monitors, said tonight that Colonel de la Rocque, commander of the Vichy "maintenance of order" forces in the Ardeche department, had been kidnapped and shot to death by French partisans.

(The colonel is not to be confused with Francois de la Rocque, one of the first of the French Fascists and leader of the now-defunct Croix de Feu, who last was reported under arrest by Vichy last March.)

Invasion Enthuses Yugoslav General

JUN 21 1944

New York, June 20 (AP)—A message from Gen. Draja Mihailovic, of Yugoslavia, to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower expressing "indescribable enthusiasm" over the invasion of France was made public tonight by the delegate of the Government of Yugoslavia for Information.

The message was dated June 13 and transmitted through Constantin Fotich, Yugoslav Ambassador at Washington.

Britain Removes Ban On Diplomats' Travel

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 20.—The preinvasion ban on travel by diplomats and restrictions on their communications, imposed April 17 on all but those from the United States, Britain and Russia, was revoked by the Foreign Office last night.

A few exceptions were made for other nations. Gen. Charles de Gaulle visited and left London, and Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk of the Polish government in exile made a trip to the United States.

Canadian Ace Dies of Wounds

JUN 21 1944

Aurora, Ont., June 20 (A. P.).—Wing Commander Lloyd Chadburn, Royal Canadian Air Force ace with fourteen German planes to his credit, died of injuries received over France on June 13 and has been buried in a French cemetery, his mother, Mrs. Frank Allen, was informed today.

Commander Chadburn participated in D day operations. Holder of the Distinguished Service Order with bar and the Distinguished Flying Cross, he also had to his credit an enemy E-boat destroyed, another damaged and a destroyer damaged.

Nazi Big Guns Open Up Across Dover Strait

JUN 21 1944

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 20.—German big guns in the Cape Gris-Nez area on the French coast opened up shortly after 2 a.m. today and for 15 minutes hurled shells across Dover Strait.

Later the German radio said the Nazi batteries had shelled several large Allied ships in the strait and had forced them to flee.

GERMAN ATTEMPT TO INVADE BRITAIN SMASHED IN 1940

JUN 21 1944

LONDON, June 20.—(AP) Prime Minister Churchill partially unveiled one of the war's greatest secrets today when he disclosed to the House of Commons that a German attempt to invade Britain in 1940 was smashed in continental ports before a "very heavy concentration of troops and ships" could put to sea.

One of the favorite subjects of bar and drawing room speculation, this 1940 "invasion" had appeared in gossip as having been everything from a full-scale expedition that actually touched down on British soil to a wholesale smashing of enemy landing craft caught at sea during exercises.

Brief Statement in 1943

Heretofore the government had limited its Commons comment to a statement on July 29, 1943, by Clement Attlee, then lord president of the council, that "it is well known throughout the world that the enemy's preparations for invasion in 1940 were frustrated by the Royal Air force."

Today Major Vyvyan Adams asked for further details, and Mr. Churchill first said he would stand on Attlee's statement, but when the member persisted with a request to know whether "the enemy set in motion the apparatus of a seaborne invasion," the prime minister replied:

"I do not quite know what is meant by setting in motion. Setting in motion in the sense of crossing the channel—no. But setting in motion in the sense of making very heavy concentrations of troops and ships to cross the channel—yes."

"Did any of this shipping," asked Maj. Adams, "ever emerge from ports across the channel?"

Ships Sunk in Port

"Not to my belief," Mr. Churchill answered, dispelling the more lurid legends. "A great deal of it was sunk in ports and then they changed their minds."

The details of this destruction which balked a widely-dreaded invasion of Britain remain to be told, but the R.A.F. in an official booklet entitled "Bomber Command" already has given some cold statistics indicating why the Germans "changed their minds."

This publication disclosed that from June, 1940, "A formidable collection of barges" appeared in Rotterdam, Antwerp, Vlissingen, Ostende, Dunkerque, Calais, Boulogne and Le Havre, and that these were attacked almost incessantly until the threat of seaborne invasion disappeared.

Adams, who asked the Prime Minister if he could give the House details of a reported Nazi invasion attempt.

Mr. Churchill first said he had nothing to add to the government's previous noncommittal replies, but when Maj. Adams asked whether "the enemy set in motion the apparatus of seaborne invasion," the Prime Minister said:

"I do not quite know what is meant by setting in motion. Setting in motion in the sense of crossing the Channel, 'No,' but setting in motion in the sense of making very heavy concentrations of troops and ships to cross the Channel, 'Yes.'"

Laborite Emanuel Shinwell then asked

"I suppose he (the Prime Minister) could say that if such an invasion was made, at any rate it was unsuccessful?"

Mr. Churchill smiled and answered, "Yes."

"Did any of this shipping ever emerge from ports across the Channel?" Maj. Adams pressed.

"Not to my belief," the Prime Minister said. "A great deal of it was sunk in ports and then they changed their minds."

Invasion Made Possible By Lend-Lease Briton Says

LONDON, June 20.—(AP) Britain's Minister of Supply, Capt. Oliver Lyttelton, told the American Chamber of Commerce today that it would have been impossible to attempt the invasion of France without the huge Lend-Lease traffic from the United States and the reverse Lend-Lease from Britain.

Lyttleton in a luncheon speech discussed American aid to Britain before the United States entered the war, and supplemented his remarks with an amplifying statement tonight saying that Japan had chosen to regard this aid as a provocation for the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Amplifying Statement

After some present at the luncheon took his remarks on this subject, which were interpolated in his prepared address, as implying that Japan had been forced to make war on the United States, and after this version was distributed abroad, Lyttelton issued his amplifying statement as follows:

"I wish to make the point that the Americans did not wait until they had entered the war before showing where their sympathies lay, and the aid which they gave Britain will always be remembered with the liveliest sense of gratitude.

"This aid was of course directed to the war against Germany and could not have been regarded as a provocation by a peace-minded Japan. But the Japanese aggressor chose to regard it as a provocation and made the unjustified and treacherous attack at Pearl Harbor."

(There was no record available of Lyttelton's original interpolation. Some reporters and other persons at the luncheon said they did not hear it. The minister's office Tuesday night declined to give out anything on the interpolation beyond distributing the amended text.)

Praises Lend-Lease

Regarding the part of Lend-Lease in the invasion, Lyttelton said:

"Lend-Lease and reverse Lend Lease have been key factors in transforming these islands into a powerful arsenal and springboard for the invasion of the continent.

"Ill-disposed people who are determined to disturb Anglo-American relations have put about the charming story that we are selling Lend Lease goods to third countries for cash and retaining both the cash and credit for having made the same available."

This is not true and every precaution has been taken to prevent anything of that kind, Lyttelton said.

American Lend-Lease amounted to $4,000,000,000 in 1943, exclusive of supplies to other parts of the world for use by British forces, and British reverse Lend-Lease has reached $2,000,000,000 to date, he said, adding that the latter is now running at more than twice the rate at the beginning of 1943.

Lyttelton listed some of the American supplies to Britain, which included the provisioning of 25 per cent of its munitions, besides aircraft, tanks, raw materials, oil, ships, shipping services, food and other essentials.

As outstanding examples of British aid to the United States, Lyttelton cited construction of airfields, the supplying of one-fifth of American soldiers' food, and the placing at American disposal of many ships, including the great liners

Hull Refutes Briton On U. S. Policy Before Pearl Harbor

JUN 21 1944

Washington, June 20 (AP)—Secretary of State Hull tonight described as "entirely in error" a statement by Oliver Lyttelton, British Minister of Production, to the American Chamber of Commerce in London concerning the United States' attitude toward the war prior to Japan's attack at Pearl Harbor.

In an unusual statement for direct quotation, Hull declared that "this Government from the beginning to the end was actuated by the single policy of self-defense against the rapidly increasing danger to this nation."

Remark An Interpolation

Littelton's remark was made in an interpolation during his speech. Some of his hearers took it to mean that the United States by its prewar policies had provoked Japan into making the attack at Pearl Harbor.

Lyttelton thereupon issued the following as an addition to the advance text of his remarks:

"I wish to make a point that the Americans did not wait until they entered the war before showing where their sympathies lay and the aid they gave to Britain will always be remembered with the liveliest sense of gratitude.

"This aid was, of course, directed to the war against Germany and could not have been regarded as provocation by a peace-minded Japan. But the Japanese aggressor chose to regard it as provocation, and made his unjustified and treacherous attack at Pearl Harbor.

The text of Hull's statement referring to the interpolation in Lyttelton's speech follows:

Unfortunately the statement of the British Minister of Production is entirely in error as to the facts and fails to state the true attitude of the United States both during the earlier stages of military preparation for world conquest by Germany and Japan and during the later aggressions by those two countries.

Record U. S. Raid Blasts Rocket Coast, Oil Plants

2,000 Heavy Bombers Hit German Targets—47 Raiders Missing.

DEADLINE

LONDON, June 20 — (AP) In the greatest heavy bomber assault in history, United States air forces hurled more than 2,000 Fortresses and Liberators against Hitler's Europe today to smash once at 12 German oil plants and twice at the rocket-bomber coast of France, which was attacked throughout the day by other Allied planes.

More than 1,500 heavy bombers—at least equal to the largest force ever sent on a single mission—thundered to the continent, smacking the pilotless-plane launching platforms in the Pas-De-Calais and continuing across Germany almost to Poland in the first operation of the heaviest daylnog assault ever made.

Bombers Return to Calais

Then in the lingering daylight of this evening another force of about 500 Fortresses and Liberators returned to hurl more explosives on the Pas-de-Calais installations from which the Germans have been launching their winged rocket bombs since last Thursday night.

Forty-seven bombers and 10 fighters were missing from all these operations while 68 German planes were shot down, 41 by the big fighter escort.

Between attacks by the largest total force of heavy bombers ever put up in one day, the Allies made at least four other assaults against the rocket nests with every type of daylight bomber based in Britain.

NIGHT

American Marauders and Havocs flew against these emplacements twice and returned without loss. The R.A.F. sent Mitchell medium bombers, Boston light bombers and Mustang and Typhoon fighter-bombers against the same installations.

In their third mission of the day, Marauders hopped across the channel late this evening to attack a German gun battery at the coastal town of Houlgate on the left flank of Allied beach positions.

Thunderbolt fighter-bombers, responding to an urgent call from ground forces, attacked German gun positions holding up the Allied advance on the Cherbourg peninsula. One group shot down four out of six enemy planes.

In all phases of today's operations the Allies probably made some 6,000 individual flights and dropped about 8,000 tons of bombs.

Fewer Robots Launched

As the procession of heavyweights—an armada matching the biggest ever flown—winged across the channel, the one-ton flying explosives from the Pas-de-Calais area of France passed far below in the opposite direction, but the German robot attack was on a somewhat reduced scale, possibly the result of 11 heavy Allied attacks on the launching ramps since the first robot plane took off last Thursday.

Early this evening another great bomber force was seen streaming over the English coast under a fighter escort in the direction of Calais, perhaps to deliver another crushing blow at the flying bomb ramps.

After the first heavy bomber assault lighter bombers more than 200 strong picked up the attack and wave upon wave hit the line of rocket emplacements, which stretch from about 30 miles south of Calais to seven miles north of Abbeville. Most ramps are near the coast.

Violent explosions marked the bomb paths, indicating that some stores of the explosives were hit.

The Germans threw up a furious flak barrage in the defense of these objectives as 500 heavy bombers reared in early in the day.

The remaining task force split off and headed for Germany, touching off fierce air battles. Fighters of both the Eighth and Ninth American air forces escorted the heavies.

"Dog fights were thick in the skies over Germany and France," the announcement said, disclosing that one American fighter group tangled with 50 Messerschmitt 410s escorted into battle by Messerschmitt 109s.

Oil Plants Hit

The enemy fighters could not keep the heavies from unloading upwards of 2,500 tons of bombs on synthetic oil plants around Hannover, Hamburg, Magdeburg and Politz, a tank depot southwest of Berlin near Magdeburg, and an aircraft repair and parts plant near Brunswick.

A report from Stockholm said 21 planes that made the long haul as far as 550 miles to the Stettin area made forced landings in Sweden, the largest number ever to alight in that neutral country in a single day.

Marauders and Havocs on the cross-channel mission saw no enemy planes, only their own fighters diving and blasting the pilotless projectiles, which sometimes were launched as many as five at a time. All these bombers returned.

The Ninth Air force said this sort of one-sided dog fight was producing a new kind of an ace. Mustang Pilot Lt. Lewis Powers, Albuquerque, N. M., claimed three of the jet-propelled bombs and shared another with an R.A.F. fighter.

Mitchells and Bostons of the R.A.F. Second Tactical Air force kept up the bombardment on the skillfully camouflaged sites and R.A.F. Mustangs and Typhoons dive-bombed them.

Despite the attention given the rocket coast, fighter-bombers and fighters, many operating from Normandy bases, stepped up their attacks on enemy communications and transport facilities in what the supreme headquarters described as "very close support" of invasion troops.

All airmen returning from the Pas-de-Calais said they had to plow through intense flak, including square, box-like missiles which burst scattering long metallic strips, possibly designed to foul propellers.

Rocket Coast Blasted

The rocket coast was put on a round-the-clock bombing basis in the new attacks which came after big R.A.F. night bombers pounded the coast for 45 minutes last night.

The big fellows hovered over the French promontory for 20 minutes before clouds scattered, then casually proceeded to saturate the area.

Thunderbolt and Lightning fighter-bombers into day's supporting operations bombed and shot up railyards, tracks, bridges, rolling stock and military trucks and knocked down five fighters. Three Lightnings were lost.

The Lightnings were shot down by 14 FW-190s after they had attacked and cut rail lines in the area of Nogent in 13 places. Other planes kept up the patrol of the beachhead area.

These assaults came as Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the U. S. Army Air forces, after an inspection tour credited the European air forces with shortening "the remaining time for the defeat of the enemy" with great blows at Europe and their air cover for the invasion armadas.

1,500 U. S. Bombers Hit Robot Plane Bases And Targets in Reich

Oil Refineries, Aircraft Plants and Tank Depot Attacked by Air Fleet

By the Associated Press.

SUPREME ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, June 20.—More than 1,500 American heavy bombers, possibly the greatest force in history, today simultaneously attacked rocket bomb platforms in the Pas-de-Calais and an array of objectives in Central Germany ranging from oil refineries to airplane and tank plants.

The giant armada at least equaled that sent out last Wednesday to attack French airfields, bridges and the Emmerich oil refinery in Germany.

With its big fighter escort, the entire fleet totaled upward of 2,000 planes.

Oil Plants Attacked.

The heavy bombers blasted synthetic oil plants and oil refineries around Hannover, Hamburg, Magdeburg and Politz, a tank depot near Magdeburg, and an airplane wing repair and parts plant near Brunswick.

The Germans reported the American air fleet was attacked by large formations of fighters and that heavy air battles were fought.

Stockholm reported 21 of the heavy bombers today made forced landings in Sweden, the greatest number to land in that neutral country in a single day.

Sixteen came down at Bulltofta Airport at Malmo, on the southern tip of Sweden, with one reported crashing and killing six crewmen. Three others crashed in Southwestern Sweden and two planes landed outside Halstad.

DAY

Returning crewmen said they found clear weather over Germany, but were forced to bomb through a cloud over the Pas-de-Calais. Today's giant operation took a part of the fleet more than 550 miles, almost to the Polish border, to hit Politz, about 10 miles north of the Baltic seaport of Stettin, in Far Eastern Germany.

Nazi Forces Harassed.

Lighter Allied aerial forces swarmed across the Channel in improving weather and renewed the harassment of German forces in Normandy.

The Paris radio soon left the air, indicating that medium bombers and fighters were hitting behind the German lines.

Today's bomber formation was the fifth force of more than 1,000 heavyweights the American Air Force has sent out since D-day.

German radio reports said the American daylight raiders had swept over Brandenburg Province, where Berlin is situated.

Strong formations of German fighters intercepted the raiders and fierce air battles ensued, Berlin declared.

Today's bomber formation was the fifth force of more than 1,000 heavyweights the American Air force has sent out since D day.

Aircraft Chief Gen. Henry H. Arnold, returning from an inspection tour, credited the European air force's invasion operation with having permitted our surface forces to operate unhampered from enemy air opposition and paved the way for them to move forward with greater speed.

"This," he said, "together with the direct blows against Germany itself, has shortened the remaining time for the defeat of the enemy."

The Germans put up a heavy flak barrage over the Pas de Calais in defense of their rocket installations.

Antiaircraft Gunners And Fighters Down Dozens of Robots

JUN 21 1944

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 20.—Antiaircraft gunners and relays of fighter pilots blasted dozens of Nazi robot planes out of the sky overnight and the Allies appeared to be getting the range on this new weapon today.

In one district alone, four flying bombs were shot down by night fighters within a few minutes. Three exploded in the air in quick succession.

The Germans were launching the robots in no particular order. Sometimes as many as five came over almost together.

In daylight today the Germans kept winging the one-ton bombs into England at sporadic intervals. The British Air Ministry announced that new and secret measures were being taken to wipe out the cross-Channel attacks.

Many Robot Bases Destroyed.

As American heavy bombers struck twice yesterday at the rocket emplacements around Pas-de-Calais the Air Ministry made known that six months of constant attacks had blasted out so many of the launching platforms that the pilotless bombs finally were put into operation on less than one-fourth the scale Hitler originally planned.

As Allied preventive measures got into full swing, antiaircraft gunners reported it was somewhat different firing at the rocket bombs than at regular planes. Sergt. Tom Pinckney, British veteran in charge of one gun crew, said they are faster-moving targets than he had been used to, "but we are getting their measure and they are not bothering us much."

The Germans said during the night that their raiders were over parts of Eastern Scotland, indicating the Nazis were sending some ordinary planes against Britain as well as the robots.

The Air Ministry said only that "damage and casualties had been reported" in Southern England.

Nazi Public Due for Letdown.

There were indications of increasing uneasiness among Nazi propagandists that the German population was due for a tremendous letdown.

In extolling the new weapon and giving elaborate reports of panic in London, German broadcasts voiced frequent cautions against expecting too much.

Dispatches from some neutral countries reported many Germans now believe Germany will win in Western Europe within the next few weeks and they are again singing the "We Are Sailing Against England" song.

"Please don't believe in miracles," warned a Berlin radio political spokesman, Dr. Scharping. "Hard trials are still ahead."

A German military commentator in a broadcast to troops said:

"We are only too aware that an opponent with such extensive and up-to-date range of technical equipment as Britain will not leave the least stone unturned in an endeavor to find countermeasures against the new German weapon. Now a dramatic contest between the new German weapon and new British counterweapons has begun."

Visible for 15 Miles at Night.

Gunners on the Channel coast pointed out the winged comets do not have the advantage of ordinary night sneak raiders, as the rocket flames light up the bombs and they can be seen sometimes 15 miles out at sea. Gunners open up on them when they are still over the water. Fighters usually deal with them farther inland.

The rockets also have the British balloon barrage in their path. One ran into a balloon during the nigh and exploded with a terrific blast i a field, damaging nearby houses.

Gunners said the Germans seeme to be using many different types o the pilotless planes, because "we watch all shapes and sizes coming over."

It was estimated that the smaller types were capable of a speed of 200 and 230 miles per hour, while the larger robots traveled at perhaps 400 miles per hour. Air Ministry officials described as ridiculous, however, reports that some of the rocket bombs traveled at 600 miles per hour.

As the Allied air drive against the continent and in support of the Normandy beachhead went on, Lt. Gen. Lewis H. Brereton announced the United States 9th Air Force Thunderbolt fighter-bombers now are based permanently in France, the first air force units to be established on French soil.

These P-47 units are under Maj. Gen. Elwood R. Quesada of Washington, who established headquarters in Normandy last week. Other units will move into France as landing strips are finished.

Air Battles Grow.

London, June 20 (A. P.).—Allied warplanes swept out across the English Channel this morning to support ground operations in Normandy, and the German radio reported that American heavy bombers had penetrated almost to Berlin, touching off large scale air battles over the Reich.

The daylight assaults followed an overnight lull in Allied aerial operations — the first night since the invasion which has been devoid of any notable R. A. F. activity.

German radio reports on the activity of the American daylight raiders today said they had bombed targets around Stettin and Hanover, an important oil, rubber and communications center, and had swept over Brandenburg province, where Berlin is situated.

ROBOTS PRODUCE NEW TYPE OF ACE

JUN 21 1944

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 20 (A. P.).—The American Ninth Airforce is producing a new type of fighter aces among its flyers who have joined the sky patrols waiting to shoot down German rocket bombs.

Mustang Pilot Lieut. Lewis Powers of Albuquerque, N. M., shot down and shared another with an R. A. F. righter last night in addition to one he nailed the previous night.

Lieut. Powers sighted the first coming in at about 2,000 feet. He dived on it, gave it several bursts and watched it crash.

A few seconds after shooting the last bolt into place on a 40-millimeter gun destined for Normandy, an alert United States Army maintenance crew used the weapon last week to bag what is thought to be the first pilotless plane shot down in southern England.

A direct hit was scored with the second round after Capt. Albert E. Reuning, Jackson, Miss., commanding officer, spied a projectile hurtling towar the field.

The gun assembly unit was led by Sergt. James Bridges, McComb, Miss. Others included Sergt Douglas Aly, Wood-Hull, N. Y.; Corporal John E. Elseasser, Buffalo, N. Y.; Corporal Clayton J. Bittker, Rochester, N. Y.; Pfc. Edward J. Sullivan, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Pfc. Dallas R. Blair, Bellman;; Private Carl C. Pederson, Racine, Wis.

21 U. S. BOMBERS LAND IN SWEDEN

STURDEVANT

185 Crewmen Survive, Nearly 600 Now Interned

JUN 21 1944

Stockholm, June 20 (AP) — Battered by German fighters and anti-aircraft fire over the Baltic, 21 United States heavy bombers crashed or made forced landings in Sweden today in the greatest such influx to his neutral country in a single day.

About 185 crewmen, including several wounded men, survived.

With these, the total number of American airmen interned in Sweden neared the 600 mark.

German Fighters Follow

Newspaper dispatches said German fighters even followed crippled bombers over Swedish territorial waters.

Of the 21 planes, 16 were able to make safe landings. Five others crashed, either while landing or after the crews had jumped.

It was learned authoritatively that the United States Government had sought unsuccessfully to persuade the Swedes to treat disabled bombers as they would crippled belligerent naval vessels.

Want Right To Repair Planes

Under the Geneva Convention a disabled warship may take refuge in a neutral port for 48 hours for repairs.

The Swedish Government was told that the crippled bombers would give the international distress call, jettison all bombs and armament and advise that they were making forced landings. The Americans contended it would be possible for them to make repairs in most cases within 48 hours and then dash back to English bases.

The Swedes declined on the ground that it was impossible to establish a new principle of international law during a war.

Record Number Land There in One Day; Crash Kills 6

STOCKHOLM, June 20 (AP).—Twenty-one American heavy bombers from fleets raiding Germany made forced landings in Sweden today, the greatest number to land in this neutral country in a single day.

Sixteen came down at Bulltofta Airport at Malmo, with one reported crashing and killing six crew men. Three others crashed in southwestern Sweden, and two planes landed outside Halstad.

SUPREME ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, June 20.—A few seconds after shooting the last bolt into place on a 40-millimeter gun destined for Normandy, an alert United States Army maintenance crew used the weapon last week to bag what is thought to be the first pilotless plane shot down in Southern England.

A direct hit was scored with the second round after Capt. Albert E. Reuning, Jackson, Miss., commanding officer, spied a projectile hurtling toward the field.

The American 9th Air Force is producing a new type of fighter "aces" who have joined the sky patrols waiting to shoot down German rocket bombs.

Mustang Pilot Lt. Lewis Powers, Alguquerque, N. Mex., shot down two and shared another with an RAF fighter last night in addition to one he nailed the previous night.

Mustangs Score 13 Victories.

An American Fighter Base in England, June 20 (A. P.). — A Mustang fighter group shot down thirteen enemy planes in a milling, three-minute sky battle over the Baltic Sea without loss to themselves today and broke up an attack on American bombers by fifty twin-engined enemy fighters.

The Mustang group was led by Major Henry R. Kucheman Jr. of Richmond, Va., and Capt. Leslie D. Minchew of Miami, Fla.

Major Kucheman shot down one ME-109 and damaged two others.

PERUGIA CLEARED OF NAZI TROOPS

Allied Armies in Italy Move Ahead Despite 30-Hour Rainstorm.

HEINZERLING

JUN 21 1944

ROME, June 20 (AP) French colonial troops stacked arms on the conquered island of Elba today and stood guard over some 1,900 German prisoners, while Allied armies on the Italian mainland slogged forward through the mud of a 30-hour downpour and kept the Nazis on the run toward the Pisa-Florence-Rimini defense line in northern Italy.

The ancient communications center of Perugia, 85 miles north of Rome, shook with the sound of battle as Eighth army troops expelled the last stubborn German rearguards from its streets and buildings. For several days the enemy had braced and made a bitter stand on the approaches to the city, whose peacetime population was 88,500.

Nazis Resist Bitterly

German forces in the center of the peninsula were believed under orders to contest every foot of ground at this point so that the shattered Nazi 14th army near the west coast might withdraw in as much order as possible before the Americans and French of Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth army. Perugia is only 72 airline miles from Florence.

The French crushed the last enemy resistance on Elba yesterday when the 30-man garrison of Porto Longone on the eastern shore of the historic island hoisted a white flag and surrendered. German casualties in killed and wounded were estimated at 500. Historical and cultural landmarks on the island, once the exile home of Napoleon, suffered no important damage in the three-day battle.

27,000 Prisoners

Not counting the bag of prisoners on Elba, it was announced that Allied forces in Italy had captured 27,000 prisoners since they opened their drive toward Rome on May 11. American troops pushing beyond Grosseto near the west coast continued to take a heavy toll of the withdrawing enemy, one infantry unit capturing 15 German artillery pieces yesterday. Another Yank unit took 1,198 prisoners—719 of whom were non-German—in a five-day period.

French forces advancing on the inland flank of the Fifth army seized Arcidosso, a town of 7,200 population 23 miles northeast of Grosseto, and cut a highway between Battigann and Pignico in the same area. On the opposite side of the peninsula in the Adriatic sector, Eighth army spearheads reached the Tesino river a few miles north of Offica, representing an advance of more than 20 airline miles from Teramo.

Perugia, a provincial capital, proved the most troublesome obstacle yet encountered by Allied forces north of Rome. In the past two days extensive enemy demolitions and the pouring rain slowed the Eighth army's tanks and self-propelled artillery almost to a standstill, and it was not until Indian troops pushed east and north of Perugia yesterday, threatening to encircle the Nazi garrison, that British units were able to fight into its streets from the south.

The effects of Allied tactical bombings against the enemy's communications and transport in recent weeks were plain to see behind the Eighth army's advance. Rail yards were completely wrecked, with cars blown off the tracks and switches and towers smashed to rubble. The towns, however, were but little damaged.

[Tuesday's German high command communique said the Nazi garrison had been evacuated to the Italian mainland in darkness after inflicting heavy casualties on the French colonials.]

West of Perugia British troops reached the southern shore of Lake Trasimeno and approached a road along its southern shore after bypassing the town of Citta Della Pieve, where the Germans had resisted strongly for two days. The town of Panicale and the villages of Mungano, Catiglione and Panciano were cleared of the enemy.

One of the oldest and best known of the hill towns of central Italy, Perugia was once called the "capital of the Fascist revolution" from the fact that it was the 1922 headquarters for leaders who organized the "march on Rome." It was a prewar mecca for students interested in Renaissance art. The town itself occupies a commanding spot on a rocky ridge more than 1,000 feet above the Umbrian plain.

Fall of Elba Weakens Nazi Position in Italy; Allies Enter Perugia

Major Communications Center Is 85 Miles North of Rome

By the Associated Press.

ROME, June 20.—Allied forces pressing northward on the Italian mainland have entered Perugia, major communications center 72 miles airline southeast of Florence and 85 miles north of Rome, after the German position in the north had been weakened by the conquest of Elba by French Colonial troops.

The French crushed the last stubborn resistance on Elba yesterday. The swift campaign netted 1,800 prisoners, all but a small portion of the enemy garrison.

Organized resistance on Elba collapsed with the capture of Porto Longone, on the eastern shore. The garrison of about 300 there surrendered. Large quantities of materiel were abandoned by the enemy.

Spotty Resistance.

Perugia was entered by 8th Army troops, which were encountering spotty resistance today. On both sides of the city, however, Allied troops advanced a considerable distance, an Allied communique said.

Despite rain which interfered with the movement of troops and transport, the 8th Army advansed all along its front in the face of resistance at key points.

The 5th Army advanced more than 9 miles north of Grosetto, some 22 miles beyond Orbetello.

Perugia, 14th century city and a provincial capital with a population of 88,500, has been more troublesome to Allied forces in Italy than any other town north of Rome.

Nazi Casualties Heavy.

The villages of Lippa and Civitella d'Arno, northeast of Perugia, were captured by troops of an Indian division and considerable casualties were inflicted on the Germans when they attempted a counterattack.

Farther west British troops reached the southern shore of Lake Trasimeno and approached the road along its western shore.

Citta Della Pieve, where the Germans had offered strong resistance for two days, was by-passed by 8th Army troops, who headed for San Litardo to the northwest.

Resistance to the 5th Army in the west again became sporadic, with isolated machine gun nests and mortar positions causing most of the trouble. Artillery fire which had slowed progress had slackened considerably. Late yesterday the advance reached a point 9 miles northeast of Grosseto.

The number of prisoners taken by both armies since the start of the offensive below Rome rose to 27,000.

Marshall Aides in Italy

JUN 21 1944

ROME, June 20 (AP)—General George C. Marshall, United States Army chief of staff, was accompanied by several other members of the general staff on his visit to the Italian battlefield, and these officers attended conferences with Allied military chiefs here, it was disclosed today. They included Major General Thomas T. Handy, assistant chief of staff for the operations division; Major General L. S. Kuter, deputy chief of staff of the air forces; Colonel Richard Lindsay and Colonel Frank McCarthy.

Nazi Refugee Camp Filthy

Allied Officers Find 6,740 Italians Suffering from Malnutrition

ROME, June 20 (AP). — Allied Control Commission officers who visited a camp established by the Germans for Italian refugees from the Anzio and Cassino areas reported today they found practically all its 6,740 occupants suffering from malnutrition and scabies. More than 500, mostly children, were afflicted with other ailments.

DAY

The camp had no latrines, no cooking facilities, inadequate water and the refugees were living in filth, the officers reported. It had one doctor, but the officers found him, at 4 p. m., in bed smoking and reading a newspaper.

Fourteen truckloads of food have been delivered to the camp and the inmates are being returned to their homes as soon as they are examined for infectious diseases.

WHAT AIRMEN DID IN DRIVE ON ROME

JUN 21 1944

Washington, June 20 (A. P.). —These were the results of the Mediterranean Allied air force's war against enemy transportation in Italy before the fall of Rome:

156 railroads and roads cut or blocked.

95 bridges destroyed and 198 damaged.

773 tracks cut.

21 locomotives destroyed and 21 damaged.

391 railroad cars demolished and 694 damaged.

10 tunnels bottled up and 28 partially blocked.

44 fuel and ammunition dumps destroyed.

48 buildings exploded or set on fire.

21 ships and small boats sunk and 44 damaged.

2,768 armored vehicles and motor transports demolished and 2,427 damaged.

This, says the War Department, is one phase of an "operation strangle" on German transportation.

HULL DENIES U. S. OPPOSED BONOMI

JUN 21 1944

Washington, June 20 (A. P.).—Secretary of State Hull said today that the American Government had never been the least bit averse to the formation of the new regime in Italy replacing the old Badoglio coalition. Asked whether he knew anything of the reports that there had been delay in recognizing the regime of the new Premier, Ivanoe Bonomi, because of differences between British and American policy in Italy, he said that he knew of no delay occasioned by American policy.

Asked then whether former Premier Pietro Badoglio was still being backed by the British for top position so that, in effect, Italy would have two Premiers, he replied that that was another twist of fact, and added that the United States at no time and in no sense was averse to the new Governments coming in. He said he had never heard a question raised before about whether Badoglio might not have actually put through his resignation as Prime Minister.

On other matters Mr. Hull declined at his press conference to discuss reports that the British have started to work out agreements for the civil administration of France with the de Gaulle regime. He said that he hoped to have some announcement soon on British, Russian and Chinese responses to his invitation to hold exploration conferences on the post-war world.

Pope Gives Audience To British Soldiers

JUN 21 1944

New York, June 20 (AP)—Pope Pius XII gave an audience today to 4,000 soldiers of the British Eighth Army, the Vatican radio said tonight. Another group of British soldiers, unable to crowd into the Hall of Blessing, listened to the Pope's address through loudspeakers.

The broadcast, reported by United States Government monitors, said the Pope also spoke to a group of French soldiers and gave an audience earlier in the day to 59 British army chaplains.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE VIIPURI SEAPORT

Gateway City Falls to Red Troops Storming Fortress.

LANDSTROM

LONDON, June 20.—(AP) Premier Stalin announced tonight that the Red army captured Finland's second largest city and southern gateway, Viipuri, today as the smashing climax to an 11-day offensive in which the Soviet forces have driven 60 miles and appear to have plunged the Finns to the verge of defeat.

Stalin announced the fall of the important seaport in a midnight order of the day, praising the units of the Leningrad army of Marshal Leonid A. Govorov, and within a few minutes after the announcement the Moscow radio declared, "Viipuri's fall brings Finland to the brink of defeat."

NIGHT

Take Town by Assault

The commander-in-chief said the Red troops had crashed through the Mannerheim line and, "developing their offensive, overpowered the outer and inner defenses of Viipuri, and today, June 20, carried by assault the fortress and town of Viipuri."

Later the regular nightly Moscow communique announced that during the course of the day's drive the Russians captured more than 60 other populated places, including seven railway stations.

"Many prisoners were taken and trophies captured including a large number of guns, railway rolling stock, many trucks, ammunition dumps and various military supplies," a supplement to the Russian communique said.

"Our bombers, Stormoviks and fighters constantly supported the operation of our land forces. Inflicting blows on retreating enemy columns, Soviet fliers destroyed 80 trucks loaded with infantrymen," the supplement added.

Two transports and several other enemy ships were damaged by Soviet naval bombers and Moscow said 36 German and Finnish planes were brought down in aerial battles.

Heavy street fighting preceded the capture of the seaport, but by the "end of the day" Viipuri was entirely in Soviet hands, the supplement stated.

125 Miles from Helsinki

Viipuri, with a normal population of about 85,000, lies 125 miles from Helsinki. Besides its stature as a commercial port and second city of Finland, Viipuri was a bastion in the deepest and strongest fortifications of the Mannerheim line with which the Finns hoped to stave off the Soviet advance.

The London Press expressed the opinion that with Viipuri's fall the battered Finns would be unable to make an effective stand anywhere and from Stockholm came reports that a new Finnish "peace cabinet" would be formed in Helsinki "very soon."

Neutral military observers in Stockholm said they believed organized resistance by the Finns was rapidly ending and that they believed Col. Gen. Eduard Dietl, commander of German troops in Finland, was seriously considering pulling his forces back to Norway.

An opposing view expressed by some in Stockholm was that the Germans might try to maintain themselves in northern Finland, where their assignment has been mainly to guard the nickel mines, now one of Germany last sources of supply. Some sources estimate that the Nazis have been obtaining 000 tons of pure metal annually n Finland.

the Germans choose to remain in northern Finland, they probably will race the Russians for control of Ahvenanmaa (Aaland) Island guarding the mouth of the Gulf of Bothnia, Stockholm observers predicted.

A correspondent of the army newspaper, Red Star, said the Finn's coastal defenses along the Gulf of Viipuri had collapsed.

The Russian communique said that among the places captured during the day, in addition to Viipuri, were the railway stations of Kaitslaki, Sonne, Tainyee, Ristokale and Senijoki.

The communique said there were no changes on other sectors of the front.

Suggested As New Head

The Stockholm newspaper Allehanda carried a report from Helsinki that the former Finnish banker, Eero Rydman, a good friend of Field Marshal Carl Gustav Mannerheim, was considered likely to head a new government which might attempt to gain peace with Russia. Finnish sources here could not confirm the report.

No Peace Overtures

Though Stockholm still hummed with talk of imminent shifts in the Finnish government and London listened to it hopefully, Moscow said it knew of no Finnish peace overtures. Both Russian and British press dispatches asserted that the Finns could not expect to receive as generous armistice terms as they refused two months before Marshal Joseph Stalin signalled the present offensive.

The plight of the Finnish army worsened hourly. Having evacuated scores of towns and villages on the isthmus and then having been newly smashed among hurriedly-built defenses between many small lakes, the defenders appeared close to chaos. Moscow dispatches said many Finns had been trapped in a succession of pockets, with few getting away. An armored Finnish staff train was among the extensive booty falling to the Russians.

Soviet warships were reported to have sunk four Finnish transports and numerous other craft in the Gulf of Finland and to have blocked the escape by water of Finnish troops in Viipuri.

With Finland's military fall apparently near, there was a wave of fresh speculation in Allied circles here about the probable target of Russia's next offensive. The most popular guess was that it would spring from the Iasi sector in Romania, timed with another blow in eastern Poland. The Red air force lately has spent much time softening up the road to Warsaw.

Stockholm Hears Finnish Seaport Has Fallen Under Attack.

SHELLED BY MASSED GUNS

No Sign of Peace Overtures Is Noted, but Helsinki Cabinet Shake-up Is Rumored.

JUN 2DAY

London, June 20 (A. P.).—A Stockholm dispatch said today that Viipuri, key Finnish seaport, has fallen. Russian artillery, massed wheel to wheel, had been shelling the city from positions less than nine miles away. Reports, reaching a reliable informant in Stockholm, were not immediately confirmed either by Moscow or by Russian spokesmen in London.

[Viipuri is in flames, the British radio said in a broadcast picked up at New York today by CBS.]

Reds Speed Up Offensive.

The Russians increased the speed of their offensive, Moscow advices said, pouring through a thirty-mile gap blown in the wolf teeth fortifications of the third and last series of Mannerheim Line defenses. The fall of the Mannerheim Line brought Finland's winter war with Russia to an abrupt end in 1940.

The reported travels of Finnish diplomats in Sweden suggested meanwhile that the Baltic republic may again be seeking peace. Moscow, however, reported no peace overtures.

A prediction that the Finnish cabinet would be revamped came from the Stockholm newspaper Svenska Dagbladet, which said Premier Edwin Linkomies and Finance Minister Vaino Tanner, the two men largely responsible for Finland's rejection of Soviet armistice terms three months ago, would retire. The paper did not name a possible successor to Linkomies, but said it would not be Dr. Juho K. Paasikivi, former Premier who flew to Moscow last March to receive Moscow's peace terms.

The Red Star, Russian Army newspaper, said that the coastal defenses along the Gulf of Viipuri had collapsed and that the Red Army had defeated the 18th and 10th Finnish Infantry brigades and the Yellow Regiment on the approaches to the city. Some 125 miles to the west lies the Finnish capital of Helsinki.

Speed of Offensive Against Finnish City Declared Increasing

JUN 21 1944

STOCKHOLM (AP).—Reports reaching a reliable Swedish source said today that the Finns had yielded Viipuri to the Russians.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, June 20.—Big guns of the Red Army, only 9 miles from the Finnish seaport of Viipuri, poured salvo after salvo into its outskirts today.

Izvestia's Correspondent Ivan Ossipov said the speed of the "remarkable" offensive was increasing.

Maj. Nikolai Shvankov, the Red Star correspondent, declared costal defenses of the Finns along the Gulf of Viipuri have collapsed and Soviet sailors are threatening to cut off large numbers of the enemy in little peninsulas south of the city.

Outside Viipuri the Russians defeated the 18th and 10th Finnish Infantry Brigades, a fresh cavalry unit and a crack Finnish "Yellow Regiment."

DAY

There were no indications in Moscow that the Finns are seeking to reopen peace negotiations. The general view is that soon the Red Army will be at the 1940 Russo-Finnish treaty frontier, which is 16 miles beyond Viipuri.

A Red Fleet dispatch said Russian ships are pounding Finnish craft in the Gulf of Viipuri and the Gulf of Finland, sinking two transports totaling 14,000 tons. In Viipuri Gulf two other Finnish transports were sunk, in addition to smaller craft. Heavy ships of the Baltic Fleet are moving up the Gulf of Finland and adding their weight to the assault on the city.

It appeared that the Gulf of Finland was blocked and escape by water from Viipuri was now impossible.

Nazis Block Finn Moves To Peace

JUN 21 1944

Stockholm, Wednesday, June 21 (AP)—The Germans were reported exerting pressure on the Helsinki Government today in an effort to prevent the Finns from reshuffling the Cabinet and moving toward peace with the Russians.

The newspaper Dagens Tyheter said that as a result of the smashing Russian military victories climaxed by the capture yesterday of Viipuri, Finland's second city, the Germans were endeavoring to block organization of a peace Cabinet which a Finnish source here said would be formed "very soon."

"When the Russians cracked our key Karelian isthmus fortifications they left us helpless," the informant said, "because our whole scheme of defense was built on the expectation we would be able to hold there. . . . To carry on would mean falling back into the lake and forest region and fighting guerrilla warfare."

No Hint Of Makeup

Finns here would not venture a guess as to the makeup of any new cabinet.

"If the Russians still are willing to deal with the present Government, which is very doubtful," one said, "there would not be any reason for the change.

WASHINGTON, June 20 (AP).—Finnish Minister Hjalmar Procope who has been handed his walking papers by the State Department is expected to sail from New Orleans on a Spanish steamer at the end of this week.

English-born Mrs. Procope, who is expecting a child, will probably remain here until she is able to travel.

Procope and the three other members of the Finnish Legation who were handed their passports Friday will have to have British safe-conducts to travel on the neutral vessel.

The precise reason for the unusual stand taken by the State Department in handing the four their passports, but remaining on diplomatic speaking terms with their country, remains undisclosed.

The broadcast, recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, said it was the "first medal" given for the "defense of Moscow."

Nazis Reported Shipping Poison Gas to East Front

By the Associated Press

JUN 21 1944

NEW YORK, June 20 (AP)—Radio France at Algiers said today in a broadcast to French areas that the Germans had transported "large quantities" of poison gas from Germany into Hungary "with a view to using it against the Soviet Army, from whom they dread a new and powerful offensive."

The broadcast, reported by United States Government monitors, said the information had been received from the Balkans via Ankara. It added that a "German official paper" on June 2 had published "detailed instructions concerning the transport and handling of poison gases."

ERICKSON

Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, June 20 (AP)—A Japanese naval armada—"possibly the entire Japanese fleet"—has moved out between the Philippines and the invaded Marianas, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced tonight, hinting that a history-making battle with the American Fifth Fleet already may be under way.

Already it is possible that damage has been inflicted on the Japanese warships, the admiral said.

Assumed Japs Would Act

American forces invaded the Marianas, 1,500 miles from Tokyo, along Japan's inner defense line of islands, "on the assumption the Japanese would bring out everything they possibly could," he added.

"We put enough muscle in the fifth fleet to take care of everything he (the Jap) could muster."

Nimitz said there was a possibility that a major naval engagement might result.

[Earlier the Tokyo radio told the Japanese people that a huge naval battle was taking shape and promised them a decisive victory.]

Would Seek Engagement

"I can't control Japanese fleet movements," Nimitz said.

"If I did there definitely would be a naval engagement."

Although he did not specify what the situation was, as of Monday, he added the significant hint that possible damage already may have been inflicted on enemy surface units.

These blows could have fallen either from naval forces or carrier planes but, either way, they might mark the first stages of the battle. The previous big naval battle of Midway was fought out by opposing planes from carriers and island airfields.

Sets Jap Loss At 600 Planes

Three hundred Japanese planes, believed to have been carrier-based, signaled the presence of enemy warships in the area, as they were shot down attacking the American task forces. Today Nimitz said enemy plane losses since the invasion operations opened in the Marianas approaches 600.

"That's a lot of planes," he commented.

NIGHT

"If we lost 600 naval planes in two or three days we'd be very unhappy, even with our plane production."

Nimitz, whose announcements and observations were made at a press conference, expressed conviction that the enemy so far has been able to replace plane losses in the war to date.

Notes Advantage Of Enemy

In operations of fleet against fleet, he pointed out the Japs have the advantage of land-based air reconnaissance west of the Marianas and the American fleet has as it first obligation the protection of the Saipan invasion troops.

With their reconnaissance advantage, the Japanese decided Sunday they had enough information to launch carrier-based plane strikes on the fleet, the admiral noted.

"They have made a very strong bid, but took a very severe beating in losing 300 carrier-type planes," he said.

Such carrier planes are most valuable to the Japs because of the long pilot training required for carrier operations.

Hopes Foe Will Stay To Fight

Concerning the strength of the American fleet off the Marianas, Nimitz remarked:

"I can safely say that there was enough power to be favorable to us in a decisive engagement.

"We hope the Jap fleet will stay in that area. As long as they stay, we have a chance to get at them."

Because of the Marianas' importance in a key defense line for Japan, the China coast and the Philippines, the enemy is making a tremendous effort to hold Saipan, Nimitz explained.

Lack Strength To Attack

He said the Japanese lacked the sea strength to use the Marianas as a springboard for any strike east at the American force, "but the Japs need to hold them to keep us from penetrating west of their island defense line."

"I'm not optimistic enough to say we will finish Saipan in two or three days (it was invaded June 14 and the southern end now has been boxed off by a drive from west to east), but we've made a good start.

"Once we've taken the Marianas it will be like money in the bank and we can project our sea power hundreds of miles to the west of there."

Could Hit Toward Japan

Rear Admiral C. H. McMorris, Chief of Staff, interposed:

"And north of there, too." North owuld be toward Japan, a direction atask force moved last week to shell the Bonin Islands at a point les sthan 600 miles from Tokyo.

Nimitz, knocking on wood, said no major American combatant unit has been lost in the Marianas strike.

He added that damage has been sustained by some auxiliaries, landing craft and some tankers but that all tankers still were afloat and servicing the fleet.

This contrasted sharply with wild Tokyo claims of sinking numerous warships, including a battleship.

Have Been "Very Lucky"

"I think we've been very lucky," Nimitz said.

Once the Mariannas, including the former United States outpost of Guam, have been secured, the Americans will eb able to maintain effective aerial search over and exert sea strength in "the last great vacant area in the western Pacific."

He remarked that this sea space between the Marianas, the Philippines and Formosa "was large enough to be worth a special name."

Estimates 20,000 Japs On Saipan

In the Saipan ground action, nimitz said, "We've killed a lot of Japs and had some losses."

"We think there are some 20,000 Jap troops on Saipan," he continued.

"That's a lot of Japs and the fighting is pretty tough."

Inasmuch as construction battalions already are repairing seized Aslito airdrome, Nimitz said, "you can expect our fighter planes to be operating there very, very soon. Then the Japs will have to face an unsinkable carrier. We'll have control of the air in the immediate Marianas area."

300 Jap Planes Bagged; Saipan Airfield Seized

Enemy Claims 300 Planes, Battleship And Two Cruisers

By the Associated Press

PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, June 20.—American carrier pilots and warship guns have destroyed an estimated 300 Japanese planes off Saipan to win the biggest Pacific air battle since Midway, while a land surge captured a vital airstrip and sealed off the southern end of the island.

In a battle lasting several hours, the offshore task force smashed a sustained, Japanese aerial assault Sunday, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz said first information reported only one American vessel damaged.

(Imperial Japanese headquarters declared, without confirmation, that 300 American planes were destroyed and a battleship, two cruisers, a destroyer and one submarine were sunk during the battle. A broadcast enemy communique also said Japanese airmen were still attacking the American ships.)

DAY

(This claim may have been a follow-up to a Tokyo broadcast promising "that the Japanese navy in the near future will win a great naval victory in the Central Pacific.")

Seabees Prepare Airstrip.

With the land battle still raging to their north and southwest, Seabees began preparing the newly-captured Aslito airstrip, on Saipan's southern coast—the first American air base within Japan's Central Pacific middle defense arc. Its capture climaxes the long drive toward air bases strategically dominating the oceanic approaches to Tokyo.

Pushing through tangled cane fields and swamps, American marines and Army troops travered the island on a wide front to reach Magicienne Bay on the east coast, 3½ miles from the western landing beach. In this 1½-mile advance since Friday some Japanese forces were cut off in Nafutan Point, Saipan's southeastern extremity.

Guam and Rota Strafed.

The Japanese aerial thrust—their biggest since Midway—included some planes apparently based on distant carriers and using nearby shore bases for shuttle landings, the United States communique said.

It added that systematic American bombing and strafing of airfields on Guam and Rota "sharply limited" the effectiveness of the Japanese shuttle land fields. Designation of these two islands, approximately 100 miles south of Saipan, indicated enemy carriers were some distance from the Marianas.

American forces hold a 5-mile-long coastal strip on the western shore line, where they have expanded from their original beachhead at Agingan Point.

Jap Radio Admits Losses

New York, June 20 (AP)—The Tokyo radio in a domestic broadcast recorded by the Federal Communications Commission tonight quoted a Japanese imperial headquarters communique as saying "we have suffered considerable losses of ships and planes" off Saipan in the Marianas.

But in a broadcast transmitted for American consumption FCC said this version was toned down to read: "Our side suffered some damage in vessels and aircraft."

Jap Pilot Surrendered

JUN 21 1944

Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, June 20 (AP)—A Japanese pilot made a crash landing June 19 on an airstrip in the Marianas.

As he crawled from the damaged plane, up rushed some Yanks to take him prisoner. The amazed Jap explained he had no idea the airfield was in American hands.

[The airfield was not identified but probably was either the airstrip adjacent to Charan Kanoa or the bigger Aslito fighter strip, both now in Yank possession.]

HALF OF SAIPAN HELD BY YANKS

Lines Run From Magicienne Bay To Garapan Outskirts

JUN 21 1944

Washington, June 20 (AP)—Inching forward against heavy enemy artillery fire, American troops have taken the southern half of Saipan, largest island in the Western Pacific Marianas group.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Pacific fleet commander, announced tonight that forward lines now extend from the shore of Magicienne Bay on the southeast side of the island to the outskirts of Garapan, principal town on Saipan.

Artillery Moved Up

Army and marine units, Nimitz said, have moved up artillery to blast away at the enemy's big guns. American bombers and strafing fighter planes are joining in the assault, while offshore warships are pouring shells onto enemy positions.

While front-line troops continue their advance, other units to the rear are heavily attacking "strong pockets of resistance" left behind in the advance.

Nimitz also reported bombardment of Japanese airfields on Tinian Island south of Saipan. In addition to the shelling by warships, bomber planes on Monday attacked the Tinian fields.

Common Yugoslav Front Indicated

JUN 21 1944

London, June 20 (AP)—The United States, Britain and Russia believe an agreement should be reached in Yugoslavia bringing all races together in a common front against the Germans and this may come from "negotiations which are proceeding at present," George Hall, Foreign Office Under Secretary, told the House of Commons today.

NIGHT

William Teeling, Conservative member, asked about the position of Gen. Draja Mihailovic—whose forces are at odds with Marshal Tito, the Partisan leader—saying he thought it was possible Premier Stalin might come to terms with him soon, "for Stalin, like Churchill, is a realist."

Hall replied that King Peter of Yugoslavia had made it clear the new Yugoslav Government would work with all elements in the country with regard to political views.

Sabotage Halted Repatriate's Train

HEW JUN 21 1944

Irun, Spain, June 20 (AP)—Seven United States citizens, five Britons and fifteen Latin Americans entering Spain in exchange for German civilian prisoners told today how their train was halted throughout France due to sabotage, and of seeing a trainload of Frenchmen who said they were underground members being taken to Germany for questioning and execution.

Miss Fanny Flinder, born in Baltimore, Md., who is en route home from the Libenau concentration camp in Poland, said the height of the four-day railroad trip through France was reached at Nancy.

"On the other track were two third-class railroad cars packed with about twenty-five men in each compartment—perhaps 400 in all. They saw the sign 'American Exchange Party,' on the side of our train and immediately made the V sign with their fingers.

DAY

"Somebody asked them who they were.

"'We are real Frenchmen,' one replied. "We are saboteurs, members of the underground and plain innocent suspects. We are on our way to Germany where the Germans will try to find out what we know and then he placed his forefinger at his head like a pistol.

"It was pitiful. We wept and threw them cigarettes before German guards came along."

Miss Georgina Little of Near Sunderland, England, said: "I could only weep, for in them I saw my brother-in-law, who was left behind at Liege where he, too, was arrested in connection with the shooting of German soldiers and I suppose he was shot also. Before we left one of them cried to me: 'Tell them we did our job well. We die, but France lives!' "

The exchange party came directly from Libenau in Poland, traveling five and a half days, four of them through France. The train followed a winding route, avoiding bombed-out and sabotaged sections of track. From Nancy it went to Paris, then to Bourges to the south, then to Vierzon, then back to the Tours region, then south to Bordeaux.

At Bourges the train was halted twenty-four hours while the Germans repaired sabotaged rail connections. At Vierzon there was another seven-hour halt for the same reason. The exchangees said they usually were stopped four to five times daily by sabotaged rail connections.

The railroad yards near Tours, they said, were a twisted mass of steel and shattered freight cars—a "complete, thorough wreck"—due to Allied precision bombing.

South from Tours, two exchange cars were attached to a German troop train and the exchangees said the Germans seemed to be poorly trained troops, either very young or very old, who became drunk during the trip, and caroused and sang and fought through the night.

Leaves Mother in Poland.

Miss Flinder gave her nearest relative as a brother-in-law, Juliu Berman of 1561 Longfellow avenue, the Bronx, N. Y. Pathetically she showed the return ticket for a Polish line steamer she had hoped to use when she went to visit her mother in Poland in 1939. Her mother, she said, is "alive somewhere or dead in some concentration camp."

The Americans included three sisters, Charlotte, Wilma and Eugenia Willenbucher, who gave their address as Washington, D. C., although they had been in Germany for many years, teaching music and opera singing in Berlin and Salzburg. During the paper shortage in Berlin, they said, they "accidentally tore up our passports for notepaper."

Other Americans were Mrs. Ida Johnson and her two daughters Marylin, 18, and Jacqueline, 16 of 6468 East 128th street, New York city. Mrs. Johnson is the wife of a musician, already repatriated. They lived for fifteen years in The Hague.

BRITISH DRIVE JAPANESE FROM ROAD JUNCTION

J. C. ROVER

SOUTHEAST ASIA HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, June 20.—(AP) British Imperials in a swift 17-mile advance have driven the Japanese from Mao Songsamg on the Kohima-Imphal road of eastern India in the greatest thrust since the start of the Allied counter-offensive, a communique announced today.

The advance south from Kohima brushed the enemy from Tuphema and planted the Allied vanguard just west of Maram, clearing all but 29 miles of the more than 60 miles of road between these big Allied bases.

A large ordnance dump and ten artillery pieces were taken. It was estimated officially that 3,500 Japanese were killed in this sector and 50 prisoners taken.

The communique said the enemy had been driven from the Naga hills north of Kohima except for small parties of stragglers.

A success also was reported on the Burma front where Gurkhas and Kachins from India captured Tiangzup, 40 miles north of the Japanese stronghold of Myitkyina, after six weeks' fighting. To the west in the Mogaung valley Chinese units pushed to within five miles of Kamaing on the south.

RAF fighters, fighter-bombers and dive-bombers hammered enemy positions, troops and transport around Bishenpur, Ukhrul on the Tiddim road leading south from Imphal, and in the upper Chindwin valley.

Long-range RAF fighters attacked railway trains, motor transport and river craft in the areas of Alon, Yeu, Shwebo and Pyingaing, while U. S. fighters and fighter-bombers gave "effective support" to the Allies around Mogaung and Myitkyina.

Allies in Northeast India Advance 17 Miles in Day

By the Associated Press

JUN 21 19

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, June 20.—Parallel columns of Imperial troops striking south from Kohima toward Imphal have advanced 17 miles, the greatest single-day of progress in the counter-offensive to knock the Japanese from the Northeastern India border regions, it was announced today.

The plunge narrowed to 29 miles the gap between forces fighting below Kohima and those advancing north from Imphal. The two strongpoints are 60 miles apart.

DAY

Headquarters estimated 3,500 Japanese have been killed in this sector.

The southern push seized Mao Songsamg, brushed the enemy aside in Tuphema, and continued to just west of Maram. Two other towns were taken.

CHINESE ADMIT CHANGSHA FALL

MOOSA

Further Jap Advance On Hengyang Also Noted

JUN 21 1944

Chunking, Wednesday, June 21 (AP)—Changsha, capital of Hunan province and for five years a symbol of successful Chinese resistance, has fallen to the Japanese, the Chinese high command announced today.

Fifty thousand Japanese troops, strongly supported by artillery and warplanes, participated in the final assaults which overwhelmed the city's subsurban defenses, the Chinese said. A supplementary communique asserted that the last defenders withdraw Sunday from the strategic city on the Hankow-Canton railway 400 miles east of Chungking.

Call Jap Losses Heavy

Heavy losses were inflicted on the enemy in the last two weeks of the battle for Changsha, the communique said.

Thus the Japanese succeeded where three times previously they had been repulsed, once in September of 1941 at the very gates of this communications center which had a pre-war population of 500,000.

Chinese quarters regarded the fall of Changsha as a moral and political setback but not unexpected since the invaders already had swung around the capital and begun a battle for strategic Hengyang, some 130 miles to the south where the Canton-Hankow joins the Human-Kwangsi railway on the Siang river.

NIGHT

Lu River Crossed

The high command admitted these enemy forces now had crossed the Lu river, placing them within 65 miles of Hengyang.

Should Hengyang fall the Japanese would be a long stride on the way toward splitting China in half, establishing an overland trunk railway, neutralizing an undisclosable number of Allied air bases and putting the enemy in a better position to oppose a landing of United States troops on China's coast.

To the north in Honan province, the Japanese also advanced, retaking the highway center of Chowchiakow, about 125 miles south and southeast of Chengchow, which is east of the Peiping-Hankow railway. West of this railway the Chinese said they had fought into the outskirts of Loyang.

In a continuing drive to clear the Peiping-Hankow railway in Honan province the Japanese from Siping took Shantsai Sunday night, the Chinese communique said.

U. S. Flyers Back Defense

A communique from Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell showed that the day Changsha fell the 14th American Air Force made repeated sweeps in support of the defenders.

One hundred supply boats on Tungting Lake were hit by Warhawks and 150 Japanese were killed. A fuel dump was set afire and 50 supply boats were damaged in a sweep of the Siang river near Changsha. Medium bombers and fighters of Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault's Chinese - American composite wing attacked shipping in the Siang river delta and destroyed four planes.

Three other Japanese planes were destroyed by Warhawks southeast of Changsha. Fighters sweeping the river from Siangyin to Chuchow sank 50 small supply boats, left 10 burning and hit a troop-carrying steamer.

CHINESE FORCES TAKE KEY POINT

JUN 21 1944

CHUNGKING, June 20. — (AP) The Chinese pressed attacks all along the northern sector of the Salween front and captured the key point of Watien only 20 miles north of the great Japanese base of Tengchung, a high command communique announced today.

Other forces gathering for an assault on Chiangtso, 21 miles northeast of Tengchung, seized the nearby towns of Linghaipu, Tapa and Tahungmushu and cleared this entire area of the enemy.

Chinese troops who withdrew east from the Burma road town of Lungling were being reorganized and re-equipped. Other Chinese units occupied part of Hsiangta, ten miles southeast of Lungling. The Monsoon-like weather lifted sufficiently to permit U. S. warplanes to return to the attack on Lungling and other areas to back up this drive designed to join forces with Allied troops moving west through Burma.

CHANGSHA FALLS TO JAP TROOPS

JUN 21 1944

DAY

Chungking, Wednesday, June 21 (A. P.).—Changsha, capital of Hunan province, has fallen to the Japanese.

The High Command announced today that the enemy occupied Changsha Sunday after Chinese forces had withdrawn.

An earlier communique said more than 50,000 Japanese troops attacking under warplane cover had destroyed the city's suburban defense works.

50,000 Japanese Destroy Suburban Defense Works

By the Associated Press.

CHUNGKING, June 20.—Indicating that Changsha has fallen, the Chinese high command said tonight the situation in the capital of Hunan Province was obscure after destruction of suburban defense works by more than 50,000 Japanese troops. Radio contact with Changsha was broken.

DAY

The Japanese attacked the suburban defenses under a cover of war planes, the high command said.

(Tokyo radio said earlier that Japanese imperial headquarters had announced the complete capture of Changsha Sunday, as well as the taking of Liling, 40 miles southeast.)

A Chinese communique announced today that Gurkha troops and Kachin levies have captured the heavily-defended Japanese stronghold at Tiangzup, 40 miles north of Myitkyina in the Fort Hertz Valley of Northern Burma, thus ending a six weeks' siege.

At the same time, the bulletin said, Chinese pushing down the Mogaung Valley about 40 miles west of Myitkyina have advanced 5 miles from captured Kamaing. Chinese troops and Maj. Gen. W. D. A. Lentaigne's Chindit forces, meanwhile, were reported continuing pressure against the enemy around Mogaung.

No important changes have taken place in the situation around Myitkyina, the bulletin added.

MOOSA

Chungking, June 20 (AP)—Vice-President Henry A. Wallace, arriving here today to confer with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, predicted that the common boundary between Russia and China would in the future be like the border between the United States and Canada.

The American Vice-President's remark received wide attention in Chungking, where the general supposition was that he would not have voiced such a view unless he had had good reason to believe that China's territorial integrity, particularly in Manchuria, would be scrupulously respected after the war. Wallace arrived here by way of Russia.

NIGHT

Subject Of Misgivings

This is a subject on which the Chinese long have held privately expressed misgivings.

Wallace, in a statement distributed at the airport upon his arrival, quoted Dr. Hu Shih, former Chinese Ambassador to the United States, as having said that the boundary between China and Siberia "should be like the frontier between United States and Canada—not one of separation but one of joining friends together."

"I believe it will be so," Wallace commented.

"And I believe," he added, "that there are great potentialities for cultural and commercial exchanges to promote the general welfare of the peoples of Asia and the North Pacific basin."

Given Personal Welcome

Chiang himself welcomed Wallace at the airport, a gesture not required by protocol. Mrs. Chiang Kai-shek also was at the airport, but remained in her car.

Traveling as the personal representative of President Roosevelt, Wallace said that he wanted to see the land, talk with farmers, visit Chinese and American soldiers and above all discuss with the generalissimo "matters of mutual interest and concern."

The Chinese officials at the airport included T. V. Soong, Foreign Minister; Gen. Hoying Chin, Minister of War, and Wang Chunghui, secretary general of the Supreme National Defense Council and a former judge of the World Court. Heads of all the diplomatic missions at Chungking were present except the Turkish Ambassador, who was ill.

Declares in Chungking That Nation's Future Lies in Central Asia

JUN 21 1944

Chungking, June 20 (A. P.).—Vice-President Wallace, visiting China as the personal representative of President Roosevelt, arrived in this war capital today and immediately advocated closer relations between China and Siberia.

In a statement distributed at the airport upon his arrival from Russian territory, he quoted Dr. Hu Shih, former Chinese Ambassador to the United States, as having said that the boundary between Siberia and China "should be like the frontier between the United States and Canada—not one of separation but one of joining friends together."

Mr. Wallace said that while in China he wanted to see the land, talk with farmers, visit Chinese and American soldiers and, above all, discuss with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek matters of mutual interest and concern.

DAY

Generalissimo Chiang welcomed Mr. Wallace at the airdrome—a high compliment not required by protocol, since the Generalissimo is the head of the State.

Mme. Chiang also was at the airdrome, but remained in a curtained motor car. Mr. Wallace, Generalissimo Chiang and United States Ambassador Clarence E. Gauss entered the car after the Vice-President had shaken hands with the assembled notables. The party drove to the presidential villa for tea. Later Mr. Wallace planned to go to the United States embassy for the night.

Mr. Wallace flew to Chungking from Tiuwa, Sinkiang. His first stopping place in China was at an intermediate landing field somewhere in Szechwan province, where he waited for several hours for visibility in the Chungking area to improve.

"I have come from Siberia, one of the newest of lands, to begin my visit in one of the oldest," Mr. Wallace's statement said. "The common boundary of these two lands sweeps along for some 5,000 miles from the Pacific to central Asia.

"Dr. Hu Shih has said that this boundary should be like the frontier between the United States and Canada—not one of separation but one of joining friends together. I believe it will be so. And I believe there are great potentialities for cultural and commercial exchanges to promote the general welfare of the peoples of Asia and the north Pacific basin.

"Entering China through Sinkiang — the 'new region' as you have named it—I have been impressed with its promise for the future. I have been similarly impressed with your northwestern provinces in which I have long been interested, and over which I flew today. In many respects this whole region is to you what our West is to us—a land of opportunity.

Urges China to Face West.

"It might be said by those living in the past that I have entered China through the back door; but I believe that developments in coming years will prove me right in saying that I have entered through the new front door—the door facing Central Asia where, as I have just been able to observe at first hand, great forward strides are being made socially and economically.

"I am happy to be in China and I begin my visit with the keenest interest. I have followed with sympathy and admiration your trials and accomplishments of the past seven years of war. Now I want to see your land and talk with your farmers.

"I want to visit with your soldiers and our soldiers who are co-operating to bring about the early defeat of Japan. Above all I look forward to the privilege of discussing matters of mutual interest and concern with your great President, Chiang Kai-shek.

DNB, the German official news agency, declared today:

"American Vice-President Wallace, suddenly changing his original plan to travel to Chungking, is now on his way to Moscow, it was learned from a reliable source. German political circles believe that there is a connection between his visit to Moscow and the desire of the United States to obtain from the Soviet Union certain naval bases for battle against Japan."

100 Gifts to China

JUN 21 1944

WASHINGTON, June 20 (AP).—Vice-President Wallace took with him to China as gifts almost 100 packages, ranging from grass seeds to the symphonic score of MacDowell's Second Indian Suite, the State Department announced today.

Other gifts were books on library science, medical films, machine shop tools for manufacturing scientific instruments and data on how to build a large refrigerator.

All the packages contained the note: "The contents of this package are sent to you under the program of cultural relations of the Department of State of the United States as a small evidence of the continuance of the long-time cultural exchanges between our two countries."

Borokoe, Sorido Fields Taken After 25-Day Drive

JUN 21 1944

Advanced Headquarters, New Guinea, Wednesday, June 21 (AP). After 25 days of heavy fighting, American jungle troops broke through Japanese resistance and captured Borokoe and Sorido airdromes on Biak Island to complete the major objective of an offensive which started May 27.

The two airstrips fell Tuesday, virtually without opposition after an enveloping attack forced enemy troops on a ridge overlooking the fields to fall back with heavy losses.

The Americans then took Sorido village, three fourths of a mile northwest of Sorido drome. There was some resistance here.

Two Fields In Use

The Allies already are using two airdromes in the Schouten islands off Dutch New Guinea—Mokmer airstrip, taken from the Japanese on Biak Island June 7 and put into operation a week later, and a new field built by the Americans on Owi Island, five miles from Biak.

The four fields eventually should provide complete air domination of Dutch New Guinea and make possible strong strikes at the Philippines, 880 miles to the northwest.

NIGHT

Borokoe, a mile inland, is three and a half miles west of Mokmer, and Sorido strip is on the beach a mile and a half west of Borokoe. A headquarters spokesman said the Japanese never were able to put Borokoe drome, a constant Allied bombing target, into use.

Bostons Sink Jap Ships

"Sordio also is in bad shape, and much work will have to be done to put the fields into operation," he added.

The spokesman also said Boston atttack planes, possibly operating from Mokmer strip, sank a 1,000-ton enemy freighter, a small coastal vessel and four bargest off Manokwari, Dutch New Guinea, on Monday. One Allied plane was shot down.

American infantrymen started their final attack on the enemy ridge positions Monday after steady pounding by artillery. For days, the spokesman said, Allied patrols had been in the vicinity of Borokoe and Sorido, but had been unable to occupy the fields because of enemy fire from the ridges.

Truk Attacked

A heavy enveloping attack forced the enemy to fall back on its left flank and permitted capture of the dromes.

Southwest Pacific planes attacked Truk in the Carolines, with 39 tons of bombs, but for the first time in many days encountered neither anti-aircraft fire nor interception.

Dutch-manned Mitchell bombers from Australia bombed Cape Chater airdrome on Timor Island for the first time since last November starting fires in dispersal areas.

Army Flyers Using Bases 880 Miles From Philippines

JUN 21 1944

By the Associated Press.

ADVANCED ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, New Guinea, June 20.—The 5th Army Air Force has moved its fighting strength forward into the still-contested Schouten Islands, only 880 miles from the Philippines, the deepest penetration into enemy holdings in the New Guinea area.

A headquarters communique today announced that an airfield has been constructed on Owi Island, captured June 2, and is in operation.

On the larger adjoining island of Biak, Mokmer airstrip was taken from the Japanese on June 7 and a week later Allied fighter planes and transports were using it. From these two fields warplanes can strike all remaining enemy bases in Northwestern Dutch New Guinea.

The communique also said American infantrymen, supported by tanks, captured an important ridge 2,500 yards north of the west end of Mokmer strip Saturday. The Yanks fought westward toward enemy-held Borokoe and Sorido airstrips.

DAY

The Americans killed 416 Japanese Saturday, bringing the enemy dead since Biak's invasion May 27 to 1,820. They also liberated 36 Javanese, former soldiers of the Netherlands Indies Army.

Liberators of the 13th Air Force dropped 55 tons of bombs on Truk, in the Carolines, Saturday, and shot down 12 of 25 intercepting Zeros, damaging 6 more. Two Liberators are missing.

7 Flyers First In Aleutians To Be Saved By Rubber Raft

BELL JUN 21 1944

With North Pacific Force, United States Fleet, June 20 (AP)—Seven young navy flyers, survivors of the first rubber-raft rescue in the Aleutian area, thanked their lucky stars today and Herbert Rowe, of Clearfield, Utah, remarked: "We proved it could be done."

He and his mates recalled that only two months ago another navy plane crew perished off Attu after waving off rescue planes which might also have foundered in the rough sea. The bodies of six, including Lieut. Newell Wyman, pilot, were recovered from two rafts by a destroyer three days later. They had died of exposure.

The new raft experience, this time with a happy ending, was also off Attu and those saved were the crew of a Ventura bomber piloted by Lieut. (j.g.) Jackson W. Clark, Kingsville, Texas.

Recalled Cold Water

DAY

Lieutenant Clark and Rowe, aviation ordnanceman third class, both remembered that the water was "damned cold."

The pilot explained that the plane, closed out from Attu by clouds, was unable to make an alternate base because of a gas shortage. There was nothing to do but come down on the sea after sending a radio appeal for aid.

The plane sank 35 miles east of Attu, but only about two miles off the shore of Agattu.

It went down about 50 seconds after hitting the water and the crew was able to release only one of two rubber rafts.

"It was only meant for four and seven of us had to crawl on it," Robert J. Marker, machinists' mate second class, Denver, Col., said. "We had a hell of a time."

Marker got the raft out and pulled the release cords. It took about five minutes for him and the others to struggle into the tiny rubber boat. They managed only because the sea was calm. Then they started paddling toward Agattu. They kept it up for about 35 minutes until sighted by a Catalina rescue plane.

"Waved And Waved"

"We waved and waved at that plane," said Richard Lansdowne, radioman second class, Dorchester, Massachusetts.

"Every time it circled over we waved. We knew they saw us but we waved anyway."

About ten minutes later a crash boat dispatched from Attu arrived and took the flyers off the overloaded raft.

"We were all numb from cold, especially our feet," Ensign John Mathers, navigator, Washington, said.

The other officer was Ensign Berwyn Miller, copilot, South Bend, Indiana.

Hoyle Simes, Tyler, Texas, said "we all knew we were going to make it."

NAVY HITS KURILES IN DAYLIGHT RAID

BELL JUN 21 1944

With the North Pacific Force, U. S. Fleet, June 14 (Delayed) (A. P.).—Navy bombers today made the first daylight raid in force against Japa's Kurile Islands since Army planes struck at Paramushiro and Shimbushu last September.

The Navy's fast planes, operating from Fleet Air Wing Four's Aleutian base, completed the bombing and reconnaissance mission. Three planes were damaged by enemy fire.

DAY

The raid was on Shimushu, most northern of the Kuriles. It came one day after a fleet task force bombarded Matsuwa Island, abuot 150 miles further down the Kuriles toward Japan.

The Venturas completed runs over the targets and then "got the hell out of there," as one copilot expressed it, ahead of Japanese fighters.

Latin-America Travel To Grow, Farley Says

JUN 21 1944

Mexico City, June 20 (AP)—The flow of United States tourists and dollars to Latin America will increase after the war, James E. Farley, former United States Postmaster General, said today in a press conference.

He said he thought the tourist habits set up during the war would continue to draw Americans to the South rather than to Europe. As for United States investments, he said the end of the war would find United States capital seeking foreign outlets and that much of this might be used to buy machinery for Latin America which "it will be difficult to obtain from England or other countries."

Senate Probe Asked On Report of Promise To Aid Britain in War

By the Associated Press.

The Senate had chalked up another wrangle on foreign policy today, with Senators Shipstead, Republican, of Minnesota and Wheeler, Democrat, of Montana proposing an investigation to determine of any war commitments had been made by President Roosevelt to Winston Churchill before the latter became Prime Minister, and Senator Connally of Texas pleading for unity and deploring "sniping behind the lines."

The debate started late yesterday, and at one point Senator and at one point Senator Wheeler said Mr. Churchill had been "permitted to use the American code, which, in my judgment, as I understand the law, is not to be used by any foreigner."

Senator Shipstead started the discussion by reading a news dispatch from London (Chicago Tribune Press Service) which said a member of Parliament had questioned why Capt. A. H. M. Ramsay, another member of Parliament, had been held in jail for years without a trial. The member suggested that the reason was the government feared disclosure of negotiations between President Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill when the latter still was First Lord of the Admiralty in the Chamberlain cabinet.

Connally Outlines Case.

During the debate Senator Connally, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, dashed out to a telephone, called the State Department and came back with what he termed the facts in the case. This was the way he outlined them:

Tyler Kent, an employe of the American Embassy in London, became involved with a group in England which included Capt. Ramsay and a Russian woman, who were alleged to be conspiring to violate British law against the defense of the realm.

Mr. Kent was alleged to have violated British law, and the British government submitted the documents in the case to the American Government, which decided he should be prosecuted under British law and which waived his diplomatic immunity.

Senator Wheeler had said Mr. Kent formerly was in the diplomatic service in Russia and had been transferred to London after becoming "very anti-Communist." He said Mr. Kent was a code clerk and was decoding messages which passed between Mr. Churchill and Mr. Chamberlain. Senator Wheeler said Mr. Kent made copies of the messages and very foolisnly showed them to a member of Parliament and to a Russian woman.

Held for Three or Four Years.

He said there was some fear that since the woman was a White Russian opposed to Communism she would pass the information along to Hitler.

Mr. Kent has been in jail for three or four years, Senator Wheeler said. He said the young man had been charged with stealing documents from the American Embassy and had been tried in a private British court, and that he had asked the State Department for an explanation for such a trial and had received no reply.

Senator Shipstead spent the better part of an hour reading excerpts from the London news dispatch which dealt with debate in Parliament as to whether Mr. Churchill had received assurances before he became Prime Minister that this country would come to Britain's rescue in the event of war.

Senator Holman, Republican, of Oregon wanted to know whether this coincided with speeches in which Mr. Roosevelt was assuring Americans they would not have to fight in foreign wars. Senator Shipstead said he thought the assurances were made earlier.

Hearsay Statements Charged.

Senator Holman said that meant that after giving the assurances, Mr. Roosevelt told the American people they would not have to fight in foreign wars.

Senator Connally jumped up to complain against what he termed another intrusion of political issues into foreign affairs. He said Senator Shipstead had been reading hearsay statements.

"Why, in the midst of war, do we have to have these slings and slurs at Churchill?" he asked. "I hold no brief for Churchill. Why do we have to have slings at President Roosevelt? I am no great defender of his his domestic policies. But I do defend his foreign policies. There is a war on and the cause is not advanced by all this."

M'Narney Says Army Will Have 5,000,000 Overseas This Year

JUN 21 1944

Washington, June 20 (A. P.).—Lieut.-Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, Deputy Chief of Staff, won't predict when the war will end. And, although this country will have an overseas fighting force of 5,000,000 men by the end of the year, "the movement will likely continue at a high rate during 1945."

Gen. McNarney's testimony before the Senate Appropriations Committee considering a House-approved $49,107,785,795 measure to finance the War Department during the fiscal year starting July 1 was made public today.

"I wish I could tell you how long it will take us to liberate Europe and to crush our foes in the Pacific," he told the Senators, "but no man can at this moment predict with accuracy the time it will take.

"I can assure you, however, that as our forces go into battle, they have every advantage which it has been humanly possible to provide. That they will win is certain. We hope that it can be done in the minimum amount of time with the minimum number of casualties, and at the minimum expense.

On Offensive Everywhere.

"We have today the greatest Army the United States has ever mobilized. It is well-trained, equipped with superior weapons, and deployed worldwide. It is now defintely on the offensive on all fronts."

Gen. McNarney said that the 3,698,000 soldiers now deployed outside the United States exceeded by more than 1,600,000 men the peak overseas strength in world war I and are only 350,000 men short of equalling the entire strength of the army at the close of the last year.

The officer testified that the army is making every effort to keep boys out of overseas infantry service until they are at least 19.

Senator Gurney (R.-D.) had remarked that "we are getting quite a kick-back" because, he said, the War Department made "a very different statement" when the draft age was reduced to 18 that youths of that age would be given at least [illegible]r's training [illegible]e being sent overseas.

Reports keep coming in, the Senator added, of boys who have been in the army only a few weeks finding themselves fighting in Italy with the result that the good faith of the War Department as well as the lawmakers is being challenged.

Gen. McNarney said that he believed an examination of the record would show that the War Department never had promised that no 18-year-olds would be used as replacements, but added:

"I have a rule in the Army Ground Forces that no young man under 19 years of age assigned to the infantry, will be sent overseas. If he is in an artillery unit or service unit that rule does not apply."

He noted that Army Service Forces get about six months' training but that they are not normally engaged in active fighting.

In some istances, he said, younger men were taken from replacement training centers and sent overseas, but that was because of enforced demands at the fronts and the fact that selective service did not call or furnish 18-year-olds for several months.

ARABIAN PIPELINE REPORTED DROPPED

JUN 21 1944

Washington, June 20 (A. P.).—Authoritative circles heard today that Secretary Ickes's proposed Arabian pipeline has been definitely abandoned as a Government project, in favor of private construction.

But a spokesman at Mr. Ickes's Petroleum Reserves Corporation, which sponsored the original plan, stated there was "nothing new to report, pending resumption of talks with the British.

As an alternative to Federal construction of the projected 1,250-mile line, it was learned, the Government will offer loans to private companies to help defray the cost, estimated at between $130,000,000 and $165,000,000.

Senator Moore (R.-Okla.), recently described the pipeline project as a dead duck but said an official announcement probably would be delayed purely as a face - saving gesture.

As now contemplated the line probably could not be built until after the war. Upon its completion this country, in co-operation with Great Britain, would supervise production, much as is now done in domestic fields. It was understood Russia would be asked to co-operate to prevent price - cutting and indiscriminate marketing.

Britain controls 55 per cent and this country the remainder of the Middle Eastern oil fields, estimated to contain a 26,000,000,000 - barrel reserve.

McLaughlin to Serve as Charge When Regime Is Recognized

WASHINGTON, June 20 (AP)—Edward D. McLaughlin, a native of Little Rock, Ark., will be in La Paz ready to take over United States business as chargé d'affaires when this country recognizes the Villarroel Government in Bolivia. Recognition is expected Friday.

State Department officials, confirming Mr. McLaughlin's appointment, said it was "routine" and added that he would have no power until the resumption of diplomatic relations was announced. He has left Washington, where he had been in the State Department's Latin-American Division.

There was no indication when an Ambassador would be named.

SUB GRAYBACK BELIEVED LOST

Vessel Reported To Have Sunk Jap Cruiser

JUN 21 1944

Washington, June 20 (AP)—The American submarine Grayback, which probably carried on her log a record of the sinking of a Japanese auxiliary cruiser and other enemy ships, is presumed lost.

The navy gave no details in announcing today that the 1,475-ton submersible is overdue from patrol. It didn't even say where her last mission was carried out.

"Extraordinary Heroism"

But her skipper, Commander John Anderson Moore, 34, Lowell, Ariz., holds a Navy Cross for "extraordinary heroism" as commander of an unidentified submarine, presumably the Grayback. It reads in part:

"He courageously and fearlessly made five separate torpedo attacks on escorted enemy ships which resulted in the sinking of an auxiliary cruiser and two freighters—totaling thousands of tons."

24 Submarines Lost

Moore and the approximately 65 officers and men of his crew all are listed as missing in action. The skipper was born at Brownwood, Texas, and his wife, Mrs. Virginia S. Moore, now lives at Memphis, Tenn.

The loss of the Grayback brings to 24 the number of submarines lost since December 7, 1941. All but three are listed as overdue, presumably lost while battering Japanese supply lines.

On the other side of the ledger, American submarines are officially credited with sinking, probably sinking or damaging 758 Japanese ships of all types including some war craft. Of the total 607 are listed as sunk.

The Grayback, built by the Electric Boat Company at Groton, Conn., was commissioned in 1941.

SEES NEW ROLE FOR FIRST LADY

Bilbo Would Make Her Queen of African Colony.

JUN 21 1944

Washington, June 20 (A. P.).—Senator Bilbo (D.-Miss.), author of legislation proposing to resettle Negroes in West Africa, told the Senate today that he might consider making Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt "queen of that Greater Liberia."

Senator Bilbo was debating an amendment to a billion dollar war agencies appropriation bill which would kill off the Fair Employment Practices Committee, created by presidential executive order to adjust disputes over racial discrimination.

Declaring that two and a half million Negroes want to return to Africa, he asserted:

"I do not claim any credit for the campaign to resettle the Negroes in West Africa. President Monroe started it, Jefferson encouraged it, Madison, Abraham Lincoln and President Grant were for it. When such a respectable party of two and one-half million persons request the Congress to give them this relief, this opportunity, and this break, I do not see why Mrs. Roosevelt or any one else should object to it.

"Of course, she did not understand my ultimate plan. If I can succeed eventually in resettling the great majority of the Negroes in West Africa, I might entertain the proposition of making her queen of that Greater Liberia."

Senate Would Advance Filipino Independence

JUN 21 1944

Washington, June 20 (AP)—Independence for the Philippines, now set for July 4, 1946, would be advanced if the commonwealth is liberated from the Japanese before that time, under a resolution adopted today by the Senate and sent to the White House.

Independence would be proclaimed by the President of the United States as quickly as possible after restoration of the ordinary democratic processes of government in the islands.

Under the plan, the United States would retain or acquire such bases as are needed for mutual protection of the Philippines and the United States. The Senate also completed action on legislation to establish a Filipino Rehabilitation Commission, consisting of nine Filipinos and nine representatives of the United States.

McKellar Proposes Bill To Tighten Censorship

Would Fine or Jail U. S. Aids Who Divulge Information

JUN 21 1944

WASHINGTON, June 20 (AP).—Kenneth McKellar, Democrat, of Tennessee, chairman of the Senate Post Office Committee, proposed legislation today which he said would tighten the censorship law and prevent "leaks" such as that which led to recent publication of private correspondence of Miss Vivian Kellems, Westport, Conn., industrialist.

He introduced an amendment which would punish with a fine of $5,000 or five years' imprisonment any government employee found guilty of divulging information in the control of or in use in the Office of Censorship.

An investigation by Senator McKellar's committee failed to trace the leak of Miss Kellems's correspondence to any individual. Censorship Director Byron Price testified he was confident the leak was not from the Office of Censorship but from some other government department to which extracts of the correspondence were sent.

TRANSPORT PLANE JUN 21 1944 BEING BUILT FOR OFFICIAL MISSIONS

WASHINGTON, June 20 — (AP) The Army has fixed up a big, four-engined transport as a de luxe, special mission plane, complete with elevator, for use of top personnel of the government in connection with military and diplomatic conferences.

Existence of the plane was formally disclosed today after reporters told the White House and the War department it was rumored that President Roosevelt was getting a special plane for his own use.

Stephen Early, presidential secretary, said the plane was not intended primarily for Mr. Roosevelt. In fact, Early said "there are no plans at all for its use by the President to my knowledge and belief."

"When the plane was being built by the Douglas company six months or so ago they announced they were building a plane with an elevator," Early added.

"If you ask the air forces about the plane they will suggest the government wanted it not for the President but for carrying government missions."

Maj. Gen. Harold L. George, commanding the air transport command, said the virtually full time need for a special mission plane prompted the ATC to have a large cargo ship modified for this purpose. As yet, he said, it has not been used by any government official.

George said the ship is a Douglas C54, Skymaster. This is a four-engined, all metal plane of about 60,000 pounds with a speed of about 275 miles an hour. It is a military adaptation of the Douglas DC-4 commercial airliner.

After President Roosevelt returned from the Teheran and Cairo conferences, it was disclosed that part of the journey was by air and that the Presidential party used three C-54's.

Prime Minister Churchill, who also went to Teheran at least in part by air, has his personal plane, a four-motored, America-built consolidated Liberator. Details of its furnishings are not a matter of record but Parliament had a brisk debate last December over the question whether Mr. Churchill needed a bathtub in it.

Defending the Prime Minister's right to bathe in mid-air, Sir Stafford Cripps, minister of aircraft production, declared:

"People concerned with the higher direction of the war require a certain degree of comfort on long distance journeys if they are to perform their duties properly."

Reconversion Bill Compromise Fixed

JUN 21 1944

Washington, June 20 (AP)—A Senate-House committee agreed tonight on a compromise version of a bill setting up machinery for termination of billons in war contracts.

Upon ratification by Senate and House, the measure will go to the White House as the first specific measure recommended by post-war planners as a means of easing the economic transition from war to peace.

Under the measure, a person having a war contract can reach an agreement with the contracting Government agency, and the agreement will be final.

Methods Of Appeal

But if he is dissatisfied with the amount for which the Government wants to settle, he can take his case to an appeals board. And he can carry an appeal beyond the board to the Court of Claims—provided he will pay the costs of the court action if he does not win an increase.

Senator Murray (D., Mont.), chairman of the Senate conferees, told reporters that the bill provides for the contractor:

"A speedy method by which he will be able to get his money out of the contract, at the same time fully safeguarding the Government from the danger of fraud through action of the General Accounting Office and the Attorney General."

Provisions Against Fraud

Whenever the General Accounting Office has reason to believe there is fraud involved, Murray said, it will so certify to the Attorney General, the Justice Department will enter, and payments to the contractor may be withheld.

If a claim turned out to be fraudulent, the claimant would be subject to a penalty of 25 per cent. of the amount he sought.

Murray said the compromise would be presented to the Senate tomorrow and then go to the House.

The bill would create an Office of Contract Settlement headed by a $12,000-a-year director. He would be assisted by an advisory board made up of representatives of Government contracting agencies.

Provides Interim Financing

The termination bill establishes a governmental policy of providing "interim financing" to a war contractor pending settlement of his claim. This would enable the contractor to get:

An amount equal to 100 per cent. of the contract price of items finished prior to the termination date or finished after that date with the approval of the contracting agency.

The equivalent of 90 per cent. of the cost of raw materials, parts, supplies, labor and overhead allowable to the unfinished portion of the contract.

A reasonable percentage of such other allowable costs as administrative overhead.

Any additional amounts the agency may consider necessary for adequate interim financing.

CONFEREES REACH COMPROMISE ON OPA AMENDMENT

JUN 21 1944

WASHINGTON, June 20 — (AP) With the White House intervening to break a deadlock, Senate and House conferees reached a compromise late today on the Bankhead amendment to adjust cotton textile ceilings in the price control extension bill.

The Administration agreed to a requirement that ceilings on "major" textile items be revised to reflect a parity price for raw cotton. Eliminated from the original Bankhead proposal was a requirement that the ceilings guarantee manufacturing costs plus a profit to millers.

Byrnes Takes Lead

James F. Byrnes, war mobilization director, was said by members of the conference committee to have taken the lead in the move that brought about the compromise. The conference committee bill representing a merger of conflicting measures passed by Senate and House, is scheduled to go to the Senate first and then the House for concurrence tomorrow.

Henry M. Hart, associated general counsel for the OPA, said the effect of the compromise cotton amendment might be to raise ceilings on some textile items but that "we don't think the increases will be serious." He said any possible inflationary effect had been removed.

Representative Wolcott (R-Mich) said the parity price guarantee likely would mean increases in textiles that go into low-priced clothing.

The White House intervention obviously was aimed to preventing a congressional stalemate over the extension bill. President Roosevelt had called the original Bankhead proposal inflationary and Administration congressmen had predicted a veto if it appeared in the bill as finally passed.

Parity Prices Assured

In addition to requiring item-by-item pricing of cotton textiles to reflect parity, the revised amendment directs the President, acting through any department or agency of the government, to "take all lawful action" to assure farmers of parity prices on all the basic agricultural commodities—cotton, corn, wheat, rice, tobacco and peanuts. It does not specify the steps he may take.

Mr. Wolcott said that under the general farm parity provision of the legislation withheld from processors who fail to pay for farm products at that level.

(Parity is a price figured to give farm commodities a purchasing power equal to that of a base period, usually 1909-14.)

Rhea Blake, Memphis, Tenn., executive vice-president of the National Cotton council which backed the original Bankhead amendment, said the compromise was "satisfactory" to the council.

Mr. Blake said that it requires OPA to fix ceilings on an item-by-item basis. Under the present practice, OPA has refused to raise ceilings if a mill's earnings, taken as a whole, were considered adequate.

Mr. Hart said the definition "major item" would cover probably 75 per cent of all textile items.

Senator Wagner (D.-N. Y.) said the bill as reported out after four days of conferences — including a five-hour night session last night—would "preserve price control, in my opinion" and that he expected it would be signed by the President.

Mr. Wolcott said he thought the bill would "eliminate 80 per cent of the criticism of OPA" by liberalizing procedure as to protests against OPA regulations.

Senate Votes Appropriation To FEPC in Heated Debate

JUN 21 1944

WASHINGTON, June 20 — (AP) Disregarding embittered southern assertions that the United States is being pushed into Communism or National Socialism, the Senate declined on a 39 to 21 rollcall today to kill the President's Fair Employment Practices committee.

The vote was on a $500,000 appropriation for the FEPC in a $1,030,000,000 War Agencies Supply bill.

Southerners Oppose Fund

Thirteen southern Senators who opposed the fund were supported by seven Republicans and one western Democrat, Johnson of Colorado, but 16 Republicans joined with 23 Democrats to override their objections. Senator Pepper of Florida was the only Democrat from the deep South who voted with the majority.

The FEPC was set up by President Roosevelt's executive order and was instructed to combat racial and religious discrimination in industry.

The Southerners salvaged only a few minor concessions—war contractors whose contracts were threatened with cancellation because of alleged discrimination would have the right to appeal to the President, and a prohibition was erected against government seizure of any plant for its refusal to conform to rules set up by FEPC.

Southerner after southerner took the floor to castigate the agency as tending to stir up trouble rather than to alleviate friction between the races. White-haired Senator George (D.-Ga.), face flushed, thundered that by approving the FEPC fund, the nation would be taking "a long step toward converting our economic system into a Communistic or National Socialistic system."

Turning toward the Republican side of the chamber, George declared "this may get you votes in 1944, but it won't in 1946, or 1948, or thereafter." The final aim of the persons backing FEPC, he declared, is taking away the control of private property from the owners.

Debate Unrestrained

Before a crowded gallery, the debate was unrestrained.

Senator McClellan (D.-Ark.) declared:

"When white and negro women are compelled to sit side by side at their work, use the same toilet facilities, eat at the same table, it is an encroachment on the constitutional rights of both races, if either wants to be segregated from the other!"

At that point Senator Eastland (D.-Miss.) arose to shout:

"Isn't it even worse for decent white girls to have to take dictation from a lot of burr-headed niggers in the departments?"

The debate even brought a suggestion that Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt become "queen of that greater Liberia."

Senator Bilbo (D.-Miss.), for years an advocate of resettling American negroes in West Africa, said two and a half million negroes had seconded his idea and added "I do not see why Mrs. Roosevelt or anyone else should object to it."

In fact, Bilbo said, if his resettlement plan ever succeeded, "I might entertain the proposition of making her queen of that greater Liberia."

The main argument of the Southerners was that FEPC was aiming for social equality rather than against economic discrimination.

Supporting the FEPC, Senator Lucas (D.-Ill.) said:

"Job discrimination is indefensible when manpower bottlenecks are impeding the war effort."

ONE MONTH OF WHISKY MAKING O.K.'D

WPB Authorizes August Holiday — Easing Of Drought Forecast

JUN 21 1944

Washington, June 20 (AP)—One month of whisky making, on a basis that could provide more than one fourth of a normal year's output, was authorized for domestic distillers today by the War Production Board.

The liquor will be made during August, and spokesmen for the trade said the holiday from industrial alcohol production should ease the greatest liquor drought since prohibition. It was pointed out that liquor firms may bring more aged whisky out of storage, replacing it with the new product, and that some of the new liquor itself may go quickly on to retail store shelves in blended beverages.

Estimated Output

The easing of the industrial alcohol situation was given as the reason for the temporary return to beverage making, which had been agitated by the trade and by some segments of Congress.

Donald Nelson, chairman of WPB, said between 20 and 25 million gallons of 190-proof alcohol can be allowed for beverage use. That is about one fourth the amount used for whisky in normal years. It would come out in beverage forms as 40 to 50 million gallons of whisky running from 86 to 90 proof, less leakage and processing losses. The WPB figured a normal year's output at 150,000,000 gallons.

Nelson took the action after he was advised by Bradley Dewey, rubber director, that the requirements of the rubber program for industrial alcohol will be about 20,000,000 gallons less than was estimated for 1944 and some 30,000,000 gallons less than estimated for 1945.

Alcohol Needs For War

Requirements for industrial alcohol for all war purposes are now estimated at 614,000,000 gallons. New supply is estimated at 612,000,000 gallons and Government stocks of alcohol are approximately 80,000,000 gallons.

The distilling industry was converted to the manufacture of industrial alcohol October 8, 1942, and since has made no alcohol for beverage purposes. The WPB previously has rejected two industry pleas for a "holiday" for resumption of whisky making.

An alcohol trade representative estimated that the release today might enable distillers to put additional whisky on the market during August. He said present whisky stocks are about 362,000,000 gallons and that additional quantities of this reserve probably would be released early in the month because of today's action.

Was Considering Report

A WPB official said there probably would be no difficulty in obtaining grain supplies for the resumption of whisky making.

Nelson's announcement came at a time when the Senate's special liquor-shortage investigating committee was considering a report drafted by Senator McCarran (D., Nev.), chairman, calling upon the Government to make industrial alcohol available for whisky manufacture.

Republican Convention To Study Mackinac Stand

Subcommittee Backs Statement on Foreign Policy

WASHINGTON, June 20 (AP).—A terse, streamlined version of the foreign-policy declaration worked out by Republican leaders at Mackinac Island, Mich., last September will be presented to the party's resolutionse committee at Chicago Friday with the unanimous backing of a six-member subcommittee.

The Mackinac declaration called for "responsible participation by the United States in post-war cooperative organization among sovereign nations to prevent military aggression and to attain permanent peace with organized justice in a free world."

Senator Arthur H. Vanderberg, Republican, of Michigan, who said the party plank had the full indorsement of the subcommittee, declined to make public the text of the revamped proposal before it is submitted to the platform-writing group at Chicago.

Since Senator Vandenberg was one of the principal framers of the declaration at Mackinac, however, it appeared unlikely there would be any major change in the text, except to boil it down for compaign purposes.

"It will cover one page instead of three or four," Senator Vandenburg said.

The committee includes Senator Vandenberg, Senator Warren R. Austin, of Vermont; Representative Charles A. Eaton, of New Jersey; Representaive Frances P. Bolton, of Ohio; Governor Dwight H. Green, of Illinois, and Governor Edward Martin, of Pennsylvania.

Senator Vanderberg will fly to Chicago Thursday night to present the plank to the resolutions groups.

Negotiations for Peruvian Debt Payment Halted

JUN 21 1944

By the Associated Press

NEW YORK, June 20.—Negotiations between the Peruvian government and representatives of the Foreign Bondholders' Protective Council looking toward resumption of service of Peru's dollar bond debt have been temporarily suspended because of wide differences of opinion held by the conferees. Negotiations will be resumed early in the fall.

A statement by the council said the South American nation conceded responsibility for the debt, was prosperous and eager to maintain close fraternal ties with the United States and wanted to assist in the war effort, but "insists that her margin of trade and exchange is too small to justify payment of any amount on either interest or principal."

ANTI-NEW DEAL MOVE PUSHED

JUN 21 1944

American Democratic Group May Call Convention

Chicago, June 20 (AP)—The American Democratic National Committee, a group opposed to a fourth term, decided today to call a convention of "all anti-New Deal organizations" if the Democratic party renominates President Roosevelt.

The committee, concluding a two-day caucus, approved a resolution saying: "If the Democratic National Convention renominates the President for a fourth term or nominates a New Dealer, we recommend that the executive committee call a convention of all anti-New Deal organizations to be held as soon as practicable after the major-party conventions."

Express Opposition

Earlier, after a closed meeting, William J. Goodwin, of New York, treasurer of the organization, announced a resolution had been approved calling upon the Republicans to form a coalition ticket topped by men like Republican Governor John W. Bricker of Ohio and Democratic Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia.

The pronouncement was brought up in an open session three hours later, and it was killed after a lengthy debate. Goodwin and Ralph W. Moore, of Texas, led the fight for the proposal on grounds that it would represent a "concrete" and "workable" course of action.

But opposition was expressed by John J. O'Connor, former New York Congressman; John Regan, of Minnesota, and others, who contended efforts against a fourth term should be exerted first at the Democratic convention.

The committee appealed to "all lovers of liberty regardless of previous party affiliation to unite with us."

Would Limit Tenure

The conferees favored a constitutional amendment limiting Presidential tenure to a maximum of eight years and took a stand against "entangling alliances or international commitments such as setting up a world police force capable of involving us in future wars without the consent of Congress."

Other resolutions adopted called for a "drastic reduction of unnecessary Government expenditures," and "condemned" the Administration for "by-passing the courts and substituting bayonet rule for the orderly processes of law," and for "substituting for the law the directives of the executives."

The committee maintained that "labor's gains shall not be lost either through racketeering or Communistic leadership of labor on the one hand, or a return to the exploitation of labor by capital on the other."

UNDATED VIIPURI (330)
BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS JUN 21 1944

WAR-GOUGED VIIPURI, THE STRATEGIC KARELIAN STRONGHOLD, HAS FALLEN FOR THE THIRD TIME IN FOUR YEARS OF CONFLICT, WITH A RUSSIAN ARMY AGAIN MAKING TRIUMPHAL ENTRY BEHIND SHATTERING ARTILLERY FIRE.

SOVIET TROOPS CAPTURED IT MARCH 13, 1940, IN THE FINAL HOURS OF THE 105-DAY RUSSIAN-FINNISH WAR, BUT WERE EXPELLED BY THE FINNS ON AUG. 30, 1941, WHEN FINLAND SOUGHT HER LOST TERRITORIES WHILE THE GERMANS THRUST INTO RUSSIA.

VIIPURI IN THE DAYS OF PEACE IN 1939 WAS FINLAND'S SECOND LARGEST CITY, A MODERN TOWN OF 84,000 POPULATION AND MANY STONE BUILDINGS IN CONTRAST TO WOODEN STRUCTURES SO PREVALENT IN FINLAND. THE DESTRUCTION OF THREE CAMPAIGNS HAS LEVELLED MUCH OF THE CITY.

ON THE KARELIAN ISTHMUS 75 MILES FROM LENINGRAD, VIIPURI WAS FOUNDED BY THE SWEDES IN THE 13TH CENTURY AS AN OUTPOST AGAINST ENEMIES STRIKING FROM THE EAST, AND WAR, FAMINE AND DEATH RODE AGAIN AND AGAIN THROUGH VIIPURI AND KARELIA IN BATTLES AND SIEGES

THROUGH THE BLOODY CENTURIES.

BY THE 16TH CENTURY IT HAD BECOME ONE OF EUROPE'S STRONGEST FORTIFIED WALLED TOWNS. IT WAS CEDED TO THE RUSSIANS IN 1721, AND SOME TWO CENTURIES LATER WAS WON BY "WHITE" FORCES IN THE FINNISH CIVIL WAR FOLLOWING THE RUSSIAN REVOLUTION. IT BECAME AN IMPORTANT CITY IN THE REPUBLIC OF FINLAND FORMED IN 1919.

SOME OF THE BITTEREST, BLOODIEST FIGHTING OF THE RUSSIAN-FINNISH WAR RAGED NEAR VIIPURI. SIEGE WAS LAID TO THE CITY, AND THE SOVIETS DECLARED VIIPURI WAS CAPTURED JUST BEFORE THE ARMISTICE WAS SIGNED ON MARCH 13, 1941. IN THE PEACE SETTLEMENT, THE RUSSIANS RETAINED VIIPURI, THE KARELIAN ISTHMUS, AND ISLANDS IN VIIPURI BAY.

IT WAS HEAVILY DAMAGED IN THAT FIGHTING, AND AGAIN BEFORE THE FINNS RECAPTURED IT NEARLY A YEAR AND A HALF LATER. RESIDENTS WHO LEFT THE CITY BEFORE AND AFTER RUSSIAN OCCUPATION FLOCKED BACK.

IN PEACETIME, VIIPURI WAS EASTERN FINLAND'S MAIN INDUSTRIAL COMMERCIAL, AND DISTRIBUTION CENTER, AND A HUB OF COMMUNICATIONS. IT WAS FINLAND'S BUSIEST TIMBER-EXPORT CENTER, AND HAD MACHINE SHOPS, FLOUR MILLS, AND SOAP AND TOBACCO FACTORIES. IT ALSO WAS THE CHIEF MUSICAL AND ARTISTIC CENTER OF KARELIA.

LONDON, JUNE 20-(AP)-FRENCH UNDERGROUND SOURCES SAID TODAY THAT WHEN THE GERMANS COMBED PARIS AND HAULED HUNDREDS OF FRENCHMEN TO CONCENTRATION CAMPS ON D-DAY, THEY DISCOVERED TOO LATE THAT THEY HAD ROUNDED UP THE MOST LOYAL VICHYITES INSTEAD OF PERSONS WITH ALLIED SYMPATHIES.

AT THE LAST MOMENT, UNDERGROUND LEADERS SUCCEEDED IN SWITCHING THEIR OWN FILE OF GERMAN COLLABORATIONISTS FOR THE GERMANS' LIST OF SUSPECTS, THESE SOURCES SAID.

THE OFFICIAL NAZI BULLETIN MADE NO MENTION OF THE ALLIED SEAL-OFF OF CHERBOURG.

IT DECLARED STRONG ALLIED INFANTRY AND TANK BLOWS BETWEEN TILLY-SUR-SEULLES AND CAUMONT ALONG THE CENTRAL SECTOR IN NORMANDY WERE "FRUSTRATED," WITH ONE ALLIED BATTALION "COMPLETELY SMASHED."

THERE WAS NO ALLIED CONFIRMATION.

ONE BERLIN BROADCAST SAID NAZI COASTAL BATTERIES ON CHERBOURG PENINSULA "DIRECTED A HEAVY HARASSING FIRE ON ENEMY SUPPLY ROADS SOUTH OF CHERBOURG."

RADIO ACCOUNTS INTIMATED THE GERMAN GARRISON AT CHERBOURG WAS READY FOR A PROLONGED SIEGE.

THE BERLIN RADIO QUOTED ADOLF HITLER'S OWN NEWSPAPER, THE VOELKISCHER BEOBACHTER, AS SAYING THAT AMERICAN FORCES PUSHING ACROSS THE COTENTIN PENINSULA HAD "INTERRUPTED LAND COMMUNICATIONS BETWEEN CHERBOURG AND THE INTERIOR OF FRANCE."

"THEY HAVE UNDENIABLY SCORED A PARTIAL SUCCESS WHICH WE DO NOT WANT TO MINIMIZE," THE PAPER ADDED.

IN AN EARLIER BERLIN BROADCAST, THE NAZI TRANSOCEAN NEWS AGENCY SAID:

"IF THE AMERICANS PENETRATE FURTHER TOWARD THE NORTH THEY WILL GET INTO THE RANGE OF THE HEAVY FORTIFICATIONS OF CHERBOURG. ONE SHOULD NOT FORGET THAT THE FRENCH HAD FORTIFIED THE HARBOR ALSO FROM THE LAND SIDE. THE GERMANS AFTERWARD EXTENDED THESE FORTIFICATIONS."

LONDON, JUNE 20-(AP)-CAPT. OLIVER LYTTELTON, BRITISH MINISTER OF WAR PRODUCTION, TOLD THE AMERICAN CHAMBER OF COMMERCE OF LONDON TODAY THAT AMERICAN AND BRITISH RECIPROCAL LEND LEASE PROGRAMS WERE THE KEY FACTORS WHICH MADE POSSIBLE THE INVASION.

AN INTERPOLATION IN HIS PREPARED ADDRESS WAS TAKEN BY SOME OF THOSE PRESENT AS IMPLYING THAT JAPAN WAS FORCED TO MAKE WAR ON THE UNITED STATES, AND WHEN ASKED FOR CLARIFICATION LYTTELTON MADE THIS ADDITION TO HIS TEXT:

"I WISH TO MAKE THE POINT THAT THE AMERICANS DID NOT WAIT UNTIL THEY HAD ENTERED THE WAR BEFORE SHOWING WHERE THEIR SYMPATHIES LAY, AND THE AID WHICH THEY GAVE TO BRITAIN WILL ALWAYS BE REMEMBERED WITH THE LIVELIEST SENSE OF GRATITUDE

"THIS AID WAS, OF COURSE, DIRECTED TO THE WAR AGAINST GERMANY AND COULD NOT HAVE BEEN REGARDED AS A PROVOCATION BY A PEACE-MINDED JAPAN. BUT THE JAPANESE AGGRESSOR CHOSE TO REGARD IT AS A PROVOCATION AND MADE THE UNJUSTIFIED AND TREACHEROUS ATTACK AT PEARL HARBOR."

REFERRING TO CHARGES THAT THE BRITISH ARE SELLING LEND-LEASE GOODS O THIRD COUNTRIES, LYTTLETON DECLARED THAT EVERY POSSIBLE PRECAUTION S BEING TAKEN TO PREVENT ANYTHING OF THE KIND HAPPENING.

HE SAID THAT AMERICAN LEND-LEASE AMOUNTED TO FOUR BILLION DOLLARS IN 1943, AND THAT BRITISH REVERSE LEND-LEASE HAS AMOUNTED TO TWO BILLION DOLLARS TO DATE. HE SAID THAT AMERICA IS SUPPLYING 25 PER CENT OF ENGLAND'S MUNITIONS AND THAT THE FOUR BILLION DOLLARS WAS EXCLUSIVE OF SUPPLIES TO OTHER PARTS OF THE WORLD FOR USE BY BRITISH FORCES.

BRITISH LEND-LEASE TO THE UNITED STATES IS NOW RUNNING AT MORE THAN TWICE THE RATE THAN AT THE BEGINNING OF 1943, HE SAID.

AMERICAN FORCES IN THE UNITED KINGDOM HAVE RECEIVED USE OF BARRACKS, AIRPORTS AND OTHER MILITARY FACILITIES, AND ONE-THIRD OF ALL THEIR CURRENT REQUIREMENTS OF MILITARY SUPPLIES, LYTTLETON ASSERTED. HE SAID THAT BRITISH AID ALSO CONSISTED OF THE CONSTRUCTION OF 100 AIRDROMES, THE TURNING OVER OF A LARGE NUMBER OF AIRCRAFT INCLUDING 500 GLIDERS AND MANY SQUADRONS OF SPITFIRES AND SUPPLYING AMERICAN FORCES WITH ONE-FIFTH OF THEIR FOOD.

AN IMPORTANT PHASE OF BRITISH AID TO AMERICANS, HE SAID, WAS MAKING AVAILABLE AS TROOP TRANSPORTS THE GREAT LINERS QUEEN ELIZABETH AND QUEEN MARY.

LYTTLETON SAID OTHER ITEMS OF BRITISH AID INCLUDED THE 90-GALLON BELLY FUEL TANK THAT ENABLED THUNDERBOLTS TO ESCORT BOMBERS OVER BERLIN AND OTHER LONG-DISTANCE TARGETS; TURNING OVER TO THE U.S. NAVY RESULTS OF BRITISH RESEARCH IN SUBMARINE DETECTION AND THE TURNING OVER DETAILS OF THE ROLLS ROYCE MERLIN AND WHITTLE ENGINES WHICH ARE BEING MADE IN THE UNITED STATES.

LYTTLETON SAID THAT THE EMERGENCE OF MUSTANGS AS AN OUTSTANDING FIGHTER PLANE WAS LARGELY DUE TO BRITISH INITIATIVE IN ITS DESIGN AND THE MERLIN ENGINE. HE ADDED THAT THE UNITED STATES HAD BEEN GIVEN DATA ON A NEW SIGHT WHICH PROMISES TO BE THE MOST OUTSTANDING GUNSIGHT YET DEVISED, AND THAT IT WILL GO INTO LARGE-SCALE MANUFACTURE IN THE UNITED STATES PRACTICALLY IN ITS BRITISH FORM.

THE WAR MINISTER ALSO POINTED TO BRITISH RESEARCH IN ROCKET WEAPONS TURNED OVER TO UNITED STATES EXPERTS AS A PART OF THE BRITISH AID TO AMERICA. HE SAID THAT AMERICAN ROCKETS BASED ON BRITISH DESIGN ARE NOW BEING USED WITH GREAT EFFECT BY AMERICAN FORCES IN THE PACIFIC.

LYTTLETON CONCLUDED HIS SPEECH WITH A TRIBUTE TO GEN.EISENHOWER.

"THERE IS NO ONE TO WHOM I HAVE TALKED IN THE BRITISH ARMED FORCES WHO HAS BEEN UNDER THE COMMAND OF GEN.EISENHOWER WHO HAS NOT THE GREATEST REGARD AND AFFECTION FOR HIM," HE SAID.

JUN 21 1944

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, JUNE 20-(AP)-WITH TWO WEEKS OF THE WESTERN FRONT OPERATIONS NOW HISTORY, MOST TOP ALLIED MILITARY MEN FEEL THAT LATE FALL OR EARLY WINTER OF THIS YEAR--RATHER THAN THE END OF SUMMER AS PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL HINTED--MAY SEE THE COLLAPSE OF GERMANY.

THE OPENING OF THE SECOND FRONT HAS BEEN EASIER THAN EXPECTED IN MANY RESPECTS. AND THE GERMANS HAVE SHOWN SOME SURPRISING WEAKNESSES, BUT THE TWO WEEKS OF WARFARE INDICATE HITLER IS TAKING A "LONG VIEW" OF THE WAR AND THAT GERMANY IS CAPABLE OF A BIGGER EFFORT THAN SHOWN THUS FAR.

TWO FACTORS HAVE SHOWN THAT THE GERMANS EXPECT TO FIGHT ON THE CONTINENT FOR SOME TIME AND ARE PREPARED TO DO SO. ONE HAS BEEN THE FAILURE TO COMMIT THE LUFTWAFFE IN A DO-OR-DIE ATTEMPT TO HALT THE INVASION. THE SECOND IS THE "CONSERVATIVE" BATTLE BEING WAGED BY THE GERMAN ARMIES WHICH DESPITE A SERIES OF COUNTERATTWCKS HAVE NOT MADE AN ALL-OUT EFFORT TO DRIVE THE ALLIES INTO THE SEA.

A LARGE PROPORTION OF THE LUFTWAFFE HAS BEEN KEPT BACK TO PROTECT THE HOMELAND FROM ALLIED HEAVY BOMBER RAIDS. THE GERMANS THUS HAVE SHOWN THEY DO NOT FEEL THAT THE TIME HAS COME TO MAKE THE GREATEST DRIVE TO WIN A STALEMATE IN THE WAR BY HURLING THE ALLIES INTO THE SEA.

THE SAME SITUATION HAS BEEN TRUE TO A CERTAIN EXTENT ON THE GROUND, ALTHOUGH FEAR OF NEW ALLIED LANDINGS HAS KEPT THE GERMANS FROM COMMITTING TOO MUCH OF THEIR STRENGTH IN NORMANDY. NOT MANY FIRST CLASS GERMAN DIVISIONS IN THE WEST NOW ARE IN THE BATTLE.

BAD WEATHER HAS NOT ALLOWED THE ALLIES THE DECISIVE EDGE IN SUPPLIES TO BE LANDED WHICH MEANS A QUICK START FOR AN ALL-OUT DRIVE.

LT.GEN.OMAR N.BRADLEY, COMMANDER OF U.S. GROUND TROOPS, WAS THE FIRST TO GET HIS OFFENSIVE ROLLING AND THE AMERICANS' SERIES OF HAMMERING ATTACKS ARE ON THE VERGE OF GIVING THE ALLIES THE PORT OF CHERBOURG.

THERE IS NO DOUBT TOO THAT GEN.SIR BERNARD L.MONTGOMERY, COMMANDER OF ALLIED GROUND FORCES, IS BUILDING UP AN OVERWHELMING BRITISH ATTACK.

LAND GAINS EVEN ON A LARGE-SCALE ARE UNLIKELQ TO HAVE A DECIDED EFFECT ON A QUICK ENDING OF THE WAR. THE MAIN FACTOR IN A QUICK FINISH IS THE DESTRUCTION OF THE GERMAN ARMY'S ABILITY TO FIGHT AND MEANS KILLING ENOUGH GERMANS TO WIPE OUT STRATEGICAL AND TACTICAL RESERVES AND LEAVE ONLY A SHELL OF A FORCE.

HOW LONG THIS WILL TAKE IS ANYONE'S GUESS, BUT IT MIGHT COME OVERNIGHT IF THE ALLIES WIN A SERIES OF BATTLES. THE DEFEAT OF GERMANY MIGHT COME LONG BEFORE THE BORDERS OF THE REICH ARE REACHED BY ALLIED TROOPS SHOULD ALLIED TROOPS CATCH AND DESTROY FIELD MARSHAL ERWIN ROMMEL'S 15TH AND 7TH ARMIES IN THE SAME MANNER THE NAZI 14TH ARMY WAS DESTROYED IN ITALY, SINCE GERMANY'S MANPOWER SITUATION CAN NO LONGER MAKE UP OR STAND SUCH LOSSES.

ON THE OTHER HAND IF THE GERMANS FIGHT STUBBORN REARGUARD ACTION OVER FRANCE, BELGIUM AND HOLLAND, NEVER ENGAGING IN A GREAT DECISIVE BATTLE, THE WAR MIGHT DRAG ON FOR MONTHS. ROMMEL MIGHT WELL BE AUSIGNED SUCH A TASK.

THE GERMAN PLAN MAY COME TO LIGHT IN THE NEXT TWO WEEKS. THE GERMANS ARE LIKELY TO MAKE AT LEAST ONE BIG BID TO CRACK THE ALLIED BEACHHEAD, EVEN IF MONTGOMERY DECIDES TO HOLD BACK A WHILE LONGER, WHICH IS UNLIKELY.

WITH AMERICAN FORCES ON THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA, JUNE 20--

COURIERS RETURNING FROM OUR FORWARD PATROLS ADVANCING ON CHERBOURG TOLD ME THIS MORNING THAT DURING THE NIGHT OUR ADVANCE UNITS HAD REACHED POINTS WITHIN FIVE MILES OF CHERBOURG ITSELF.

ALL NIGHT LONG AMERICAN SHELLS LANDED WITHIN THE BIG FRENCH ATLANTIC PORT, GIVING THE GERMANS NO TIME TO REST OR WITHDRAW. OUR TROOPS PUSHED AHEAD THROUGH THE RAIN LAST NIGHT, BY-PASSING POCKETS OF GERMAN RESISTANCE AND MEETING WITH HARRASSING FIRE FROM GERMAN SNIPERS.

OUR FARTHEST ADVANCE TOWARD CHERBOURG HAS COME ON THE WESTERN SIDE OF THE PENINSULA. BY QUICKLY PASSING DIVISIONS THROUGH OUR OTHER AMERICAN UNITS THAT HAVE FORCED THEIR WAY ACROSS THE NECK OF THE PENINSULA, WE CAUGHT THE GERMANS OFF BALANCE.

PRISONERS SAY THAT WE CAUSED A CERTAIN AMOUNT OF DEMORALIZATION IN THE GERMAN RANKS, ACCOUNTING FOR THE RELATIVELY LARGE NUMBER OF PRISONERS WE TOOK YESTERDAY AND DURING THE NIGHT.

IN ALL MY TRIPS TO THE FRONT I'VE NEVER SEEN A SINGLE AMERICAN TRUCK OUT OF ACTION FOR MECHANICAL REASONS. OUR MILITARY POLICE--ALL PROVIDED WITH EXTENSIVE MAPS OF THEIR AREA--DO WONDERS RE-ROUTING OUR SUPPLY TRUCKS THROUGH THE NARROW WOODED LANES AND AVOIDING TRAFFIC SNARLS.

AS EACH AMERICAN COMMAND POST MOVED FORWARD TO KEEP IN TOUCH WITH ITS ADVANCING TROOPS, OUR TELEPHONE LINESMEN WORK INCESSANTLY TAKING DOWN THE WIRES AND STRINGING THEM OUT ANEW TO THE MOST ADVANCED POSITION.

ONE OF THE FAVORITE JOKES OF THE AMERICAN SIGNAL CORPS LINESMEN IS TO CALL DOWN SCORNFULLY FROM THE TOPS OF THE TALLEST TREES AND TELEGRAPH POLES AT OUR INFANTRY TRUDGING AHEAD ON DUSTY ROADS. THEY WISE-CRACK: "KEEP YOUR HEAD DOWN, BOYS, THERE ARE GERMAN SNIPERS AROUND." THE HEAVILY-LOADED INFANTRY JUST LOOK UP WEARILY AND SHEEPISHLY AT THE LINESMEN OUTLINED-AGAINST THE SKY AND GIVE THEM AN APPRECIATIVE GRIN.

INCIDENTALLY, THERE'S JUST ONE THING MOST OF US WOULD LIKE TO HAVE EVEN MORE THAN A CHANGE OF CLOTHES, AND THAT'S A CHANCE AND PLACE TO TAKE A BATH. MOST OF THE BOYS WHO HAVE BEEN FIGHTING ON THE PENINSULAR HAVE NOT HAD THEIR BOOTS OFF SINCE WE LANDED TWO WEEKS AGO.

HEADQUARTERS 21ST ARMY GROUP, JUNE 20-(AP)-"ALLIED" MEANS JUST THAT AT THIS HEADQUARTERS--ALLIED ALL THE WAY. THAT IS THIS CORRESPONDENT'S CONCLUSION AFTER 11 DAYS HERE.

ELVEN DAYS WHERE ANYONE COULD SEE THE DEVELOPING COMRADESHIP IN ARMS, AS EFFECTIVE AS IT IS UNSENTIMENTAL, AND THE GREATEST HOPE FOR AN EARLY END OF THE WAR THAT EXISTS SHORT OF OUR ACTUAL SUCCESSES ALONG THE BATTLE LINE.

THERE IS PLENTY OF GOOD OLD SOUND NATIONAL FEELING HERE IN THE RIGHT SENSE, BUT I HAVE NOT IN NEARLY TWO WEEKS EVER SEEN ANY CASE OF PAROCHIAL JEALOUSY OR ANY EFFORT AT PERSONAL OR NATIONAL CREDIT GRABBING AMONG THE MANY AMERICAN, BRITISH AND CANADIAN OFFICERS WHO MOVE IN AND OUT OF HERE ON THEIR JOBS.

THIS ILLUSTRATES HOW THE BUSINESS--THE BUSINESS OF WAR--GOES ON. HERE, AS EVERYBODY KNOWS, IT IS THE AMERICANS WHO HAVE BEEN MAKING THE GREATEST AND MOST SIGNIFICANT GAINS IN FRANCE AND TODAY IN THE DAILY "BRIEFING" GIVEN THE CORRESPONDENTS THE QUESTIONS ASKED NATURALLY WERE NEARLY ALL ABOUT THE AMERICANS.

OUR BRIEFER TODAY WAS A SENIOR AMERICAN OFFICER, A BLUNT AND RUGGED MID-WESTERNER, BUT TO THESE QUESTIONS HE DELIVERED THIS ANSWER:

"THIS IS ALLIED. THERE IS NO MERIT IN SPLITTING IT UP BETWEEN AMERICANS HERE, BRITISH THERE, AND CANADIANS THERE."

HE CITED HOW THE BRITISH AND CANADIANS BY BEATING TIRELESSLY AT LARGE CONCENTRATIONS OF GERMAN ARMOR TO THE EAST HAD HELPED MATERIALLY IN THE AMERICAN ADVANCE TOWARD CHERBOURG. EVERY REFERENCE HE MADE WAS TO ALLIED TROOPS.

WHEN HE FINISHED A SENIOR CANADIAN OFFICER ADDRESSED US. HE REMARKED THAT CANADA'S ARMY OVERSEAS WAS TRAINED TO FIT IN WISELY AND WELL WITH AMERICAN TROOPS AND AMERICAN EQUIPMENT OR WITH BRITISH TROOPS AND BRITISH EQUIPMENT AS MILITARY NECESSITY DICTATED.

ROME, JUNE 20-(AP)-A LEFTIST MILITARY ORGANIZATION CALLED "ARMATA ROSSA"--RED ARMY--WHICH CLAIMS 58,000 RECRUITS HAS ASKED THE ALLIED COMMAND'S PERMISSION TO JOIN IN THE FIGHT AGAINST THE GERMANS IN ITALY.

ITS HEADQUARTERS ARE IN A MODERN BUILDING NEAR THE CENTER OF ROME. TWO EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEMBERS, WHO IDENTIFIED THEMSELVES AS UMBERTO CARMINATI AND OTELLO TERZANI, SAID TODAY THE ARMY WAS CREATED BECAUSE MARSHAL PEITRO BADOGLIO AND KING VITTORIO EMANUELE HAD FAILED IN THE PAST YEAR TO FORM AN EFFECTIVE FIGHTING FORCE.

EIGHT THOUSAND OF ITS MEN WERE SAID TO HAVE FOUGHT THE GERMANS UNDER FIFTH ARMY DIRECTION AND IN THE BATTLE FOR ROME. SINCE THEN MANY THOUSANDS MORE, INCLUDING WOMEN, HAVE BEEN ENROLLED, THE COMMITTEE MEMBERS SAID.

THE COMMITTEE MEMBERS SAID THEY WERE AFFILIATED WITH PALMIRO TOGLIATTI'S COMMUNIST PARTY, BUT THAT THE ARMY DID NOT REPRESENT ANY PARTICULAR LEFTIST GROUP.

CARMINATI SAID THE NAME "RED ARMY" WAS THE ONLY SYMBOL THAT WOULD ATTRACT VOLUNTEERS FROM THE MASSES AND THAT THAT ALONE WAS THE REASON IT WAS BEING USED.

THE COMMITTEE MEMBER ADDED THAT, SHOULD THE ALLIES APPROVE THE ORGANIZATION AND FURNIUH SUPPLIES AND EQUIPMENT, THE VOLUNTEERS WERE READY TO FIGHT IN ANY CAPACITY THE ALLIED COMMAND SUGGESTED. OFFICERS WERE SAID TO INCLUDE FORMER ITALIAN ARMY OFFICERS.

BOTH CARMINATI AND TERZANI ASSERTED A NAZI FIFTH COLUMN STILL WAS ACTIVE IN ROME. THEY SAID GERMANS WERE HIDING IN THE CITY, MOVING FROM CELLER TO CELLER, AND THAT CLANDESTINE RADIOS WERE OPERATING.

LONDON, JUNE 20-(AP)-TOKYO RADIO BROADCAST TODAY A SPECIAL JAPANESE COMMUNIQUE SAYING AN "ALLIED FLEET" ATTACKING THE MARIANAS HAD LOST ONE BATTLESHIP, TWO CRUISERS, ONE DESTROYER, ONE SUBMARINE AND 300 PLANES, BUT ACKNOWLEDGED THAT AMERICAN FORCED HAD ESTABLISHED A BEACHHEAD ON SAIPAN ISLAND.

THERE HAS BEEN NO ALLIED CONFIRMATION OF SUCH NAVAL AND AIR LOSSES. YESTERDAY U.S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS SAID AN AMERICAN CARRIER TASK FORCE SUPPORTING THE SAIPAN GROUND OPERATIONS SHOT DOWN 300 JAPANESE PLANES IN FIGHTING OFF A SEVERE ATTACK.

LONDON, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 21-(AP)-THE GERMAN TRANSOCEAN NEWS AGENCY, IN A BERLIN BROADCAST, QUOTED A JAPANESE NAVAL SPOKESMAN TODAY AS SAYING THAT JAPANESE AIR AND NAVAL FORCES "HAVE SUCCESSFULLY ENGAGED

JUN 21 1944

AN AMERICAN FLEET" IN THE WATERS OFF THE MARIANAS ISLANDS.

IT WAS NOT CLEAR FROM THE BROADCAST, HOWEVER, WHETHER THE STATEMENT REFERRED TO NEW OPERATIONS STILL IN PROGRESS OR WHETHER IT WAS MERELY AN ALLUSION TO PREVIOUS ACTIVITY MENTIONED IN A JAPANESE COMMUNIQUE YESTERDAY.

IN THAT BULLETIN, IMPERIAL HEADQUARTERS MAINTAINED THAT THE JAPANESE HAD SHOT DOWN 300 U.S. PLANES, SUNK SEVERAL AMERICAN WARSHIPS AND DAMAGED A NUMBER OF OTHERS OFF THE MARIANAS.

TRANSOCEAN QUOTED A DISPATCH FROM SHANGHAI AS SAYING THAT THE JAPANESE NAVAL SPOKESMAN, CAPT. KEIZO MATSUSHIMA, HAD TOLD A PRESS CONFERENCE THAT HEAVY LOSSES HAD BEEN INFLICTED UPON AMERICAN FORCES "DURING VIOLENT BATTLES IN THE WATERS OFF THE MARIANAS ISLANDS AND BEFORE SAIPAN"-- WHERE U.S. ATTACKERS HAVE WON A BEACHHEAD.

MATSUSHIMA PREDICTED "FAR-REACHING CONSEQUENCES FOR THE ENTIRE DEVELOPMENT OF THE WAR" WOULD GROW OUT OF THESE ENGAGEMENTS.

"IF THE BATTLE IN THE MARIANAS CONTINUES AT THE PRESENT PACE," HE WAS QUOTED AS SAYING," I THINK THAT THE FUTURE SITUATION IN THE PACIFIC WILL DEVELOP FAVORABLY FOR THE JAPANESE,"

HE ASSERTED THAT "THE GREATEST PART OF THE AMERICAN FLEET IS ASSEMBLED OFF THE MARIANAS."

EN ROUTE WITH MARINE EXPEDITIONARY FORCES TO THE MARIANAS ISLANDS--(DELAYED)--OUR SHIP'S LOUD SPEAKER GAVE A WARNING BUZZ. A VOICE SHATTERED THE STILLNESS: "NOW HEAR THIS. THE INVASION OF FRANCE HAS STARTED. THAT IS ALL."

IN THE OFFICERS' WARD ROOM GAMES OF CHESS, CRIBBAGE, BRIDGE AND PINOCHLE WERE HALTED. FOR A MINUTE NO ONE SPOKE. THEN SOMEONE SAID, "THANK GOD!" IN A CORNER ONE OFFICER PUT DOWN HIS BOOK, BLESSED HIMSELF, PRAYED SOFTLY FOR A MOMENT, BLESSED HIMSELF AGAIN, AND WENT BACK TO HIS READING.

ON DECK MARINE VETERANS OF THE PACIFIC CAMPAIGN SQUATTED IN TINY GROUPS. SOME WENT BELOW TO SMOKE CIGARETTES NERVOUSLY IN CORRIDORS AND TALK WITH OTHER MEN. OTHERS GATHERED ON THE MESS DECK FOR COFFEE.

"I'VE GOT TWO BROTHERS WITH THE INFANTRY," SHOUTED ONE MAN.

"MY KID BROTHER IS THERE," A YOUNG MARINE SAID TO HIS COMPANION. "HE'S A MACHINE GUNNER."

THE NEXT MORNING MEN TALKED OF NOTHING BUT THE INVASION. THE STATEMENTS OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AND GENERAL EISENHOWER WERE READ DELIBERATELY AND CAREFULLY. THE MEN SMILED AND WERE HAPPY AND TALKED ABOUT BEING HOME FOR CHRISTMAS. THEY FORMED LONG LINES AT THE POST EXCHANGE AND ALL OVER THE BOAT MEN OFFERED CANDY TO EACH OTHER TO CELEBRATE THE ASSAULT ON HITLER'S EUROPE.

AHEAD OF THEM WAS A BATTLE OF THEIR OWN.

NEW YORK, JUNE 20-(AP)-THE JAPANESE FLEET HAS MOVED INTO POSITION EAST OF THE PHILIPPINES APPARENTLY FOR A SHOWDOWN IN THE PACIFIC, AND AMERICAN FORCES OF THE FIFTH FLEET IN THE LAST FEW DAYS HAVE DESTROYED 600 ENEMY PLANES, ADMIRAL CHESTER W.NIMITZ ANNOUNCED TONIGHT IN A CBS-RECORDED BROADCAST FROM PEARL HARBOR.

THE 600-PLANE TOLL FOR A DECISIVE PACIFIC BATTLE WHICH MAY ALREADY HAVE STARTED, IS "DOUBLE THE NUMBER WIPED OUT IN A SINGLE ENGAGEMENT SUNDAY," THE BROADCAST SAID.

"IF A FULL-DRESS KNOCK-DOWN, DRAG OUT NAVAL BATTLE COMES IT WILL BE A DEVELOPMENT WORKED FOR BY THE PACIFIC FLEET EVER SINCE MIDWAY," SAID THE ADMIRAL.

"I DON'T KNOW OF ANYTHING ELSE WE CAN DO TO PROVOKE THOSE PEOPLE INTO A NAVAL BATTLE."

ADMIRAL NIMITZ SAID POSSIBLY THE WHOLE JAPANESE FLEET MIGHT NOW BE SWINGING INTO POSITIONS.

"THE JAPANESE FLEET, STUNG BY THE AMERICAN INVASION OF THE MARIANAS ISLANDS, HAS MOVED INTO A POSITION EAST OF THE PHILIPPINES WHICH MAY BRING A DECISIVE ENGAGEMENT WITH THE AMERICAN NAVY.

"THIS DEVELOPMENT, LONG SOUGHT BY AMERICAN COMMANDERS, WAS ANNOUNCED TODAY BY ADMIRAL CHESTER NIMITZ, COMMANDER IN CHIEF OF THE PACIFIC FLEET. IN FACT, A NAVAL ENGAGEMENT OF AS YET UNDETERMINED DEGREE, MAY HAVE ALREADY OCCURRED."

ADMIRAL NIMITZ SAID THERE WAS REASON TO HOPE SOME DAMAGE WAS INFLICTED ON THE JAP FLEET YESTERDAY.

THE JAP FORCE WHICH HAS FOR THE FIRST TIME SINCE MIDWAY BEEN OUT IN STRENGTH FROM BEHIND ITS LAND DEFENSES IS DESCRIBED BY ADMIRAL NIMITZ AS "STRONG JAPANESE NAVAL UNITS, POSSIBLY THE WHOLE JAPANESE FLEET."

THE AREA WHICH THEY'VE ENTERED IS A NO MAN'S SEA, 1,000 MILES IN DIAMETER, MARKED ON THE WEST BY THE PHILIPPINES, ON THE EAST BY THE MARIANAS, THE SOUTH BY PALAU AND THE NORTH BY JAPAN'S OWN SOUTH-WESTERN ISLANDS.

JAPANESE FEARS THAT SAIPAN ISLAND, WHERE AMERICAN INVASION FORCES ARE NOW ENGAGING ENEMY FORCES, WILL BE USED AS A BASE FOR SHUTTLE BOMBING MISSIONS OVER TOKYO BY B-29 SUPERFORTRESSES FLYING FROM THE ISLAND TO CHINA WERE EXPRESSED IN A BERLIN BROADCAST OF A TOKYO DISPATCH TODAY.

"COMPETENT JAPANESE SOURCES ARE FULLY CONSCIOUS OF THE SERIOUSNESS OF THE SITUATION," THE DISPATCH SAID. "AMERICAN HEAVY BOMBERS, ESPECIALLY THOSE OF THE B-29 TYPE OPERATING FROM SAIPAN AIR BASES, WOULD HAVE NO DIFFICULTY IN LAUNCHING SYSTEMATIC ATTACKS ON TOKYO, ONLY 2,500 KILOMETERS (1,550 MILES) AWAY.

"CONTRARY TO THEIR FORMER ATTACKS ON JAPAN FROM CHINESE BASES, THE AMERICAN PILOTS WOULD HAVE THE ADVANTAGE OF HAVING TO FLY OVER GROUND ONLY WHILE ACTUALLY DROPPING THEIR BOMBS," IT CONTINUED. "THE APPROACH AND RETURN FLIGHTS WOULD BE MADE ACROSS THE SEA AND THUS THERE WOULD BE NO DANGER FROM JAPANESE INTERCEPTORS. IT IS, MOREOVER, FEASIBLE THAT AMERICAN BOMBERS ATTACKING JAPAN PROPER FROM CHINESE BASES MIGHT RETURN TO BASE ON SAIPAN, WHERE THEY COULD BE REFUELLED MORE EASILY THAN IN CHINA.

"IN VIEW OF THESE FACTS, IT IS SAFELY ASSUMED THAT BOTH SIDES WILL FIGHT BITTERLY FOR POSSESSION OF SAIPAN."

A SPECIAL COMMUNIQUE ISSUED BY JAPANESE IMPERIAL HEADQUARTERS SAID TODAY THAT AMERICAN FORCES WHICH HAVE WON A BRIDGEHEAD ON SAIPAN ISLAND IN THE MARIANAS ARE BEING GRADUALLY REINFORCED BUT ASSERTED THAT JAPANESE FLIERS HAD SUNK ONE BATTLESHIP, TWO CRUISERS, ONE DESTROYER AND ONE SUBMARINE IN ADDITION TO DAMAGING 17 OTHER SHIPS AND DOWNING MORE THAN 300 PLANES.

THERE HAS BEEN NO CONFIRMATION OF SUCH NAVAL AND AIR LOSSES FROM U.S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, WHICH ANNOUNCED YESTERDAY THAT AN AMERICAN CARRIER TASK FORCE SUPPORTING SAIPAN GROUND OPERATIONS SHOT DOWN 300 JAPANESE PLANES IN FIGHTING OFF A HEAVY ATTACK. AMERICAN PLANES LOSSES WERE NOT ANNOUNCED, BUT ADMIRAL CHESTER W.NIMITZ SAID AVAILABLE INFORMATION INDICATED ONLY ONE AMERICAN SURFACE CRAFT WAS DAMAGED IN THIS ENGAGEMENT.

THE TEXT OF THE JAPANESE COMMUNIQUE, AS BROADCAST BY BERLIN FROM A TOKYO DISPATCH AND ACCORDED BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS:

"FIRSTLY, ENEMY FORMATIONS ATTACKING THE MARIANAS ISLANDS ESTABLISHED A BRIDGEHEAD JUNE 15, AND GRADUALLY REINFORCED THEIR TROOPS. JAPANESE TROOPS OF OCCUPATION MET THEM IN COMBAT AND DEALT OUT HEAVY BLOWS.

"SECONDLY, THE ENEMY CONCENTRATED NUMEROUS NAVAL CRAFT AT THE MARIANAS ISLANDS, CONSISTING OF AIRCRAFT CARRIERS AND BATTLESHIPS, SO THAT THE GREATER PART OF THE PACIFIC FLEET WAS ASSEMBLED OFF THE MARIANAS ISLANDS.

"JAPANESE FLIERS ARE NOW ATTACKING THEM DAILY. AS KNOWN SO FAR, ONE BATTLESHIP, TWO CRUISERS, ONE DESTROYER AND ONE SUBMARINE WERE SUNK, FOUR AIRCRAFT CARRIERS, TWO BATTLESHIPS, FOUR CRUISERS AND SIX TRANSPORTS, AS WELL AS ONE WARSHIP OF AN UNIDENTIFIED TYPE WERE DAMAGED. OVER 300 ENEMY AIRCRAFT WERE SHOT DOWN.

"SOME JAPANESE SHIPS AND AIRCRAFT WERE LOST."

UNDATED NAVAL BATTLES (370)
BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
JUN 21 1944
THE BIGGEST NAVAL BATTLE OF THIS OR ANY OTHER WAR MAY BE TAKING SHAPE -- IF, INDEED, IT ALREADY ISN'T IN PROGRESS -- BETWEEN THE JAPANESE FLEET SAILING EAST FROM THE PHILIPPINES AND THE AMERICAN FIFTH FLEET MOVING WEST FROM THE MARIANAS.

THE PACIFIC WAR HAS KNOWN TWO OTHER MAJOR NAVAL ENGAGEMENTS, THE BATTLES OF CORAL SEA AND MIDWAY, BOTH OF WHICH MAY BE DWARFED BY THE IMPENDING ENGAGEMENT.

THE BATTLE OF MIDWAY OPENED JUNE 3, 1942 AND CONTINUED FOR THREE DAYS -- A STRANGE BATTLE IN WHICH THE OPPOSING FLEETS NEVER GOT WITHIN SHELLING DISTANCE OF EACH OTHER.

JAPANESE LOSSES AT MIDWAY, AS LISTED IN AMERICAN ACCOUNTS, WERE: FOUR AIRCRAFT CARRIERS, TWO HEAVY CRUISERS, THREE DESTROYERS AND ONE TRANSPORT SUNK; 275 AIRCRAFT WIPED OUT, AND 4,800 JAPANESE KILLED OR DROWNED.

THREE ENEMY BATTLESHIPS, TWO HEAVY CRUISERS, A LIGHT CRUISER AND THREE TRANSPORTS WERE DAMAGED.

AMERICAN LOSSES LISTED WERE THE CARRIER YORKTOWN AND THE DESTROYER HAMMANN. AMERICAN CASUALTIES WERE 307.

PLANE LOSSES WERE NOT REPORTED BUT THEY WERE ESTIMATED BY A STUDY OF PERSONNEL LOSSES AS MORE THAN 50.

THE JAPANESE CLAIMED THEY SANK TWO CARRIERS, A CRUISER, A SUBMARINE AND A TRANSPORT AND DESTROYED 150 PLANES.

THE BATTLE OF MIDWAY HALTED THE WESTWARD OFFENSIVE OF JAPAN'S NAVY AND IT NEVER SINCE HAS BEEN REPORTED OUT IN STRENGTH UNTIL NOW.

THE BATTLE OF THE CORAL SEA, FOUGHT THE PREVIOUS MAY, STOPPED A JAPANESE MOVE TOWARD AUSTRALIA JUST AS MIDWAY LATER HALTED ONE TOWARD HAWAII.

IT RESULTED IN THE SINKING OF MORE THAN 15 JAPANESE SHIPS, INCLUDING THE 20,000-TON AIRCRAFT CARRIER RYUKAKU, THREE HEAVY CRUISERS, A LIGHT CRUISER AND TWO DESTROYERS. ANOTHER CRUISER PROBABLY WAS SUNK AND SHIPS DAMAGED INCLUDED A SECOND CARRIER. THE BATTLE COST THE UNITED STATES THE AIRCRAFT CARRIER LEXINGTON, THE DESTROYER SIMS AND THE TANKER NEOSHO.

OTHER CRUCIAL NAVAL BATTLES OF THE PACIFIC WAR INCLUDED: THE BATTLE OF SAVO ISLAND IN AUGUST, 1942 WHEN THE AMERICANS AND AUSTRALIANS SUSTAINED HEAVY CRUISER LOSSES BUT DROVE OFF AN ENEMY FLEET SEEKING TO ATTACK TRANSPORTS UNLOADING MEN AT GUADALCANAL; TWO BATTLES IN THE KULA GULF IN JUNE, 1943, WHICH BROKE THE BACK OF JAPANESE NAVAL RESISTANCE IN THE CENTRAL SOLOMONS; AND THE BATTLE OF THE JAVA SEA IN WHICH THE OUTNUMBERED ALLIED FLEET TRIED TO PREVENT THE JAPANESE FROM LANDING ON JAVA.

(ADVANCE)...NEW YORK, JUNE 20-(AP)-FOREIGN MINISTER EELCO VAN KLEFFENS OF THE NETHERLANDS SUGGESTS IN THE JULY ISSUE OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS THAT IF THE GERMANS CONTINUE DEFENSIVE FLOODING OF HOLLAND SHE MAY NEED A GRANT OF GERMAN TERRITORY FOR SURVIVAL AFTER THE WAR.

THE MAGAZINE IS TO BE PUBLISHED HERE TOMORROW. JUN 21 1944

"IF GERMANY WANTONLY DESTROYS SO MUCH OF HOLLAND'S SOIL THAT HER 9,000,000 PEOPLE ARE UNABLE TO LIVE ON THE LAND WHICH REMAINS," VAN KLEFFENS WROTE, "IT MAY BE NECESSARY TO GRANT HER AN EQUIVALENT PORTION OF GERMAN TERRITORY OR AT ANY RATE THE USUFRUCT FROM IT."

THE FOREIGN MINISTER SAID 45 PERCENT OF THE NETHERLANDS WAS SUBJECT TO FLOODING. THIS AREA, HE SAID, CONTAINS "BY FAR THE LARGEST PART OF ALL THE POPULATION, ALL THE LARGEST TOWNS, ALL THE MOST FERTILE REGIONS, ALL THE GREATER COMMERCIAL CENTERS AND A CONSIDERABLE PORTION OF THE NATIONAL INDUSTRIES."

A FOOTNOTE TO THE ARTICLE EXPLAINED THAT, FOR REASONS OF SECURITY, NO EXACT DATA COULD BE GIVEN ON THE AMOUNT OF DUTCH SOIL INUNDATED.

"IN THE SOUTHWESTERN ISLANDS CONSIDERABLE AREAS HAVE ALREADY BEEN EVACUATED AND FLOODED AND THIS HAS BEEN DONE IN THE MOST CALLOUS MANNER," VAN KLEFFENS SAID.

VAN KLEFFENS SAID HOLLAND'S POPULATION LIVES 640 TO THE SQUARE MILE (AGAINST 360 PER SQUARE MILE IN GERMANY); THAT HIS HOMELAND HAD AIDED OTHERS IN DISASTER DURING THE PAST AND "PERHAPS NOW THAT SHE IS CONFRONTED WITH SO DIRE A CALAMITY THE OUTSIDE WORLD WILL IN TURN HELPHER."

"IF GERMANY'S COURSE OF DESTRUCTION IN HOLLAND GOES TO SUCH LENGTHS THAT THE DUTCH PEOPLE NEED ADDITIONAL LAND IN ORDER TO LIVE," HE WROTE, "SOME SUITABLE FORM OF COMPENSATION (IF TERRITORY, THEN TERRITORY MINUS GERMANS!) MUST BE FOUND. HOLLANDERS ARE NOT ANNEXATIONISTS BY NATURE. X X X HOLLAND WOULD HAVE PREFERRED TO AVOID BRINGING FORWARD ANY PROPOSAL OF THIS NATURE. WHETHER SHE WILL ULTIMATELY BE COMPELLED TO PRESS FOR ITS ADOPTION DEPENDS ON THE GERMANS."

U. S. Carrier Planes Attack Japanese Fleet; Americans Crack Cherbourg Defense Arc, Ultimatum Orders Surrender This Morning

JAPANESE CLAIM FIERCE CONFLICT IS RAGING AT SEA

Greatest Battle in Naval History May Be Being Fought Now

JUN 22 1944

U. S. LEADERS CONFIDENT

American Warships Have Responsibility of Protecting Beachhead.

By LEIF ERICKSON

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, June 21. — (AP) United States carrier planes swooped down on a powerful Japanese fleet between the Philippines and the Marianas islands about dusk Monday, Adm. Chester W. Nimitz announced today, in the opening stage of what may develop into the decisive battle of the war in the Pacific.

Contact with the enemy fleet, which included carriers and battleships, presumably was broken off at nightfall. Losses on either side had not been compiled, Nimitz said.

There was no indication whether the battle had been joined again Tuesday. Maneuvers of both armadas through Monday night probably would determine whether the long-awaited showdown test between the American and Japanese navies was at hand.

Scouting planes from the United States Fifth Fleet, commanded by Adm. Raymond A. Spruance, spotted the enemy force Monday afternoon. Carrier bombers swept in for the attack. It was the first time since the battle of Santa Cruz, in October of 1942, that American carrier pilots had a chance at a Nipponese fleet.

May Be Entire Jap Fleet

Admiral Nimitz, obviously without detailed information himself, promised additional communiques as quickly as possible. He told a press conference Tuesday night that the entire Nipponese fleet may have been deployed for an all out contest near the Marianas, which American forces have invaded.

A massive American force of hundreds of surface ships and more than 1,000 planes comprised the invasion fleet, Rembert James, Associated Press war correspondent, reported. There were hundreds of landing boats and other craft to put many thousands of soldiers ashore.

That invasion, going well at last reports, was one of the immediate concerns of the warships under Spruance, for they must protect the American beachhead and assault forces which already had conquered virtually the southern third of the island.

The ground forces were advancing north on Saipan, Nimitz reported. Progress also was being made against Japanese pocketed at Nafutan Point, on the southeastern corner of Saipan. Severe fighting continued as the ground troops fought to clear the island that will provide a base for bomber strikes at Japan itself.

High American naval sources indicated earlier that a crucial clash between main units of the American and Japanese fleets may be under way.

A Tokyo radio broadcast, recorded in London, said positively that it is, that a "fierce naval battle" rages off the Marianas.

Calm confidence in the outcome of such an engagement, which probably will rival anything in the history of naval warfare, prevailed at fleet headquarters here as well as in Washington. Admiral Ernest H. King, Commander-in-Chief of the Navy; Navy Secretary Forrestal and Adm. Chester W. Nimitz so expressed themselves.

King had a word of appreciation for the "long expected cooperation" of the Nipponese navy in coming out.

"The sooner the Japanese fleet fights, the better we will like it," he commented.

Forrestal reported the Japanese fleet had been spotted in the last few days to the westward of Saipan in the Marianas, the American invasion point. There was "no definite information," however, as to the prospective showdown. He added significantly:

"American forces may have succeeded in catching up with all or part of the Japanese fleet yesterday."

In a ringing statement last night, Nimitz disclosed the enemy was massisng his naval strength to accept the challenge so often hurled by the Pacific fleet but just as often passed up. He even hinted the first rounds had been fought.

In the prospective battle area is the American Fifth fleet. It is commanded by a tough, experienced admiral with a string of stunning victories against the enemy—Raymond A. Spruance. It has, in the words of Nimitz, the power "to take care of everything" the Japanese may fling at it.

The long, almost despairing, desire of the Pacific fleet that the Japanese acc battle was again reflected in these words of its commander:

"We hope the Jap fleet will stay in that area. As long as they stay, we have a chance to get at them."

Met Disaster at Midway

It was the American thrust into the Marianas, at Japan's very throat, that finally provoked the reluctant Japanese navy. It was stirring itself for a major engagement for the first time since meeting disaster at Midway more than two years ago.

That navy, since Midway, has been shorn of much of its screening force of cruisers and destroyers in the war of attrition so successfully carried on by United States submarines and warplanes. Pitted against it will be American naval power that is at its top for all time, not only in vital airplane carriers but in new heavyweight battleships, cruisers and destroyers.

On Saipan itself, near where naval air battles have been fought that have cost the Japanese probably 600 planes within a week, American forces continued to advance against stubborn opposition. They held the southern portion of the island, Nimitz said in a communique Tuesday night.

The battle line stretched from the outskirts of Garapan, principal city and capital of the Marianas, on the southwestern side across the island to Magicienne Bay, on the southeastern side.

Nimitz Is Confident.

Pearl Harbor, June 21 (A. P.).—A Japanese naval spokesman was quoted in a Berlin broadcast today as saying that Nippon's air and naval forces "have successfully engaged an American fleet," but the Tokyo radio, in another broadcast to the homeland, quoted an imperial headquarters communique as acknowledging: "We have suffered considerable losses of ships and planes."

[London picked up a Tokyo broadcast saying a fierce naval engagement was raging today off the Marianas. There was no confirmation from Pearl Harbor and no indication when Admiral Nimitz might have more to say about the operations.

[The Tokyo radio, as heard by the Associated Press, asserted today that an American battleship listed in a Japanese communique as sunk by Japanese planes off the Marianas on June 16, was of the 45,000-ton Iowa class. The enemy broadcast, entirely without confirmation, said that another battleship claimed to have been damaged heavily was of the 35,000-ton North Carolina class, "and went down to a watery grave the night of June 15 off the Marianas."

[Two out of four United States aircraft carriers which were heavily damaged and set ablaze or left heavily listing the night of June 17," the broadcast went on, "were of the 24,000-ton Essex type while another was of the 10,000-ton Independence type, which had been converted from a cruiser. A fourth appeared to be also of the Essex type."]

On embattled Saipan, in the Marianas 1,500 miles southeast of Tokyo, the going is tough. The Yanks called on planes, artillery and guns of warships to help crack bitter resistance of an estimated 20,000 Japanese, a Nimitz communique last night reported.

"Our troops now hold the entire southern portion of the island," a communique said, "from the southern outskirts of Garapan (principal city of 10,000, six miles up the southwest shore) across to the center of the western shore of Magicienne Bay," three and one-half miles up the island's southeast side. To the south of Saipan, enemy airfields on Tinian were shelled by warships and bombed by planes.

What may prove to have been the first preliminary blow of a showdown naval fight was struck on Sunday from enemy aircraft carriers. Their planes, flying from the direction of the Philippines, by way of Guam and Rota, in the Marianas, paid a frightful cost of 300 aircraft in trying unsuccessfully to sink United States carriers and battleships of the invasion fleet. Last night Admiral Nimitz told a press conference that not one combat ship was sunk.

Admiral Nimitz assured a press conference that the Fifth Fleet packs sufficient "power to be favorable to us in a decisive engagement," even if it is massed more than 1,000 miles beyond the United States advance naval base in the Marshalls and 3,800 miles from Pearl Harbor.

"We hope the Jap fleet will stay in that (Philippines) area," he said. "As long as they stay, we have a chance to get at them."

Airdrome on Saipan Seized.

Ready to figure in a decisive naval engagement is an unsinkable carrier, the 3,600-foot Aslito airdrome captured by marines and soldiers, who control the entire southern part of Saipan, which they invaded on June 14. Also ready to send land-based bombers into action is the air arm of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

His planes are poised within bombing range of the Philippines and adjacent ocean areas at captured Mokmer airfield, on Biak, in the Schouten islands, off northern Dutch New Guinea. Today he announced the capture of two more airfields on Biak.

The destruction of the enemy's 300 carrier planes, extremely costly because of the long training required for carrier pilots, raised to nearly 600 the total Japanese air losses in the Marianas since the United States carrier force moved against that segment of Nippon's inner defense perimeter.

"If we lost 600 naval planes in two or three days, we'd be very unhappy, even with our plane production, Admiral Nimitz said, emphasizing that he had expected Japan's violent reaction at Saipan because it is in the last island defense line before China and the Philippines.

The seventy-two-square-mile island was invaded "on the assumption that Japanese would bring out everything they possibly could." He expressed the conviction that Japan no longer possesses the naval strength to use the Marianas for an offensive, but "the Japs need to hold them to keep us from penetrating west of their island defense line."

"And north, too," interposed Rear Admiral C. H. McMorris, Chief of Staff, with an eye on the Japanese homeland. Admiral Nimitz said that the Aslito airdrome will promote "control of the air in the immediate Marianas area," but, considering all the angles, he noted that the Japanese hold the advantage of land-based air reconnaissance west of the Marianas and that the first concern of the American fleet must be to safeguard the Saipan invaders. Even so, he was supremely confident.

"I can't control Japanese fleet movements," he said. "If I did, there definitely would be a naval engagement."

Nimitz Bestows DSM On Admiral Pownall

United States Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, June 21 (AP)—Rear Admiral Charles A. Pownall, commander of the Pacific Fleet Air Force, was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal today by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz.

The award was for exceptionally meritorious service as the task force commander in the Gilbert Islands campaign and the subsequent carrier raid on the Marshalls.

ADMIRAL KING SEES VICTORY ON WAY OVER JAPAN'S NAVY

JUN 22 1944

Washington Chief Expresses Complete Confidence

Washington, June 21 (A. P.).—American forces at long last may have cornered Nippon's principal battle fleet for a showdown fight, and so far as Admiral Ernest J. King is concerned "the sooner the Japanese fleet fights, the better we'll be satisfied." The naval commander in chief expressed appreciation today for the "cooperation" of Japan's navy in apparently moving into battle position in the western Pacific, and expressed complete confidence in the outcome of possible contact east of the Philippines.

He made his statement after Secretary Forrestal of the Navy had reported that despite strict radio silence from the Pacific, there have been some indications that American forces "may have succeeded in catching up with all or a part of the Japanese fleet yesterday," Secretary Forrestal added that there is, however, no definite information as to the prospective engagement.

Jap Fleet Sighted.

He based his comment upon a statement yesterday by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Pacific fleet Commander in Chief, who reported that the Japanese fleet had been spotted in the waters east of the Philippine Islands and indicated that some engagements already may have been fought. Secretary Forrestal reported that the Japanese fleet had been sighted at "various times during the last few days, milling around from 500 to 800 miles to the westward of Saipan Island" in the Marianas, east of the Philippines.

Secretary Forrestal said that Japanese planes attacked American naval units near Saipan on Sunday and indicated that the planes apparently came from carriers which at that time were some 500 miles to the westward. The Japanese plan, he continued, seems to have been to launch the aircraft with the idea that after attacking they would be able to land for refueling on Guam and Rota, Japanese-held bases in the Marianas.

No Details of Battle.

"We have no other details of the resulting air battle," he continued, "other than the fact that our forces were ready for the attack. Our carrier aircraft and ships' anti-aircraft guns wiped out most of the Japanese planes."

Admiral King, asked about the prospective engagement there, said that the communique from Admiral Nimitz speaks for itself and combined with Secretary Forrestal's report, covers the situation "as accurately as we know it."

"You are not worried about the outcome?" he was asked. "No," he replied, shaking his head.

He added that in any major operation, losses must be expected, in fact, are allowed for in preparation and plans for the action. But, Admiral King continued, the losses to date in the Marianas, "Have been less than allowed for." He said that he referred to all types of action in the air, on the sea and among troops fighting on land.

Admiral King also disclosed that plans long under consideration had been reviewed again for the close co-operation of the British with American forces in the war against Japan when it is possible to swing strength to the Pacific and away from Europe. He said that the discussions were carried out in England where he, Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the Army, and Gen. Henry H. Arnold, head of the Army Air Forces, recently completed a tour of invasion points.

"We discussed in very broad terms," he said, "the setup for the over-all co-ordination of the war against Japan when the British shall be free to lend a hand in that part of the world." Admiral King, who returned recently from the conferences, said that Gens. Marshall and Arnold may return to the United States today from the visits which took them to the beachheads of France and to points in Italy and North Africa.

Asked by Secretary Forrestal if he had any opinions as to the reasons the Germans failed to counter-attack heavily when the invasion began, Admiral King replied, "I think that's a puzzle to every one. No one understands. It may have been their plan to wait for another Dunkirk, but the opportunity for doing that seems to be pretty well past."

U. S. Fifth Fleet May Be in Action Now Against Bulk of Japan's Warships—Nimitz Confident of Outcome.

JUN 22 1944

Washington, June 21 (A. P.).—American carrier-based planes sighted and attacked a Japanese fleet of battleships, aircraft carriers, and other warships on Monday, in the opening phase of what may become history's greatest naval engagement.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet, reported this today, adding that the results of the attack were not reported from the carrier task force which opened the battle.

The planes sped out from carriers of the Fifth Fleet, commanded by Admiral Raymond F. Spruance who, Admiral Nimitz says, has "enough muscle" in his fleet to take care of any Japanese armada.

The text of Pacific Fleet communique No. 58, follows:

"In the afternoon of June 19 (West Longitude-U. S. S.-date) carrier - based reconnaissance planes of the Fifth Fleet sighted a Japanese fleet, which included carriers and battleships, approximately midway between the Marianas Islands and Luzon.

"Aircraft of our fast carrier task force were immediately ordered to attack, and made contact with the enemy fleet before dusk. Enemy losses and our own losses have not yet been assessed. Additional details will be made known as they become available.

"In the ground fighting on Saipan Island our assault troops made advances in a northerly direction along the western shore of Magicienne Bay and made progress against an enemy strong point at Nafutan Point. Severe fighting contiuues."

in Outcome.

King Announces 8 "Task Fleets"

JUN 22 1944

Washington, June 21 (AP) — Admiral Ernest J. King, navy commander in chief, just returned from European conferences and an inspection of the invasion coast, disclosed today the commands and assignments of eight United States task fleets.

At a news conference, he described the numerically designated units as task fleets equipped to carry out any type of operation.

He said that originally the system of command called for task units, then for larger task groups, then task forces. The task forces were combined to form the numerical fleets, or "task fleets."

Commanders Announced

He announced the commands and assignments of these eight task fleets:

Pacific—Third Fleet, Admiral William F. Halsey, Jr.; Fifth Fleet, Admiral Raymond E. Spruance; Seventh Fleet, Vice-Admiral Thomas Kincaid, in the Southwest Pacific; Ninth Fleet, Vice-Admiral Frank J. Fletcher, Aleutians.

Atlantic and European—Fourth Fleet, Vice-Admiral Jonas Ingram, South Atlantic; Eighth Fleet, Vice-Admiral Henry K. Hewitt, Mediterranean; Twelfth Fleet, Admiral Harold R. Stark, European waters; Tenth Fleet, Admiral King, anti-submarine operations.

"They are all task forces," King said, "and vary in composition according to the work they have in hand."

JUN 22 1944

Washington Is Confident

WASHINGTON, June 21 (AP).—An air of supreme confidence and expectancy pervaded the Navy Department today as the high command waited for confirmation of reports that the Japanese fleet finally has been engaged in the long-hoped-for slugging match.

With the Pacific Fleet observing radio silence, there was no definite information here on developments. Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal told a news conference, however, that there are indications that the Pacific Fleet "may have succeeded in catching up with all or a part of the Japanese fleet."

Admiral Ernest J. King, Navy commander in chief, added that if the battle has been joined there is no doubt in his mind of the outcome—a disastrous defeat for the Japanese.

"The sooner the Jap fleet fights, the better we will be satisfied," King said. If the Japanese fleet has decided to battle, he commented, its "co-operation will be appreciated."

Review by Forrestal

The text of Navy Secretary Forrestal's review of the Pacific situation follows:

"The Japanese fleet has been sighted at various times during the last few days milling around from 500 to 800 miles to westward of Saipan Island.

"On June 19 (June 18 United States time) Japanese planes attacked our naval forces near Saipan. These planes apparently came from carriers, then some 500 miles to the westward. The Japanese plan seems to have been to launch the aircraft at extreme range from the Marianas with the idea that after attacking they would land for refueling on Guam and Rota. We have no other details of the resulting air battle, other than the fact that our forces were ready for the attack. Our carrier aircraft and ships' anti-aircraft guns wiped out most of the Japanese planes.

"Admiral Nimitz's fleet is under strict radio silence. There is some indication that it may have succeeded in catching up with all or a part of the Japanese fleet yesterday, but there is no definite information as to this.

"Navy seaplanes and submarines have been most useful in reconnoitering the Japanese fleet."

TRAPPED GERMANS GET ULTIMATUM TO QUIT BATTLE

JUN 22 1944

Overpowering Weight of Allied Men and Arms Massed for Onslaught.

DOCKS BLOWN UP

Refugees from City Predict House to House Battle for Great Port.

By JAMES M. LONG

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Thursday, June 22—(AP)

30. 24— 16425

American infantry patrols probed into the southern fringes of Cherbourg yesterday, reaching points less than one mile from the waterfront as the main army massed an overpowering weight of men and metal on the surrounding ridges in preparation for the final destruction of the Germans trapped in that vital Normandy seaport.

Supreme headquarters in its midnight communiue said "Allied forces made further progress in the battle for Cherbourg, and the area held by the enemy is steadily diminishing. Our advance up the entire Peninsula has been rapid."

Fall of the port appeared to be but a matter of hours.

NIGHT

Issue Ultimatum

(An ultimatum to the German garrison to surrender by 9 a.m. today, British time (3 a.m., E.W.T.) was broadcast this morning by the Allies army field radio station in Normandy and recorded in London by the London daily sketch.)

Reports reaching headquarters during the day said the advancing Americans had found a soft spot along the Cherbourg inland road and railway that leads up from the south between the bristling forts Du Roule and Octeville, and had penetrated to within 1,500 yards of the Cherbourg waterfront.

Don Whitehead, Associated Press correspondent, in a dispatch wirelessed from the scene late tonight, reported American patrols stabbing forward, testing out enemy pillboxes, but said the main forces still were massing for the kill.

Nazis Have Pillboxes

The German defenses on the southern rim of the city include blockhouses and mutually-suporting pillboxes capable of sharp crossfire, Whitehead wrote.

The German opposition is stiffening, he said, a street-by-street battle for Cherbourg is predicted by civilian refugees.

A "Stalingrad" defense is unlikely, however, Whitehead said, because of the tremendous superiority of the Americans on land, at sea and in the air.

The Germans, now back to their last-stand defenses, still show signs of the confusion which overtook them when the Americans sealed off the peninsula Sunday, and have given up considerable ground which American troops thought should have been defended.

Docks Being Blown Up

German demolition squads labored with explosives and fire to try to wreck the great port facilities, while Allied planes showered them with leaflets advising immediate surrender. Allied 21st army group headquarters said the city was unlikely to hold out much longer in any event.

Its dsfenses are altogether the most elaborate yet encountered in France, but "we have the turtle on his back," said an Allied spokesman.

The general advance up the peninsula continued rapidly, with a headquarters communique announcing the liberation of the towns of Teurtheville-Hague and Acqueville, southwest of Cherbourg, in part of a broad thrust that has carried the Americans within five miles of the sea.

On the southeast, the Americans have driven forward astride the main road north from Valognes to Cherbourg.

(A Vichy radio broadcast at midnight said the bulk of the American army tank formations then were a mile and a quarter from Cherbourg.)

On the British-Canadian sector to the east of the Cherbourg peninsula, heavy fighting continued in the Tilly-Caen sectors, but the series of attacks and counterattacks left the front virtually unchanged.

Dense clouds over the battle fronts limited aerial operations Wednesday morning, but five launching positions of the Nazi flying bombs between Calais and Amiens were attacked by Allied medium and light bombers.

Capture Rocket Launching Sites

The Americans advancing on the Cherbourg peninsula overran some such launching positions, took them intact, and experts from Britain immediately went to examine them as an aid to the English defenses against the week-long shower of winged explosives.

While the ground forces closed in for the final blow at the tip of the Normandy peninsula on the sixteenth day of the invasion of Hitler's European fortress, Berlin shuddered under a 2,000-plane American daylight raid which, following Tuesday's 6,000-sortie aerial operations, dwarfed the whole week of Nazi rocket bombings of Britain.

Latest information reaching Supreme headquarters concerning the Normandy drive indicated the Germans were continuing top-speed withdrawals along the whole tightening noose around Cherbourg, with their resistance stiffening somewhat only in the last line of forts around the city.

Cherbourg was becoming a sort of European "Singapore." The Germans apparently had not anticipated having to defend the city from the landward "back door."

At least seven great coastal batteries pointing out to sea make it nearly invulnerable to direct naval attack, and the Americans pressing in from the south found the flanks on both sides of the peninsula guarded by extensive minefields and tank obstacles and ditches.

In the center, however, the swift-moving doughboys found only scattered minefields and simple systems of concrete, wire and some gun emplacements.

Cherbourg, which once was the third greatest port in France and which will be of prime value to the Allies in landing heavy equipment and reinforcements, shook to the blasts of German demolitions.

Naval sources declared, however, that such eventualities had been considered in advance and said they were confident that no matter what the Nazis were able to do, Cherbourg could be put back into working order quickly. They have encountered and mastered similar situations elsewhere, such as at Tripoli in Libya and Naples. An Allied broadcast called on Cherbourg dock and rail workers to protect installations and equipment as much as they could.

It is known that the Germans do not have sufficient ships in Cherbourg to block the harbor by sinking them, and a 25-foot tide is counted upon to make it relatively easy to open at least a high-tide channel.

On the western flank of Cherbourg, the American line of attack runs northeast through Les Pieux, Acqueville and Flottemanville-Hague to the outskirts of Cherbourg.

On the eastern flank the line runs from the village of La Rougerie, north of Valognes, then northeast to the sea three to four miles above Quineville.

In capturing Valognes the Americans discovered an elaborate underground fortress with heavy gun positions just outside the town where the road slopes down towards the sea. As at Singapore, however, all guns pointed towards the sea, useless for defense against attack from the rear.

For the second day no action of consequence was reported along the southern front of the American salient across the Cherbourg peninsula.

The Germans seemed to have let slip their opportunity for any major counterattack against Carentan, weakest link of the Allied beachhead, and the Americans were pushing well across the floodlands west and south of Carentan to stronger positions.

Farther southeast, American patrols were reported about two miles north of the road center of St. Lo.

On the British-Canadian sector, some of the heaviest fighting of the entire front continued south of Italy-Sur-Seulles. The Tommies captured Onchy, three and a half miles southwest of Tilly, and then swayed back and forth in a bitter battle of tanks for control of Hottot, a mile farther east.

80 Nazi Tanks Destroyed

At least 80 German tanks have been destroyed so far in armored combats in the Tilly and Caen sectors, and scores more have been put out of action, it was announced. The Germans continued to use both their big Tiger and lesser Panther tanks in that area.

Meanwhile, reports reaching the advance command post of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, the Supreme Invasion Commander, said the Allied successes in Normandy were swelling the ranks of the French underground fighters by the thousands and that French patriot operations consequently were increasingly hampering German troop movements.

In some places the French patriots were reported to have fought pitched battles with German troops, particularly in the Brittany peninsula, south of the present invasion scene, the French "Men of The Maquis" were said to have cut railways and clashed repeatedly with German punitive forces.

Nazis Work Feverishly to Destroy Harbor—U. S. Troops Close In From 3 Sides—Call on Enemy to Surrender.

JUN 22 1944

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 21 (A. P.).—American troops smashed within 1,500 yards—less than a mile—of Cherbourg's waterfront today, driving between two fortress bastions under cover of air and artillery bombardment. The fall of the great supply port seemed only a matter of hours tonight.

The offensive advanced through the suburbs along the inland road between Fort du Roule and Fort Octeville, Nazi strongpoints shuddering under bombs as well as leaflets calling on the trapped Nazis to surrender.

Nazi demolition squads worked feverishly to cripple the port—through which the Allies could pour a flood of men and supplies into Normandy.

Another force rolling the trapped Germans back on the left flank seized Acqueville, at the base of Cape de la Hague, the land finger jutting northwest of Cherbourg and possibly offering a chance of escape by sea.

Troops on the right flank advanced beyond Valognes, and Supreme Headquarters declared good progress was made toward the prize harbor today.

DAY

Guns Blast Forts.

Supported by powerful artillery and air bombardment, veteran American troops assaulted Fort du Roule, within a mile of Cherbourg's docks, and Fort Octeville, bastion two miles in front of the military harbor area, blasted by Nazi demolitions.

The Germans staged a last ditch defense in these strongpoints, and fighting was reported in the built-up suburban section of France's third greatest port.

Acqueville on the flank is four miles southwest of the port, and only eleven from the tip of the Cape de la Hague. The American advance also captured Teurtheville-Hague two miles south of Acqueville.

Eighty Nazi tanks have been destroyed by the Allies armies to date, Supreme Headquarters said.

British in Heavy Fighting.

Heavy fighting was reported in the Tilly sur Seulles area near the center of the front, and an American spearhead to the west had pushed within two miles of St. Lo, communications hub of Nomandy.

The assault upon the two forts at Cherbourg advanced from St. Martin Le Greard, four miles south of the port.

Fort du Roule, a major key to control of the besieged German stronghold, stands atop a 450-foot hill. The French worked for more than a century building up Cherbourg's forts and defenses, and the Germans now are making a last stand in the inner ring—which embraces part of the city itself.

German defenses have stiffened and there are indications the Nazi High Command has ordered a house-to-house fight by some 25,000 to 50,000 Germans now left with virtually no chance of escape. Allied broadcasts last night urged the trapped garrison to surrender.

Although the three main roads to Cherbourg from the south run into one main highway bottleneck, just outside the city, the American troops apparently were closing in from three sides—south, west, and east.

Communique 31 from Supreme Headquarters this morning announced that the towns of Valognes, Les Pieux, Couville and Rauville la Bigot were in Allied hands, but the advance American line runs some distance beyond these points.

The suburban and city area which now has become a battlefield has an estimated population of 60,000. The population of the city proper, according to latest reports, is approximately 33,400 and an additional 27,000 live in the suburbs.

Despite German reports the Supreme Allied Command said it has no knowledge that Allied warships were shelling Cherbourg from the sea and declared such an attack was unlikely. The port is protected by seven heavy coastal forts which should be much simpler to take by land assault than from the sea.

Only patrol activity was reported elsewhere on the Normandy beachhead except in the Tilly-sur-Seulles area. The British announced capture of Onchy, three and a half miles southwest of Tilly. At the same time the Germans launched three heavy counter-attacks on the newly taken British strongpoint of Hottot, two miles south of Tilly. The attacks were reported held, but the situation in the village itself was obscure.

The Caen area even farther to the east was quiet.

A gale continued to blow in the channel. Six-foot waves whipped over the invasion beaches, making unloading of supplies impossible for the time being.

Bad weather hampered aircraft over the battle area, but fighter-bombers blasted Cherbourg guns and forts. Many of the missions took to the air from landing grounds in Normany.

JUN 22 1944

London Thursday, June 22 (AP). An ultimatum to the German garrison of Cherbourg to surrender by 9 A. M. today was broadcast this morning by the Allied army field radio station in Normandy. The broadcast was recorded here by the London Daily Sketch.

"If you do not stop the fight now, you will never see your homeland again," the ultimatum said.

"Your situation is desperate. Thousands of planes are waiting for the signal to rain death on you. Guns of the Allied navies are aimed at you. You have no other way out than to capitulate.

NIGHT

"Should you, the commandant, not surrender, you will bear full responsibility for the lives of your men.

"We give you until 9 A. M. today, June 22, to decide.

"Should you surrender, send your emissary to our staff under protection of a white flag to the crossroad on the Valognes-Cherbourg road at the village of Sloave at 8 A. M."

Civilians straggling through the lines said that within the city the Germans were preparing for a street-by-street defense, knocking holes in the corners of buildings and setting up machine guns and anti-tank guns to cover the approaches.

Private Michael McGee Tames a Nazi Tiger

JUN 22 1944

By LEONARD MOSELY.

Released by the British Information Service. Distributed by Associated Press.

With the British Sixth Airborne Division, Normandy, June 21.—When British paratroopers holding a vital sector of the Orne Valley in Normandy the other morning saw a massive Tiger tank and two self-propelling guns rolling down the road toward them they thought they were done for.

Since dawn that day they had been cut off from the rest of the British forces in the area by continuous and ferocious Nazi counterattacks. They had held them all, but an assault by the enemy's armor was something more grimly serious—especially since the company's antitank gun had been knocked out by shellfire a few hours before.

DAY

They didn't have much hope of survival when the Tiger tank advanced. But Private Michael McGee from one of our paratroop regiments decided that somehow he would stop the tank. Private McGee is a fighting Glasgow Irishman from Kelvinside and he has a couple of fighting pals as recklessly courageous as himself. He called over Corporal Tom Killeen of Wigan, England, and Private John Sullivan of Navan, County Meath. McGee said:

"Look, boys, if these Jerry panzers get through this road and among us we're all goners anyway, so we may as well die trying to stop them. I've an idea. Are you game to try with me?"

They agreed. McGee armed Killeen and Sullivan with antitank bombs, told them to hide inside a house 100 yards up the road, and said:

"Now wait in there till the tank stops outside the door, and then throw your bombs and throw them straight."

"Don't talk daft, lad," said Corporal Killeen, "how are you going to make the tank stop outside the door?"

McGee replied: "You leave that to me. I'll stop it somehow, and when I do don't forget to throw those bombs straight."

An hour later paratroopers heard the rumbling approach of the giant Nazi tank. Few of them believed that McGee could do anything about it.

Then the Tiger tank rounded the corner and came into view. Already heavy shells from its 150-MM gun were blasting among them. With hearts in their mouths, they saw McGee leap over a wall and dash to the middle of the road.

"It looked a crazy thing to do," said one paratrooper afterward: "For all he had in his hand was his Bren gun and you know how little good that is against a tank.

"But Michael put the gun to his hip and opened fire. He sprayed the front of the tank and you could see bullets bouncing off it as it advanced. And what Michael had promised happened. The Tiger tank, as if astonished at the impudence of this lone soldier with his little gun, stopped. It stopped, moreover, right outside the house where Killeen and Sullivan were hiding, and those boys did their stuff.

One Less for Rommel.

"We saw the bombs hit the tank and there was a terrific explosion, a sheet of flame and a great billowing of smoke. Then there was one less Tiger tank in Field-Marshal Rommel's Twenty-first Panzer Division."

It was all done so neatly and swiftly that Private McGee wasn't even touched by the guns of the Tiger.

"Feel like doing it again, boys?" he asked.

"If you're game, Mike, we are," they told him.

So twice more that afternoon Michael McGee dashed into the road with his Bren gun and peppered attacking armor. Twice Nazi panzers — self-propelling guns, this time—stopped in utter astonishment, just long enough to be destroyed by skillfully flung bombs.

"It was sheer dare-devil guts on McGee's part," said an officer. "We thought our position hopeless when those tanks appeared. It certainly would have been but for Private Michael McGee."

The Americans closed in on the heights overlooking Cherbourg and encountered the core of the enemy's last line of defenses—blockhouses and concrete pillboxes. For the past 12 hours they have been probing positions, locating strong points and getting ready for the final thrust.

Called Matter Of Time

The fall of Cherbourg now is a matter of time. That much is apparent. There is little chance for the enemy to make a "Stalingrad" of the city because, 15 days after the first landings in Normandy, the Americans have superior hitting power on land, sea and in the air.

But, as the Americans tightened their arc about the Germans' defenses, they met stiffening opposition from strong points fixed so that the lines of fire criss-crossed, with each point supporting its neighbors.

NIGHT

As yet the Americans have made no effort to smash the Cherbourg line. Forward patrols have found enemy pillboxes clustered in each defensive area, most of them apparently having been previously prepared, but some very recently constructed.

Much Ground Yielded

In drawing back on their inner defenses, the Germans gave up much ground and several strong points which, it seemed to the Americans, they should have tried to hold if they intended a do-or-die stand.

Obviously the enemy had not recovered from the confusion and disorganization which followed the American break-through to the west coast and subsequent drive northward. Many guns and much material which might have been saved by an orderly retreat have been left behind.

Tank Crews Surrender

The fight has gone out of many of the Germans, who have seen the hopelessness of their position.

In one case doughboys surrounded four tanks. The crews surrendered without trying to fight. Another time a German captain and 18 men with only one gun among them surrendered because they were cut off from their unit.

Major Harry Sievers, former Waterloo (Iowa) High School athletic coach, said many Germans were taking advantage of the confusion in their ranks to escape and surrender.

"They slip away from their columns when marching at night," he said. "Their officers had kept them in line by threatening retaliation against their families if they did not fight."

There have been some cases, however, of Germans putting civilian clothes over their uniforms and going into the woods as snipers.

Five Caught In Woods

"We caught five in one group who had civilian clothes over their uniforms," said Major Ernest King, of Mullins, S. C. They were hiding in the woods and shooting at our boys, who at first thought they were Frenchmen."

German stragglers are wandering in to surrender.

Harry Harris, Associated Press photographer of Flushing, N. Y., found them annoying at Barneville. "While we were eating, the Germans kept coming in and wanting to know where they could surrender. We couldn't eat for those lugs," exclaimed Harris.

French civilians suggested to Harris that he give up eating and go into the woods and round up the prisoners, "but I figured flash bulbs weren't good enough weapons," Harris said.

LEADER TELLS RAIDER'S STORY

GREENE

Commando Force Defeated a Nazi Brigade.

JUN 22 1944

By ROGER D. GREENE.

With the British Army in Normandy, June 12 (Delayed) (A. P.).—The story of the green-bereted daredevils who scorn battle helmets and fight German armor with small arms was told today by their leader, Lord Lovat, a 32-year-old brigadier.

[Lord Lovat was wounded in Normandy and is now in a British hospital out of danger, it was disclosed today in London.]

DAY

Lord Lovat, standing erect on a hilltop where sniper bullets frequently whizzed, related how his commandos stormed the beaches on D day and jog-marched nine miles inland weighted by rucksacks weighing up to 150 pounds.

The commandos fought through machine-gun nests and pillboxes to a dramatic junction with airborne forces across the Caen canal.

"I'm proud of them, really proud," the tall, darkly handsome commando chieftain said. "They knew they had a terrific job to do and they did it."

Fought at Dieppe.

I had come ashore with the Commandos, landing at 8:45 A. M. or sixty minutes after zero hour on D day. Many of them had been at Dieppe and I knew how they felt about getting another crack at the Germans.

I wanted to see them in action but I am no Commando and I fell exhausted on the beach after staggering fifty yards ashore under a mere sixty-five-pound pack while the fighters raced inland, fighting most of the way, and completed the first five miles in three and a half hours.

From the Caen canal, the Commandos stormed and captured a vital hill. For the first four days, they fought without sleep on forty-eight hours of field rations. Only 2,000 strong at the outset, they beat off an attack by a German battalion and subsequently drove back a brigade equipped with self-propelled guns still using only the weapons they carried in on their backs.

Finally the enemy decided they were too hot to handle.

Foe Cut Down in Swathes.

"The Germans attacked walking forward in line, standing straight up," Lord Lovat said. "The Commandos held their fire and then simply cut them down in swathes. The only time the Germans got through was when our guns jammed or got too hot to hold, but the Germans never stayed inside our lines—not alive."

In a British phrase, the Nazis "have had it" and they're not having any more.

Tommies Battle Nazis by Light Of Shellbursts

Win House-to-House Gains at Lonerives; Tank War at Tilly Enters 11th Day

WITH ALLIED INVASION FORCES IN FRANCE, June 21 (AP).—Allied forces driving ahead under black, drizzling skies, punched out beyond Tilly-sur-Seulles today while a pitched battle of tanks and men in the Tilly-Hottot area raged into its eleventh day.

The Germans were described officially as "fighting with fanatical fury, despite enormous losses."

The battle, which has been flaming without let-up day and night, was being fought in thick wooded country and shell-wrecked villages.

DAY

The bitterest action over night centered around Lonerives. British Tommies grappled with the enemy in eerie house-to-house fighting by the light of shell bursts and tiny firefly-like flashes of tracer bullets.

"We are well on top of the Boche and have stacks of tanks," a staff officer said, commenting on one sector of the Allied front which has been virtually static for more than a week. "Also, we have aircraft operating from strips in this country."

German artillery activity increased sharply on the left flank, particularly east of the Orne River. The Nazis were using long-range guns but apparently no railroad artillery, largely because of the fact that Allied planes have interdicted almost every German rail line for many miles inland.

French front weather was bad again this morning, murky with cold winds and heavily overcast skies. Some supplies were coming in by air.

Aside from the Tilly and Hottot sector, the eastern end of the front was quiet compared with the spectacular American assault on Cherbourg.

FRENCH MAQUIS IRREGULARS AID INVADING ARMIES

JUN 22 1944

By EDWARD V. ROBERTS

Representing the Combined American Press Distributed by The Associated Press

ALLIED ADVANCE COMMAND POST, France, June 21. — French Maquis irregulars in constantly mounting strength have not only seriously hindered reinforcements for Nazi Normandy defenses, but also have fought several pitched battles with German troops, it was disclosed today.

Sharp engagements have been fought in Brittany, where the Maquis are extremely well organized and also in departments along the Swiss and Italian frontiers, I have been informed.

NIGHT

Harassing actions in southwestern France have delayed the advance of one Nazi Panzer division, it was said. Informed military sources said the Maquis are able to cut rail lines in Brittany every day.

Thousands of recruits flock to the Maquis standard with each successive Allied advance in Normandy, they said, and a high degree of organization has been perfected, thus making possible a coordinated program in which the destruction of rail lines, bridges and telephone cables is the goal. This campaign has resulted in the destruction of telephone cables at key points surrounding Paris, Bordeaux, Toulouse and other important cities.

Supplied with Arms

Although the French underground is supplied with arms and ammunition, the Allied command did not rely upon the action of these patriots as an important factor in the invasion operation.

However, Maquis operations have assumed such a scale that they now are definitely a tremendous help to the Normandy campaign. The organization of the Maquis has been so successful, I was informed, that the Nazis apparently found it necessary to assign certain troops to combat Maquis activities only, thus making it impossible to use these units as reinforcements for the Normandy front.

Before D-Day, the Allies considered it possible that the Germans might be able completely to suppress guerrilla activities by French units behind the lines. Now the Maquis organization is running so smoothly it appears to be a definite menace to the German forces.

Nazis Execute 13 Canadians, Report

JUN 22 1944

London, June 21 (AP)—The London Daily Mirror's war correspondent said in a dispatch from France today that 13 Canadian prisoners had been lined up and shot by the Germans in a French village now in Allied hands.

The correspondent, George McCarthy, said the men had died with photographs of "their loved ones—their wives, sweethearts or children"—in their hands and that it was clear the Canadians had "been lined up to die."

30. 04— 16427

He said the bodies were discovered in the grounds of a chateau in the village of Audrieu south of the Bayeux-Caen railway line.

"A French woman who lived in the chateau during the German occupation confirms the news that the Canadians were marched out and shot," he wrote. "British troops who followed the Canadians into the area heard of the shooting from a Frenchman who testified that altogether 25 prisoners of war were shot by the Germans. No trace has been found of the remaining 12."

GUERRILLAS ACTIVE

JUN 22 1944

LONDON, June 21.—(AP) Continental reports said today guerrillas were fighting the Germans across France from Normandy and Brittany down to the mountainous Drome department near the Mediterranean coast.

The Germans were declared throwing increasing forces and even heavy artillery against patriot bands.

NIGHT

Heavy losses have been inflicted on the Germans by guerrillas in the massive central battles, said Radio France of Algiers, which detailed also multiple sabotage to roads, canals and communications.

BERLIN BLASTED BY U. S. BOMBERS

JUN 22 1944

LONDON, Thursday June 22—(AP) Berlin was blasted yesterday by more than 1,000 U. S. heavy bombers, under a fighter escort of the same size in the greatest raid of the war on the German capital and early today it was disclosed that some of the bombers had flown on to Russia, completing the first shuttle mission in history from bases in Britain to airfields in the Soviet Union.

Dispatches from an American base in the U.S.S.R. told of the landing.

NOTHING

The German radio said this mighty assault by Flying Fortresses and Liberators was followed up early today with another attack on the Reich capital by R.A.F. bombers.

DNB said Berlin was raided "between 1 a.m. and 2 a.m."

This hammering of the capital twice in 12 hours came as other U. S. Liberators headed a stream of planes in a round-the-clock bombardment of the comet bomb launching platforms in the Pas-de-Calais area.

(CBS Correspondent James Fleming reported tonight from Moscow that for the first time heavy bombers of the Eighth Air Force landed in Russia after attacking enemy targets in eastern Europe.

(This new development in shuttle bombing, he said, followed the first shuttle raids by U. S. heavy bombers and fighters taking off from Italy. This report coincided with earlier unconfirmed ones from Berlin that some of the fleet that raided Berlin flew on east.)

The Americans' twelfth and heaviest blow at Berlin cost 43 bombers and 15 fighters as they plowed through clouds and flak. Forty-nine German fighters were knocked down, 20 by fighters and 29 by bombers' guns.

NIGHT

A report from the R.A.F. said some rocket-launching sites on the Cherbourg peninsula had been captured intact, giving Allied scientists a chance to develop further methods of combatting the jet-propelled explosives which have been hurled at southern England for a week.

The Budapest radio went off the air shortly before midnight, indicating the Mediterranean Air force may be striking at the Balkans.

At midnight the German radio said "intruder aircraft" were approaching northwestern Germany.

Batters Comet Plane Grounds

British Lancasters and Halifaxes, which usually do their bombing at night, flew their fourth daylight mission since D-day, continuing the assault on the comet bomb grounds, after Liberators and mediums had unloaded their bombs and returned to base.

The Berlin raiders, with an escort of 1,200 fighters, bombed an aircraft engine factory at Basdorf, a Berlin suburb, the Berlin railroad yards, factories and other military objectives. There were some clouds but most combat wings bombed visually and reported results were good.

As Berliners dug casualties from the smouldering rubble, the German radio called the raid a retaliatory blow for the jet-propelled bombs, which winged over southern England for the seventh straight day, and added: "but no matter whether bombs are being dropped on Berlin or not, the bombardment of London with the new weapon will continue."

German propagandists, admitting casualties and damage in the capital, threatened counter-action with "bigger and more powerful explosives."

Terrific Bomb Load

It was considered likely the Flying Fortresses and Liberators, some of whom reported they did not see a single enemy fighter over Berlin, dropped more explosives on the capital in an hour than the Germans had been able to launch from their battered rocket ramps in seven days.

Throughout the day Allied airmen flew on countless missions over Normandy, pounding German transport and communications while other squadrons followed up heavy night blows at the rocket platforms.

One force of Liberators, escorted by Thunderbolts, pounded the platforms around Pas de Calais again this evening and returned without loss, the U. S. Strategic Air Force announced.

Squadron upon squadron of medium bombers streamed back and forth across the straits for three hours in the evening, apparently hammering away at these same targets. The first formations met the returning Liberators.

Eighth Air Force fighters, some with little to do convoying the heavies to Berlin, strafed enemy air dromes and communications.

Most of the bombers dropped their cargoes through cloud cover. Only one or two groups saw many enemy planes and these were mainly two-engined JU-88's.

Thunderbolts, Mustangs and Lightnings swept in to attack about 50 of them and one pilot said about every JU-88 he saw was smoking, blowing up or its crew was bailing out. One Mustang group reported shooting down eight while losing one plane.

Returning crewmen said fires still blazed at Hamburg and other targets struck on yesterday's mission over Germany.

Four Liberator groups reported seeing a force of 60 Messerschmitt fighters and JU-88's who were so eager to fight they flew right through their own flak, which was described as intense over the target area.

12 Land in Sweden

Stockholm reported that 12 more bombers made emergency landings in Sweden, making a total of 33 in two days of wide-spread raids on the Reich.

The Ninth Air Force announced that its anti-aircraft guns of the newly-formed Ninth Air defense command had joined in the shooting of the rocket bombs and so far had blasted at least 15.

This was just one phase of operations against the missiles as the Allied expeditionary air force reported that Allied medium and light bombers in 23,500 flights since January had unloaded more than 19,000 tons of bombs on the rocket sites in addition to the smashing blows of the heavies.

RAF pilots flying fast, heavily-armed tempest planes brought down many of the pilotless planes today.

FIGHTER OPPOSITION LIGHT

JUN 22 1944

Returning Crewmen Report Heavy Flak but Few Nazis Oppose Bombing.

London, June 21 (A. P.).—More than 1,000 American Flying Fortresses and Liberators blasted Berlin and the capital's outskirts today, and the German radio indicated that at least some of the planes flew on eastward—possibly in the first shuttle raid from Britain to new American bases in Russia.

If this is true the operation, dovetailing with attacks on Europe from the Mediterranean theater and the southeastern shuttle raids from the Mediterranean area to Russian bases, completes the Allies' aerial "ring of steel" around the beleaguered Reich.

Russia's frontier is some 900 miles air line from England—easily within the range of both Flying Fortresses and Liberators which yesterday flew more than 1,000 miles roundup to the Stettin area.

DAY

"Enemy combat formations previously reported over Silesia (the extreme eastern projection of Germany between Poland and Czecho-Slovakia) flying toward the east have flown beyond the eastern frontier of the Reich," the broadcast said.

The bomber fleet had an escort of around 1,000 fighters, making a total force of some 2,000 planes which carried the aerial war once more to the heart of the German homeland.

No more than fifty German fighters rose today to challenge the biggest fleet of American bombers ever to fly over Berlin. Hundreds of bombers with their huge escorts of P-51 Mustangs and P-38 Lightnings swarmed unmolested over the Nazi capital, while only one or two bomber groups reported seeing any fighters at all.

One group of Flying Fortresses was attacked by a Junkers-88s, but their attacks were mild compared with some of the previous missions over Berlin.

"The condensation trails were so heavy over Berlin today that it was like flying through a heavy haze," said Sergt. Charles McLean, 2555 Cropsey avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. "We couldn't see Berlin when we were directly over it, but on the way out I saw huge fires and lots of smoke."

Basdorf, on Berlin's outskirts, also was blasted.

German broadcasts admitted damage and casualties and threatened to retaliate with "bigger and more powerful explosives" than those used in the current rocket bomb offensive.

At the same time big fleets of Allied planes were observed streaking out across Dover Strait and disappearing in the direction of the German rocket bomb bases, which now have been pounded continuously for five days.

Report Hanover Attack.

Berlin broadcasts said the Hanover and Brunswick areas had been attacked by the daylight raiders, but there was no immediate Allied confirmation of these reports.

During the night the tempo of the Allied aerial offensive was maintained as R. A. F. Mosquitoes thundered out in relays for four hours to harass German lines of reinforcements by blasting the Mezidon railroad yards near Caen in the Normandy battle area. Rail yards at Chartres also were hit.

Along with the Pas de Calais bomb launching platforms German gun casements defending the tip of the Cherbourg peninsula and a stubborn coastal battery at Houlgate, near the Allies' east flank, were bombed both yesterday and last night.

Flames mounted high after the attack on the railroad junction of Chartres, 80 miles southwest of Paris, and trains on the Chartres-Lemans line were shot up.

While the results were reported "satisfactory," the attacks covered only a part of the installations, because hours afterward English skies hummed intermittently with the jet-explosions of the buzz-bombs.

FOE IS BUILDING IN ROCKET AREA

JUN 22 1944

Nazis Push Construction Despite Bombings.

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 21 (A. P.).—The Germans have more rocket bomb launching installations under construction and, except for the six months' campaign of preventive Allied air attacks, the secret weapon onslaught might have been far worse, it was disclosed at headquarters today.

Flying bombs dropped on southern England today, after attacks on an increased scale during the night and Allied air fleets again this afternoon assaulted the Pas de Calais sector from which the pilotless weapons are launched.

R. A. F. pilots flying fast, heavily armed Tempest planes also brought down many pilotless aircraft. The two squadrons based here have two American pilots.

DAY

Pilot Officer Seymour Feldman, 8305 1st avenue, Brooklyn, is second high scorer with four and one-half successes against the Doodlebugs. He shared his latest victim with another pilot last night. A Briton leads with five kills.

Flight Lieut. George Whitman, Conshohocken, Pa., has three of the robots to his credit.

"The best way to get these Doodlebugs is to close in to 100-200 yards and let 'em have it right in the middle, and then climb like hell," Feldman said. "That way you escape the blast."

Medium and light bombers and fighter-bombers alone—in addition to intermittent attacks by heavy bombers—made 420 attacks on the installations since January, flying 23,500 individual plane sorties and dropping 19,000 tons of bombs.

Installations are Dispersed.

Lieut.-Gen. Lewis H. Brereton, commander of the United States Ninth Air Force, said the rocket installations were of two types. The first were built with platforms, barracks and auxiliary buildings closely compact. The latter ones — presumably built after the Allied attacks had begun — were widely dispersed, making bombing difficult.

Most installations are among woods and orchards and have been given additional camouflage, he said, with some buildings disguised as farmhouses.

Typical of the setup is a long concrete launching platform pointed toward England. Adjacent buildings are used for final assembly of the rockets and storage.

Most of the original installations had been put out of commission by D day, Gen. Brereton said, but since the start of the bombing it has been a constant race of construction and destruction between the Germans and the Allied bombers.

King George VI today visited areas in southeast England which have been under attack by the German robot bomb, and was cheered by the crowd a BBC broadcast heard here by NBC., said. An earlier broadcast from Berlin had stated that King George had fled from London on account of the robot bombs.

DIVEBOMBERS HIT NAZI TROOP TRAINS

JUN 22 1944

ADVANCED HEADQUARTERS OF U. S. NINTH AIR FORCE IN FRANCE, June 20.—(Delayed) — Thunderbolt divebombers smashed two German troop trains tonight a few minutes after the trains had been spotted by a reconnaissance patrol.

Each train consisted of 55 cars filled with Germans. They were spotted as they pulled into the yards at Villedieu les Poeles, below Barneville on the southwest coast of the Cherbourg peninsula.

U. S. Bombers From Britain Welcomed At Russian Base

GILMORE JUN 22 1944

A United States Air Base [illegible] where in the Soviet Union, June 21 (AP)—Heavy bombers of the United States Eighth Air Force put down on Russian soil for the first time today in a shattering shuttle bombing against Hitler's fortress from Britain.

It was the first time in history any kind of bombers had flown from Britain and landed in the Soviet Union, although shuttle operation already was established between the U. S. S. R. and Allied bases in Italy.

Escort Of Soviet Fighters

Soviet and American fighters escorted the Eighth Air Force crewmen on their mission and Soviet and American ground crews, working in harmony, welcomed Lieut. Gen. James H. Doolittle's big bombers to Russia.

"Just as was true with the 15th (Italian-based) Air Force's original landings," said a commander, "so it is with this—a real Russian-American operation."

But today the smiling Russians, who greeted the first Americans with a terse "Allo, Joe," unlimbered their growing English vocabulary to: "Hello, boy, welcome to the Soviet Union."

Americans poured out of the planes by the hundreds.

Like Texas Or Wyoming

"So this is Russia," was usually the first comment, or: "Why this looks just like Texas" or, "no it doesn't, it looks like Wyoming"—or Nebraska or Ohio or New York.

American bombers in Russian skies are still a novelty to the people near these bases and the welcome they gave the 15th Air Force earlier in the month was repeated today as the huge craft, free of their explosive loads, nosed down in perfect formation to runways made by American and Soviet workmen.

High Soviet and American officials were on hand. The Russians included Lieut. Gen. Alexander R. Perminov. Among the Americans was Maj. Gen. John R. Deane, head of the United States Military Mission to Moscow

Rocket Firing Invasion Boats Devastated Targets on Beach

By PAUL KERN LEE

NEW YORK, June 21 — (AP) One of the ingenious new weapons successfully used by the Allies in the European invasions was the spectacular LCR (Landing Craft, Rockets), known jokingly in the trade as "the expendable battleship."

The LCR is a tank landing craft hull fitted with a series of explosives rocket guns designed to lay waste any given stretch of beach.

Seen at a little distance its deck looks like stack of organ pipes laid row on row, pointing forward at a fixed angle.

The hold, which ordinarily would contain tanks, carries the necessary vast store of ammunition.

The whole contrivance is controlled from an asbestos and steel shelter on the stern.

The operator, clad in fireproof clothing, can set off the rockets electrically singly, in series or all at once in one great shattering broadside.

Since the rockets are at a fixed angle, a few single ranging rounds are fired as the craft approaches the beach. Then when it is directly on the target area, the whole lot is fired, usually in two series.

The explosion and recoil are so tremendous that to fire all at once would risk breaking the back of the ship. So great is the fire and shock that all members of the crew except the operator go below and throw themselevs flat after battering down all hatches.

Used in Italy

The full broadside is described as heavier than that of the battleships Nelson or Rodney, each of which have nine 16-inch guns.

In most cases in the Sicilian landings, where LCR's got their first big chance, the circumstances were such that they did not get a lot of use. Later they performed with terrifying effect when the Eighth Army leaped the Messina straits to Italy.

Beach mines, barbed wire entanglements, machine-gun nests and any living thing on the designated strip of beach simply disappear under the scorching fire of the LCR, which precedes the landing party.

When seen for the first time in action at night, the LCR looks like an exploding ammunition ship, but the great sheets of orange flame upon discharge are soon followed by the red glare of hundreds of rockets exploding on the enemy shore.

NAZI LUFTWAFFE BEATEN DECLARES GLENN L. MARTIN

JUN 22 1944

BALTIMORE, June 21 — (AP) The use of flying bombs by the Nazis "is a sign to me that the Luftwaffe has met defeat," airplane builder Glenn L. Martin declared today, saying the Germans no longer can risk planes and flyers from a dwindling pilot pool.

At the same time, the head of the Glenn L. Martin company predicted in an interview that "we can expect automatic flying bombs to have great range in the next war.

"They will be capable of coming from Europe to America and will have a 5,000-mile range, but no one would know where they would land because of the inability to compute variable winds."

Remarking that the jet-propelled devices, while inaccurate, "spell total war against every living thing," Martin continued:

"It is my guess that the Nazis have been defeated in getting into the areas against which they now are using such weapons and they turn to this method as a result of this defeat. They have always hit populations generally. We have always chosen our targets."

Martin also commented that the flying bomb, launched with the aid of rockets against England, "deals only with area bombing and is not considered an important weapon.

"An automatic flying bomb must assume a target area three miles or so in diameter when operated at present short ranges; at vastly enlarged target areas as ranges increase. We have not seen fit to use such an indiscriminate weapon.

"The Tactical Board has not thought enough of it to do anything with it."

Leaflets Warn U. S. Of Robot Bombings

JUN 22 1944

Austin, Minn., June 21 (AP)—The Austin Herald reported today that a railroad employe had picked up five swastika-embellished sheets of paper warning of robot bombings in store for the United States after a train bearing war prisoners had passed through here.

The newspaper said a sample leaflet read:

"Americans! Soon the robot bombers will come to your soil. Soon you will feel what war means. Quit the war before it is too late."

The leaflets, the Herald said, will be turned over to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

'Thanks For Escort . . . See Ya After War'

JUN 22 1944

London, June 21 (AP)—Capt. James Cheney, Briggsdale (Ohio) Mustang pilot, played firewatcher for a Flying Fortress over Germany today and then counted the men parachuting out of the bomber so he could report that the pilot and all the crew got out safely before it exploded.

NIGHT

The Fortress broke out of formation and by radio its pilot asked Cheney whether he had a blaze in the left wing. Cheney flew around the Fort, reported the extent of the fire and then, at the pilot's request, checked the jumpers.

"Thanks for the escort fellows," was the Fortress pilot's final radioed message to Cheney and other fighters. "See you after the war."

Stripes On Nazi Planes Cannot Deceive Gunner

JUN 24 1944

A United States Bomber Base in England, June 21 (AP)—The Germans tried to fool American bomber crews by painting black and white identification stripes of the Allied invasion craft on their own planes—but a keen-eyed Liberator gunner outsmarted them.

A formation of striped FW-109s which resemble American planes tried to fly side-by-side with a Liberator group. Suddenly they peeled off, performed a lazy eight and made ready for a sneak attack on the bombers.

NIGHT

But Sergt. Amos Adkins, of San Francisco, top-turret gunner started blazing away.

SERGEANT BOMBS BERLIN BY HAND

JUN 22 1944

A United States Bomber Base in England, June 21 (A. P.).—Sergt. Kenneth Peners, of South Minneapolis, Minn., a Liberator ball turret gunner bombed Berlin by hand today.

When ten incendiary bombs, ready to explode, became stuck in the bomb rack, he climed from the turret to release them.

Without a parachute he went into the open bomb bay, and from his precarious perch several miles above the ground, removed the bombs one by one and flung them triumphantly at the targets.

A chunk of anti-aircraft shell, six inches long and nearly an inch thick, tore through his Fortress over Berlin today and struck him on the chest.

NIGHT

The armored and padded vest saved him—for the fourth time in 29 missions.

Letter to President Speeds Birthday Cake

JUN 22 1944

U. S. NINTH AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS, England, June 21 — (AP) Sgt. Donald Kantner had a birthday cake for his 21st birthday today because his mother sent five dollars to President Roosevelt with a request that Kantner get his cake on time.

The letter, marked "immediate action," was forwarded to Kantner's commanding officer, Lt. Col. George L. Wertenbacker, Jr., of Charlottesville, Va.

A cake, with "Happy Birthday" on the icing, was flown from England to Kantner's base in France.

The five-dollar bill was returned to Mrs. Kantner at Ringzown, Pa.

12 Bombers Land in Sweden

JUN 22 1944

Stockholm, June 21 (A. P.).—Twelve American heavy bombers came down in Sweden today, boosting to thirty-three the number reaching Sweden in two days. Two bombers crashed in landing today and it was not known immediately whether the crews were saved.

DAY

"I'm reeling," the newspaper Aftonbladet's veteran Berlin correspondent telephoned today after the Berlin raid.

Great masses of high explosives and incendiaries hurled on the battered city caused severe damage and started many fires, he said.

Rocket Bombs Are Dropped

JUN 22 1944

LONDON, June 21 (AP).—It was considered likely the Flying Fortresses and Liberators, some of whom reported they did not see a single enemy fighter over Berlin, dropped more explosives on the capital in an hour today than the Germans had been able to launch from their battered rocket ramps in seven days.

De Gaulle in Coup d'Etat, Sets Up Political Prefects

By DON WHITEHEAD

WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES IN FRANCE, June 19—(Delayed)—(AP) Representatives of Gen. Charles de Gaulle's provisional government have already moved into liberated sections of Normandy to set up political control of civil affairs, although the provisional government as yet has not been recognzed by the United States.

Francois Coulet, who as Secretary-General of Corsica and Under-Prefect for that area, has arrived in Bayeux to take over duties as Commissioner of the Republic for the region of Rouen.

Obviously this is a coup d'etat for de Gaulle, who simply brought his men into the beachhead when he came ashore last week and set them to work as rightful directors of French political affairs. Under present plans de Gaullists will occupy key political posts in each region as it is liberated.

NIGHT

To Delay Elections

These representatives will be appointed by the provisional government which does not plan to hold local elections until all France has been liberated.

"Until the whole of France has been liberated and Frenchmen who are prisoners in Germany have been returned to their homes there can be no universal election," Coulet said in an interview today. "They should have voice in the selection of officals."

Under the Vichy reorganization of French political districts France is divided into regions which in turn are divided into departments much as states in America are divided into counties. Each region has a commissioner and each department a prefect to direct its internal affairs. Under the prefects are sub-prefects, with mayors as political heads of the towns.

"We'll probably keep the districts as they have been set up by Vichy," Coulet said. "They are economic for administrative purposes."

In addition to directing civil affairs, Coulet's organization intends to enlist a territorial army as a small token force to help the Allied military keep order.

"There will be no mobilization," Coulet said. "We'll call only for volunteers because we have a harvest at hand and men are needed on farms."

Coulet said he saw no reason why there should be any friction between his organization and Allied military civil affairs. As he put it, "Allied civil affairs represents the army while I represent the French people."

As yet there has been no friction between the two although both have made appointments to offices in the beachhead area—each independent of the other.

In Bayeux Coulet removed the sub-prefect from office and appointed in his place a young native of the region, a well-to-do farmer named Triboulet. The sub-prefect was removed because he was too close to the Vichy regime. Just what would happen if Allied civil affairs appointees are not suitable to the de Gaullists is not exactly clear. The point has not yet arisen.

But if they are able to show that the officeholder had "acted against the interests of the Allies" then the Civil Affairs officer's have no alternative but to get rid of him. According to the Civil Affairs officer, Coulet said, there had not been a single case of opposition to his office from the old Vichy elements, and he knew of only one case where a collaborationist was manhandled by patriots after the Allies liberated this area.

However, Normandy can hardly be regarded as typical of what can be expected in other parts of France. The Normandy peasantry is not politically-minded and they are far more interested in their farms and in economic interests than in politics.

While the Normans are undoubtedly pleased with the arrival of the Allies they are not demonstrative and have been rather reserved. They are definitely anti-German and anti-Vichy, from my impression, but there has been no wild acclaim of the Allies as liberators.

Whether the people are de Gaullists or not is difficult to say. They gave the general a spontaneous enthusiastic reception when he visited the beachhead last week, but there are many who say they are interested only in the liberation of France and not in politics.

Committee Termed Best Qualified to Conduct War Effort

LONDON, June 21 (AP).—The Norwegian Government today announced recognition of General Charles de Gaulle's Committee of National Liberation as "the body qualified to conduct and lead the French war effort within the framework of inter-Allied co-operation and also preserve and protect all French interests."

Meanwhile, the London "Daily Star" predicted that after Cherbourg has been captured the United States and Great Britain will recognize de Gaulle's organization as the French Provisional government.

Attack Finns Along Rail Line

To Murmansk

London, Thursday, June 22 (AP) — Reuters, British news agency, reported from Stockholm early today that there were unconfirmed reports a Finnish peace Cabinet was formed last night.

London, June 21 (AP)—The Red army launched two new surprise offensives today against Finland's tottering defenses, driving both from the northeast and the southeast in an effort to knock the Finns out of the war, Moscow announced tonight.

Springing into action on the new fronts less than 24 hours after announcement of the fall of Viipuri Soviet troops struck north of Lake Onezhskoe (Onega), breaking through Finnish lines east of Medvazhegorsk, and also opened another drive along the Svir river between Lakes Onezhskoe and Ladoga.

Along Murmansk Railway

These offensives were along the Murmansk - Leningrad railway, which the Soviet high command apparently is bent upon clearing as soon as possible. The front at Medvezhegorsk is approximately 240 miles northeast of Viipuri and the one along the Svir is 150 to 200 miles due east of the captured Finnish port.

The broadcast Russian communique said that in the first day of the attack along the Svir, Soviet units occupied more than 200 populated places, including Voznesene, a district center of the Leningrad region.

Another Moscow broadcast stated that Soviet troops, hitting westward from the top of Lake Onezhskoe, have closed in on the town of Medvezhegorsk and already are fighting in its outskirts.

Press Toward Helsinki

At the same time the Russian drive which started 12 days ago on the Karelian isthmus plunged well beyond Viipuri, probing within 120 miles of Helsinki, the capital, and capturing more than 50 additional places.

Combined with the threat to Helsinki from the south, the new Russian thrusts not only jeopardized further Finland's ability to continue in the war, but also menaced the seven divisions of German troops garrisoned in northern Finland as protection for the vast metal mines located there.

The twin thrusts were launched in territory that is Russia's own, but which was occupied by the Finns in 1941 soon after Germany declared war on Russia. So far as is known the Finns never have prepared defenses that would compare in any way with the Mannerheim Line.

Finns May Be Cut Off

The Finnish divisions holding the territory along the Svir river and Lake Onezhskoe were practically isolated and dependent upon the Helsinki-Petrozovodsk railway for supplies even before Govorov's drive began and since then have been in danger of being cut off entirely. Govorov's push is expected soon to cut the railway at Vilmerstrand, 40 miles north of Viipuri.

The towns captured in the drive northward between Lakes Onezhskoe and Ladoga were strung all along the Svir river and the Soviet communique said Red troops had wiped out a Finnish bridgehead on the southern bank of the river and themselves crossed to the northern bank.

Take Rail Point

Vichka, on the rail line to Murmansk, was captured in the fighting around Medvezhegorsk, some 140 miles to the north. Here, also, the communique said, Red troops occupied the large workers' settlements of Pindushi and Povenets, 13 miles east of Medvezhegorsk.

The Russian assault advanced in an expanding semi-circle from Viipuri. While forward units of Marshal Leonid A. Govorov's forces were said to have pressed as many as six miles out from the port, the communique announced the capture of Sorvali, two miles northwest on the island of Linnosaari; the railway station and town of Tammisuo; Patakahai; and other places extending out to Heinjoki, 15 miles northeast of Viipuri.

6 Miles Beyond Viipuri

One Soviet spearhead was reported to have driven beyond Manikkala, six miles northeast of Viipuri and less than 120 miles from Helsinki. Other Russian detachments were said by Moscow correspondents to be mopping up groups of Finns still holding out in the debris of the Mannerheim Line.

The offical Finnish radio appealed to non-essential civilians to evacuate Helsinki, saying that "in view of the scope of the Russian offensive in Karelia, everyone whose presence in Helsinki is not essential, in particular children, should leave for the country."

...istice Hinted

Even before the new Soviet drives were announced by Moscow, reports received through Stockholm said Finnish political leaders were considering a quick armistice with Russia as a means of averting a fall of the government.

Grave fears were expressed that the Nazis themselves might seize upon the situation to install a puppet government in northern Finland.

RUSSIANS DRIVING ON FROM VIIPURI TOWARD HELSINKI

London, June 21 (A. P.).—Red Army troops opened a new offensive in Karelia, north of Lake Onega, today and broke through enemy defenses east of Medvezhegorsk, at the northern tip of the lake, Moscow announced tonight.

Reds Drive for Helsinki.

London, June 21 (A. P.).—Victorious Russian troops which occupied Finland's fortress seaport of Viipuri yesterday drove on today toward the capital of Helsinki, where the Germans were reported to be exerting pressure to keep their small ally from suing for peace with Premier Joseph V. Stalin of the Soviet Union. The Finnish radio, which told of the Russian advance, urged all persons whose presence was not essential to evacuate Helsinki, which lies approximately 135 airline miles west of Viipuri.

The Stockholm newspaper Dagens Nyheter said that the Germans were endeavoring to block the formation of a Finnish peace cabinet which the Finns asserted would be formed very soon as a result of the Russian successes. A Finnish informant in Stockholm said that the loss of the key Karelian fortifications "left us helpless because our whole scheme of defense was built on the expectation we would be able to hold there."

"Our over-extended armies in eastern Karelia are now endangered," he added. "To carry on would mean falling back into the lake and forest region and fighting guerrilla warfare."

The Moscow radio said that Finland was on the brink of defeat. What steps the Germans would take to try to keep Finland in the war were uncertain.

A Stockholm report said that the Germans were threatening the occupation of three Finnish ports along a seventy-mile stretch at the head of the Gulf of Bothnia—Tornio, Kemi and Oulu—and the Aland Islands, in the gulf between Sweden and Finland. By these tactics the Germans could control shipping routes to the north and the nickel mines vital to both Germany and the Finns, the report said.

Marshal Stalin's announcement declared that Red Army troops had crashed through the Mannerheim Line, and, "developing their offensive, overpowered the outer and inner defenses of Viipuri, and today, June 20, carried by assault the fortress and town of Viipuri."

RUSSIA REPORTS 7,800,000 NAZIS KILLED, CAPTURED

JUN 22 1944

LONDON, Thursday, June 22. — (AP) The Soviet Information Bureau in a review on today's third anniversary of the German attack on Russia, reported tonight that more than 7,800,000 Germans have been killed and captured in the three years of fighting.

During that same period, said the review broadcast from Moscow and recorded in London by the Soviet monitor, Russian losses totaled 5,300,000 men killed, missing or captured.

The Information Bureau said the Germans had lost 70,000 tanks, 60,000 airplanes and more than 90,000 pieces of artillery, while Russian losses were 49,000 tanks, 30,128 airplanes and 48,000 guns.

"In the course of offensive battles," the review continued, "Soviet troops have liberated some 1,500,000 square kilometers (579,200 square miles) of enemy-occupied territory and advanced nearly 2,000 kilometers (1,247 miles) to the west, reached our frontiers on a front of great length, and entered territory of Romania.

"Victories of the Red army have brought liberation from Fascist captivity to millions of Soviet people.

"Our troops have deprived the Germans of sources of industrial raw material and food supplies in occupied territory.

Lebensraum's Graveyard

"Their 'Lebensraum' in the east, about which the Hitlerites had dreamed, has become a graveyard for millions of German soldiers, a gigantic cemetery of Fascist war equipment."

The review declared that "a considerable contribution to the success of the Red army was made by our Allies, the United States of America and Great Britain, who supplied us with very valuable strategic raw materials and arms and subjected Germany's military objectives to systematic bombing and thereby undermined Germany's military might."

The review declared that "in the last 18 months since the defeat of the German Fascist troops before Stalingrad, the enemy has been unable to recover.

"Soviet troops . . . have demonstrated that all the walls and fortresses about which there was so much talk by the Hitlerites cannot stand if destruction and overcoming of them is undertaken by tried troops, tempered in battle.

"The Germans today face complete defeat."

Challenging German propaganda, the Information Bureau said "unity of the Allied states is now more stable than ever before.

"The Allied states have concerted plans for the complete defeat of Hitlerite Germany.

"The brilliantly achieved invasion of northern France by British and American troops and the successful offensive of Allied troops in Italy signify that henceforth Germany will have to fight on European territory against the Red army and the troops of our Allies, Britain and the U.S.A."

Touching on the northern front, it said, "the criminal ruling clique of Finland, which, to suit Hitler, rejected the magnanimous peace proposals put forward by the Soviet Union, has actually brought Finland to military catastrophe.

"The other vassals of Hitler—Romania, Hungary and Bulgaria—are hanging over an abyss."

Nazi Attack on Helsinki Feared as Counter Move; Government Near Crisis

STOCKHOLM, June 21 (AP).—Faced by military catastrophe, Finnish political leaders were reported tonight to be seeking to avert a government crisis by a quick armistice with the Russians.

[A British broadcast recorded by the National Broadcasting Company, said that an announcement confirming the formation of a new Finnish peace cabinet was expected in the night.]

Although Finnish sources expressed fear of German countermeasures, particularly a possible attack on Helsinki by parachute troops, political spokesmen were quoted as saying: "Our position is so bad we must act very quickly in reaching an armistice with the Russians."

NIGHT

Unconfirmed reports that the Germans have offered the Finns two armored divisions if the Helsinki government promises to continue the war were circulated in Stockholm.

Puppet Regime Feared

A Finnish source in Stockholm, who cannot be identified by name, said, however, the military situation of his homeland had so deteriorated that "it is no longer a question of one or two divisions which are needed."

Viipuri forced the Finns to give up the first war in 1940.

Fear Puppet Regime

Of grave concern to the Finns, also, was the possibility that the Germans might set up a puppet government in northern Finland—accusing the Helsinki Government of being traitors.

These fears were grounded on the fact that Germany has built up Finland in propaganda as its strongest ally, and should Finland withdraw from the war, the Nazis would have a problem in explaining the action to the home front and other satellite nations.

Peace Bloc, Mannerheim At Odds

The Swedish newspaper Aftonbladet yesterday said the struggle between peace activists and the pro-German clique in Finland was nearing a climax.

Aftonbladet added that Field Marshal Baron Carl Gustav Mannerheim, Finnish commander in chief, and peace activists were having "difficulties," as the political-military crisis became more pronounced.

Acknowledging that Finnish forces in eastern Karelian "are dangerously close to being trapped," Finnish sources said that until an armistice is reached "our only choice is to fall back along the historic defense line against the Russians, running west and north of Viipuri along the Kyminojoki river and the lake region."

Dispatches from the Finnish front said that although the Finns had shown no official sign of modifying military insistence upon prosecuting the separate war with the Russians, their defensive spirit seems less determined than that of the Germans.

From Moscow it was reported there were no signs of a Finnish peace move, although the fall of

Procope And Two Aides Begin Homeward Trip

JUN 22 1944

Washington, June 21 (AP)—The State Department completed arrangements today for the return to Finland of Finnish Minister Hjalmar J. Procope and two of his counselors and they are leaving Washington immediately.

Counselor Urho Tivola was granted permission to remain here because of the serious illness of his wife.

Procope's wife and their children will remain here until after their next child is born, probably in two or three weeks, and she has recovered her health.

Procope advised the State Department that he desired to go to Finland as soon as possible.

The other two counselors are T. O. Vahervuori and Risto Solanko.

A State Department official confirmed that together with Procope they left Washington today. He declined to say at what time or to disclose their port of departure or the means or route by which they would travel.

It had been understood, however, that they would sail from New Orleans on a Spanish steamer. If this is true, it would mean that the Government here had arranged with the British for safe conduct.

TITO CUTS RAIL LINES

JUN 22 1944

London, June 21 (A. P.).—Partisan troops have cut the Zagreb-Belgrade railway in 267 places, Marshal Tito said today in a communique reporting clashes over a wide area of Yugoslavia. The Germans are concentrating strong forces in northern Dalmatia in preparations for offensive operations, Tito's broadcast communique declared.

DAY

The bulletin reported success in eastern Bosnia and fighting in western Bosnia, Hercegovina, the Sandjak and Croatia, with the Germans penetrating into Delnice southwest of Zagreb but later being thrown out.

Nine trains and thirty engines were desroyed in Slavonia on the Zagreb-Belgrade railway, and other freight cars and seven bridges were wrecked.

Lyttelton Apologizes For Remark About U. S.

L. HAWKINS

LONDON, June 21.—(AP) Capt. Oliver Lyttelton, Britain's minister of War Production, apologized directly to the House of Commons and indirectly to the United States today for remarks in an address yesterday in which he was quoted as saying that the United States had provoked Japan to attack.

In an almost unprecedented statement, the minister disclaimed any intention of giving this as his belief. He did not deny press reports that he had made the statement in an interpolation in a luncheon address to the American Chamber of Commerce, but he said that it was "manifestly untrue" that Lend-Lease aid had forced the Pearl Harbor assault. He said he was trying to express gratitude for American Lend-Lease aid prior to the Japanese attack.

NIGHT

Lyttelton's remarks prompted U. S. Secretary of State Hull to issue a formal statement last night declaring that "unfortunately" Lyttelton was "entirely in error as to the facts," and today even after Lyttelton's disclaimer his remarks of yesterday were characterized in Congress as "a slur against the United States."

Eric Hawkins of the New York Herald Tribune and Virgil Pinkley of the United Press were at the luncheon and agreed that Lyttelton had said in an aside:

"America was never truly neutral. There was no doubt where her sympathies lay. And it is a travesty of history to say that the United States was forced into war. America provoked the Japanese to such an extent that they were forced to attack."

Lyttelton, after issuing an amplifying statement last night declaring he meant to say that Japan "chose to regard" Lend-Lease aid as a war provocation, told Commons today:

"I want to make it quite clear that I do not complain of being misreported and that any misunderstanding is entirely my own fault.

"I ask the House to believe that the fault was one of expression and not of intention, and I hope that this apology will undo any harm which the original words may have caused here or in the United States."

Swift and indignant reaction to the original remarks was reported from the United States at length on the inside pages of the London Morning Press today, although neither the British Press Association nor the individual papers' reporters had the same quotes the two American newsmen had.

None of the British reporters took any records of Lyttelton's interpolation, and the Associated Press account of the speech was taken from the prepared text and the story distributed by the Press Association.

Lyttelton Offers Apology For Remark About America

JUN 22 1944

London, June 21 (A. P.).—In a personal apology to the House of Commons, Capt. Oliver Lyttelton, British Minister of Production, disclaimed today any intention of saying in a speech yesterday that United States lend-lease aid to Britain had forced Japan into attacking Pearl Harbor because, he declared, such a statement was "manifestly untrue."

Capt. Lyttelton explained that in an interpolation in a speech which he delivered before the American Chamber of Commerce he had merely tried to make clear Britain's gratitude for aid given her by the United States before the Jap attack upon Pearl Harbor.

He concluded:

"I want to make it quite clear that I do not complain of being misreported and that my misunderstanding is entirely my own fault. I ask the House to believe that the fault was one of expression and not of intention, and I hope that this apology will undo any harm which the original words may have caused here or in the United States."

Two Reporters Agree on Quote.

Eric Hawkins of the New York Herald Tribune and Virgil Pinkley of the United Press, the only American press representatives at the luncheon, both quoted Capt. Lyttelton as saying in an interpolated aside that "it is a travesty of history to say that America was forced into the war."

DAY

The full text of the remark as reported by the United Press is as follows: "Japan was provoked into attacking the Americans at Pearl Harbor. It is a travesty on history ever to say that America was forced into the war. Every one knows where American sympathies were. It is incorrect to say that America was ever truly neutral even before America came into the war on an all-out fighting basis."

This aside provoked prompt reaction both in Britain and the United States and a denial from Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State.

This was followed by a release last night from Capt. Lyttelton's office of his version of his interpolation which did not include the "travesty" reference. There was no stenographic record of his talk.

In his amplifying statement Capt. Lyttelton said:

"I wish to make the point that the Americans did not wait until they had entered the war before showing where their sympathies lay, and the aid which they gave Britain will always be remembered with the liveliest sense of gratitude.

"This aid was of course directed to the war against Germany and could not have been regarded as a provocation by peace-minded Japan. But the Japanese aggressor chose to regard it as a provocation and made the unjustified and treacherous attack at Pearl Harbor."

The Minister's press officer explained today that last night's statement was not intended as a verbatim report of the remarks but was "what he said as nearly as he could remember it and certainly was what he intended to say."

Morning newspapers in Britain expressed the view that Lyttelton had been misunderstood.

The United Press quoted Capt. Lyttelton as saying: "Japan was provoked into attacking the Americans at Pearl Harbor. It is a travesty on history ever to say that America was forced into the war. Every one knows where American sympathies were. It is incorrect to say that America was ever truly neutral even before America came into the war on an all-out fighting basis."

Government Action Expected.

A possibility that the London Government would act quickly to give an official explanation of the statement was seen in some quarters. Prime Minister Churchill may be called on for a statement, it was suggested. Capt. Lyttelton was understood to have sent a copy of his remarks to Mr. Churchill. A copy of the notes also will be sent to Washington by the United States embassy.

One authoritative person said the incident was "most unfortunate." Official circles were silent concerning the reaction.

British morning newspapers expressed dismay at the reaction within the United States to Capt. Lyttelton's statement.

"U. S. Got Lyttelton Speech All Wrong," said the headline of the Laborite Daily Herald, and this was the theme of the other stories.

Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express said that in view of the use which might be made of the luncheon statement, "a serious view was taken of the incident."

Cite Effect on U. S. Politics.

The Daily Mail used the headline: "A Speech Enrages America" and the Washington correspondent of the Mail cabled:

"The anti-British press is preparing the biggest play of the story for tomorrow's newspapers as they have been using the same argument against President Roosevelt for months and are jubilant that a British Minister should apparently have given substance to their allegations."

"It is even being suggested here that Mr. Churchill is deliberately giving the President the 'kiss of death' on the eve of thea Republican political convention because of the alleged recent 'cooling off' between the two leaders.

"It is certain that the story will be used with the fullest effect at the convention."

The Washington correspondent of the Daily Telegraph said:

"By an unfortunate coincidence, the report of Mr. Lyttelton's remarks came the day after a sharp debate in the Senate over a dispatch in the Chicago Tribune reporting that J. McGovern, member of Parliament, had asserted that President Roosevelt had promised Mr. Churchill military aid early in 1940."

In their original reports yesterday on Capt. Lyttelton's speech, which emphasized primarily that it would have been impossible to attempt the invasion of France without the huge lend-lease traffic from the United States and reverse lend-lease from Britain, London newspapers did not carry the Minister's interpolation.

Lyttelton's apology today was printed on page one of the Evening News and on inside pages by two other afternoon papers. Neither morning nor afternoon papers today had any editorial comment on the interpolation although some had editorials on lend-lease, lauding Capt. Lyttelton for explaining again how Britain had helped America as well as receiving help.

The United States embassy sent to the State Department copies of the United Press quotations obtained from that agency as well as a text of Lyttelton's comments in Parliament today. These were forwarded "on their merits," it was said.

ALLIES ADVANCE BEYOND PERUGIA

JUN 22 1944

Nazis Reel Back on Entire Italian Front, Enemy Casualties Heavy.

HEINZERLING

ROME, June 21—(AP) Allied troops have gouged the last stubborn German defenders out of the ancient fortress city of Perugia, 85 miles north of Rome, and tonight were battering the enemy steadily back through the hills more than five miles beyond the stronghold.

Across the breadth of Italy the Nazi armies again reeled in retreat toward their long-prepared "Gothic" defense line beyond Florence, paying a heavy price in casualties and euipment for their brief hour of glory when they stopped the Allies at Cassino last March.

NIGHT

70,000 Axis Casualties.

It was estimated today that the enemy had suffered 70,000 casualties since the Allied "annihilation" offensive opened six weeks ago, and the end was not yet in sight. Fresh German graves and rusted trucks, tanks and guns marked the flight of the once-proud Nazi army of Italy.

It was disclosed that the Fifth army, driving up the west coast, had taken prisoners from the 19th Luftwaffe division, which left Belgium June 10, four days after the invasion of Normandy began. The Allied offensive here thus had achieved another of its purposes—to draw strength from German defenses in western Europe.

A heavy rain which hampered Allied movement for three days lifted today, and in bright sunshine our armor raced after the enemy.

Yank Troops Advance

The swift Allied plunge up the Adriatic coastal road brought seizure of Grottammare, a gain of 50 airline miles since the Nazis began retreating in that sector. On the west coast American troops captured Monte Pescali, a bitterly-defended height which dominated an important highway junction north of Grosseto. Castel del Piano also fell to the Yanks.

French forces of the inland flank of the Fifth army occupied another 10 villages, the farthest advanced of which were Seggiano and ticello. Immediately to the east, Eighth army troops cleared the enemy from Chiusi and Cetona.

In storming one enemy strongpoint, American troops captured nine horsedrawn 150-millimeter howitzers and 50 horses. A German military hospital overrun in the American advance contained more than 500 wounded Nazis, most of them hit by artillery fire.

Thunderbolt fighter-bombers of the Allied tactical air force badly damaged a 20,000-ton enemy aircraft carrier in Genoa harbor yesterday, scoring five direct hits. The vessels was believed to have been the Italian carrier Regola, which the Nazis have been refitting since it was damaged in a previous attack.

The Germans were using antitank guns and self-propelled artillery to defend road blocks in an effort to slow the Allied advance. These tactics were proving extremely costly. One grove of trees north of Grosseto yielded 25 destroyed Nazi field pieces and vehicles after American guns concentrated on the area.

Senator Demands Resignation Of British Cabinet Minister

JUN 22 1944

Lucas Says Lyttelton's Remark About U. S. Was a Slur—Hull Calls Briton's Comment Entirely in Error.

Washington, June 21 (A. P.).—Senator Lucas (D.-Ill.) told the Senate today that Capt. Oliver Lyttelton, British Minister of Production, had uttered "a slur against the United States" in a London speech and that his resignation should be demanded.

Senator Lucas's assertion on the Senate floor came after Secretary of State Hull last night sharply rebutted Capt. Lyttelton's assertion that American lend-lease aid to Britain had forced Japan into attacking the United States and after Capt. Lyttelton himself, earlier in the day, addressed a personal apology to the House of Commons for his remark.

Mr. Hull, terming the British Minister's statement entirely erroneous said this country in the months preceding Pearl Harbor was following "the single policy of self-defense."

Capt. Lyttelton's remark was interpolated in an address prepared for an America Chamber of Commerce.

"When I read that statement in the press," Senator Lucas told his colleagues," I was shocked and disappointed that a man so high among Allied officials could make such a statement. Regardless of any correction made later, those original words will cling in the minds of the American people as the most incredible and stupifying statement yet made by a high Allied official during this war.

"It was a slur against the United States that strikes a hard blow at the unity so vital to complete victory.

"For the sake of continued unity, for the sake of the lives of American fighting men, the resig- ttelton should be de- ed."

Commending Mr. Hull for his statement, Senator Lucas said it was well recognized that the Japanese long had planned the Pearl Harbor attack.

"Had Lyttelton's statement riginated from an Axis propaganda bureau we would have thought nothing of it," the Senator continued. "We might have expected such a statement from an Axis source, because their aim is to divide and conquer. The statement must have brought great joy to Hitler and Tojo."

Secretary Hull in a public statement issued last night declared that the British Minister was entirely in error and said that the Pearl Harbor attack was unprovoked. Mr. Hull's statement took no notice of Capt. Lyttelton's later remark, which referred appreciatively to Ameri- aid to Britain before Pearl Harbor.

"The aid given to Great Britain," Mr. Hull declared, "and to other countries who were resisting conquest was, in the words of the lend-lease act, 'vital to the defense of the United States.'"

Mr. Hull sketched Japanese conquests beginning with the seizure of Manchuria in 1931 through "the unprovoked attack on the United States at Pearl Harbor."

The true attitude of the United States, Mr. Hull said, while Germany and Japan were preparing for war and later when they opened the flood gates of aggression was the single policy of self-defense.

The British embassy here had no comment, but it is expected here that some high British official, perhaps Prime Minister Churchill, will take steps.

Wheeler Comments.

Chicago, June 21 (A. P.).—Senator Wheeler (D.-Mont.) today characterized as "one of the most amazing statements I have seen since we entered the war" a remark by Capt. Oliver Lyttelton, British Minister of Supply, that American lend-lease aid to Britain had forced Japan into attacking this country.

"If an American had made such a statement he undoubtedly would be included in the sedition trial now going on in Washington," Mr. Wheeler said. "I have never seen a statement as critical of Mr. Roosevelt as the one Mr. Lyttelton made."

Capt. Lyttelton personally apologized to the House of Commons today, saying "the fault was one of expression and not of intention," and asserting he had merely tried to make clear Britain's gratitude for United States aid before Pearl Harbor.

Advised of Mr. Lyttelton's apology, Mr. Wheeler said: "I think Mr. Lyttelton ought to apologize. He doesn't deny that he made the remark, he denied that he meant it, but if the English language is clear, he certainly must have meant it."

EIGHTH DRIVES PAST PERUGIA

HEADLINING

Fresh Nazi Troops Fail to Halt Allies.

JUN 22 1944

Rome, June 21 (A. P.).—Eighth Army veterans have hurled the last stubborn Nazi defenders out of ancient Perugia, communications hub eighty-five miles north of Rome, and advanced some four miles north of the city, Allied headquarters said today.

The Allied drive still was in steady motion, although the Germans had thrown the elements of seven divisions against the right flank of the Fifth Army's front in an effort to slow its pace. But the Fifth fought through four more villages, making what headquarters termed minor tactical gains.

It was disclosed that the Fifth Army has taken prisoners from the Nineteenth Luftwaffe Division, which left Belgium June 10, four days after the invasion of France began.

This was the second German division to be diverted from the western front since the Allies' spectacular advance in Italy began, the Twentieth Luftwaffe Division having arrived here previously from Denmark. Prisoners also have been taken in the same general area from the Sixteenth SS Division, which was brought here from the Balkans.

Tactical aircraft flew 750 sorties yesterday over the battle area and all returned.

DAY

Advance from City.

After clearing the university city of Perugia, Eighth Army troops headed after the withdrawing Germans in several directions. They soon occupied high ground northwest of the city. Forward elements northeast of Perugia reached a point some five miles from the city limits.

The occupation of Perugia was carried out by a column led by the Sixteenth and Fifth Lancers, famous British cavalry regiments, now armored.

Farther west Eighth Army troops were astride Highway 71, northeast of Lake Chiusi and the towns of Chiusi and Cetona were cleared of the enemy.

Motorized forces were greatly handicapped by three days of heavy rains which made some roads impassable.

French forces on the right flank of the Fifth Army ran into bitter resistance in some villages. Nevertheless the villages of Monticello, Seggiano, Vivo D'Orcia, San Felippo, Paucia, Palozzetta, Poggio Manje, Pantano and Campiglia D'Orcia were occupied.

Patrols Reach Ascoli Piceno.

The rapid advance up the Adriatic coast put patrols at the Menocchia River and at the town of Ascoli Piceno, provincial capital, with a population of 42,000 in peacetime. The fishing port of San Benedetto Del Tronto, which formerly had a population of 20,000, and village of Cossigiano, ten miles inland, were occupied.

The occupation of Grottommare, population 5,800, represented an advance of some fifty airline miles along the coastal highway, the last sixteen miles made despite heavy rain.

In the western coastal sector where the Americans still were punching forward, Montepescali, which dominated the junction of highways 71 and 73 was taken despite stiff delaying action. Castel Del Piano, also hotly defended, was taken yesterday.

CARRIER BOMBED IN GENOA HARBOR

JUN 22 1944

Rome, June 21 (A. P.).—Thunderbolts of the First Tactical Air Force severely damaged a 20,000-ton enemy aircraft carrier in the harbor of Genoa yesterday, it was announced today.

The ship was believed to be the previously damaged Italian carrier Regola, which was being refitted in the harbor.

DAY

The formation of Thunderbolts, led by First Lieut. Gordon A. Moody, Coldwater, Mich., scored five direct hits on the vessel, which had not been in service since it was hit previously.

Returning pilots said the carrier was damaged badly. Despite intense anti-aircraft fire, fighters returned to strafe the ship after the bombing attack.

One fighter-bomber was damaged by flak and the pilot ditched the plane six miles outside the harbor. He was picked up later by a Catalina flying boat.

"We weren't even fired at," said Second Lieut. Thomas F. Murray, 1265 Olmstead avenue, Bronx, N. Y., co-pilot of the rescue plane, "but we did land in the middle of a mine field. We really sweated out that takeoff."

Nazis Fa[illegible] Landings.

JUN 22 1944

London, June 21 (A. P.).—The German-controlled Paris radio said today that German authorities had declared a state of siege on the Italian west coast between the Gulf of Genoa and the River Po in anticipation of an "imminent" Allied landing attempt in that area.

Fascists Execute Partisans

JUN 22 1944

London, June 21 (AP)—A dispatch from Bern said today Fascists had executed 200 of 400 Partisans rounded up at Novara, northwest of Milan, during cleanup operations.

U. S. Flyer Reported Slain

CAIRO, June 21 (AP).—Bulgarian troops killed an American flyer who bailed out of his burning plane near Uzice in western Serbia June 6, a dispatch from General Draja Mihailovitch's headquarters said today.

DAY

Mihailovitch said his men had rescued twelve flyers from three American planes that crashed or landed in Yugoslavia.

KING PETER VISITS COMMAND IN ITALY

ROME, June 21 — (AP) King Peter of Yugoslavia is in Italy with his prime minister for conferences with the Allied supreme command, it was announced late tonight.

Premier Ivan Subasic said Peter was conferring with the Allied command on unification of fighting forces inside Yugoslavia.

The premier's announcement said Peter had visited in Malta while Subasic held conferences with the Yugoslav partisan Marshal Tito which resulted in "agreement on many points" between the Partisan group and the royal government-in-exile.

POLETTI IN ROME

JUN 22 1944

Rome, June 21 (A. P.).—Lieut.-Col. Charles Poletti assumed the post of Allied Military Governor Commissioner for the Rome region today succeeding Col. Norman E. Fiske who took the job temporarily.

Col. Poletti first was commissioner for Sicily, then assumed charge of AMG administration in Naples, where he made important strides in returning the city to mode normal conditions.

DAY

Col. Fiske, who took over temporarily in Rome after the departure of Brig.Gen. Edgar Hume with the Fifth Army in the advance northward, will return to his regular job as deputy executive commissioner of the Allied Control Commission.

TAYLOR SEES POPE

Vatican City, June 21 (A. P.).—Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's personal envoy to the Vatican, conferred privately with Pope Pius today and also visited Luigi Cardinal Maglione, Papal Secretary of State.

DAY

The American envoy was in the papal offices at the same time as Ken Harada, Japanese Ambassador to the Vatican, but the two did not meet. Under escort of American soldiers, Ambassador Harada has been traveling daily between the Vatican and his embassy in Rome. The embassy is under guard.

Gigli Concert For Soldiers in Rome Is Barred

JUN 22 1944

Allies Cancel Appearance by Former Metropolitan Tenor, Linked to Fascists

ROME, June 21 (AP).—Beniamino Gigli, former Metropolitan Opera Company tenor, has been forbidden to sing at a concert for Allied soldiers. Major General Harry H. Johnson, military governor of Rome, issued the order.

Gigli was scheduled to appear with other artists in a musical program at the Rome Opera House tomorrow night. He was removed from the concert, it was reported, because he was closely associated with both the Fascists and Nazis, and sang in Germany under Nazi auspices earlier in the war.

There was considerable disagreement among Allied authorities over whether Gigli's Fascist past should bar him. The ban was issued finally on the ground that "the time is not opportune" for the appearance at an Army concert of an artist with such connections.

First attacks on Gigli's scheduled appearance came from Italian newspapers. He was an ardent supporter of Benito Mussolini.

Among other famous opera stars here is Giuseppe de Luca, celebrated barytone who was last heard at the Metropolitan Opera in 1940. He is living quietly with his wife in a mansion that bears the marks of thirty-two splinters from the same bomb that killed their next-door neighbor, Virginio Gayda, Fascist editor.

Since Italy's entry into the war against the United States De Luca has refused to sing publicly. "They wanted me to sing in the Royal Opera House but I refused, saying troubled times made it impossible for me to put my heart into it," he said.

Now sixty-seven years old, he expressed a determination to return to the United States after the war.

Held Fascist Position

In the fall of 1942 a Rome dispatch reported that Gigli had been placed in charge of Fascist state spectacles.

In February, 1939, Gigli, after appearing at the Metropolitan following an absence of seven years, returned to Italy and issued a statement criticizing the Metropolitan for "substituting notoriety created by publicity for intrinsic value." At the same time the opera singer declared that the United States was approaching "something like civil war."

Gigli reached the peak of his fame as a member of the Metropolitan company from 1920 to 1932. At the bottom of the depression he refused to accept a cut of $65,000 a season and quit.

Kind French Captain.

The maestro broke down and wept as he told of his disappointments and troubles, but, in his tears, he asked that greetings be sent to the people of America who, in bygone years, welcomed his music so warmly. Maestro Mascagni received reporters in a hotel suite which he and his wife have occupied for twenty years, but it is not one of Rome's de luxe hotels; like the composer, it has seen better days.

When the Allies entered Rome, it was requisitioned as a billet for French officers and all civilians were told to move out.

"They were going to put us out when a kind French capain took compassion on us and told us we could stay," the maestro said, "but there is no restaurant in the hotel now, only an Army mess. This captain has been having meals sent up to us, but we don't know how long this will last."

Signora Mascagni also is 82. Things were going badly for her today, too. She had just broken her eyeglasses.

Food has been poor in Rome through the war and the blackout has darkened the whole spiritual life of the people, he said. There has been little music, except modern music, which maestro Mascagni scorns.

Until a few years ago Signor Mascagni conducted operas in Fascist Black Shirt uniform, but he never was a Fascist and had no interest in politics, he said. "The Fascists simply exploited my name," he explained.

His Home Seized.

Mascagni's Home and Fortune Gone in Opera-like Tragedy

JUN 22 1944

REMEDY + TUCKER

Rome, June 21 (A. P.).—War has fallen heavily upon Pietro Mascagni, 82-year-old composer of "Cavalleria Rusticana" and fifteen other operas. His fortune is gone, his home has been taken away from him and he is not certain where his next meal is coming from, he says.

This aged genius, whose melodies have gladdened hearts for the last fifty years, is very sad and somewhat bitter. His world has tumbled in ruins and he does not expect a new one to rise in his lifetime.

northern Italy. "The Socialists said he was a Fascist and seized his home and turned it into Socialist offices," related the maestro.

"The home actually is my property. I have written letters to Marshal Badoglio and to the new Governor of Rome about it, but have received no replies, but I shall not accept this indignity. I shall go to the King, if necessary, to demand justice, or perhaps the Allied military authorities will come to my assistance."

In his long career, Maestro Mascagni reaped a big fortune in royalties from his operas, especially "Cavalleria Rusticana," which far outshone all the others. He believes that he has money coming to him from America, but the war has interfered with its collection.

VATICAN DISPLAYS CASSINO ABBEY ART

JUN 22 1944

Vatican City, June 21 (A. P.).—Vatican authorities today showed correspondents some of the art treasures, manuscripts and books from Cassino Abbey and other places which were stored in the Vatican library for safekeeping during the war.

Treasures from Cassino Abbey were moved to Rome in German Army vehicles and transferred to Vatican authorities in January at Castel Sant' Angelo, just outside Vatican City. Cassino Abbey later was ruined in fierce fighting.

DAY

Other objects now in the Vatican include the library of Cardinal Stuart brought from the seminary at Frascati, seventy-six cases of manuscripts and books from the Brazilian Abbey at Grotto Ferrata, vestments and altar vessels from many churches in the battle area, and rare books and art objects from public museums and librarians intrusted to the Vatican by the Italian Government.

Indian Levies Capture Village In North Burma

Southeast Asia Headquarters, Ceylon, June 21 (AP) — India's Kachins and Ghurkas scored a six-mile advance north of Myitkyina and inflicted many casualties on the Japanese trying to flee from their fallen base of Tiangzup, a communique announced today.

The gain carried the Indian levies into the village of Nsopzup, 34 miles north of the besieged Japanese base of Myitkyina, in north Burma.

A series of enemy strongholds in Myitkyina itself fell to Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's forces.

Lord Louis Mountbatten's headquarters said Chinese and British jungle fighters are forming a tight circle around the enemy base of Mogaung, to the west.

NIGHT

Allies Gain in North Burma.

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, June 21 (A. P.).—Allied troops advancing from captured Tiangiup in northern Burma, have captured the village of Njip, six miles to the south, and have inflicted severe casualties on the retreating Japanese, a communique from Admiral Mountbatten's headquarters announced today.

DAY

The fall of Tiangzup, forty miles north of the besieged Japanese stronghold of Myitkyina, was announced by the Allies yesterday after six weeks of heavy fighting.

JAPS CONTINUING DRIVE IN CHINA

JUN 22 1944

CHUNGKING, June 21 — (AP) Japanese troops, bent on splitting China in half, have pressed southward from fallen Changsha along a sweeping, 80-mile arc and in a ten-mile advance have fought to within 55 miles of the big rail junction of Hengyang, the Chinese high command said tonight.

The right extremity of this arc cleaving through eastern Hunan province was near Siangsiang, 55 miles north of Hengyang.

The left extremity swung down to engulf the railroad town of Liling, 75 miles northeast of Hengyang on the east side of the Siang river. Lukow, in this same area, also fell.

NIGHT

A communique from Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters said medium bombers and fighters kept up a blazing patrol of the great Siang river, knocking out 20 supply launches, damaging other river craft, and striking at Japanese positions.

In Honan, the Japanese weakened the Chinese hold on the Peiping-Hankow railroad with a 30-mile advance that captured Chengyang. This left only 30 miles more to be wrested from the Chinese to form a line running from the Lunghai railway east of their base at Chengchow to positions east of Sinyang, their base in Southern Honan.

Fighting raged east of the railway in the sector of Chowkiakow, and the Chinese made further progress in that sector, the high command's communique said.

But the best news for China came from the Salween front, where the Chinese are pressing west in a drive designed to reopen a supply line from India by linking forces with those of Stilwell's fighting through Burma.

Here, the high command said, dogged Chinese troops slogging through almost continual rain, fog and sleet in 40 days have cleared the Kaolikung mountains of Yunnan—China's most difficult battle zone—of all Japanese.

In wresting 4,000 square miles of territory, the Chinese have made future advances down the Shweli river valley easier.

Many soldiers died of exposure and 130 porters carrying supplies plunged to their deaths from trails on the cliffs.

These successes included the occupation of Chiangtso, Japanese stronghold only 20 miles northeast of the enemy base of Tengchung.

JAPS ADVANCE ON HENGYANG

JUN 22 1944

Capture of Rail Center Would Split China.

Chungking, June 21 (A. P.).—Japanese forces have driven across the Lu River and are within sixty-five miles of strategic Hengyang, approximately 100 air line miles southwest of the fallen Hunan province capital of Changsha, the Chinese High Command announced today.

Hengyang, apparently the next major goal of the Japanese, is situated on the Siang River at the junction of the Canton-Hankow and Hunan-Kwangsi railways. Should it fall, the Japanese would have taken a long step toward splitting China in half, establishing an overland trunk railway, neutralizing a number of Allied air bases and putting themselves in better position to oppose possible United States landings on the China coast.

The fall of Changsha, which had been announced previously by the Japanese, was acknowledged belatedly last night by the Chinese High Command, which said the last defenders withdrew from the city Sunday after inflicting heavy casualties on the Japanese. The Chinese said the Japanese had employed approximately 50,000 troops, strongly supported by artillery and air attacks to take the city.

DAY

Stilwell's Airmen Active.

A communique from Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters disclosed that air attacks were continuing on the Japanese in the area southeast of Changsha, with twenty supply launches knocked out in a river sweep, large fires started at Ikiawan, and Pingsiang bombed and strafed.

Enemy-held villages and compounds northeast of Changsha in the Pingkiang area were also hit.

Lungling, Burma Road town retaken recently by the Japanese, was bombed.

The Kaolikung Mountains of Yunnan province—described by the Chinese as the world's most difficult battle area—have been cleared of Japanese troops after forty days of hazardous fighting. The Chinese High Command also announced today.

The Chinese said that their troops had wrested 4,000 square miles of the territory from Japanese control, and said that the operation had made easier future advances down the Shweli River Valley.

Chiang Kai-shek Promises Co-operation in Post-War Accord for Eastern Asia

CHUNGKING, June 21 (AP).—Vice-President Henry A. Wallace told a state banquet tonight there is reason to hope the next twelve months "will be the final year of Japanese aggression in China," and President Chiang Kai-shek declared that his nation and the three other great powers "must shoulder the responsibility of maintaining international peace."

Three essentials to maintenance of peace in eastern Asia and the Pacific, Mr. Wallace said, are demilitarization of Japan, collaboration among the nations of the Pacific and self-government for the peoples of Asia.

Assuring the visiting American that China wishes to live in good neighborliness, harmony and peace with all nations, the generalissimo said: "We respect the integrity and independence of every nation. We dream no dreams of domination. We have no territorial ambitions."

Chinese for Co-operation

The Chinese believe, he said, in an ever-increasing co-operation with other countries in matters economic, financial, cultural and political, "and in the development of our industry and our immense natural resources we will welcome foreign investment and foreign technicians."

NIGHT

Pending the inauguration of collective security, which he said cannot be achieved unless the military might of the common enemies is totally annihilated, Chiang said that the United States, the British Commonwealth, the Soviet Union and China "must shoulder the responsibility of maintaining international peace."

"In word and deed, in war and in peace, the United States of America has always been China's staunch friend," he said.

He asked Mr. Wallace to take back the message to President Roosevelt and the American Congress and people that the people of China deeply appreciate the moral and material support America has accorded China, and that China is as determined as America in destroying the forces of aggression, in establishing an enduring world peace and in promoting the welfare of mankind.

"The Japanese are now trading space for time in the Pacific," Mr. Wallace said, "but both time and space are against them. In due course we hope to find them trading space for time in China, but they will be faced with a determined Chinese Army receiving cooperation from American forces which will allow no time for trading.

Japan to Have Self-Rule

Mr. Wallace said a way to orderly, law-abiding self-government should be left open to the Japanese after their armies are beaten.

Minister of Information Liang Han-chao, discussing Mr. Wallace's visit at a press conference, said there are differences among China's leaders on what to do about Emperor Hirohito of Japan, but all agree that the present political system makes for war and that the emperor is part of that system. Whether the emperor should be considered a war criminal, he said, will be for a commission for investigation of war crimes to decide.

Mr. Wallace said the United States does not aspire to any exclusive arrangement with China, and warned that any balance of power system would lead to rivalries from which would spring a resurgence of Japanese militarism.

He called for the restoration of national sovereignty to Thailand and asserted that "in Asia there are other political and racial entities now in a state of colonial dependency whose aspirations to self-government should receive prompt and positive attention after victory."

The banquet at the Presidential villa followed a tour in which Mr. Wallace met "young China," rubbing shoulders with cheering students, whom he told to "work for the day when all the people of China can read and write." He was a luncheon guest of General Ho Ying-chin, Chinese Minister of War.

Bareheaded, attired in a slack suit and tennis shoes, Mr. Wallace visited an American Red Cross enlisted men's club. He talked to a number of G. I.'s, who presented to him a scroll entitling him to "all the rights and privileges of G. I.'s."

Then, conducted by Lieutenant General Joseph W. Stilwell's deputy chief of staff, Brigadier General Benjamin Ferris, Mr. Wallace inspected enlisted men's barracks and American Army headquarters, shaking hands with a number of officers.

Chinese papers gave considerable space to Mr. Wallace's visit, some devoting editorials to it, hailing the Vice-President as "a warrior for democracy."

The army mouthpiece, "Sao Tang Pao," confessed ignorance as to the real purpose of the journey, but speculated that it was connected with both the war effort and post-war plans.

The official "Central Daily News" said it hoped the Vice-President's mission to China would hasten realization of decisions made at the Cairo conference.

Tells Wallace China Desires Collective Security.

Chungking, June 21 (A. P.).—A general system of collective security, if necessary, by an adequate international force, was urged by President Chiang Kai-shek tonight at a brilliant State banquet given by him and Mrs. Chiang in honor of Vice-President Henry A. Wallace. Assuring the visiting American that China wishes to live in good neighborliness, harmony and peace with all nations, the Generalissimo said:

"We respect the integrity and independence of every nation. We dream no dreams of domination We have no territorial ambitions."

Chiang said that the United States, the British Commonwealth, the Soviet Union and China "must shoulder the responsibility of maintaining international peace."

"In word and deed, in war and in peace, the United States of America has always been China's stanch friend," he said. He asked Mr. Wallace to take back the message to President Roosevelt the American Congress and the people that the people of China deeply appreciate the moral and material support America has accorded to China, and that China is as determined as America in destroying the forces of aggression, in establishing an enduring world peace and in promoting the welfare of mankind.

Wallace Makes Reply.

HEAVIEST RAID HITS JAP BASE AT TRUK

EUNSON JUN 22 1944

ADVANCED ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, New Guinea, Thursday, June 22.—(AP) Liberator bombers from the New Guinea sector made a record-breaking attack on Truk Monday, coordinated with the American invasion of Saipan in the Marianas.

Headquarters announced today that B-24s from the Admiralty islands dropped 108 tons of explosives on Dublon and Eten islands in the Truk group, the heaviest single day's attack by Thirteenth Air Force Liberators.

For the second day in a row, the Japanese made no attempt at interception. This was in contrast to four Liberator raids of last week, each of which stirred up from 15 to 25 enemy fighters. It was possible that the Japanese were conserving their fighters for use in the Marianas.

NIGHT

Seventh Air force bombers from the central Pacific also have been pounding at the Carolines to prevent Truk from figuring in the navy-air fighting reported underway to the northwest, between the Marianas and the Philippines.

On Biak island off Dutch New Guinea, where three Japanese airdromes have been captured, American veterans of jungle warfare advanced steadily along the southwest coast, headquarters reported, and cleaned out pockets of Japanese in the hills north of Mokmer airfield.

Liberators attacked Noemfoor island west of Biak in Geelvink bay, dropping 57 tons of explosives on Kamiri airstrip. Allied attack planes destroyed two coastal vessels and eight barges off Manokwari, near the western entrance to Geelvink bay.

U. S. Planes Bomb Kuriles And Truk

Washington, June 21 (AP)—Army and navy bombers, ranging the Pacific, have pounded the Kuriles and the Central Pacific base of Truk again, the navy reported tonight.

An announcement from Pacific fleet headquarters also told of raids by fighters and bombers on Japanese at Mille, Maloelap and Wotje atolls in the Marshalls.

Navy Ventura bombers hit Shumushu in the Kuriles in a pre- [illegible] last Saturday, starting fires. Army and navy bombers kept up the assault on the Kuriles on Monday, striking at Paramushiro.

Army Liberators, striking at Truk in daylight Monday, ran into hot anti-aircraft fire but encountered no enemy fighter planes.

Ponape Island, east of Truk in the Carolines, also was raided by army Liberators and Mitchells on Monday.

Hitler And Tojo Assert Confidence Of Victory

JUN 22 1944

New York, June 21 (AP)—Hitler and Premier General Hideki Tojo have chosen this time to exchange further messages declaring confidence in the ultimate outcome of the war, the Berlin radio disclosed tonight.

"Japanese Premier Tojo, in a telegram to the Fuehrer on the occasion of successful blows against the Anglo-American invasion of Europe, once again expressed Japan's determination to make all efforts to inflict a devastating defeat of the common enemies and to win the final victory," said the broadcast.

Hitler's reply expressed his thanks, his conviction that "final victory would be won" and his satisfaction at Japan's determination "to fight against the common enemies until their annihilation," the broadcast said.

House Group Warns Hungary

JUN 22 1944

Committee Calls Upon Nation to Halt Mistreatment of Jews There.

Washington, June 21 (A. P.).—The House Foreign Affairs Committee in a highly unusual action today called upon Hungary to halt mistreatment of Jews, reminding the Axis satellite that perpetrators of inhumane conduct will be punished.

Representative Sol Bloom (D.-N. Y.), the chairman, issued a statement for the committee, which seldom addresses a nation directly concerning a matter usually left to the State Department.

"Our concern and our determination are now addressed particularly to Hungary, where the lives of almost a million Jews hang in the balance," it said "Events show that the tide of military battle has now turned in favor of the United Nations Let Hungary at this historic moment stem the tide of inhumanity toward the helpless people with in her borders."

The committee said it was not content merely to speak with "horror at the barbarism of the governments involved—we are determined that the criminals who are guilty of this inhumane conduct shall be brought to justice."

The statement followed the appearance before the committee of John D. Pehle, executive director of the war refugee board, an agency created by President Roosevelt to deal with the refugee problem.

In another statement today Representative Celler (D.-N. Y.) contended that Carlton J. H. Hayes, United States Ambassador to Spain, has refused to cooperate with the war refugee board and that Madrid is a lonely island where refugees are concerned.

He said Spain might follow the example of other neutrals and set up a free port for refugees if Hayes would so much as approach the Spanish Government.

"It is time to put the screws on the Francophile. Ambassador Hayes should be recalled," Mr. Celler asserted.

CONGRESSMAN HOCH TELLS THE NAZIS

JUN 22 1944

Washington, June 21 (A. P.).—Pennsylvania's German-Americans prefer the unabhaengigkeitserklaerung to anything Hitler could offer them, Representative Hoch (D.-Pa.) told the people of Nazi Germany in an Office of War Information overseas broadcast.

Unabhaengigketserklaerung is German for Declaration of Independence.

The Congressman, speaking in German, said Pennsylvania was the State where the declaration of Independence was signed, and added: "Those who know freedom as long as we do, hate dictatorship."

Mr. Hoch's "Pennsylvania Dutch" is fluent, but his high German needed brushing up before the broadcast.

I certainly had to practice on u n a bhaengigkeitserklaerung," he said. Golly, what a tongue twister!"

Exploding Jap Ship Delivers Papers to Attacking U. S. Plane

JUN 22 1944

WASHINGTON, June 21.—(AP) An exploding Japanese ship in the Pacific, by a freak accident, delivered its log and papers to one of the attacking planes.

The Army reported today it happened like this:

Army A-20 attack planes hit and sank two enemy motor vessels and two patrol vessels off Wewak, New Guinea. Flying in pairs, the planes came in at mast height to bomb the ships.

The pilot of one wing plane, realizing he was too far behind his lead plane and might get caught in the bomb blast, "broke" to the right, flying parallel to the ship. His speed carried him close, however, just as the lead plane's bombs exploded.

Debris from the ship filled the air about him. On returning to his base, he found the ship's log, ship's papers, cargo listing, and the names of convoy personnel, lodged in the air intake of the plane's cooling system. The documents revealed considerable information about the enemy convoy.

Kermit Roosevelt Fund Is Approved by Senate

Aims at Closer U. S.-British Military Ties

WASHINGTON, June 21 (AP).—Acting at the request of Secretary of War Stimson, the Senate approved today and sent to the House legislation creating a Kermit Roosevelt fund to foster a "better understanding and closer relationship" between the military forces of the United States and the United Kingdom.

The memorial fund would be established by Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt, widow of the Major, who was killed a year ago while on Army duty in Alaska. It would be used to sponsor lectures and exchange courses of instruction by British officers at West Point, and United States officers at the Sandhurst Royal Military College in Britain.

Kermit Roosevelt, son of the late Theodore Roosevelt, served in both the United States and British armies. The government would not contribute to the fund, but it would be administered by a board appointed by the Secretary of War.

The extreme range of the Super-Fortress is reflected by the fact that food-warmers are part of the equipment, to give each crew member two portions of hot food and a quart of hot beverage; and also in the fact that all B-29 crews are taught, in advanced first aid courses, "how to survive when forced down in the Arctic, jungles, desert, or sea."

Patterson Note Aids Approval Of Canol Fund

UnderSecretary of War Tells Senate Committee That Oil Project Is Essential

WASHINGTON, June 21 (AP).—A bristling letter from Under Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson defending the Army's $134,000,000 Canol oil development in Canada as an essential link in Allied strategy brought quick Senate approval today of a $16,439,688 appropriation to continue its operation.

"The completion and operation of Canol has been determined by the Joint Chiefs of Staff to be a military necessity," Patterson wrote in a letter made public by Elmer Thomas, Democrat, of Oklahoma, chairman of the Senate War Appropriations subcommittee.

Senator Homer Ferguson, Republican, of Michigan withdrew his opposition after asserting that further expenditure on Canol is a responsibility for which the Joint Chiefs of Staff "will have to answer after the veil of secrecy is lifted," although he called the project "utterly fantastic and ridiculous on its face."

The funds for the United States-financed refinery at Whitehorse and pipeline from Whitehorse to Norman Wells were included in a $49,107,785,795 War Department appropriations bill which the Senate passed and sent back to the House for action on minor changes.

Asserting "it would be folly not to make use of these facilities," Patterson added:

"It is idle to contend that the petroleum products, including 100-octane gasoline, could be obtained more cheaply on the Pacific Coast where our supply is inadequate," or from Aruba.

"We have neither tankers for its transportation to Skagway nor 100-octane gas in sufficient supply."

Naval Strength Put At 3,400,646

Washington, June 21 (AP)—The personnel strength of the navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard stood at 3,400,646 men and women on May 1, Senator Walsh (D., Mass.) reported today in a Senate document entitled "The Decline and Renaissance of the Navy, 1922-1944."

The total included 8,727 women officers and 71,980 enlisted women.

In contrast, the total strength of the navy and Marine Corps on June 30, 1938, was 11,695 officers and 122,631 men, said Walsh, who is chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee.

After reviewing the decline of naval strength from the disarmament conference of 1922 until the late '30's, Walsh noted that the navy's permanent authorized strength today is 5,299,480 tons of battleships, aircraft carriers, cruisers, destroyers and submarines, compared with 780,000 tons of underage ships and 300,800 tons of overage vessels at the end of 1932.

Ex-Iceland Commander Shifted To West Coast

Washington, June 21 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Charles Hartwell Bonesteel, former commander of the United Nations forces in Iceland and more recently commanding general of the infantry school at Fort Benning, Georgia, will succeed Lieut. Gen. Delos Emmons as western defense commander, the War Department announced tonight.

General Emmons is leaving the San Francisco assignment for an undisclosed post.

A native of Fort Sidney, Nebraska, General Bonesteel, 59, was in Iceland from April, 1942, to June, 1943. He was given the Fort Benning command last September.

He was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal in June, 1943.

ADMIRAL OF FLEET BILL IS APPROVED

WASHINGTON, June 21 — (AP) The Senate passed late today a bill to give the navy a new top rank—admiral of the fleet.

Senator Walsh (D.-Mass.), Naval Affairs Committee chairman, said the two officers who would be currently eligible for the new rank are Admiral Ernest J. King, commander-in-chief of the fleet, and Admiral William D. Leahy, Chief of Staff to President Roosevelt.

The bill, by Senator Gerry (D.-R. I.), now goes to the House.

Committee Threatens To Recall Col. Wyman

May Prods Army on Report of Pearl Harbor Contracts

WASHINGTON, June 21 (AP).—Chairman Andrew May, Democrat, of Kentucky, annqunced today the House Military Affairs Committee "might direct the recall of Colonel Theodore Wyman jr. from overseas as a witness unless the War Department does something soon about committee disclosures of Wyman's activities in Hawaii before the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor."

The committee last week reported that Colonel Wyman, an engineer officer, had favored a German-born contractor, Hans Wilhelm Rohl, of Los Angeles, in awarding contracts for defense installations at Pearl Harbor. Had the work been completed on schedule, the committee report said, the Japanese attack would have been "robbed" of some of its surprise.

Colonel Wyman was assigned overseas after he left Hawaii.

"Unless the department shows some intention to take action on the basis of our report, we may be compelled to call Colonel Wyman after the summer recess of Congress," Mr. May said.

INFANTRYMEN PAY RAISE IS APPROVED

WASHINGTON, June 21 — (AP) The Senate passed today an army-endorsed bill boosting the pay of expert infantrymen from $5 to $10 a month.

Under the measure, which went to the House, an increase of $5 would go to infantrymen who attain a standard of proficiency or perform satisfactorily in combat, while a $10 raise would reward exemplary conduct in action or satisfactory duty in a "major" operation.

"This is not a glamor war. This bill is society legislation."

Rep. Izac (D-Calif), who made the motion which killed the bill cited as one of his reasons a provision that would make Jacqueline Cochran, well known flier and head of the WASPS, a full colonel.

"For 2,500 WASPS (the enlistment goal) we want to make this woman a colonel," he protested, "while out in California we have thousands of men, now instructors, who could do this job."

Tripartite Labor Board Is Set Up For Hawaii

Washington, June 21 (AP)—The War Labor Board announced today establishment of a tripartite War Labor Board for Hawaii. The WPB specified certain types of small wage and salary increases which may be made by employers without approval by the territorial board.

The personnel of the board, expected to consist of two each from labor, industry and public groups, was not selected immediately.

The new board is to comply with the national wage stabilization program, but may recommend policies to adapt the program to special circumstances. General orders heretofore issued by the national board will not apply to the territory unless expressly extended to it by the national board.

Cabins of Super Fortresses Are Pressurized and Heated

WASHINGTON, June 21. — (AP) The new B-29 Super-Fortresses which bombed Japan last week are the first military planes in the world with pressurized cabins, the War department disclosed today.

Special superchargers keep the air pressure inside the planes at nearly normal even when they are flying in the thin air of extremely high altitudes.

The construction of the cabin sections to permit this forced air pressure also allows a high degree of soundproofing and cabin heating. It increases the comfort of the crew members, who can dispense with the oxygen masks and some of the extremely heavy clothing worn at high altitudes in such planes as the Flying Fortress and the Liberator.

Each man in a B-29 is equipped with an oxygen mask, however, to wear in case enemy fire punctures the cabin wall and reduces the interior air pressure.

Heat is provided by the cabin supercharger, but each crew member gets a new type of electrically

House Denounces, Defeats Bill To Have Army Take Over Wasps

WASHINGTON, June 21. — (AP) General H. H. Arnold's proposal to absorb women pilots into the Army Air corps was roundly denounced, and then vetoed in the House today.

Critics of the plan to commission the WASPS scored a surprising victory over Administration forces, killing the bill 189 to 169.

The action does not cut short the WASP program. It means the women will continue to do utility flying for the Army with only civilian status, not eligible to Army benefits, uniforms, or commissions.

Arnold had told the House Military committee the WASPS were doing a good job and should be commissioned. Critics protested that the 1,000 or so WASPS already had cost the military establishment $20,000,000; that they should not be taken into the Air corps while the Navy contemplates cutting back its pilot training pro-

PROMOTION OF JEFFE WITHHELD BY SENATE

WASHINGTON, June 21. — (AP) The Senate today confirmed the temporary appointment of 20 major generals and 62 brigadier generals in the Army, but at the request of Senator Murray (D-Mont) withheld action on the appointment of Ephraim Franklin Jeffe as a brigadier general.

Jeffe was identified by military committee aides as an executive officer for the War Production board. The Montana senator was in New York today and his objection was presented by Majority Leader Barkley.

Two of the new brigadiers have not yet reached their 30th birthdays. They are Richard Condie Sanders, 28, commander of the 98th Bombardment Wing in the European theater, and Clinton Dermott Vincent, 29, commanding the 68th Composite Wing of the 14th Air corps in the China-Burma-India theater.

PRICE CONTROL BILL GOES TO PRESIDENT

Legislative Deadlock Broken, Roosevelt Expected to Sign.

WASHINGTON, June 21 — (AP) Congress tossed on President Roosevelt's desk today legislation to prolong wartime price, wage and rent controls, breaking a legislative deadlock that menaced plans for adjournment this week. Republicans immediately began packing their luggage—destination Chicago.

A compromise, the price legislation extends wartime economic controls for one year, to June 30, 1945, but changes the present law in several particulars.

Administration men called it fairly satisfactory and Democratic leaders predicted Mr. Roosevelt would sign it although he asked for reenactment of the existing law without major change.

But President Philip Murray of the C.I.O. issued a statement saying the measure "will control neither prices or rents, because it cannot be enforced."

The measure, Murray said, "sets a green light for violators and a danger signal for workers and every American family," by providing that violators of the law may escape penalty by proving that they did not do so "wilfully."

A major new provision of the bill requires the Office of Price Administration (OPA) to set price ceilings on textiles to reflect a full parity return to cotton producers.

Public Debt Of U. S. Is $190,000,000,000

Washington, June 21 (AP)—The public debt of the United States has passed another milestone—$190,000,000,000.

30. 24 — 16435

At the close of business June 19, today's Treasury statement showed, it was $190,057,000,000, compared with $140,104,000,000 a year ago.

Excluding guaranteed obligations of certain Government corporations, the debt was $188,414,000,000. That is the figure covered by the legal debt limit—recently boosted from $210,000,000,000 to $260,000,000,000.

HOUSE WIDENS ELECTION VIEW

JUN 22 1944

Unions And Individuals Now Included In Investigation

Washington, June 21 (AP)—The House today set up machinery for investigating any suspected election fraud this Presidential campaign year and for the first time wrote labor unions into the scope of the investigation.

Heretofore biennial investigation of Congressional campaigns has been confined to contributions that may have been made illegally by corporations or other business associations.

Resolution Rewritten

The House rewrote the historic inquiring resolution to make susceptible to investigation the contributions of individuals, partnerships, corporations, committees or labor unions.

In addition, attention is to be paid to "the amounts raised, contributed and expended by any labor organization, trade or business association and any other agency."

As the measure came out of the Rules Committee it included "any political committee" connected with a labor organization, but this language was removed on the motion of Representative Marcantonio (A. L.-N. Y.) who said it was "singling out labor unions" too much.

Allusion To CIO Group

The "political committee" phrase was intended, Rules Committee members had said, to apply to the CIO Political Action Committee, named as a factor in the several special elections this year.

Marcantonio said as finally drawn the resolution "takes in everybody without singling out anybody."

Speaker Rayburn will appoint a committee of seven House members to conduct the inevstigation.

WHERRY DEMANDS PEACE AIMS NOW

JUN 22 1944

WASHINGTON, June 21—(AP) Senator Wherry (R-Neb.) said in the Senate today that President Roosevelt should make "a frank and honest statement" as to war and peace aims of the United States, and also as to "what commitments he has made in our name."

"What hope does he hold out to our men, who are now fighting and dying on the battle fronts, that their most fervent prayers will be answered?" Wherry asked in a speech.

"What plans have been made to insure the recognition of the inalienable rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness? What indeed are our boys even now fighting to secure for America, and for the suffering peoples of Europe?

"Mr. President, what are our peace aims?" he continued. "What commitments have been made? The gravity of the task that confronts us demands a frank and honest statement from our President as to what commitments he has made in our names?"

Senator Hatch (D-N.M.) remarked that he found nothing in Wherry's speech "with which to disagree' but added that "the responsibility for whatever peace is achieved rests not alone upon the shoulders of the President and Secretary of State, but also upon the Senate as well."

"I want to hear the vigorous voice of the senator from Nebraska stating his own peace aims," Hatch went on, "and stating how far he is willing to go in our relations with other nations."

WORLD FREE PRESS URGED

JUN 22 1944

Essential To Post-War Peace Machinery, Says Berle

New York, June 21 (AP)—A free exchange of information among nations is a "major necessity" in the successful operation of a world security organization after this war, Adolf A. Berle, Jr., Assistant Secretary of State, declared tonight.

His unqualified indorsement of the principle of international news freedom apparently placed it among the objectives of American foreign policy for the post-war world. Berle spoke before the Foreign Press Association.

Witout It, Misunderstanding

"Four great countries, the United States, Great Britain, the Soviet Union and China," he said, "committed themselves at Moscow to work out as soon as practicable a world peace organization for the purpose of assuring continued peace when the present battles are done.

"It is not too much to say that freedom of information is a major necessity if world organization is to succeed. With freedom of information there is possibility of understanding between peoples. Without it, the way is always open to build up misunderstanding, suspicion, fear and finally hatred.

"Often a knowledge of the facts ends the suspicion; a square look at the situation allays the fear; and, except in rare cases, few people hate where they are fully informed."

Truth Eventually Emerges

Berle added that "propaganda which is misrepresentation" and also "plain lies" may be started under a system of free press but "are not apt to last very long."

"Where there is free access to the news, and freedom to transmit it," he continued, "the truth does eventually emerge. In many cases the public wants to know the facts, and keeps on wanting to know the facts; and for that reason it ultimately does get the facts."

Such restrictions as are imposed in wartime are generally recognized and admitted, Berle said, "but in peacetime the greatest safeguard in foreign relations is the gathering and publishing of news and views and the interchange of those among peoples."

Lauds Newsmen At Front

Berle praised as heroes the newsmen who have covered war news at the front and said that other reporters in foreign affairs show a "different kind of courage and devotion" by insisting always on sending out fair, accurate, unslanted news "sometimes at the greatest of risk to themselves."

Berle described the war correspondents as the men "who have lived and have died in the front lines; who have kept the world informed from foxholes, under shell fire, in the captured cities among the land mines, and booby traps; who have told the stories of air raids from the bays of Flying Fortresses; and who have given us the laughter and the grief of the field forces."

Reporter's Obligation

Every reporter, he added, is under obligation to keep his news reports free of his own opinions and even more is his obligation "never to surrender mind and judgment to any outside influence — no matter how worthy it may appear."

"The final guarantee of the institution of free information by press and radio rests on the honor of the reporter; on the fact that he is true to himself and serves no master except his best judgment as to the truth, and his professional care and skill in presenting it."

Australian Publisher Speaks

Sir Keith Murdoch, Australian publisher who arrived here by plane from London, told the association there should be a post-war "open door" on news.

"Let us decide that after the war we shall have no censorship; that furthermore we shall have no propagandists," he said.

STORY OF LOST B-29 IS TOLD

Time Magazine Gives Account Of Its Destruction

JUN 22 1944

New York, June 21 (AP)—The story of one of the B-29 Superfortresses which raided Yawata last week and crashed in China, where Japanese warplanes blasted it into ruins, is told in the current issue of Time Magazine.

All the crewmen and a Time Magazine correspondent, Harry Zinder, who was aboard, escaped injury and returned safely to their base.

The Superfortress was only two hours away from its home field on the return from the huge Japanese steel center when one of its engines started smoking and Capt. Robert Root was forced to make an emergency landing behind the Chinese battle lines.

"We hit the field at fair speed, wheels down, and it seemed as though we were going to nose over when Root braked her to a dead stop," Zinder related. "We piled out.

Chinese Soldiers Arrive

"Across the field we saw a long column of men running toward us. Root said: 'Get the guns trained on them.' I looked at them through glasses. They were Chinese soldiers, and an officer.

"We bowed low and exchanged greetings. With the battle line only a few miles away, they said Jap planes would be over any minute. 'What can we do?' an interpreter asked.

"Root, all business, asked for 1,500 gallons of aviation fuel, tools to repair the engine, and a strip to be leveled so we could take off."

Have To Destroy Plane

Meanwhile, Zinder said, Lieut. Peter Coury, flight engineer, had examined the plane and reported to Root that "there is not much we can do with the engine. We'll have to destroy the plane and get out as best we can."

Zinder said that Root, after looking carefully at the ship, told two of the crewmen to accompany him inside to destroy the equipment and papers. "Then we'll burn her," he said.

"The rest of us sat there a few minutes," Zinder related. "Then suddenly we heard planes. Two fighters were streaking across the low mountains. We saw the rising sun on their sides."

Finished On First Trip

Zinder said they yelled to the men in the plane, then hit for a ditch. The first planes strafed the big ship, starting a fire on the left side.

A few minutes later, the correspondent wrote, 15 more Japanese planes — six bombers and nine fighters—came over.

"Through the next three hours more and more Jap planes came over, strafing and bombing, and just as suddenly as it started, it all stopped," Zinder said, adding that the Superfortress lay "dead and gutted, finished on her first trip."

The crew spent the night in a near-by farmhouse, he said, and "the next night, after a long motor ride, we were home again."

Owen D. Young Praises Lend-Lease Invention

Canton, N. Y., June 21 (AP)—The "invention of lend-lease" and "amazing demonstration of accomplishment made by American industry" offer two of the brightest hopes for a favorable post-war economic balance in this nation and the world, Owen D. Young declared today.

Describing lend-lease as an invaluable factor in effecting successful economic settlement between nations after the war, the board chairman of the General Electric Company said in an interview:

"The matter has been simplified this time. There is not a vast accumulation of debt between the Allies. Lend-lease has cared for that. That I regard as one of the greatest inventions of our time."

FORRESTAL CALLS FOR STRONG NAVY

JUN 22 1944

Princeton, N. J., June 21 (A. P.)—Secretary of the Navy Forrestal said today that when peace comes the American people must realize that they are not immune from war, whenever or wherever it starts. We must not permit our own idealism to persuade us to disarm, he said.

An international organization, he added, eventually may achieve a guaranty of peace, but while it is being created peace may be obtainable only through the existence of the armed forces of the United States and her allies.

As one of the great elements of that force the Navy must be maintained after the war, he said in an address prepared for delivery at a special convocation at Princeton University, where he received an honorary LL.D. degree.

New Midget Fog Maker To Shield Shock Troops

JUN 22 1944

Portable Haze Generator as Model 20 Times Bulkier

EDGEWOOD ARSENAL, Md., June 21 (AP).—The development of a small, but powerful, mechanical fog generator nicknamed the "foxhole fog-maker," was disclosed here today by officials of the Chemical Warfare Service.

Officially known as the M-2, the new fog maker was designed especially for the protection of shock troops and for amphibious operations where speed and space is at a premium, the officials said. It can be transported quickly and easily to beachheads, mountain passes and over jungle trails impassable for the larger machines.

The large fog generator already in use, the M-1, is about twenty times as bulky as the new midget and must be carried in a truck or truck trailer. The new device can generate half as much smoke as the old, authorities reported.

War On Italian Front Unites Twins In Death

JUN 22 1944

Welch, W. Va., June 21 (AP)—War on the Italian battlefront united in death the 21-year-old twin sons of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kemp.

Mrs. Kemp said at her home in near-by Superior that the War Department had advised her of the death of Raymond, three months after Ray was killed in fighting on the Anzio beachhead.

The couple received a letter last week from Raymond inclosing a prayer which he had composed and dedicated to Ray. The twins entered service March 27, 1943.

LANDON PREDICTS NAMING OF DEWEY ON EARLY BALLOT

JUN 22 1944

CHICAGO, June 21 — (AP) As party platform discussions formally got under way, two prominent Republicans forecast today that Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York would be nominated for the presidency on the first or second ballot by next week's national convention. A third said Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio "has a good chance."

Former Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, 1936 Republican standard bearer, arrived with this prediction:

"Dewey will probably be nominated on the first ballot—certainly not later than the second."

Landon attacked the administration's foreign policy and in response to queries as to his vice presidential nomination choice said the running mate should come from a field composed of Gov. Earl Warren of California, Governor Bricker, and Gov. Simeon S. Willis of Kentucky, but not necessarily in that order. Bricker is due here tomorrow.

The second pro-Dewey prediction came from a Keystone State delegate high in the councils of the party who preferred not to be quoted by name. When asked how the 70-vote uninstructed Pennsylvania delegation would vote, he replied:

"There is no ther course conceivable than that our delegation will go for Dewey."

The Pennsylvania delegation, second largest in the convention, will caucus Sunday night.

It was Senator Taft of Ohio who declared "Governor Bricker has a good chance" for the presidential nomination.

Clarence B. Kelland, Arizona, and Lew H. Wentz, Oklahoma, National committee members, also expressed the belief Dewey would be a first or second ballot winner. They gave their views informally to reporters, as did the others.

Platform Committee Meets

Taft, slated to become chairman of the Resolutions committee met with that group to organize and work out a preliminary platform draft. Indications were general that agreement would not be difficult to reach on a plank favoring international cooperation to keep the peace, backed by military force if necessary.

Senator Austin (R.-Vt.), who brought to Chicago a one-page typewritten declaration of foreign policy, said it followed closely the Mackinac Charter adopted by the Republican Post-War Advisory Council last September.

But it was reported to go beyond the Mackinac declaration by addition of the use of military force. The proposed plank was described as having the approval of supporters of both Dewey and Bricker. Taft said he had seen it, adding "it is a good one."

Austin told reporters he did not believe there would be much controversy over adoption of the foreign policy plank. Asked if he thought those of liberal internationalist views would be satisfied with a statement which apparently will make it clear that this country would retain its freedom of action at all times, he replied:

"I believe that if they are assured that the substance of the report contemplates effective international collaboration, they will not quarrel about words."

He made it clear, also, that the Republicans do not intend to eliminate foreign policy from campaign discussions.

"It would be unfortunate to eliminate from public discussion the international policies of this country," he said. "Both parties should discuss them fully but without political bickering or partisan bitterness."

Landon Hits "Confusion"

Landon said he did not see how foreign policy would be "the issue it should be because Roosevelt and Churchill have brought about such a confused situation."

"A man can't know what our foreign policy is," he asserted. "You can't make an issue out of a myth or an irridescent dream."

The administration handling of foreign affairs, Landon asserted, had brought about a "deterioration of our Good Neighbor policy in the Western Hemisphere and in our relations with France."

"So I don't see how we can go much further in our foreign affairs plank than the Mackinac declaration," he added.

Landon said he went to the Philadelphia convention in 1940 favoring a platform that could be written on a postcard, but that he had "lost all illusions as to that."

Austin V. Wood, Wheeling W. Va., publisher and convention delegate, issued a statement through Bricker's headquarters late today saying it would be "a great mistake" for the Republican to nominate "a man who has failed to make known his position" on important issues.

Hitting at Governor Dewey, he said the New Yorker once had much greater popular strength in West Virginia than he has today."

He said he was confident that more than half the West Virginia delegation of 19 favor Governor Bricker. He added he had talked with each delegate from that state and knew "of but three who are firmly for Dewey."

ANTIS TO SEEK GROUP TIEUP

Democrats Opposing New Deal Would Meet In South

Chicago, June 21 (AP) — The American Democratic National Committee, which has decided to call a convention of "all anti-New Deal organizations" if the Democratic party renominates President Roosevelt, announced today the proposed meeting would be held in a Southern city not designated.

An executive committee has been appointed, the announcement said, to effect a merger with other anti-Administration Democratic organizations.

Republicans Or Independent?

Robert O'Brien, secretary of the organization, said the convention, in the event President Roosevelt received the Democratic Presidential nomination, would decide whether to indorse the Republican nominee, or nominate an independent Democratic candidate for President.

He said the convention probably would be called "within a week or two" after the close of the Democratic convention in Chicago, which opens July 19.

The executive committee appointed to effect the merger will invite, O'Brien said, the following:

Southern Anti-New Deal Association, Southern Democratic Party of South Carolina, American Nationalists, of which Senator Robert Reynolds (D., N. C.) is chairman, and what O'Brien termed an unnamed group of "Insurgent Democrats" headed by Gene Germany, of Dallas, Texas.

Louisianan And Carolinan

W. W. Walker, of Shreveport, La., is secretary of the Southern Anti-New Deal Association, and J. K. Breedin, of Columbia, S. C., is chairman of the Southern Democratic Party of South Carolina.

Members of the executive committee, "charged with the task of effecting a meeting of delegates from all anti-New Deal Democratic organizations," were:

John J. O'Connor, former Representative of New York; Charles McGlue, Massachusetts; John Regan, Minnesota; E. Wayles Browne, Louisiana, and George F. Short, Oklahoma.

LONDON, JUNE -1-(AP)-THE HOUSE OF LORDS WAS TOLD TODAY THAT PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL BELIEVES THE "WHITE FEATHER" RESOLUTION ADOPTED BY OXFORD UNIVERSITY'S UNION IN 1933 "HAD A DECISIVE INFLUENCE" ON PREMIER MUSSOLINI'S DECISION TO TAKE ITALY INTO THE WAR.

"THE YOUNG MEN AT OXFORD WHO PASSED THAT RESOLUTION VERY NEARLY DECREED THE DOWNFALL OF BRITAIN AND HER EMPIRE," SAID MAJOR GEN. LORD MOTTISTONE.

JUN 22 1944

THE RESOLUTION OF OXFORD'S FAMOUS DEBATING SOCIETY SAID: "THIS HOUSE WILL IN NO CIRCUMSTANCES FIGHT FOR ITS KING AND COUNTRY."

MOTTISTONE SAID CHURCHILL TOLD HIM:

"THE EFFECT OF THE RESOLUTION WAS SHATTERING ON THE CONTINENT--SHATTERING TO OUR PRESTIGE. WE HAVE ACTUAL PROOF NOW THAT MUSSOLINI WAS SO AFFECTED BY IT HE DEFINITELY CAME TO THE CONCLUSION BRITAIN MIGHT BE COUNTED OUT. IT PROBABLY HAD A DECISIVE INFLUENCE ON HIS DECISION TO BRING ITALY INTO THE WAR ON THE SIDE OF GERMANY."

MOTTISTONE MADE HIS STATEMENT IN MOVING AN AMENDMENT TO AN EDUCATION BILL PROVIDING THAT CHILDREN SHOULD BE TAUGHT "THE RIGHT AND DUTY OF A CITIZEN TO DEFEND HIS NATIVE LAND."

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, JUNE 21-(AP)-SUPREME HEADQUARTERS EXPLAINED TODAY THE PHANTOM OPERATIONS OF RAF NIGHT BOMBERS WHO BEFORE D-DAY WERE HEARD RUMBLING OFF BUT NEVER REPORTED THEY HAD BOMBED ANYTHING.
THEY WERE REHEARSING FOR INVASION, DETERMINING FOR ORDNANCE EXPERTS THE BEST KIND OF EXPLOSIVES TO BE USED, AND THE BEST KIND OF AMMUNITION FOR THE MANIFOLD TYPES OF TACTICAL SUPPORT NOW BEING SUPPLIED.
WAVES OF HEAVY BOMBERS ATTACKED A STRIP OF SOUTHERN BRITISH COAST TO FIND OUT THE KIND OF BOMBS THAT COULD KNOCK OUT GERMAN COASTAL DEFENSES WITHOUT TEARING UP THE TERRAIN AND IMPEDING THE LANDING FORCES.
IN THE INTERIOR OF ENGLAND, A MOCK ARMY WAS DEPLOYED, AUTHENTIC IN EVERY DETAIL EXCEPT PERSONNEL. DUMMIES WERE SUBSTITUTED--FOR OBVIOUS REASONS.
"THIS "ARMY" WAS BATTERED WITH EVERY KIND OF BOMB, CANNON SHELL AND BULLET TO DETERMINE WHICH TYPE WAS BEST FOR SPECIFIC ATTACKS.
TRIAL ATTACKS ALSO WERE MADE ON DETECTION TOWERS AND OTHER INSTALLATIONS WHICH WERE CREDITED WITH BEING AN IMPORTANT FACTOR IN THE D-DAY SUCCESSES WHICH NEUTRALIZED THE ENEMY'S RADAR SYSTEM.
THIS MAY IN TURN ACCOUNT IN PART FOR THE GERMAN AIR FORCE'S POOR SHOWING.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, JUNE 22-(THURSDAY)-(AP)-REPORTS MULTIPLIED TODAY THAT THE GERMANS HAD BEEN LAUNCHING ROCKET BOMBS FROM THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA, THE SUPREME COMMAND ITSELF CONFIRMED THAT TROOPS FIGHTING UP THAT NECK OF NORMANDY SEIZED AT LEAST ONE SITE.
THE HEADQUARTERS ANNOUNCEMENT DID NOT SAY THE SITE ACTUALLY HAD BEEN USED FOR LAUNCHING THIS NEW WEAPON, BUT THE BRITISH BROADCASTING COMPANY EARLIER SAID U.S. TROOPS HAD CAPTURED SEVERAL SITES FROM WHICH THE GERMANS HAD BEEN FIRING THE FLYING BOMBS.
IF TRUE, THIS WOULD BE THE FIRST DISCLOSURE THAT SOUTHERN ENGLAND HAS BEEN POUNDED FROM THIS DIRECTION. ANNOUNCEMENTS PREVIOUSLY HAVE MENETIONED ONLY THE REGION AROUND PAS-DE-CALAIS TO THE NORTH-EAST. NOR HAVE BOMBING ATTACKS ON SUCH TARGETS IN THE PENINSULA BEEN REPORTED.
AT ANY RATE, THE CAPTURE OF THESE INSTALLATIONS INTACT PROVIDED ALLIED TECHNICIANS WITH A LABORATORY FOR FINDING MEANS TO COMBAT THE WEAPON, AND TECHNICAL EXPERTS HAVE BEEN RUSHED IN TO EXAMINE THEM, SAID ADVICES FROM AN RAF BASE.
AIR EXPERT LORD WINSTER TOLD THE GERMANS THAT THEIR USE OF THE PILOTS AND BOMBER CREWMEN RETURNING FROM THE RAID SAID THE FLAK VARIED--STRONG OVER SOME AREAS AND LIGHT IN OTHERS--BUT THAT THE TRIP TO BERLIN WAS MILD COMPARED WITH SOME PREVIOUS MISSIONS.

ONE FORMATION OF BOMBERS, HOWEVER, WAS ATTACKED BY 50 JU88'S AND THERE WAS A HOT TIME.

STOCKHOLM, JUNE 21-(AP)-THE FINNISH GOVERNMENT CRISIS WAS REPORTED BY THE NEWSPAPER SVENSKA DAGBLADET TONIGHT TO HAVE BEEN "DEFACTO SOLVED," A PHRASE TAKEN TO MEAN THAT THE CABINET WAS REFORMED AND PRESUMABLY COULD NOW TURN TO MOSCOW FOR ARMISTICE CONDITIONS.

CONFRONTED BY A MILITARY CATASTROPHE ON THE FINNISH-RUSSIAN FRONT, FINNISH POLITICAL LEADERS HAD BEEN IN URGENT CONSULTATIONS.

(A REUTERS DISPATCH FROM STOCKHOLM SAID THERE WERE UNCONFIRMED REPORTS THAT A FINNISH PEACE CABINET WAS FORMED IN THE NIGHT.)

SVENSKA DAGBLADET HAS GOOD CONNECTIONS WITH THE SWEDISH PARLIAMENTARY FOREIGN AFFAIRS COMMITTEE (WHICH SUGGESTS THAT ITS INFORMATION CAME FROM FINLAND THROUGH OFFICIAL CHANNELS.) IT SAID A FINNISH STATEMENT ON THE POLITICAL SITUATION WAS EXPECTED THURSDAY.

THERE WAS A GROWING DOUBT IN STOCKHOLM THAT FINLAND CAN EXPECT TERMS COMPARABLE WITH THOSE SHE REJECTED LAST MARCH AND IT IS EVEN PREDICTED IN SOME QUARTERS THAT THE RUSSIANS NOW WILL ASK UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER.

ROME, JUNE 21-(AP)-A CONCERT FOR ALLIED SOLDIERS AT THE ROME OPERA HOUSE THURSDAY NIGHT IS TO BE CONDUCTED--BY OFFICIAL ORDER--WITHOUT BENIAMINO GIGLI, FORMER METROPOLITAN OPERA TENOR WHO ARDENLY SUPPORTED MUSSOLINI AND SANG IN GERMANY UNDER NAZI AUSPICES EARLIER IN THE WAR.

POSTERS ADVERTISING GIGLI'S PART IN THE MUSICAL PROGRAM WERE TORN DOWN BY ITALIANS. ITALIAN NEWSPAPERS ATTACKED HIM.

THE STATE BANQUET AT THE PRESIDENTIAL VILLA FOLLOWED A TOUR IN WHICH WALLACE MET "YOUNG CHINA," RUBBING SHOULDERS WITH CHEERING UNIVERSITY STUDENTS WHOM HE TOLD TO "WORK FOR THE DAY WHEN ALL THE PEOPLE OF CHINA CAN READ AND WRITE."

WALLACE, WHO PROPHESIED ON HIS ARRIVAL HERE THAT THE CHINESE-RUSSIAN BOUNDARY WOULD BECOME A FRIENDLY FRONTIER LIKE THAT BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA, ALSO VISITED A COOPERATIVE CLOTH-WEAVING PLANT AC75£3, $-'£3$ OUT TO AN OCCUPAT

WEAVING PLANT AND THEN DASHED OUT TO AN OCCUPATIONAL CAMP FOR WOUNDED SOLDIERS WHERE HE STUDIED THE MANUFACTURE OF UMBRELLAS AND WICKER FURNITURE.

HE WAS A LUNCHEON GUEST OF GEN. HO YING-CHIN, CHINESE MINISTER OF WAR.

BAREHEADED, ATTIRED IN A SLACK SUIT AND TENNIS SHOES, WALLACE VISITED AN AMERICAN RED CROSS ENLISTED MEN'S CLUB WHERE HE WAS MET BY TWO RED CROSS GIRLS, MISSES ADA CHARLOTTE PAGENKOPF, 1451 LINCOTON AVE., ST.PAUL,MINN., AND MIMI BUESCHER, COLUMBIA, MO.

LATER HE MET ANOTHER RED CROSS GIRL, CHINESE-CANADIAN MISS CATHLEEN LEE, OF EDMONTON AND CALGARY, ALBERTA.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT TALKED TO A NUMBER OF G.I.'S, WHO PRESENTED HIM A SCROLL ENTITLING HIM TO "ALL THE RIGHTS AND PRIVILEGES OF G.I.'S."

THEN, CONDUCTED BY LT. GEN. JOSEPH W.STILWELL'S DEPUTY CHIEF OF STAFF, BRIG. GEN. BENJAMIN FERRIS, WALLACE INSPECTED ENLISTED MEN'S BARRACKS AND AMERICAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, SHAKING HANDS WITH A NUMBER OF OFFICERS.

DESPITE A STEADY RAIN, THE VICE-PRESIDENT PLAYED THREE GAMES OF VOLLEY BALL IN A MATCH BETWEEN ENLISTED MEN AND OFFICERS. WALLACE PLAYED WITH THE ENLISTED MEN'S TEAM AND STRIPPED TO THE WAIST FOR THE GAME.

ON HIS ARRIVAL HERE YESTERDAY FROM RUSSIA THE VICE PRESIDENT EVOKED WIDE INTEREST BY QUOTING DR.HU SHIH, CHINESE AMBASSADOR TO THE UNITED STATES, AS SAYING THE BORDER BETWEEN CHINA AND SIBERIA "SHOULD BE LIKE THE FRONTIER BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA--NOT ONE OF SEPARATION, BUT ONE OF JOINING FRIENDS TOGETHER."

"I BELIEVE IT WILL BE SO," WALLACE COMMENTED IN A PREPARED STATEMENT.

CHUNGKING TOOK THE VIEW THAT WALLACE WOULD NOT HAVE EXPRESSED SUCH AN OPINION UNLESS HE HAD REASON TO BELIEVE CHINA'S BORDERS, PARTICULARLY IN MANCHURIA, WOULD BE RESPECTED AFTER THE WAR. THE CHINESE HAVE HAD SOME DOUBTS ON THIS SUBJECT, WHICH THEY HAVE EXPRESSED PRIVATELY.

WALLACE WAS WELCOMED AT THE AIRPORT BY GENERALISSIMO CHIANG KAI-SHEK.

CHINESE PAPERS GAVE CONSIDERABLE SPACE TO WALLACE'S VISIT, SOME DEVOTING EDITORIALS TO IT, HAILING THE VICE PRESIDENT AS "A WARRIOR FOR DEMOCRACY."

THE ARMY MOUTHPIECE, SAO TANG PAO, CONFESSED IGNORANCE AS TO THE REAL PURPOSE OF THE JOURNEY BUT SPECULATED IT WAS CONNECTED WITH BOTH THE WAR EFFORT AND POST-WAR PLANS. IT ASKED WALLACE TO REMEMBER CHINA WAS EQUALLY DETERMINED TO FIGHT TO THE LAST AND TO HELP MAINTAIN WORLD PEACE.

THE OFFICIAL CENTRAL DAILY NEWS SAID IT HOPED THE VICE PRESIDENT'S MISSION TO CHINA WOULD HASTEN REALIZATION OF DECISIONS MADE AT THE CAIRO CONFERENCE, ADDING "WE HOPE THAT IN HIS CONSULTATIONS WITH CHIANG KAI-SHEK WALLACE WILL TAKE UP THE MATTER OF PRELIMINARY PLANS FOR A LONG TERM PEACE IN THE PACIFIC AND THE ASIATIC CONTINENT."

ABOARD U.S.EXPEDITIONARY FORCE FLAGSHIP IN THE MARIANAS, JUNE 21-(AP)-THE NAVY SENT A MASSIVE FORCE 6,200 AIR MILES WEST OF THE UNITED STATES MAINLAND TO INVADE THE MARIANAS ISLANDS.

THERE ARE MORE THAN 1,000 WAR PLANES, AND HUNDREDS OF SURFACE SHIPS. AND OF COURSE THERE ARE THOUSANDS OF SOLDIERS AND HUNDREDS OF LANDING BOATS AND OTHER TINY CRAFT.

THE SHIP TOTAL INCLUDES ALL TYPES OF VESSELS FROM THE LARGEST BATTLESHIPS

AND AIRCRAFT CARRIERS DOWN TO PLODDING FREIGHT CARRIERS. NOT ALL OF THESE SHIPS, BY ANY MEANS, ARE IN THE ACTUAL BATTLE AREA, BUT THIS MASSIVE STROKE COULD NOT BE DELIVERED WITHOUT THE SUPPORT OF ALL OF THESE VESSELS.

(REPRESENTING THE COMBINED AMERICAN PRESS--DISTRIBUTED BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)

ABOARD JOINT EXPEDITIONARY FORCE FLAGSHIP OFF SAIPAN, JUNE 21-(AP)-ROLLING BACK REMNANTS OF TWO JAPANESE DIVISIONS, AMERICAN FORCES HAVE SWEPT ACROSS SAIPAN ISLAND TO SEIZE STRONG CONTROL OF THE SOUTHERN PART OF THE ISLAND AND ASLITO AIRFIELD, ITS GREATEST PRIZE.

THIS 3,600-FOOT FIELD IS NECESSARY FOR PROTECTION AGAINST DEVELOPING JAPANESE AIR ATTACKS. AMERICAN LAND-BASED PLANES WILL SOON OPERATE FROM HERE, REPLACING CARRIER AIRCRAFT WHICH SO FAR HAVE DONE A LONE-HANDED JOB IN KEEPING THE SKIES CLEAR.

THE ENEMY LOST 300 PLANES IN A VAIN ATTEMPT TO CRIPPLE THE AMPHIBIOUS FORCE WHICH STORMED ASHORE SIX DAYS AGO. THEY DID NOT SUCCEED IN SINKING A SINGLE SHIP.

THE AMERICANS EXPANDED AN 8,000-FOOT BEACHHEAD INTO NEARLY A THIRD OF THE ISLAND, SMASHING ACROSS IT CLEAR TO MAGICIENNE BAY AND TO A SHORT DISTANCE SOUTH OF GARAPAN. THE LINE FROM NEAR GARAPAN SKIRTS THE STRONGLY DEFENDED MOUNT TAPOTCHAU, EXTINCT VOLCANO TOWERING OVER THE CENTER OF THE ISLAND. THEN THE LINE EXTENDS TOWARD MAGICIENNE BAY, THENCE SOUTHWARDS ALONG THE COAST, WHERE A SMALL BODY OF JAPANESE ARE TRAPPED ON ROCKY NAFUTAN POINT, SAIPAN'S SOUTHEASTERN EXTREMITY.

THE LANDING OF ARMY REINFORCEMENTS AND HEAVY ARTILLERY ON THE SOUTHERN BEACHES IN SUPPORT OF HARD-PRESSED MARINES, WHO HAVE BORNE THE BRUNT OF THE FIGHTING, PAVED WAY FOR A GENERAL ATTACK

ALONG THE ENTIRE LINE. SUPPORT BY COORDINATED ARTILLERY AND NAVAL GUN FIRE AND POWERFUL AERIAL STRENGTH, THE AMERICANS STRUCK THE JAPS AT MANY POINTS.

THE ATTACK AROUND CHARON KANOA, WHERE THE AMERICANS WERE ONCE COMPELLED TO WITHDRAW ALMOST TO THE BEACH, STARTED IN A HEAVY TROPICAL DOWNPOUR WHICH DREW A RAIN CURTAIN OVER THE OPPOSING TROOPS.

WHILE THE ARMY WHEELED SOUTHWARD OVER A RIDGE [illegible]NG TOWARD THE AIRFIELD, THE MARINES STRUCK NORTHEAST, AVENGING A SAVAGE JAPANESE COUNTERATTACK WHICH EXACTED A TOLL OF MARINES THE FIRST TWO DAYS OF BATTLE.

ADVANCING THROUGH BLAZE-BLACKENED STALKS NORTH OF CHARON KANOA, IN LINE WITH EXPERIENCE GAINED WHILE TRAINING IN HAWAIIAN CANE FIELDS, THE MARINES ENCOUNTERED A JAPANESE FORCE STRONGLY SUPPORTED BY TANKS MOVING SOUTHWARDS ALONG THE COAST FROM GARAPAN. IN A SHATTERING BATTLE THE MARINES KNOCKED OUT 30 TANKS WITH BAZOOKAS, DECISIVELY ENDING THE THREAT AT THAT POINT.

SHOWING AMAZING VERSATILITY, THE MARINES TURNED SEAWARDS AND FOUGHT AN IMPORTANT BATTLE WITH A GROUP OF SIXTY-FOOT TROOP-LADEN BARGES FROM THE ENEMY SEAPLANE BASE AT FLORES POINT, WHICH WERE ATTEMPTING TO LAND BEHIND THE AMERICAN LINES.

THE JAPANESE ARMADA WAS CAUGHT BETWEEN THE FIRE OF LCI (LANDING CRAFT, INFANTRY) GUNBOATS AND THE MARINES. THIRTEEN BARGES EXPLODED AND THE THREAT WAS DISPERSED.

THROUGH THE MUDDY SWAMPS AROUND LAKE SUSUPE, EAST OF CHARON KANOA, THE MARINES ADVANCED TO A POINT OVERLOOKING MAGICIENNE BAY, WHICH WAS REACHED AFTER THEY SCATTERED A JAP FORCE FORMING NEARBY.

WHILE THE AMERICAN LINE MOVED FARTHER INLAND, NAVAL GUNS AND PLANES RANGED OVER THE ISLAND, SPOTTING AND DESTROYING JAPANESE MORTARS POSITIONED ON MOUNTAIN RIDGES. THEY BOMBARDED AND REDUCED MORTAR FIRE TO INEFFECTIVE MUTTERS UNTIL THE BEACHES, ONCE ALMOST UNTENABLE UNDER MURDEROUS FIRE, WERE COVERED WITH MASSES OF MEN AND MOUNTAINS OF SUPPLIES BROUGHT IN BY HUNDREDS OF BOATS MAINTAINING A FERRY SERVICE WITH THE TRANSPORTS OFFSHORE.

THE ATTACK WAS SO EFFECTIVE THAT SOON HUNDREDS OF JAPANESE CIVILIANS--MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN--SWARMED THERE SEEKING SAFETY AND AMERICAN PROTECTION.

THEY ARE BEING FED AND HOUSED IN CAMPS.

SAIPAN PROVED TO BE JAPAN'S MAIN ARSENAL IN THE MARIANAS. I WATCHED NAVAL GUNS BLASTING SHORE TARGETS AND SAW SHELLS AND BOMBS RIPPING OPEN DEEPLY-HIDDEN OIL AND AMMUNITION DUMPS HONEYCOMBING THE MOUNTAIN SLOPES, INDICATIVE OF MANY YEARS ACCUMULATION OF WAR STORES.

ON THE SOUTHERN COAST CAVES WERE FOUND STUFFED WITH FUEL AND AMMUNITION. FIVE OIL DUMPS BLAZED TOGETHER IN A THREE-MILE AREA, WITH BLACK SMOKE SPIRALLING UPWARD AS FROM A CLUSTER OF VOLCANOES. THE BIGGEST DUMP BLAZED AT THE FOOT OF MOUNT TAPOTCHAU, WHICH THE JAPS CONVERTED INTO A MOUNTAIN FORTRESS, WITH MORTARS AND ARTILLERY DUG INTO ENTRENCHED POSITIONS.

DOMINATING THESE OPERATIONS IS THE MAGNIFICENT WORK OF THE NAVY AND ITS CARRIERS COVERING THE LANDINGS, PREVENTING ENEMY INTERFERENCE AND FACILITATING THE VITALLY-IMPORTANT SUPPLY AND LANDING TASK.

NATURAL OBSTACLES INCLUDED CROSSING A 1,500-YARD REEF TO SUPPLY THE BIG FORCE ASHORE, MADE MORE DIFFICULT BY ENEMY AIR ATTACKS BY CARRIER PLANES SHUTTLED FROM ADJACENT AIRFIELDS.

OWI, SOUTHERN ISLANDS, DUTCH NEW GUINEA, JUNE 17-(DELAYED)-(AP)-

30. 24— 16447

PILOTS OF FOURTEEN LIGHTNING FIGHTER PLANES AND A CRIPPLED MITCHELL MEDIUM BOMBER, CAUGHT IN A VIOLENT TROPICAL STORM, SAVED THEMSELVES FROM DESTRUCTION BY MAKING EMERGENCY LANDINGS AT THIS NEW AIRPORT TODAYM

THE PLANES WERE THE LAST TO LEAVE JEFMAN AIRDROME IN A HEAVY STRIKE ON THAT ENEMY BASE AT SORONG, ON THE TIP OF DUTCH NEW GUINEA.

WHEN A STORM BLEW UP FROM THE SOUTHEAST, THE PILOTS TRIED ALTITUDE AND FOUND THE WEATHER FRONT IMPENETRABLE AT 27,000 FEET AND HIGHER. THEY TRIED TO SLIP UNDER THE STORM, LESS THAN 30 FEET FROM THE SEA, BUT AGAIN WERE FRUSTRATED.

"MAKE FOR BIAK," THE FLIGHT LEADER ADVISED.

"IT'S OUR ONLY CHANCE. THERE'S A NEW STRIP ON OWI ISLAND JUST SOUTH OF BOSNEK."

WHEN THE PLANES CIRCLED OVER OWI ISLAND THEY FOUND IT BARELY DISCERNIBLE IN THE RAIN. BUT NEARBY MOKMER AIRDROME ON BIAK ISLAND, IN AMERICAN HANDS, STILL WAS UNDER HEAVY SHELLFIRM THERE WAS NO ALTERNATIVE BUT TO LAND AT OWI.

THE CRIPPLED B-25 WAS THE FIRST TO SET DOWN. DESPITE A DISABLED ENGINE, THE PLANE ROLLED TO A PERFECT LANDING.

ONE BY ONE THE LIGHTNINGS TAXIES SAFELY TO THE END OF THE STRIP -- ALL SAVE THE LAST PLANE.

CAPT.RICHARD L NEER, MARTINSVILLE,ILL., USED HIS LAST CAPFULL OF GASOLINE IN APPROACHING THE MONSOON-SWEPT FIELD AND HAD TO MAKE A BELLY LANDING. HE DID SO WITHOUT INJURY BUT "I AGED 10 YEARS IN THOSE LAST 10 MINUTES."

OTHER PILOTS MAKING THE HAZARDOUS FIRST LANDING INCLUDED LT. CARL T.WEAVER, JACKSON,TENN., MAJOR ROBERT C.SMITH, MADISON, FLA., AND MAJOR WILLIAM MAGUIRE, AVON PARK,FLA.

ADVANCED ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, NEW GUINEA, JUNE 21-(AP)-TWO MORE JAPANESE AIRDROMES ON BIAK ISLAND WERE IN AMERICAN HANDS TODAY, GIVING THE ALLIES FOUR AIRFIELDS ON THE SCHOUTEN ISLANDS, OFF THE DUTCH NEW GUINEA NORTH COAST, FROM WHICH WARPLANES SOON MAY ATTACK THE PHILIPPINES.

YANK INFANTRYMEN, AIDED BY TANKS AND ARTILLERY, DROVE THE JAPANESE FROM NEARBY RIDGES YESTERDAY, THEN ADVANCED ALMOST UNOPPOSED ONTO SORIDO AND BOROKOE AIRSTRIPS.

THE FIELDS, MORE THAN A MILE APART, ARE WITHIN FOUR MILES OF BIAK'S LARGEST AIRSTRIP, MOKMER, CAPTURED JUNE 7 AND USED BY THE ALLIES THE PAST WEEK.

FIVE MILES SOUTH OF BIAK, ON TINY OWI ISLAND, THE AMERICANS HAVE BUILT ANOTHER AIRFIELD.

THESE FOUR FIELDS, CLOSE TO THE EQUATOR, ARE ABOUT 880 MILES FROM THE PHILIPPINES AND A LIKE DISTANCE FROM YAP IN THE CAROLINES, CELEBES EAST OF BORNEO, TIMOR IN THE NETHERLANDS EAST INDIES AND DARWIN, AUSTRALIA.

AMERICAN CONSTRUCTION CREWS HASTENED TO PUT INTO OPERATION BOTH BOROKOE, WHICH THE JAPANESE NEVER QUITE GOT READY TO USE, AND SORIDO, ALSO IN BAD SHAPE. THE ALLIES NOW OCCUPY MOST OF THE FLAT SOUTHEASTERN HALF OF BIAK WHICH IS SUITABLE FOR AIRSTRIPS.

HEADQUARTERS ANNOUNCED TODAY THAT BOSTON ATTACK PLANES, OPERATING POSSIBLY FROM MOKMER OR OWI, ATTACKED ENEMY SHIPPING OFF MANOKWARI, DUTCH NEW GUINEA, 135 MILES TO THE WEST, MONDAY, AND SANK A 1,000-TON FREIGHTER, A SMALL COASTAL VESSEL AND FOUR BARGES AT A COST OF ONE PLANE.

LIBERATORS FROM THE ADMIRALTY ISLANDS DROPPED 39 TONS OF BOMBS ON TRUK IN THE CAROLINES WITHOUT ENCOUNTERING INTERCEPTION OR ANTIAIRCRAFT FIRE.

london, wednesday, june 21-(ap)-- the german transocean news agency, in a berlin broadcast, quoted a japanese naval spokesman today as saying that japanese air and naval forces "have successfully engaged an american fleet" in the waters off the marianas islands.

it was not clear from the broadcast, however, whether the statement referred to new operations still in progress or whether it was merely an allusion to previous activity mentioned in a japanese communique yesterday.

in that bulletin, imperial headquarters maintained that the japanese had shot down 300 u.s. planes, sunk several american warships and damaged a number of others off the marianas.

transocean quoted a dispatch from shanghai as saying that the japanese naval spokesman, capt. keizo matsushima, had told a press conference that heavy losses had been inflicted upon american forces "during violent battles in the waters off the marianas islands and before saipan"-- where u.s. attackers have won beachhead.

matsushima predicted "far-reaching consequences for the entire development of the war" would grow out of these engagements.

"if the battle in the marianas continues at the present pace," he was quoted as saying, "i think that the future situation in the pacific will develop favorably for the japanese."

he asserted that "the greatest part of the american fleet is assembled off the marianas."

(ADVANCE) NEW YORK, JUNE 21-(AP)-MAJ.GEN.T.A.TERRY, COMMANDING GENERAL OF THE SECOND SERVICE COMMAND, SAID TONIGHT THAT CURTAILMENT OF SOME WAR SERVICES HAD BEEN MISINTERPRETED BY THE PUBLIC TO MEAN THAT THE UNITED STATES COULD COAST TO VICTORY.

JUN 22 1944

ACTUALLY, THE WAR DEPARTMENT ORDERED SUCH CURTAILMENTS BECAUSE OF A NEED FOR INCREASED PRODUCTION AND MORE EFFECTIVE UTILIZATION OF MANPOWER, TERRY SAID IN A PREPARED ADDRESS BEFORE THE NEW YORK UNIVERSITY CENTER OF SAFETY EDUCATION.

WHILE DESCRIBING THE WAR PICTURE AS MORE CHEERFUL THAN A YEAR AGO, TERRY SAID:

"THE CURTAILMENT IN THE NUMBER OF PLANTS ON THE MASTER INSPECTION RESPONSIBILITY LIST; DEACTIVATION OF THE AIRCRAFT WARNING SERVICE; LIMITATIONS PLACED UPON BLACKOUT AND AIR RAID DRILLS; REDUCTION IN SECURITY PERSONNEL BY CERTAIN WAR PLANTS, HAVE BEEN CONSTRUED BY SOME PEOPLE TO INDICATE A BELIEF ON THE PART OF OUR MILITARY LEADERS THAT WE CAN COAST FROM NOW ON AND THAT VICTORY WILL COME AS A MATTER OF COURSE.

"LET ME SAY TO YOU WITH ALL THE EMPHASIS I I CAN COMMAND THAT THIS IS NOT THE CASE AND THAT IT IS NOT THE THOUGHT WHICH PROMPTED THESE ACTIONS BY THE WAR DEPARTMENT.

"ON THE CONTRARY, EVERY ONE OF THEM WAS PROMPTED BY THE STEADILY GROWING NEED FOR GREATER AND MORE EFFECTIVE UTILIZATION OF EVERY BIT OF OUR MANPOWER.

30. 24— 164 51

"WE ARE AT THE POINT NOW WHERE WE MUST HIT HARDER ANDHIN MORE PLACES EACH SUCCEEDING DAY. THIS, IN TURN, MEANS THAT WE MUST HAVE A CONSTANTLY LARGER PRODUCTION OF SUPPLIES WHICH WILL BE EXPENDED MORE RAPIDLY THAN THEY HAVE BEEN AT ANY TIME DURING THE PAST TWO AND A HALF YEARS.

"A FALTERING IN ANY RESPECT WILL MEAN DAYS, WEEKS, POSSIBLY MONTHS DELAYS IN THE ULTIMATE CONCLUSION OF THE WAR."

TERRY SAID THAT ON-THE-JOB DEATHS AND INJURIES WERE COSTING THE NATION OVER 2,000,000,000 MAN HOURS ANNUALLY--OR ENOUGH TO HAVE BUILT 90,000 MORE BOMBING PLANES LAST YEAR.

"THAT WOULD HAVE BEEN ENOUGH TO SEND AN ADDITIONAL FLEET OF 2,000 PLANES OVER EUROPE EVERY DAY FOR A MONTH AND A HALF WITHOUT SENDING A SINGLE PLANE ON MORE THAN ONE MISSION," HE SAID.

(ADVANCE)..WASHINGTON, JUNE 21-(AP)-A BUSINESS ADVISORY COMMITTEE RECOMMENDED TODAY SURPLUS AMERICAN WAR SUPPLIES OVERSEAS WHEN THE WAR ENDS BE SOLD WITHIN TWO YEARS THROUGH A GOVERNMENT MERCHANDISING CORPORATION.

JUN 22 1944

THE FOREIGN ECONOMIC ADMINISTRATION ESTABLISHED THE ADVISORY COMMITTEE AND MADE PUBLIC ITS REPORT.

THE COMMITTEE SAID THE LEFT-OVER GOODS MUST BE TREATED AS A "VALUABLE NATIONAL ASSET" AND SOLD WITH THE AIM OF GETTING "THE HIGHEST POSSIBLE NET REALIZATION" FROM FOREIGN BUYERS.

SURPLUS PROPERTY SALES ABROAD SHOULD BE SO HANDLED AS TO DO THE LEAS POSSIBLE HARM TO FUTURE AMERICAN EXPORT TRADE, THE REPORT SAID.

IT M

POSSIBLE HARM TO FUTURE AMERICAN EXPORT TRADE, THE REPORT SAID. IT MINIMIZED THE POSSIBILITY THAT THE SALE OF MACHINERY TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES WOULD SO INCREASE THEIR PRODUCTION AS TO HURT SERIOUSLY THE FOREIGN MARKET FOR U.S. GOODS.

"THIS POSSIBILITY SHOULD NOT BE IGNORED, BUT THERE SEEMS TO BE LITTLE DOUBT THAT THE WAR WILL RESULT IN SUCH WIDESPREAD DESTRUCTION OF PROPERTY THAT THERE SHOULD BE LITTLE DIFFICULTY IN DISPOSING IN LARGE AMOUNTS OF INDUSTRIAL EQUIPMENT WITHOUT SERIOUS EFFECT ON OUR EXPORT TRADE," THE REPORT SAID.

"INDEED, THE SOONER THE DEVASTATED AREAS CAN BEGIN TO PRODUCE, THE SOONER WILL THEY CEASE TO BE CANDIDATES FOR RELIEF, AND THE SOONER WILL THEY DEVELOP INTO POTENTIAL CUSTOMERS FOR IMPORTED GOODS IN GENERAL."

WHERE THE PRICES OFFERED BY FOREIGN BUYERS APPEAR TO BE POOR, THE REPORT SAID, IT MIGHT BE "FEASIBLE AND DESIRABLE" TO MAKE THE SALE OF SURPLUS PROPERTY CONDITIONAL UPON THE PURCHASE FROM THIS COUNTRY OF OTHER NEW EQUIPMENT.

THE ADVISORY COMMITTEE IS MADE UP OF H.D.BENNETT, PRESIDENT, TOLEDO SCALE COMPANY, TOLEDO, OHIO; T.V.HOUSER, VICE-PRESIDENT, SEARS ROEBUCK AND COMPANY, CHICAGO; CLARK MINOR, PRESIDENT, INTERNATIONAL GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY, AND J.A. WASHINGTON...IN THE MAIN OFFICIAL REACTION TO GENERAL DE GAULLE'S ENTHUSIASTIC REACTION IN NORMANDY WAS "TEPID," IT WAS LEARNED TODAY.

JUN 22 1944

WHILE THE GREETING OF THE FRENCH PEOPLE WAS GIVEN "DUE CONSIDERATION" THE GENERAL VIEW SEEMED TO BE THAT IT DID NOT CHANGE THE UNITED STATES' POSITION TOWARD DEGAULLE AND THAT RECOGNITION, IF IT IS TO BE ACCORDED, MUST AWAIT THE TIME WHEN A MUCH LARGER AND MORE REPRESENTATIVE SLICE OF FRENCH TERRITORY IS LIBERATED.

THE CAPTURE OF PARIS WAS REGARDED AS THE EARLIEST WHEN THE FRENCH COULD BE EXPECTED TO BE IN A POSITION TO HOLD AN ELECTION AND SIGNIFY THEIR CHOICE OF GOVERNMENT.

WHILE OFFICIAL QUARTERS, WHO COULD NOT BE QUOTED, FEEL THAT EVENTUALLY DEGAULLE AND HIS FRENCH COMMITTEE PROBABLY WILL BE RECOGNIS EVENTUALLY THAT RECOGNITION WILL BE DELAYED "FOR SOME TIME."

IT IS NOT EXPECTED TO COME SOON AFTER THE FALL OF CHERBOURG OR EVEN AS A RESULT OF DEGAULLE'S VISIT TO WASHINGTON.

THE GENERAL OFFICIAL VIEW, IT WAS LEARNED, OF DEGAULLE'S ROUSING RECEPTION IN NORMANDY IS THAT WHILE IT SCORED A POINT IN THE GENERAL'S FAVOR IT COULD NOT BE CONSIDERED UNDULY SIGNIFICANT SINCE IT WAS FELT THAT, IN THE EXUBERANCE OF RECENT LIBERATION, THE FRENCH UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES WOULD HAVE CHEERED ANY FRENCH UNIFORM OR FRENCHMAN. American Troops Driving Into Cherbourg After Mighty Air Assault, City Encircled; Japanese Carrier Is Sunk, 13 Warships Hit

MASSIVE ASSAULT LAUNCHED AGAINST HARBOR DEFENSES

JUN 23 194

German Peninsula Garrison Split Up into Three Pockets by Yanks.

PLANES RAID FOE

Great Air Attack Opens Final Smash against Trapped Nazis.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Friday, June 23.—(AP) The final massive assault on the surrounded fortress of Cherbourg raged toward an explosive climax today, with Lt. Gen. Omar Bradley's American doughboys wrecking the last steel ring of suburban fortifications from the south with a gigantic, perfectly-timed artillery and aerial bombardment — the greatest onslaught against a German stronghold since the Allies invaded France June 6.

It was the last act of the spectacular American drive which began on June 14, smashed bitter German opposition, sheared off the Cherbourg peninsula from the rest of France, and finally isolated the great seaport.

Troops Push to Sea

Unofficial reports reaching here shortly after 3 a. m. (9 p. m., Thursday, E.W.T.) said the American assault troops had pushed to the sea both east and west of Cherbourg. Exact locations were not given, and headquarters had no official confirmation, but it was said this development was regarded as likely.

NIGHT

With an air of expectant conservatism, the Allied midnight communique dealt with the battle only in vague, guarded terms, and then turned to an account of Thursday's widespread aerial operations.

In them there was more than a hint that the Germans were resigned to Cherbourg's loss and were preparing for the next and greater phase of the invasion, for the communique said Allied planes "swarmed over northwestern France from dawn to midday to harass enemy reinforcements moving westward from the Paris area."

Such reinforcements, coming up from 100 miles and more from the beachhead, could be the strategic reserves which the German command thus far has hesitated to commit to battle. They cannot now relieve Cherbourg, whose garrison is doomed and dying.

More than 1,000 planes were disclosed to have participated in the all-out assault on Cherbourg Thursday afternoon, streaking in at practically pistol range above the ground and planting their bombs and bullets as little as 500 yards ahead of the advancing infantry.

Pillboxes Cleaned Out

Despite this flying artillery and their own big guns, the men on the ground had to clean out surviving Nazi pillboxes one by one in methodical hand fighting.

As a vital prelude to the main attack the Americans thrust northward on both sides of Cherbourg and cut the coast roads, thus slicing into three segments the remaining German footholds on the north fringe of the Cherbourg peninsula. The bulk of an estimated 50,000 German troops and workers was believed to be in embattled Cherbourg, but for none of the three groups was there any possibility of escape.

Cherbourg already was caught up in confused swirl of close-quarter combat, with doughboys and Germans fighting through the suburban streets and houses.

But there was no confusion about the American onslaught, which started with stop-watch precision at exactly 12:40 p. m. (6:40 a. m., EWT). At that moment American and British divebombers began an 80-minute attack on the last ridge of forts and pillboxes ringing the city.

At exactly 2 p. m. they stopped, and instantly medium bombers thundered down on the smoking German positions while massed American artillery opened up with a gigantic, thundering barrage.

Behind the line of shell and bomb-bursts, American infantrymen leaped forward through the battle haze that had reduced visibility to less than a mile. The target line was steadily lifted as the doughboys advanced close behind the explosive curtain.

This was the great assault to destroy the last German resistance on the peninsula and win for Allied use the important seaport of Cherbourg.

Some reports said [illegible]burg appeared to be aflame, [illegible]is probably was due to the [illegible] hasty fury of German demolitions, as the Allied airmen and gunners expressly avoided aiming at the city itself, and concentrated their fire on German defense positions which mostly were on the ridges and low hills around the outskirts.

The army had planned to call on the Allied navies for supporting fire from the sea, but the methodical speed of the campaign was such that Gen. Bradley decided not to wait for the big ships to move into position, relying instead on the massed weight of bombers and his own long tons and howitzers which had battered down every German strongpoint along the way to Cherbourg.

The German's own biggest batteries were useless since they pointed out to sea and could not be trained around to fire inland from their shielded hilltop emplacements.

Chief defenses on the landward side were the twin French-built Forts du Roule and Octeville, 1,500 yards south of the waterfront, with the River la Divette between them. The main American thrusts were north and northeast on both sides of this stream.

Nazi Resistance Scattered

Except for these forts and the interlocking system of blockhouses and pillboxes, all guarding the city of Cherbourg, the German resistance on the peninsula was slight, with the scantiest of delaying-actions being fought by retreating Nazis.

Up the east coast one American force pushed into Quettehou, seven miles from the tip of Barfleur, and stabbed seven miles north farther inland to cut the cape road at St. Pierre Eglise, nine miles east of Cherbourg.

Other Americans pushed into the Mt. du Roq woods three and one-half miles southwest of Cherbourg, and reached the Cap de la Hague road at Beaumont-Hague, eight miles west of Cherbourg. On both sides, advanced patrols were believed to have reached the sea. Encirclement of the great port and isolation of the smaller pockets of resistance thus was virtually complete.

For the Germans, death or capture were the only remaining alternatives.

Supreme Headquarters had no confirmation that Gen. Bradley had radioed the German commandant of Cherbourg a surrender ultimatum which was ignored, but just before the great assault Allied planes dropped leaflets addressed to three German infantry divisions and other units in Cherbourg, advising them to surrender.

"Our soldiers have been ordered not to fire at anyone who wishes to give himself up," the message said. "If you cannot directly come over to us, hide in terrain and wait until we come."

'Allies' Final Assault On Cherbourg Tops All Since D-Day

By J. W. Gallagher

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 22 (AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's forces this afternoon unlimbered their greatest assault since the storming of Normandy's beaches—a combined land and air attack intended to crack the last defenses of Cherbourg.

The attack began when waves of British and American planes swept in and delivered a terrific barrage lasting 80 minutes, a field dispatch from Associated Press War Correspondent Don Whitehead reported.

Rocked back on their heels by the weight of this assault, in which light and medium bombers dropped down almost to cannon-mouth level to drop their explosives, the Germans were next subjected to a thunderous artillery pounding which left smoke and flame sweeping the German forts.

Nazis Split Into Three Groups

American doughboys of Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, drawn up in position tensely waiting the effect of these blows, then swept forward.

They last were reported hammering at Fort du Roule, only about 1,500 yards south of the military port, and at Fort Octeville, only slightly farther away to southwest.

The latest headquarters announcements showed that the concentric attack had virtually split the German garrison into three segments.

St. Pierre, Quettehou Taken

Bradley's troops captured St. Pierre Eglise, 8½ miles east of Cherbourg and the last road junction leading to the port from Cape Barfleur, isolating the Germans in the northeastern tip of the peninsula. Other troops coming up from the south had entered Quettehou, a large town near St. Vaast la Hougue on the east coast and 13 miles southeast of Cherbourg.

On the west another spearhead had practically cut off the Germans in Cherbourg from those in the northwestern tip of the peninsula by advancing to within half a mile of Beaumont-Hague on the road to Cap de la Hague. Beaumont-Hague is 8½ miles west of Cherbourg.

Cut Vital Road.

Late yesterday the Americans, driving northward east of Cherbourg, broke through the Cherbourg line to cut the Cherbourg-St. Pierre Eglise road and block any German escape or any move to bring in reinforcements from that direction.

They were not giving the enemy time to get set, for they were attacking while the Germans were still confused and disorganized from the swift breakthrough across the peninsula.

One high officer said the Germans' backbone of resistance on the Cherbourg peninsula was smashed on June 16 when the Americans crashed through in the Orglandes-St. Sauveur regio and battered their way to the se sealing off the peninsula.

Enemy Was Disorganized.

"Once my men cut across the peninsula," the officer said, "hell—I could have held the peninsula against all the Germans in the world. We had to take a lot of chances, but we did it."

"We could not have done the job we have done without air support," the officer said. "But it's going to take a damn good bunch of doughboys, engineers and artillery to finish this job."

Too Fast for Navy.

A thrust last night on the east side of Cherbourg drove to a road two miles from the sea at Hauluc as. And then the attacks today smashed in from the south.

One thrust moved in on the north banks of the Divette River, with the high ground immediately outside Cherbourg as the first objective, while a twin drive hit directly north and east of the Divette River.

The Army had planned to call in the Navy to pour in fire from the sea, but the operation developed so swiftly the ground forces could not wait.

Precautions were taken not to bomb Cherbourg itself, but to concentrate on strong points in the arc facing the American lines.

Guns Point Out to Sea.

The Germans were believed caught as the British were at Singapore—with heavy naval guns in the casements unable to traverse to fire inland. They had batteries of these guns in thick concrete forts, but they were useless in the attempt to stop the Americans driving in from the south.

Supreme headquarters said it lacked any knowledge of a reported American ultimatum by field radio to the Cherbourg garrison demanding surrender by 7 A. M. today. The London Daily Sketch said last night it had heard such a broadcast.

It was assumed that if the ultimatum was sent it was rejected and that General Bradley had ordered a final attack. Supreme headquarters said it was possible that the field commander made the demand on his own authority.

Cherbourg Reported Burning

(Reuter news agency reported that an American front-line broadcast picked up in London said "Cherbourg is aflame.")

On the American left flank, infantry plunged within three miles of the sea in the vicinity of St. Croix-Hague, a village seven miles west of Cherbourg on the main highway to Cap de la Hague, where some German forces are reported to be seeking at least temporary refuge.

The German fortifications "west and east of Cherbourg are the strongest yet encountered by the Americans," the British radio said in a broadcast picked up in New York by CBS.

New Advance From Valognes

In the center substantial gains were made along the main road from Valognes. Communique No. 33 reported "good progress," with advances of two to three miles along the entire front.

Except for the swift encircling drive on Cherbourg, there was little activity on the beachhead. The communique reported only patrol activity elsewhere, although enemy artillery and mortar fire in the British-Canadian sector at Tilly was said to be unusually heavy.

Patrols May Be At Sea

The assault on Cherbourg held the spotlight, but it was apparent that General Bradley was striking vigorously to round up the German garrisons on the two prongs of the peninsula.

With reports from the front lagging far behind developments, the supreme command conceded that advance American patrols already might have reached the sea beyond St. Croix-Hague on the west and Le Theil on the east—advances that would cut off German forces and forts on Cap de la Hague on the west and on Point Barfleur on the east.

In the close-up fight for Cherbourg the French-built concrete forts — Octeville and du Roule—about 1,500 yards from the harbor, were proving formidable obstacles. The fighting apparently raged all around the town in the suburbs and possibly inside the town itself.

Nazis Continue Demolitions

(The German radio in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press began preparing the Nazi home front for the loss of the port, speaking of how long it could hold out against overwhelming attacks.)

The Vichy radio this morning said warships offshore were supporting the Americans, but Supreme Headquarters said it had no knowledge of such a bombardment.

The Germans were still rushing to destroy everything in the port and city which could be of use to the Allies.

(Reuter heard the German Transocean news agency say in a broadcast today:

("While the bulk of the 25 United States divisions landed in France are pounding the numerically inferior German garrison of Cherbourg, the demolition of the harbor installations is continuing.

"Most Of Docks Unusable"

("The demolition operations have already reached such an advanced stage that most of the dock installations are already unusable. Many of the entrances to the harbor have also been blocked.

("These measures have been taken to prevent the Allied naval forces from supporting Gen. Omar Bradley's men.")

Reports here said that Cherbourg's airfield appeared to be within the Allied grasp if not already taken. This would be the first sizable field captured in the beachhead drive and, when repaired, would permit the use of medium bombers.

Bad weather yesterday hampered air operations and also delayed unloading of war material. A strong wind from the northeast whipped up a heavy surf on the beaches.

Cherbourg Battle Reaches Climax As Yanks Attack

By DON WHITEHEAD

WITH AMERICAN FORCES STORMING CHERBOURG, 6:08 p. m., June 22.—(AP) The battle for Cherbourg raged to a thunderous climax tonight, with battle-stained doughboys closing in on the port city in a savage attack which began at 2 p. m.

As I write this dispatch, long toms and 105-millimeter guns are blazing and the doughboys are blasting at the enemy's Cherbourg defenses with bullets and explosives.

Death and destruction are rampant in the arc of defenses the Germans are manning.

Spectacular 8-Day Drive

The attack climaxes the spectacular doughboy drive which opened eight days ago and has swept to the gates of this city. This was the historic march by infantry and supporting branches—a victory dash unmatched on the French beachhead except by the courageous assault of the troops who fought their way ashore June 6.

It began at noon on June 14 when our troops opened their attack that drove westward across the Cherbourg peninsula to shear off the northern part.

This is a day-by-day account of that swift drive:

June 14-15: While one unit was putting pressure on the enemy around Montebourg on the eastern side of the Cherbourg peninsula, others opened an attack westward in the general area of Orglandes. These latter were the Ninth and 82nd divisions.

All the afternoon of the fourteenth and the next day, fighting raged across the hedges and green fields. The Americans fought forward slowly against bitter opposition, going from hedge to hedge. Late in the day on the fifteenth the German opposition began to soften under the massed American fire.

June 16: Suddenly the enemy defenses cracked south of Orglandes. The doughboys swept forward to cross the Douve river at St. Saveur Le Vicomte.

The enemy was in confusion. The bodies of enemy dead were strewn in fields and ditches. This was the big breakthrough. It developed all along the front into a rout. The swift American advance overran and surprised German units.

Equipment Litters Roads

The roads were littered with enemy trucks, tanks, guns, equipment and clothing in vast disarray. Prisoners came in by the hundreds. The enemy was completely disorganized, and the doughboys gave him no time to recover.

June 17: At 11 p. m. on Saturday American troops reached the sea, capturing St. Lo D'Ourville and Barneville on the western coastal road and driving a wedge clear across the neck of the peninsula.

June 18: One German division, ordered to try to escape to the south, attempted to break out of the trap. It made a heavy attack, which the Americans beat off with massed artillery and mortar fire. German dead covered the fields. Those who remained alive began retreating.

They fell back to the Cherbourg line, with the Yanks pursuing them and giving them no chance to recover.

June 19: Steadily pressing north on the western side of the peninsula, the Americans overran Bricquebec and cut another main lateral road.

June 20: The Germans began pulling back on the east side of the peninsula and the Americans captured Montebourg and Valognes, two main towns south of Cherbourg.

City Broken, Torn

Montebourg, where the Germans fought bitterly house-to-house, was left behind as a broken, torn town in which hardly a building remained intact. Valognes was ripped and battered in the unbelievable fury of the American assault.

June 21: The Americans edged up on the Cherbourg line and began probing its defenses slowly. They closed an arc of steel around the city, broke through the defenses on the east and west and cut the lateral coast roads, completely bottling up the Germans within Cherbourg.

June 22: The Americans launched an attack by air and land to smash through the defenses of fortress Cherbourg. Although the land assault was preceded by heavy bombing and massed artillery fire on enemy strongpoints, the infantry met resistance from pillboxes and began methodically cleaning them out, one by one.

The mighty attack began at 12:40 p. m. (6:40 a. m., E.W.T.) when waves of British and American divebombers delivered a one-hour and 20-minute steady assault on the German fortifications.

Promptly at 2 p. m., medium bombers took up the task and American artillery opened up and battered at the line in thunderous, drumming explosions. Behind the artillery the doughboys moved up. The barrage slowly lifted ahead of them.

This was the great assault to crush the last German resistance in the sector.

Bombers Smash At Cherbourg 80 Minutes

By Don Whitehead

With American Forces Before Cherbourg, June 22 (AP)—By land and air Americans today unleashed a mighty attack on the fortress of Cherbourg.

At 12.40 P. M. waves of American and British medium bombers and dive bombers began pounding fortifications in the Cherbourg Line. That pounding continued for 80 minutes and when the bombers had stopped the artillery opened up and battered at the line in thunderous, drumming explosions.

Behind the artillery the doughboys moved up and began storming the German defenses.

Greatest Attack Since D-Day

This was the great assault intended to crush the last German resistance before Cherbourg—a land and air assault greater than any since the Allies fought their way onto Normandy's beaches.

The doughboys were drawn up this morning waiting for the air bombardment and then the artillery barrage which covered their advance. The barrage pounded the line until the infantry advanced within close range of its objectives, and then was lifted.

St. Pierre Road Cut

Late yesterday the doughboys, driving northward east of Cherbourg, broke through the Cherbourg line to cut the Cherbourg-St. Pierre-Eglise road and block any German escape or any move to bring in reinforcements from that direction.

30. 24— 16457

They were not giving the enemy time to get set, for they were attacking while the Germans were still confused and disorganized from the swift break-through across the peninsula.

One high officer said the Germans' backbone of resistance on the Cherbourg peninsula was smashed June 16 when the Americans crashed through in the Orglandes-St. Sauveur region and battered their way to the sea, sealing off the peninsula.

"Took Chances, But Won"

"Once my men cut across the peninsula," the officer said, "I could have held the peninsula against all the Germans in the world. The crux was on June 16—that was when we broke their back. We had to take a lot of chances, but we did it."

The Germans were so completely disorganized by the breakthrough that they have never been able to collect themselves to hold back the American rush north to throw an arc of steel around Cherbourg.

The German defenses ran roughly from Fermanville, east of Cherbourg down to Gonneville, and then curve to Hardinvast, Ste. Croix-Hague and up to Greville on the coast west of the port.

Air Support Credited

Behind this defense line the Germans sat in concrete pillboxes and blockhouses when the great assault opened.

"We could not have done the job we have done without air support," the officer said. "But it's going to take a good bunch of doughboys, engineers and artillery to finish this job."

A thrust last night on the east side of Cherbourg carried to a road two miles from the sea at Haulucas. Then the attacks today smashed in from the south.

One thrust moved in on the north bank of the Divette river, with the high ground immediately outside Cherbourg as the first objective, while a twin drive hit directly north and east of the Divette river.

Navy Support Outraced

The army had planned to call in the navy to pour in fire from the sea, but the operation developed so swiftly that the ground forces could not wait.

Precautions were taken not to bomb Cherbourg itself, but to concentrate on strong points in the arc facing the American lines.

The Germans were believed to have been caught as the British had been at Singapore—with heavy naval guns in the casements unable to turn and fire inland. They had batteries of these guns in thick concrete forts, but they were useless in the attempt to stop the Americans driving in from the south.

QUICK REPAIR AT CHERBOURG

JUN 23 1944

Stimson Predicts Port Will Soon Be In Use By Allies

Washington, June 22 (AP)—A quick rehabilitation of the great port of Cherbourg to swell the flow of supplies to Allied invasion forces was forecast today by Secretary of War Stimson.

Envelopment of the port at the end of the Cotentin peninsula capped the "striking advances" of Allied troops in Normandy during the past seven days, he told a news conference, and the city has become a trap for elements of three Nazi divisions who are demolishing the port facilities.

"However," he said, "army and navy engineers have been confronted before now with problems of extraordinary wreckage and have brought order out of ruin in comparatively short periods of time."

Caen Offensive Big Help

American troops closing in on Cherbourg were able to sweep over the neck of the peninsula and turn the weight of their power against the port, Stimson said, because German counterattacks against them were prevented by British and Canadian forces hammering at the enemy around the vital hub of Caen.

"At the southeastern end of the Allied front," he explained, "British and Canadian troops so engaged the enemy that he had no uncommitted strength to threaten the corridor which the Americans to the north pushed across the neck of the peninsula."

Tribute To Air Force

A notable aspect of the Normandy operations has been the failure of the Germans to throw in reserves in sufficient mass to constitute a major counteroffensive, he continued—the Nazis have massed a sizable army, but in such fashion that newly arriving divisions had to be committed to battle piecemeal to contain the Allied pressure.

Due in large part to the cutting of railway and highway bridges over the Seine by Allied air attack, said the secretary, this inability of the enemy to move large reserves into the battle of Normandy has permitted the Allies to build up their armies "in very strong fashion," pouring men and equipment across the beaches "in amazing volume."

Nazi General Killed In Cherbourg Fight

JUN 23 1944

London, June 22 (A. P.).—The German communique today announced the death of Lieut.-Gen. Hellmich in the fighting on Cherbourg peninsula.

Germans Urged To Quit Fighting

JUN 23 1944

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 22 (AP)—Planes flying over Cherbourg dropped leaflets carrying this message before today's assault on the port city:

"Soldiers of the 709th, 243d, and 77th Infantry Divisions:

"Soldiers of naval units in Cherbourg:

"Cherbourg is encircled. None of you can get out and no one can relieve you. Sea routes, land routes and air routes are blocked.

"Your situation is hopeless. Your leaders have written you off. You cannot save the situation—but anyone who wishes to save his life can do so.

Proper Treatment Promised

"Those who give themselves up to Allied troops can rely on being handled in a proper manner.

"More than 15,000 of your comrades from other units in Normandy have already had that experience. Come over singly or in small groups.

"Our soldiers have been ordered not to fire at anyone who wishes to give himself up and who will have something white on his helmet or his rifle.

"If you cannot directly come over to us, hide in the terrain and wait until we come. Best of all, wait until our infantry arrives. Bring your cooking utensils with you."

HITLER REPORTED IN BERCHTESGADEN

London, June 22 (A. P.).—Reports from the underground in Germany said today that Adolf Hitler established headquarters at or near Le Mans the day after the Allies landed in Normandy, 100 miles to the north, but soon withdrew to Troyes, beyond Paris, and finally returned to Berchtesgaden.

The argument used by the German generals to get Der Fuehrer to return to his mountain retreat, it was said, was that he could not afford to have his name associated closely with another German defeat.

It was reported from the same quarter that Field Marshal Edwin Rommel had suffered a recurrence of his Africa-contracted intestinal fever and was in such poor health that his colleagues were trying to prevail on him to give up his operational duties.

Glider Bombs Used By Nazis In France

JUN 23 1944

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 22 (AP). The Germans have attempted to use glider bombs—not the rocket kind now being shot into England, but a type previously employed aaginst Allied shipping—in attacks on Allied concentrations in the Normandy beachhead, a high air officer disclosed today.

The Germans accomplished little with the weapons, the officer said.

Allied air forces have flown 60,000 sorties against tactical targets in the first two weeks of the invasion, the officer said. American Fortresses and Liberators blasted the beaches with 4,800 tons of explosives five minutes before H-hour.

Fishing Halt Extended

JUN 23 1944

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 22 (AP)—While fighting raged at Cherbourg, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower made clear to the Germans today that they could not pay attention alone to the defense of that port.

In a radio warning, the Allied commander in chief told the fishermen of Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium and France to stay in port until 9 P. M., June 29. This was the second seven-day extension of the original supreme command warning to fishermen.

French Patriots Die On Guillotine, Report

Irun, Spain, June 22 (AP)—German and Vichy forces have set up a guillotine in the town of Dax, approximately 50 miles north of the French-Spanish border, to execute French patriots captured in southwestern France, advices received here today said.

This information was given by Belgian employes of the German general headquarters for southwestern France at Mont-de-Marsan and was confirmed by French refugees who crossed the frontier and by two foreign laborers who are working for the Germans in the Dax region.

All these informants said many French patriots already had been executed, but the exact number is not known.

Guerrillas Cut Nazi Phone Lines In France

Algiers, June 22 (AP)—Free French authorities in a formal statement reported today that resistance forces had cut telephone communications between most of the principal cities in France and "have thus succeeded in isolating enemy headquarters staffs."

It stated specifically that communications between Paris and Calais, Creil, Lyons and Marseille had been destroyed.

6,000 Planes Blast Nazis in France, Give Close Support to Allied Army

JUN 23 1944

BEALMEAR

Cherbourg Fortifications Pounded, Rocket Launchers Bombed at Calais.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Friday, June 23—(AP) At least 6,000 Allied warplanes scorched German-held France from Cherbourg to Paris with bombs, rockets and bullets Thursday in dawn to dusk attacks giving the closest support to the invasion armies since the liberation of France began.

Explosives dropped probably totaled more than 8,000 tons.

23 Allied Planes Lost

With reports on some missions still to be announced, it was disclosed that 23 Allied planes, including 11 heavy bombers and two mediums were lost and six German planes were shot down.

More than 1,000 U. S. medium and light bombers and fighter-bombers pounded the last wall of Nazi fortifications separating American ground troops from the Cherbourg waterfront.

Around 1,000 American Flying Fortresses and Liberators and hundreds of R.A.F. Lancasters and Halifaxes which roared out in mid-afternoon for the first time since 1942, were among ther aircraft thrown into the gigantic operations.

Nazi rocket bomb nests were targets of the heavy bombers in a one-two punch. However, the Germans were sending robot bombs over southern England in a steady procession again early today.

Just before dark Marauders, Havocs and Thunderbolt fighter-bombers of the U. S. Ninth Air force raided Alderney island, eight miles west of Cap de la Hague, near the tip of the Cherbourg peninsula, and German field headquarters, fuel dumps and railroads far behind the front.

Garrison Surprised

Catching the strong German garrison of Alderney by surprise, the Americans dropped bombs on a chain of gun positions and barracks before a single shot was fired at them. The island is four miles long and a half mile wide.

A Nazi headquarters at Baron, six miles southwest of Caen, was among the objectives of the mainland blows.

Attacks upon the Pas-de-Calais rocket bomb emplacements were made first by 250 Flying Fortresses and Liberators and hundreds of British heavy bombers.

In the evening around 750 U. S. heavy bombers, escorted by 500 fighters, crossed the channel. Some of these gave the launching platforms further attention. Others struck at airfields, bridges, transformer stations, railway workshops, sidings and fuel tanks over a wide area and railroad yards at Lille, France and Ghent, Belgium.

Only a few German fighters came up and six were shot down. The American heavy bomber operations cost 10 bombers and nine fighters.

American warplanes operated as close at 500 yards to Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's ground troops in the assault upon Cherbourg defenses.

Attack in Waves

Marauders, Havocs, Lightnings, Mustangs and Thunderbolts attacked in waves that swept over the German lines every five minutes for two hours. They worked hand in hand with advanced Allied command posts to carry out what headquarters described as the closest air support yet given to ground forces on the Cherbourg peninsula.

Fighter-bomber pilots flew through some of the fiercest ground fire encountered since the invasion, swooping within pistol range of the most powerful German fortifications and anti-aircraft positions to attack their targets.

So closely were operations coordinated that many pilots were in the air over the target area before obtaining final orders by radio from advanced posts on the exact objectives to be bombed.

Within an hour they carried out well over 500 individual attacks, many in plain sight of Gen. Bradley's frontline troops.

Marauder and Havoc bombers also plowed through heavy flak, warded off one vicious attack by German fighters and dumped 650 tons of explosives on the enemy's fortifications.

Leaflets were dropped telling the Germans they were encircled and calling upon them to surrender.

The German defensive area on the southern side of the port was pictured by returning fighter pilots as a wasteland of fire and rubble.

British heavy bombers teamed up with four-engined American planes in attacks upon the installations in northern France from which the Germans have been firing rocket bombs into southern England.

Fortresses and Liberators struck first at launching platforms of Pas-de-Calais. Up to 250 of them unloaded at least 750 tons of bombs on emplacements under a fighter-escort which shot up rail and road transport.

They were followed to the same area by the largest force of British Lancasters and Halifaxes ever put aloft so early in the day.

Aerial Assault Continues

And the Allied aerial assault apparently was continuing through the night. The Berlin radio warned shortly after midnight that raiders were over northwest Germany.

Fighters carried bombs ranging from 100 to 1,000 pounds across the channel in the daylight operations. Their reports for the day included six bridges bombed with varying results, 175 railroad and 42 motor vehicles destroyed or damaged, 20 locomotives shot up, 11 buildings attacked, 17 barges, two flak cars and one anti-aircraft gun position hit.

At the same time Thunderbolt fighter-bombers struck at three airfields, three railyards and five barges, destroying or damaging two locomotives and ten rail cars, including oil tank cars.

The four hammerings of the coast where the Germans have hidden their new rocket bombs made up but one panel in the overall picture of the 24-hour Allied air offensive, which had seen yesterday's American shuttle raid, a 1,600-mile flight from Britain to Russia, as well as the close support to ground troops in northern France.

During the night the R.A.F. had sent a great force of Lancaster bombers against key factories in the Rhineland. At the same time Mosquitos buzzed over Berlin, spreading fires in the smoldering city, hit a scant 12 hours before during the American shuttle attack.

That shuttle raid, for which the Germans reported the Russian terminus was Poltava in the Ukraine, 1,500 miles from Britain on a direct line through the German capital, struck at synthetic oil refineries southeast of Berlin and other objectives, a strategic air forces communique said. The shuttle raid cost three bombers and two fighters.

119 Aircraft Lost

The Allied losses from all 24 hours of operations, including the attacks by fighter-bombers on railroads and highways in the Paris area, cost 119 planes, 88 of them heavy bombers. Sixty-two German planes were shot down.

Throughout the after-supper hours tonight, more waves of Allied bombers and fighters were seen shuttling across the Channel.

In the fifth and earliest of the daylight missions flown by RAF heavy bombers since the invasion began, a force of Lancasters and Halifaxes escorted by fighters followed the American heavies to northern France to add the weight of their explosives to the rocket-bomb installations, and lost one bomber.

That the RAF was sending heavies in daylight again, after confining them to night operations since 1942, possibly indicated the British soon would be joining Americans in a great combined afternoon assault.

Planes Attack Nazi Guns In Normandy

JUN 23 1944

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 22 (AP)—Fleets of light and medium bombers carried out a crushing offensive in support of American troops hammering into Cherbourg today, while big forces of American heavy bombers plowing through flak barrages attacked Pas de Calais rocket-bomb installations.

Marauders, Havocs and Thunderbolts swooped down to within 100 feet of German cannon to drive home the closest support yet given Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's doughboys.

Fortresses and Liberators gave the rocket-launching grounds their fourth pounding in less than 24 hours.

Ruhr, Rhineland Raided

The daylight blow followed a night of far-flung aerial attacks extending from France to Germany's industrial Ruhr and Berlin—dwarfing the Germans' cross-Channel barrage of rocket bombs, which they asserted today are now coming over with incendiary loads.

British Lancasters and Halifaxes followed American Liberators and medium bombers over the Pas de Calais area: Mosquitos raided Berlin.

Forty-six bombers were missing from the widespread British operations, which included mine laying in enemy waters.

Second Raid In Day

Close upon the Fortress-Liberator blow at the Pas de Calais area this morning another great fleet roared out over the Channel in the same direction this afternon, stirring up a great barrage of anti-aircraft and rocket fire from the Germans' coastal defenses.

These attacks capped 24 hours of tremendous activity, including the American shuttle raid from Britain to Russia.

A Moscow communique from the headquarters of the eastern command of the United States Strategic Air Force said three bombers and two escorting fighters were lost on the flight to Russian air bases.

Synthetic oil refineries and installations at Ruhland, southeast of Berlin, were bombed by a large force.

Constant Cover

Mustangs provided constant cover for the bombers during the flight and shot down five enemy planes, the communique said. The bombers shot down a sixth. Yak fighters of the Red Air Force supported the Mustangs in the last half of the trip, the announcement added.

(The Germans also said, without Allied confirmation, that the American planes which bombed Berlin yesterday and flew on to Russia used an airbase at Poltava in the Ukraine, 1,500 miles from London. The Allies announced that some fighter planes escorting the Berlin bombers also flew to Russia.)

119 Allied Planes Lost

The 24 hours of operations cost the Allies 119 planes, against 62 German planes shot down.

The loss of three bombers and two fighters on the shuttle raid was in addition to the 43 bombers and 15 fighters lost from the American section which hit Berlin and returned to Britain. The shuttle raiders' toll of six taken from the enemy was in addition to the 49 shot down by the force which returned to British bases.

From an Allied advance command post came word that American troops swarming up the Cherbourg peninsula—where it was stated that more than a quarter of the rocket bomb bases were situated—had seized a number of sites. Supreme Headquarters said, however, that there was no evidence that rocket bombs had been launched from the Cherbourg peninsula. Allied experts are studying the captured bases.

Oil-Plant Attack Severe

Meanwhile, an official United States Strategic Air Force announcement said the American heavy bombers' attack on German oil plants on Tuesday was "one of the most effective blows ever struck at the German war machine by the Eighth Air Force."

The report was based on photographs taken during and after simultaneous attacks on 14 targets which showed severe damage to 12 oil plants and on an airplane wing repair plant at Sallersleben near Brunswick and a tank depot at Konigsborn near Magdeburg.

London, June 22 (AP)—An American airman reported he saw a naval engagement in the Channel tonight, possibly indicating the Germans are trying to evacuate some of the trapped Cherbourg troops by sea.

"Two fleets of warships were going at it hammer and tongs," said Sergt. Robert A. Abraham, of Chicago, tail gunner on a Liberator. "It looked as though one fleet had cornered the other."

9TH AIR FORCE

GETS NEW JOB

JUN 23 1944

Supremacy Attained, Group Will Back Infantry

Advanced Headquarters, American Ninth Air Force, Somewhere in France, June 22 (AP)—With air supremacy attained over Normandy and the battleground effectively isolated, the Ninth Fighter Command now is ready for the third phase of its invasion plan—direct assault upon the enemy in support of ground troops.

Maj. Gen. Elwood R. Quesada made this disclosure today in a review of the part the Ninth Air Force played in helping the Allies gain their first firm foothold on French soil.

The General said the Allied air forces were making it very difficult and at times impossible for the Germans to move troops and equipment into the battle area.

Losses Less Than Expected

He said the Ninth Air Force losses—mostly from flak—were slightly less than anticipated.

Col. R. W. McClenahan, of the Fighter Command, said the Cherbourg peninsular region was paralyzed by what probably was the greatest tactical air attack in the history of warfare.

McClenahan said the enemy now was forced to move in strength at night, which was a very demoralizing factor in his battle plan.

Four major rail lines in this broad battle zone have been cut by bombing.

1,700 Locomotives Destroyed

The colonel said that since the Allied air force began softening up the area behind the invasion beaches four months ago, he had reason to believe that servicing facilities capable of repairing 5,400 locomotives had been destroyed or seriously damaged and that 1,700 locomotives and 25,000 freightcars had been destroyed. Altogether, he said, 55,000 tons of bombs have been dropped in the campaign.

He disclosed that from D-day until June 15 the Ninth Air Force had flown about 22,000 sorties—14,000 by fighters, fighter-bombers and armed reconnaissance planes, 6,000 by the Ninth's Bomber Command and 2,000 by the Troop Carrier Command.

Eight enemy aircraft have been shot down, 9 probably shot down and 16 damaged, while on the ground the Ninth claimed 28 destroyed and 7 damaged.

YANK GUN CREW REFUSES TIME OFF

JUN 23 1944

A Ninth Air Force, Defense Station in England, June 22 (A. P.).—An American anti-aircraft gun crew which calls itself "Murder Incorporated" shot down fifteen rocket bombs in the first seventy-two hours of the German attacks with the pilotless flying torpedoes. They refused to knock off for rest or a pay call.

"We knew the strain would soon begin to tell so I offered some of the boys twelve-hour passes," said Sergt. John Gregory, of Schenectady, N. Y., a former Columbia University football player, "and I thought they were going to start shooting at me."

Two privates, Richard Sawicki and Bigio Dipalo, both of Nutley, N. J., were on passes at the time of the first attack. When they heard the gun crew go into action, they walked and ran twelve miles back to the station. Private Tom McFawl and Corporal Henry Mackin, both of Gloucester City, N. J., each insist the other was chiefly responsible for the destruction of the first plane.

Other members of the crew are Private Floyd Hurley, Pennsville, N. J.; Private Lyman Johnson, Mount Holly, N. J.; Private Tony Pennino and Kenneth Fischer, both of Bridgton, N. J.; Corporal William T. Kinnebrew, Miami, Fla.; Private Sherwin Stenborg, the Bronx, New York city; Private Eugene Deformo, Salina, Pa.; Private George Longon, Bloomfield, N. J.; Private John Barron, Scranton, Pa., and Private Thomas Garuso, Newark, N. J.

Nazi Robot Bombs Again Hit England

JUN 25 1944

London, Friday, June 23 (AP)—After a lull of several hours, German flying bombs buzzed over southern England one right after another early today.

The Germans threatened to use "new monster explosives against which countermeasures will be virtually impossible" on both Britain and the Allied west front armies, but so far as is officially known this was just talk.

Air defense authorities said Nazi flying bombs—which fighter pilots knocked down in increasing numbers on the coast before they could penetrate inland—still were of one-ton size with a top speed of 300 to 350 miles an hour and a range of 150 miles.

The British announced there was enemy activity over southern England during the day and "damage and casualties are reported." The exact nature of the activity was not brought out.

A Transocean propaganda broadcast from Berlin said the robots "are now made stronger through incendiary as well as high-explosive" content.

"Several other secret weapons will be applied shortly," it said.

Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels himself threatened use of "new and still more effective weapons, opening a new phase of long-range warfare."

Writing off the loss of the peninsula and port of Cherbourg, Capt. Ludwig Sertorius declared that Allied forces in that area would be "the target for air attacks—which need not be carried out by the Luftwaffe."

But reports from neutral centers said no propaganda could quench the fires in Berlin set by Allied bombers and that the ordinary German expects intensified Allied bombings as a result of the robot attacks.

Reports from the underground in Germany said today that Hitler, by suggestion of German generals who recommended against having his name closely associated with another Nazi defeat, had returned to Berchtesgaden after establishing headquarters in France briefly at or near Le Mans and then in Troyes, beyond Paris.

U. S. AIRWAY RADIO SET UP IN RUSSIA

JUN 28 1944

London, June 22 (A. P.).—The Army Airway Communications System and Army Communication Service set up in three months the triangular radio network necessary for the successful operation of the new United States air bases in Russia, Strategic Air Force Headquarters disclosed today.

The project involved the selection of personnel to operate the Russian base radio installations, getting weather equipment from England, Iceland and Africa and transporting men and equipment to Russia and Italy. The Air Transport Command took over the job of moving a whole outfit which included almost 110,000 pounds of material into Russia.

In the whole operation only one plane was forced down in the desert, and its only loss during the trip was one gallon of battery fluid.

Twenty-nine officers and enlisted men were picked for duty at the station in Russia and four more officers were charged with the safe delivery of the men and equipment. The entire task fell on these thirty-three men because for security reasons they were the only ones allowed to load and unload material. Russian workmen aided in reconditioning the equipment.

On May 1 the installations were completed and the network linking Britain, Italy and Russia was ready to be put in operation only twenty days later.

Nazis Report Raid On Shuttle Airfield

JUN 23 1944

London, June 22 (AP)—The German radio said today that German bomber formations had made a large-scale attack upon the Russian airfield at Poltava in the Ukraine—where the Germans earlier had said American shuttle bombers were resting after their attack on Berlin from Britain yesterday.

"For about an hour several hundred heavy-caliber high explosives and thousands of incendiary bombs were dropped on installations of this large Soviet airdrome," said a DNB broadcast. "Conflagrations were observed in every part of the field."

Neither the report that United States air forces were based at Poltava nor the account of the attack was confirmed in Allied quarters. Poltava is about 550 miles northeast of Bucharest and 1,500 miles on a direct line from London.

13 OTHER VESSELS DAMAGED BY U. S. NAVAL AIRCRAFT

rier Planes.

SHIPS NOT IN BATTLE

Enemy Withdrawal Balks Nimitz' Effort to Force Foe to Fight.

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, June 22.—(AP) Carrier aircraft of the U. S. Fifth fleet sank or damaged 14 ships of a powerful Japanese naval force between the Philippines and the Marianas islands Monday before the enemy fled in darkness.

Results of the battle, which did not bring combat ships together or involve the Imperial Grand fleet, were announced today by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz.

The enemy broke off the engagement after nightfall. By then one of his carriers of the Hayataka class and three fleet tankers had been sunk. Ten other vessels, including three carriers and a battleship of the Kongo class, were damaged.

NIGHT

Cruiser Damaged

Other Nipponese ships reported damaged were a cruiser, three destroyers and two tankers. One of the destroyers was believed to have sunk. The tankers were severely damaged and left burning.

American losses were 49 planes. Many of these made water landings at night. Some pilots and crews "appeared to have been rescued," Admiral Nimitz said, and search was continued for others.

Between 15 and 20 enemy planes were destroyed. That brought Japanese aircraft losses in two days to between 368 and 373. Admiral Nimitz said revised reports showed 353 were shot down Sunday when carrier-type planes attacked American warships near Saipan island in the preliminary stages of the battle.

Two United States carriers and one battleship "received superficial damage" in repulsing Sunday's air attack, Admiral Nimitz reported. Twenty-one planes were lost in combat.

Japs Retreat on Saipan

On Saipan, Japan's virtually abandoned defenders fell back before a gathering assault, with Tokyo radio conceding Yank reinforcements were pouring ashore. Tonight in a communique, Admiral Nimitz said the invaders have punched more than a mile north along the shore of Magicienne bay; are scaling the 1,540 foot slope of Mount Tapotchau near the island's center; have won the heights of 500-foot Mount Nauftan on the southeast coast; and have killed half of a Japanese group pocketed on that tip of the island.

Admiral Nimitz said Jap planes dropped bombs near American transports off the west coast but caused no damage.

In the entire Marianas action, starting June 10, and supporting air strikes on the flanks at the Bonin and Caroline islands 19 Japanese ships have been sunk, 36 damaged, 626 Nipponese planes definitely destroyed and 25 more probably.

Announced U. S. losses were 96 planes. Three warships were damaged, but still in action.

Although naval circles had widely expected a showdown battle with the main Japanese fleet, even as late as Wednesday, it had not put in an appearance. The enemy force that ran out on the fight was estimated by Admiral Nimitz to have consisted of four or more battleships, five or six carriers, five fleet tankers and "attached cruisers and destroyers."

Despite this defeat — exceeded only by stunning American victories at Midway and Guadalcanal in 1942—much of the Imperial Japanese fleet has not yet been in action. Japan's latest-type capital ships have never been seen by American air or surface units, unless some of them were in Monday's clash.

The latest Japanese naval defeat was an offshoot of the enemy's aerial strike Sunday at American warships, under the overall command of Admiral Raymond A. Spruance. Those combat units were protecting the beachhead of American forces that invaded Saipan island, in the southern Marianas.

After beating off the enemy's aerial attack, planes of the carrier task force, under immediate command of Vice Admiral Marc A. Mitscher, scouted for the Japanese force. Crushed in its aerial bid for a victory, the enemy already probably was retiring because of the loss of the bulk of his defending aerial arm.

Some time late Monday afternoon the enemy warships were spotted and the carrier pilots pounced on their prey. In the hour or two before darkness they took full advantage of the enemy's air weakness and pressed home their attack.

Flight of the Japanese fleet was a virtual admission by Tokyo that she cannot hold Saipan, the arsenal of the Marianas, against the overwhelming might of the American sea and land force.

Already American warplanes are using the captured 3,600-foot Aslito runway to support the northward advance of Marines and infantrymen.

Artillery superiority, attained by dragging guns across Saipan's reefs, was taking a heavy toll of the defending garrison. High casualties were indicated among the 20,000 to 30,000 Japanese troops on the island.

Their defense included the first extensive Japanese use of land mines, large batteries of mortars and artillery firing from the mouths of caves. Japanese gunners pulled their artillery pieces back into the caves after firing a salvo. Flamethrowers annihilated these mountain strongholds.

Japanese resistance was bitter. But they were outmanned, outgunned, and without either sea or air support.

Yanks Show Confidence

American forces were so confident of victory, Associated Press War Correspondent Rembert James reported, they have already brought the garrison commander ashore.

James reported a major marine and infantry attack was launched Wednesday morning behind an artillery barrage so intense the field pieces blazed an almost continuous flash from their muzzles. The attack was launched along a four-mile front stretching eastward across the island from Garapan to Magicienne Bay.

Captured munitions were being fired against the enemy and great stores of Nipponese provisions came in handy for feeding Japanese civilians and natives who had poured through the American lines for safety.

Flattop Sent Down; 10 Other Vessels Are Damaged

JUN 23 1944

By Charles McMurtry

United States Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, June 22 (AP)—Carrier planes of the United States Fifth Fleet inflicted a smashing defeat on a formidable Japanese naval force trapped Monday off the Philippines, sinking four ships and damaging a least ten before the enemy escaped under cover of night.

The victory, the third great blow since Pearl Harbor against Japan's navy, stemmed from Sunday's great air battle off Saipan Island, in which American carrier planes and warship guns shot down 353 enemy aircraft.

Because of this stunning aerial loss, the Japanese fleet, caught between the Marianas and the Philippines, could send up only a handful of interceptors from its five or six carriers. Of these 15 to 20 were shot down. The American loss was 49 planes.

Carrier And Three Tankers Sunk

The enemy lost an aircraft carrier and three tankers sunk; possibly a destroyer sunk; and nine or ten ships, including a battleship and cruiser, seriously damaged. Admiral Raymond A. Spruance's Fifth Fleet suffered no surface vessel losses.

DAY

The Japanese fleet, which, for nearly a week, dodged contact with the American force protecting the Saipan invasion, turned and fled with all speed toward the China Sea. Nightfall saved it from further battering and there was no indication from Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, who announced the victory today, that the battle had been resumed.

In the Sunday air battle preceding the bigger struggle, American plane losses were 21 against Japan's 353. The Sunday attack represented an arms-length enemy attempt to break up the American invasion of Saipan, principal island of the Marianas and only 1,500 miles from Tokyo and the Philippines.

U. S. Carriers' Damage Is Superficial

Two United States carriers and one battleship suffered "superficial damage." A fleet spokesman said superficial damage means the ship's capacity for battle was not impaired, indicating these three probably participated in Monday's action.

The text of Pacific Fleet communique No. 59:

"1. During the attack by enemy carrier-type aircraft on our ships on June 18 (west longitude—United States date) 353 enemy aircraft were shot down, of which 335 were destroyed by our carrier aircraft and 18 by our own anti-aircraft fire. (This is a revision of the estimate contained in communique No. 56.)

"Two of our carriers and one battleship received superficial damage. We lost 21 aircraft in combat.

Carrier Hit By Three Bombs

"2. The following information is now available concerning the attack of our carrier aircraft upon units of the Japanese Fleet in the late afternoon of June 19 (west longitude, United States date).

"The enemy forces attacked consisted of four or more battleships, five or six carriers, five fleet tankers and attached cruisers and destroyers.

"On the basis of information presently available, our planes inflicted the following damage:

"One carrier, believed to be of the Zuikaku class received three 1,000-pound bomb hits.

"One Hayataka-class carrier was sunk.

"One Hayataka-class carrier was severely damaged and left burning furiously.

"One light carrier of the Zuiho or Taiho-class received at least one bomb hit.

Battleship, Cruiser Damaged

"One Kongo-class battleship was damaged.

"One cruiser was damaged.

"Three destroyers were damaged, one of which is believed to have sunk.

"Three tankers were sunk.

"Two tankers were severely damaged and left burning.

"Fifteen to 20 defending aircraft were shot down.

"Our losses were 49 aircraft, including many which landed in the water at night and from which as yet an undetermined number of pilots and crewmen appeared to have been rescued. Search for the others is continuing.

"3. The engagement was broken off by the Japanese fleet which fled during the night toward the Channel between Formosa and Luzon.

Only Two Greater Blows Made

"The Pacific Fleet units in these two actions were commanded by Admiral R. A. Spruance. The carrier task force was under the immediate command of Vice-Admiral M. A. Mitscher."

The greatest blow against the Jap fleet was the battle of Midway in June, 1942, when another carrier force under Admiral Spruance sank four enemy carriers and nearly a score of other ships.

The second biggest defeat was November 13-15, 1942, in the battle off Guadalcanal when the enemy lost more than 30 ships sunk and damaged.

The battle summary for Sunday's and Monday's action shows conclusively why Admiral Nimitz in a Monday press conference stated he hoped the enemy would close with the United States fleet for a decisive naval action.

On Sunday Japanese planes attacked Admiral Spruance's Fifth Fleet. They achieved no surprise.

Admiral Mitscher's carrier force pursued the Japanese. On Monday afternoon it located the Japanese and attacked. There was time for just one assault before nightfall. But in just those two or three hours of daylight his bombers and torpedo planes sank or damaged 14 enemy ships.

Admiral Mitscher had one advantage Monday. He caught the Japanese with their planes down—down in the ocean.

This enemy fleet now has been fairly well established as the one which attacked our force Sunday. Loss of 353 planes from its five or six carriers virtually wiped out its planes so that it had to rely largely on anti-aircraft for defense—a defense which proved pretty futile.

Some of Our Flyers Saved.

The fact that only twenty Japanese planes were shot down on Monday further indicates that the enemy had very few aircraft to offer resistance. Our loss of forty - nine aircraft does not necessarily mean that anything like that number were lost to enemy action. Because the battle was closed so late in the day, and at nearly extreme range in order to catch the Japanese fleet, not all of our planes were able to return to their carriers. Many of these forty-nine landed in the water and their crews took to rubber life rafts.

Some have already been picked up and others undoubtedly were rescued after dawn on Tuesday although reports are incomplete.

The Hyataka carrier sunk in the Philippines Sea was at least the eighth Japanese flattop sent to the bottom. In addition to four at Midway, the Japanese lost two in the battle of the Coral Sea and one to a submarine.

On Saipan, whose invasion on June 14 enticed the Jap Navy out of prolonged seclusion, Yanks holding the southern third of that Marianas base, 1,500 miles south of Tokyo, inched north along Magicienne Bay.

"Severe fighting continues," the Wednesday communique said, echoing previous reports.

More than 600 miles east of Saipan, Japan's bypassed sea-air fortress of Truk did not send up a single plane to ward off the latest two-way aerial punches presently paralyzing it.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced that his Liberators winged more than 700 miles northeast from the Admiralties Monday (Truk time) to drop 108 tons of bombs, a record single day's job for land-based raiders of that Carolines stronghold. The next day, Central Pacific Army bombers swarmed in from the Marshalls.

Admiral Nimitz, in a press release last night, also reported aerial jabs at Ponape, east of Truk, and Shumushu and Paramushiro north of Japan in the Kuriles.

Americans Using Saipan Airdrome.

JUN 23 1944

By GILBERT JAMES.

Representative of the United States Navy and U. S. Press. Distributed by the Associated Press.

Aboard Joint Expeditionary Force Flagship Off Saipan, June 22 (June 21, American Time).—After a week of complex maneuvering, the Japanese grand fleet is still avoiding surface battle with the powerful United States fleet guarding the Saipan invasion.

The Aslito Airdrome on Saipan, most valuable in the Marianas and only 1,500 miles from Japan and the Philippines, was ready for operation today after the Seabees had repaired and extended its 3,600-foot main runway.

Shielded by a great battle fleet standing off the Marianas, American Marines and Army troops launched a major attack this morning to wipe out the Japanese forces defending the island, and it was this situation that forced upon Japan's elusive Grand Fleet the grimmest challenge so far presented to it—to come and fight. It was still dodging, though it had the bitter choice of fighting or abandoning Saipan's weakening garrison to destruction.

DAY

Japs Fight Ferociously.

On Saipan the American attack began shortly after dawn, as veteran forces pushed ahead along a four-mile front extending entirely across the island from the outskirts of Garapan, main town on the western shore, and eastward along the slopes of Mount Tapotchau to Magicienne Bay on the east coast. At one point the Marines advanced one mile in the first three hours.

[In a broadcast picked up at New York today by NBC, the Tokyo radio declared that strong Japanese forces have been dropped at the rear of the American positions on Saipan.]

In exactly one week of fighting the Americans had effected a landing across reefs in the face of an extremely heavy fire and had captured the southern third of the island, including two airfields, one of which is Aslito.

The Japanese, who numbered at least 20,000, fought with ferocity, and they had, of course, the advantage of entrenched positions along steep ridges. This made the American advance slow during the first several days. They used batteries of mortars and considerable artillery and employed land mines and booby traps. One hard-fought battle between Marines and the Japanese troops was fought on a hill overlooking Magicienne Bay, where Japanese artillerymen ran their field-pieces in and out of caves, firing from the outside and then ducking back into the mountainside.

The Americans finally captured this and similar positions, killing seventy-five Japanese in one cave. Flame-throwers were used in destroying the enemy mountain strongholds.

Foe Outgunned and Outnumbered

While some of the forces were engaged on the mountainside, other American troops shot their way through swamps and woodlands and fire-blackened cane fields and even through suburban city streets along the thickly populated western shore. The resistance was bitter but the outgunned and outnumbered Japanese, now without either sea or air strength, were forced backward.

One of the greatest advantages held by the Americans was in artillery superiority—achieved in the first few days after the landing, during which, at the price of much sweat, scores of heavy guns were dragged across reefs along the western shore.

Invaders in to Stay.

From this flagship a few miles offshore I saw and heard an artillery preparation for today's attack. During the early part of the night land guns pounded the Japanese positions while naval guns pumped in hundreds of shells. All through the night ships fired star shells at intervals of every few minutes, lighting up the dusky, smoking island with their silver glow.

An hour before dawn the American artillery began a barrage so heavy it even jolted and shook this ship. Watches from the deck could see an almost continuous flash as the guns blinked their yellow fire and sent shells screaming northward.

Reports from shore indicated heavy Japanese losses which the enemy was apparently trying to conceal. Americans found many Japanese bodies and along one road they captured two truckloads of dead Japanese, which the enemy was trying to hide. Great stores of Japanese rice, fish and materiel have already fallen into American hands—the food coming in handy for feeding hundreds of Japanese civilians and natives from the town of Charan Kanoa and other settlements who have flocked to the American lines for safety.

Ammunition that fits American mortars, light field artillery, considerable gasoline, four narrow-gauge railroad locomotives, automobiles and trucks and even three lightly damaged Japanese planes have been taken.

The invasion forces, seeing victory ahead—no matter what the Japanese battle fleet tries to do about it—brought the Saipan Island garrison commander and his staff ashore this morning. There was no doubt the Americans expected to stay.

Enemy's Grand Fleet Continues Dodging—

Saipan Victory Is Assured By U. S. Defeat of Jap Navy

JUN 23 1944

ERICKSON

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, June 23.—(AP) Ultimate American victory at invaded Saipan now is beyond all doubt. It is only a matter of time.

The crushing defeat and flight of Japan's fleet settled that.

Japs Now Outnumbered

Japanese defenders of that Marianas island, 1,500 miles south of Tokyo, were estimated to number at least 20,000 when Marines stormed the beaches June 14. Now the Nipponese are outnumbered and outgunned.

NIGHT

With the enemy fleet of carriers and battleships beaten and running, Saipan's garrison can expect no help against the Americans steadily reinforced sea, air and land assault.

American planes are flying from captured Aslito airdrome. The American officer assigned to command Saipan as a U. S. base is speeding conversion of the island into an air and sea fortress from which sea power, in the words of Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, can be "projected hundreds of miles farther west—and north" toward Japan.

With almost the entire plane strength of six Nipponese carriers wiped out, enemy commanders likely will think a long time before attempting another such venture.

Great disadvantages had to be surmounted by Vice Adm. Marc A. Mitscher in dealing that punishing blow late Monday to the retiring Japan warships.

Carrier fliers took their planes out at extreme range, with darkness nearing, in order to sink an enemy carrier and sink or damage 13 other ships, including a battleship. Most of the American air losses resulted from water landings because of the range and night hazards—rather than the enemy's crippled power to resist.

Heavy Sea Losses

Japan's sea losses Monday were exceeded only by enemy losses at Midway in June, 1942, and off Guadalcanal later that same year. But the Monday battle was the most one-sided of the three in America's favor.

At Midway, Japa ed four carriers, a or more transports and 275 planes; but the United States lost the carrier Yorktown, the destroyer Hammann and 150 planes.

Off Guadalcanal, the Japs lost 18 ships, including two battleships, a heavy cruiser, three destroyers and 12 transport or cargo vessels; but the United States lost two light cruisers and seven destroyers.

TASK FORCE TOPS RECORD IN POWER

Possibly 20 Carriers In Unit Used In Pacific Battle

Washington, June 22 (AP)—Possibly a score of the newest and biggest American aircraft carriers are assigned to Task Force 58, revealed by the navy today as history's "most powerful and destructive naval unit."

This was disclosed tonight by Rear Admiral Arthur W. Radford, acting deputy chief of naval operations for air, in describing the giant force which routed the Japanese east of the Philippines Monday.

Most Of New Carriers In Unit

"We can safely assume," he said in a broadcast, "that most of the 22 big new carriers commissioned since Pearl Harbor have been operating as part of the vast Task Force 58."

The navy announcement said that in addition to carriers, the force was made up of battleships, cruisers and destroyers. It has been given "the entire Pacific Ocean to the gates of Japan as its stamping ground," the navy said.

Definite figures on the big force are not given, but the navy said that in the six months since its secret organization it has "reversed the direction of traffic in the Pacific Ocean."

Jap Flyer Discouraged

One indication of its size is given in the navy's statement that a Japanese pilot saw the force "scattered over the sea as far as his eyes could peer" and, when captured shortly thereafter, reported that "one look at Task Force 58 convinced him that Japan had lost the war."

More than a thousand planes can be launched from the 1,250,000 square feet of aircraft carrier decks in the force, which carries all of its own supplies.

"Just where this floating strategic air force will strike next," the navy said, "is a constant source of conjecture and worry for the enemy. . . .

"With Superfortresses striking from the west and Task Force 58 from the east, the once impregnable Japanese homeland has at last come within range of strategic bombing forces."

Commanded By Mitscher

Vice-Admiral Marc A. Mitscher, 57-year-old flyer, is commanding officer of the force, which is attached to the Fifth Fleet in the Pacific under command of Admiral Raymond A. Spruance.

It has struck hard and frequently at bases throughout the Pacific area, pounding Truk, Palau, Marcus, Wake, Saipan, Tinian and other Japanese island bases, including the Volcano and Bonin island groups only 500 miles from the Japanese homeland.

It joined in amphibious operations, supporting landings of ground forces in the Gilbert and Marshall islands, now held by American troops, at Hollandia, where Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur took his men to drive out the Japanese, and in the initial phase of the invasion of the Marianas where fighting still is under way on Saipan.

Nearly 100 Pacific Carriers

"But," the navy continued, "with the sudden growth in the numbers of baby flattops, ging the Pacific fleet carrier strength to nearly 100, these duties are falling to the small, slower carrier.

"Now Task Force 58 is able to roam more freely on its strategic missions of reducing Japan's inner bastions and threatening the enemy homeland itself."

The armada first operated as a unit immediately after the occupation of the Marshall islands. Under Admiral Mitscher, Task Force 58 then first showed its strength to the Japanese.

Hit Truk For Two Days

It moved into the Caroline Islands to strike Truk, principal and strongest of the Japanese bases. For two days it stayed near Truk while bombers and fighter planes pounded shipping and shore installations.

Then it withdrew to just outside land-based bomber range, where its fleet train was waiting, refueled from big tankers and immediately turned north to batter the Marianas.

"During both these attacks," the navy said, "the force was under enemy air attack a large part of the day and night, but anti-aircraft fire and the action of defending fighters held 58's losses down to slight damage to one carrier."

In those actions, also, 58 perfected the coordination of all its units. At Truk, for example, battleships were detached from the main force to speed in and finish off enemy ships crippled by the pounding of 58's bombers.

Palau Next In List

Next came Palau, a staging and search plane base 500 miles east of the Philippines. The big force went in for two days. When it left, 23 enemy vessels were on the bottom, one destroyer had been damaged, five vessels had run onto the beach in flames; eight others were damaged and beached; docks, warehouses, buildings, hangars, seaplane installations were shattered; 132 enemy planes were destroyed and 49 more probably destroyed.

Against that score, 58's losses were 25 planes and 18 aircraft personnel. No ships were damaged.

Strikes Hard Off Philippines

All these and other actions were carried out with the hope of luring

30. 24— 16461

the Japanese fleet from its hiding places for a showdown fight, the navy said. But not until Monday did the Japanese make an appearance.

Then, in the battle of the eastern Philippines 58 hit hard. It knocked down 353 Japanese aircraft, with a loss of only 21 of its own. Superficial damage was suffered by two of the carriers and one battleship when the Japanese attacked Sunday.

The planes of 58 went back the next day. Their damage already has been related by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Pacific commander in chief—four enemy ships including a carrier sunk, and ten, including a battleship, three other carriers, three destroyers and a cruiser damaged. From 15 to 20 Japanese aircraft were shot down also before the Japanese fleet fled.

Now 58's still out on the prowl. Says the navy:

"Under the protection of its own fighters, Task Force 58 can send its battleships, cruisers and destroyers within range of enemy shore installations as was done recently at Ponape, and pummel them with more than 850 large-bore rifles which range in size up to the largest coastal defense guns. This artillery alone is equal to 70 standard army field artillery units."

But it did not seek its own destruction against an overwhelming American force.

It is considered significant that, despite the strategic importance of the Saipan-Guam area in Japan's inner defenses, the fleet made no attempt to intercept the American attack force before it reached Saipan.

Moved Eastward

At that time, in fact, the Japanese war armada is believed to have been west and south of the Philippines. Shortly afterward it apparently moved out eastward through the Philippines and took up patrol between those islands and the Marianas.

At that point it could have had one or more of three main objectives:

1. To screen the Philippines against attack,
2. To catch and destroy small American patrol squadrons, or
3. To be ready for the kill if the air resistance at Saipan damaged large sections of the American force and caused the rest to flee.

Islands Cut Off

What happened, so far as known, was not favorable to any of these purposes. In the first days of the Saipan operation the American forces destroyed island-based enemy airplanes and, by attacks in the Volcano and Bonin islands, cut the island bases off from reinforcements.

In this extremity the Japanese apparently decided to strip their carrier force of planes for operation from island fields. Reports state the carriers launched their planes about 500 miles or more west of Saipan—so far away that the fleet itself could have had no intention of joining battle at that time.

Blow Held Not Crippling

JUN 23 1944

Washington, June 22 (AP)—Naval authorities estimated today that the victory over the Japanese fleet west of Saipan is a great but not a crippling blow to Japan's naval force.

The enemy fleet evidently was caught way off base. That was what started the engagement rather than any decision of the Tokyo admirals to steam out heroically to meet the challenge of the United States sea-air might.

Make Good Escape

Units of the United States Fifth Fleet sought to entrap the Japanese force by bold, deep strikes into enemy territory. They succeded to the extent that American carrier planes reached and blasted the enemy's carrier force.

The distance which American ships had to go in the mad chase were very great, however, and many of the Japanese ships are believed to have made good their escape so that the Japanese fleet remains as a factor to reckon with in the Western Pacific offensive.

No Move To Intercept

These latest reports of the fighting strongly indicate that the Japanese fleet fulfilled the traditional role of an inferior sea force. It sought to defend its most vital bases and interests and to harass the distant foe.

Grand total non-combatant ships, 1,827.

London, June 22 (AP)—A DNB news agency broadcast from Berlin today quoted a Tokyo dispatch as saying that Japanese forces had severely damaged and set afire another American aircraft carrier off the Marianas Islands—the fifth carrier the Japanese have reported damaged in that area. Like the previous Japanese claims, today's broadcast was totally without Allied confirmation.

Landing Too Late For Navy Protection, Rangers Take Cliffs The Hard Way

JUN 23 1944

The following dispatch was written by First Lieutenant Weldon James, a Marine Corps public-relations officer, of Asheville, N. C., and distributed by the Associated Press.

Aboard the USS Texas (Delayed)—This is the story of the Texas Rangers—of brave men who accomplished their mission despite great handicaps.

They are really Rudder's Rangers—under command of Lieut. Col. James E. Rudder, of Brady, Texas, but the men and officers of this battlewagon have adopted them.

Craft Dropped In Sea

It is from the wise-cracking warriors with the lesser wounds, that we heard the grim story of their first 34 hours in France.

At two hours before H-hour, some 10 or 12 miles out in the channel, their big transport dropped them and their small landing craft into the dark, rough sea.

Their objective was a bold point on the coastline at Point du Hoe. Below the 100-foot, reddish-brown cliffs was a 30-yard beach. Ten feet from the clifftops was a German observation post. The Rangers were to swarm over that beach and up those towering cliffs within half an hour, then fan out and finish up.

"Finishing up" meant the taking of a series of strong points extending 1,200 yards inland, centered on six-inch guns and including pillboxes, machine-gun nests, mortars, snipers in trees and farmhouses, and a well-connected system of trenches and tunnels.

Help Merely Slated

They would not have to finish the job alone. They would have reinforcements coming—three more of their own companies, another whole Ranger battalion, a full regiment of infantry. But the surly Channel elements didn't let it work out that way.

The Texas opened up with its deafening 14-inch guns dead on schedule. But the landing craft were swept off their course and landed the Rangers 50 minutes late. The Texas and other ships lifted their barrage as scheduled for their landing. The Germans crept back to the cliff's edge. What they saw brought them back by the hundreds, for the invaders had been swept in by adverse wind and current toward the wrong beach and had then turned up the coast toward their rightful destination.

Come Through Cross-Fire

The craft came on in through a cross-fire of machine guns, rifles and mortars. Six went under, sunk or swamped. Men in other craft were hit.

But, the Rangers hit the beach running.

Some fell mortally wounded on the beach. Others fired their grapnels over the cliff tops and began racing up on their rope ladders.

Germans cut some of the ropes. The Rangers tumbled down. Nazis at the cliff's edge pushed over hand grenades. A Ranger platoon picked off some of the grenade tossers and some of the snipers. A closein destroyer, the USS Satterlee, swept the cliff top with its 40-millimeter guns.

Some of the Rangers met instant death and hurtled to the beach below.

Others fought on.

"What I like about this crazy gang," drawled Private Woodrow Wilson Talkington, ex-farmer of 29, from near Clarksburg, W. Va., ignoring his head, hand and arm bandages, "is this: There wasn't any stalling around over there. Naw, sirree—no stalling around."

He, along with Bazookaman Sergeant Alban Meccia, 20, of Lodi, N. J., was one of the first Rangers wounded.

When the Rangers had won their foothold, Lieut. James R. McCullers, 30, of Columbia, Ga., said of the enemy:

"They aren't such perfect soldiers. If they were, they would have driven us out that night. We were badly outnumbered; we were in a constricted position and we had no mortars.

"But nobody had any intention of quitting and that was just too much for the Germans."

JAP ADMIRAL KILLED

JUN 23 1944

NEW YORK, June 22—(AP) The Japanese news agency Domei said today that Japanese Rear Admiral Yoshimasa Nakahara had "died heroically in the greater east Asia area."

The agency's broadcast, recorded by U. S. government monitors, said the admiral's death had been disclosed in an announcement by the Yokosuka naval station, reporting deaths in action of an undisclosed number of men."

Finnish Casualties Heavy As Red Troops Advance

JUN 23 1944

Russians Gain on Three Fronts, Clear Section of Railway.

LONDON, Friday, June 23—(AP) Russian troops annihilated more than 2,700 Finnish soldiers yesterday in savage fighting on three fronts, Moscow announced early today, as mighty Red armies rolled up new gains through Finland's broken defense lines.

At the northern tip of Lake Onezhskoe (Onega), one of the two new fronts opened Wednesday in Russia's all-out drive to eliminate Finland from the war, Soviet troops plunged 10 to 15 miles westward in the direction of Lake Ostero and cleared a section of the Leningrad-Murmansk railway by capturing three important stations.

Battle on Svir River

But the most deadly fighting was reported to the south along the Svir river where, the early morning supplement to the Russian communique said, one Soviet unit alone killed 1,450 of the enemy.

In addition many prisoners were taken as the Red army broke down the Finns' resistance, expanded their bridgehead to a depth of at least six miles on the north bank of the Svir, and captured Podporozhye, a district center of the Leningrad region.

The success of the Russians in the second day of their new offensive in the lake region west of Finland was matched by Marshal Leonid A. Govorov's battle-seasoned veterans on the Karelian isthmus.

Driving on from the fallen seaport of Viipuri, these Soviet troops captured Tali, five miles to the north, and several other localities on the fringe of the farming and manufacturing belt that extends to Helsinki, Finland's threatened capital.

Eight hundred Finns were killed in this fighting Thursday, the supplement said, prisoners were taken and large quantities of war material captured. Included in the booty were 40 railway cars loaded with various war supplies, 16 guns, 30 machine-guns and a "great deal of ammunition," Moscow said.

Retreat Road Cut

In another sector of the Karelian isthmus front, the supplement stated, "our units cut the road of retreat of the routed enemy by an outflanking maneuver and wiped out about 500 Finns." Five tanks were seized in this area.

The Russian air force joined in the furious attacks on the Finns in the Viipuri region, repeatedly bombing and strafing concentrations of Finnish troops, and destroyed 70 trucks and 30 other vehicles transporting troops and supplies.

Soviet bombers and Stormoviks (dive-bombers) blasted a number of rail junctions, destroying "more than 350 cars," the supplement said. Fifteen enemy planes were shot down by Red airmen in combat over this area Thursday and seven more German and Finnish planes were shot down by the Baltic fleet's air arm during raids on shipping in Viipuri bay. These attacks sank a 1,000-ton transport, four landing barges and a cutter as well as damaging several other ships and barges.

Moscow dispatches said Marshal Govorov's right flank was striking toward Lappeenranta (Villmanstrand), 30 miles northwest of Viipuri, and pointed out that capture of that important rail and highway center would sever the Finns' main communications with their forces, estimated at 100,000 men, in the area of Lake Ladoga and Lake Onezhskoe (Onega).

In addition to isolating the northeastern armies, this penetration could close a trap on the main Finnish forces remaining in the Viipuri area and east of the Saima canal, the Moscow dispatches asserted.

Finns Thrown Back

On the northernmost of the three fronts, at the headwaters of Lake Onezhskoe (Onega), the Red army threw back the Finns beyond the line of Lake Ostero and the Kumsa river, the Russians said in their nightly communique.

This line is 10 to 15 miles west of Medvezhgorsk, where Moscow said Wednesday Red troops were fighting in the outskirts.

Three more stations on the railway to Murmansk were captured.

These were Lumbushozero, Vanzozero and Velikaya Guba, respectively nine, 16 and 19 miles north of Medvezhgorsk.

One hundred and fifty miles to the south along the Svir river other Red troops captured Podporozhye, a district center of the Leningrad region, and seized three localities in the vicinity of Lodeinoe Pole in the course of enlarging their bridgehead on the northern bank of the river.

The most advanced of these was Nazaryevskaya, deepening the Soviet bridgehead to at least six miles north of the Svir. Podporozhe is 25 miles northeast of Lodeinoe Pole.

The Finnish communique acknowledged that the new Soviet attacks in the north, strongly supported by artillery and tanks, had forced Finnish troops to withdraw to a more easily defended line, but declared that violent Russian assaults were repulsed in the Viipuri sector.

In view of the seemingly hopeless military situation, it appeared here that the 'Finns hardly could wait much longer to make peace overtures, and Stockholm anticipated an early cabinet shakeup in Helsinki.

The Stockholm Newspaper Aftonbladet reported that the Russians already had offered to end the war if the Finns would accept the 1940 border between the two countries and give the Red army temporary movement through Finland and the temporary use of certain airfields and bases on the Aland islands at the mouth of the Gulf of Bothnia.

An added Russian stipulation was said to be that Finland in the future ally herself closely with Moscow and break her "Scandinavian orientation."

Nazis Watch Eastern Front

With Finland's position becoming more precarious daily, German commentators talked more than usual tonight about the probability of even more extensive battles on the eastern front.

One Berlin broadcast said, "the eastern front is becoming increasingly lively. In every sector where Soviet offensives are expected to be set rolling there has been brisk artillery fire in the last 24 hours. Strong Soviet reconnaissance detachments have been active near Iasi (in Romania), south of the Smolensk highway and south of Vitebsk. These were followed up by attacks of no great operational significance northwest of Tarnapol and either side of Kovel and southeast of Vitebsk."

REDS LAUNCH 2 NEW DRIVES INTO FINLAND

JUN 23 1944

Offensives Open North of Lake Ladoga as Finns Face War Crisis.

London, June 22 (A. P.).—The Red Army hurled masses of men and equipment into two new drives on a broad front north of Lake Ladoga today in an effort to make a quick end of the war with Finland, already reported in the throes of a Government upheaval which may be the prelude to a bid for peace.

Launching of the drives was announced last night in a Moscow communique, which also disclosed that Soviet forces advancing from captured Viipuri on the Karelian Isthmus south of Lake Ladoga were within twenty miles of the border fixed at the end of the 1939-40 Finnish-Russian war.

The political situation in Helsinki as the Russians intensified pressure on the staggering Finnish Army remained obscure, but there were strong indications that the Finnish Government was facing a crisis.

DAY

Crisis Reported Solved.

A Reuters dispatch from Stockholm said a Finnish peace cabinet had already been selected. An Associated Press Stockholm dispatch said the Swedish paper Svenska Dagbladet declared the Finnish Government crisis had been "de facto solved," a phrase interpreted to mean that the cabinet was reformed, and could ask Moscow for armistice conditions.

The New Russian offensives were launched on the third anniversary of the German invasion of the Soviet Union, and apparently were aimed at clearing the Murmansk-Leningrad railway of Finnish forces. One of the thrusts was launched along the Svir River, between Lakes Ladoga and Onega (Onezhskœ), approximately 150 to 200 miles northeast of Viipuri. The other was started about 100 miles further north, above Lake Onega, and cracked Finnish lines east of Madveshegorsk, at the northwestern tip of the lake. Another broadcast said Soviet troops were in the outskirts of the town.

The broadcast Russian communique said that in the first day of the attack along the Svir more than 200 populated places had been occupied, including Voznesene, a district center of the Leningrad region.

120 Miles From Helsinki.

Plunging beyond the burning ruins of Viipuri, other Red Army units were within 120 miles of the Finnish capital of Helsinki after taking more than fifty additional places, the Soviet communique added.

The new drives menaced seven divisions of German troops garrisoned in northern Finland as protection for the metal mines located there, and there was speculation that the Nazis might set up a puppet government in that area to protect their interests.

Meanwhile, the Soviet Information Bureau, in a review on the third anniversary of the German attack on Russia, said more than 7,800,000 Germans have been killed or captured in the three years of fighting, compared with 5,300,000 Russians killed, missing or captured.

German losses totaled 70,000 tanks, 60,000 airplanes and more than 90,000 pieces of artillery, while Russian losses were 49,000 tanks, 30,128 airplanes and 48,000 guns, the bureau said.

Hull Praises Red Army For Three-Year Battle

JUN 23 1944

Says 'Brilliant Record' Will Be Continued in Days Ahead

WASHINGTON, June 22 (AP).—Secretary of State Cordell Hull said today in a statement on the third anniversary of Germany's attack on Russia that "no one can doubt that the Soviet forces will continue their brilliant offensive record in the forthcoming decisive battles."

"Again we mark the anniversary of the brutal Nazi assault on the Soviet Union," the statement said. "The tremendous accomplishments achieved by the Soviet armies during a series of brilliant offensive campaigns during the last year have forced the Nazis to disgorge the bulk of their momentary conquests in the Soviet Union. No one can doubt that the Soviet forces will continue their brilliant offensive record in the forthcoming decisive battles for the liberation of Europe."

Earlier Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, told his news conference that the "magnificent skill" of the Red Army has "contributed very heavily to the victory which is now approaching."

"The decision of Mr. Hitler to attack Russia," he said, "was certainly one of the very major turning points of the war and greatly inured to the ultimate advantage of the Allies."

NAZIS CLING TO FINLAND

STUBBORNLY

Minister Reported Saying Troops Will Not Leave

JUN 23 1944

Stockholm, June 22 (AP)—The German Minister in Helsinki was reported today to be bringing pressure upon Finland to remain in the war against Russia, stating that German troops would refuse to leave Finnish territory in event of a Russian-Finnish peace.

This report was carried by the Swedish newspaper Aftonbladet. (Aftonbladet is described by the Political Handbook of the World as nonpartisan, with Nazi tendencies.)

Moscow Offer Denied

The newspaper also said Moscow had offered to end the war against Finland if Helsinki would accept the 1940 border and grant concessions to aid in a continuing Russian campaign against the seven German divisions in Finland, but the official Swedish news agency later denied the peace story, asserting that "no peace conditions have reached Finland" and adding that the story was "pure fabrication."

Aftonbladet, in its early editions, quoted "most reliable sources" as the authority for its story and in later editions credited the report to "information the New York Times' Stockholm correspondent has learned."

NIGHT

The reported concessions requested of Helsinki were the right for the Red army to pass through any part of Finland to fight the Germans there, and the right to operate from air bases in western Finland and to have bases on the Ahvenanmaa (Aland) Islands between Finland and Sweden to strike at German lines of communication with the Nazi forces in northern Finland.

Would Be Temporary

These three concessions would be temporary, in effect only long enough for the Russians to expel the Germans from Finland, said the report.

The Russian terms, said Aftonbladet, have been "brought to the attention of the Finnish Government," along with an additional proposal that Finland in the future ally herself closely with Moscow and break her "Scandinavian orientation."

The German Minister in Helsinki was said to have told the Finnish Government that Germany "would not accept" any Finnish attempt to get out of the war.

Reports from Helsinki indicated the political crisis was growing more acute hourly as the Red army sweeps farther into the country, and an early Cabinet shake-up was looked for here.

NEW PEACE TERMS TO FINNS REPORTED

JUN 23 1944

Stockholm, June 22 (A. P.).—The Swedish newspaper Aftonbladet said that the Russians have offered to cease war against Finland if the Finns accept the borders that were settled upon in 1940 and give the Red Army temporary freedom of movement through Finland, certain airfields and bases on the Aland Islands on a temporary basis.

Three demands in addition to the 1940 border arrangement have "been brought to the attention of the Finnish Government," the newspaper said, naming them as

DAY

1. The right to pass through any part of Finland for the purpose of concentrating Red Army troops against Col.-Gen. Eduard Dietl's northern Finland divisions.

2. The right to operate from airplane bases in Osterbotten so the Red Army force can attack areas occupied by Gen. Dietl's troops and his Baltic communications.

3. The right to hold bases in the Aland Islands to strengthen the assault on Gen. Dietl's supply lines.

After quoting only anonymous "most reliable sources" for the peace conditions named in its first edition, Aftonbladet later attributed the story to "information the New York Times Stockholm correspondent has learned."

PROCOPE SETS OUT ON JOURNEY HOME

JUN 23 1944

Washington, June 22 (A. P.).—Hjalmar Procope, Finnish Minister whose activities were said by the State Department to be against the welfare of the United States, is on his way home.

The department, which ordered the departure, disclosed last night the mere fact that he and two legation counselors had gone, and withheld information of the route. Previously it had been reported that Mr. Procope would travel from New Orleans on a Spanish ship.

Mr. Procope's wife, who is expecting a third child shortly, remained behind with their children.

The State Department's announcement on the departure of the Minister said:

"The Department of State has completed arrangements for the departure from the United States of Hjalmar J. Procope, lately Minister of Finland, and of Messieurs Vahervuori and Solanko, lately counselors of the Finnish legation, with the families of the latter two officers.

"The department has been informed by Mr. Procope that it is his desire to proceed unaccompanied by his family and he has not acted on the suggestion made by the department that if he so desired he could remain in the United States with Mme. Procope and their children pending restoration of her health.

"The department has received a request from Urho Toivola, lately a counselor of the Finnish legation who has been expected to depart from the United States with Mr. Procope and Messieurs Vahervuori and Solanko that he be permitted to remain in this country owing to the serious illness of Mme. Toivola. This request has been granted."

Says Nazis Burn Slain War Prisoners

London, June 22 (A. P.).—Polish authorities in London quoted the Polish underground radio today as saying that the Germans are exhuming and burning the bodies of 5,000 Russian war prisoners whom they allegedly killed in cold blood late in 1941 near Horodzov in South Poland.

DAY

The broadcast said the Nazis apparently were attempting to destroy evidence that the prisoners — described as Russian Army officers and political commissars —had been shot.

London, June 22 (A. P.).—During the first fortnight of the invasion Great Britain had fourteen work stoppages involving more than 1,000 workers in industries other than coal mining, Ernest Bevin, British Labor Minister, told the House of Commons today. He said that nine had been settled.

Overcome Stiff Resistance To Take Town Above Grosseto

Lieut. Col. Charles Poletti, AMG chief in Rome, orders all Fascists removed from posts in public agencies.....Page 2

Rome, June 22 (AP)—American troops driving up the west coast of Italy have overcome stiff German resistance and captured the town of Paganico, 14 miles northeast of Grosseto and less than 60 miles from the Pisa-Florence-Rimini defense line along which the Nazis are expected to make their final stand below the Alps, Allied headquarters announced today.

On the Adriatic coast Eighth Army forces raced into Fermo, 32 miles from the important port of Ancona and approximately 85 miles from Rimini.

NIGHT

Straightens Allied Line

Thus for the first time since Rome fell the pursuing Allied armies were strung out on almost a straight east-west line across the Italian peninsula and the Germans appeared to have escaped any danger of a wholesale entrapment of their forces.

30. 24 — 16463

Thirty-five miles east of Perugia, Eighth Army units approached Camerino through increased German artillery and mortar fire. West of Perugia British forces drove on Castiglione del Lago, principal town on the western shore of Lake Trasimeno. The villages of Villa Strada and San Fatucchio, southwest of the lake, fell after sharp fighting. East of the lake Allied troops were reported within three miles of the town of Magione.

French troops, advancing on the right flank of the Fifth Army, cleared the Germans from several more mountain villages in the neighborhood of Montenero.

Sets Nazi Losses Over 80,000

An unofficial estimate from Fifth Army headquarters placed the number of Nazi dead, wounded and captured since the Allied offensive began six weeks ago at between 80,000 and 100,000. The enemy is known to have brought in elements of four new divisions since Rome fell, and one of these already has been virtually destroyed.

[A German broadcast reported the Allies had thrown fresh tank formations into hard fighting on the Fifth Army front north and northeast of Grosseto, but claimed that Nazi troops "held their main fighting positions everywhere."]

The ground still was muddy from a three-day rain, but a hot sun and a warm breeze today promised better going for Allied armor. The clearing weather also brought the Allied tactical air force out in strength again, 1,100 individual flights being made yesterday against numerous targets without a loss.

Allies Push Near Ancona, Prize Italy Port

JUN 23 1944

Rome, June 22 (AP)—The Allied command announced tonight that a captured diplomatic document showed that Benito Mussolini agreed to send 1,500,000 Italian laborers to Germany in 1944. HEINZERLING

Rome, June 22 (AP)—Allied and Italian troops are within 32 miles of Ancona, prize Italian port on the Adriatic coast, while Eighth Army troops are approaching Camerino, approximately 35 miles east and a little north of Perugia, Allied headquarters announced today.

(The Algiers radio, according to a Reuter dispatch, reported that Camerino and Umbra had fallen.)

American forces to the west have pushed on 15 airline miles northwest of Grosseto. In all land operations, although weather has improved, misty conditions are preventing cross-country movements on a large scale, a communique said.

Troops Reach Fermo

The advance toward Ancona, ranking next to Venice in port facilities in that coastal sector, was made by troops which have reached Fermo, only 65 airline miles below Rimini, the eastern anchor of the so-called Pisa-Florence-Rimini line, where the fleeing Germans may make a stand.

Limited gains were made north of the newly taken ancient fortress city of Perugia and in the Lake Trasimeno area west of Perugia, despite strong resistance.

The Mediterranean air force stepped up its activity, making 1,100 sorties in attacking shipping in Livorno harbor, battle area targets and a railyard at Ventimiglia on the Italian Riviera. There were no losses.

DAY

Loaded Lighters Torpedoed

The communique disclosed that in a "spirited naval engagement" in connection with the ousting of the Germans from Elba, light coastal forces torpedoed three loaded enemy lighters attempting to evacuate troops, and possibly sank a fourth. In another engagement an enemy lighter was sunk.

(The Berlin radio said German troops were evacuated from the Island of Pianosa, south of Elba, and the Island of Palmajola, between the mainland and Elba, at the same time the Allies seized Elba.)

San Marco Captured

Eighth Army reconnaissance units moved northeast of Perugia to Nocera Umbra on Highway 3 and the village of Morro on Highway 77, approaching Camerino, and to the northwest to an old town on the road to Umbertide, which lies about 14 miles northwest of Perugia.

The village of San Marco, about two miles northwest of Perugia, has been occupied and British troops, fighting over the country where Hannibal waged the battle of Trasimeno, are only three miles from the last lake-shore town of Magione.

More Towns Taken

The Germans are resisting strongly on the west and southwest sides of Lake Trasimeno, where the Eighth Army is driving on Castiglione del Lago, principal town on the west shore of the lake. The villages of Villa Strada and San Fatucchio, southwest of the lake, were taken after some fighting. The Germans infiltrated into the town of Chiusi, farther to the southwest and fighting followed.

Along the entire Eighth Army front the Germans were developing major delaying action, using increased artillery and mortar fire.

French Advance

French troops of the Fifth Army, advancing over muddy country, cleared the enemy of several more villages, including Poggio Ucello and Montenero, in the fighting area between the Eighth Army and the Americans of the Fifth to the west.

The Americans occupied Paganico, on the River Ombrone, about 14 miles northeast of Grosseto.

Poletti Orders All Fascists Removed From Rome Posts

GEORGE BRIA

Rome, June 22 (AP)—Lieut. Col. Charles Poletti, AMG commissioner for Rome, said today he had given orders that all Fascists be removed from public agencies, and declared, "I don't care who the man is or to be told that he is efficient."

In his first press conference as regional commissioner for the Rome region, Poletti said, however, that "while we are looking for replacements" the men will remain in their jobs.

The most pressing problem in the region, he said, was food distribution and transport. He estimated there now were 300,000 people being fed one meal daily at Allied-supplied food kitchens, in addition to what they can obtain with ration cards.

To War On Black Markets

NIGHT

Poletti declared vigorous steps would be taken against black markets and that shops selling goods to Allied soldiers at exorbitant prices would be placed out of bounds and for a second offense would be closed and the owners prosecuted.

Asked whether the underground which fought the Germans would be given something to do now, Poletti said one thing they could do would be to suggest replacements for Fascist officeholders.

Underground groups turned in their arms after Rome was liberated and at least one group, the "Armata Rossa," has been requesting Allied permission to fight the Germans.

Labor Draft Paper Cited

Rome, June 22 (AP)—A captured diplomatic document signed May 21 by Benito Mussolini and Rudolf Rahn, Hitler's envoy to the Italian Fascist puppet regime, provided that Mussolini supply Germany 1,500,000 Italian laborers in 1944, the Allied command announced tonight.

KENNEDY

A translation of the agreement issued here said:

"The extremely critical labor situation in the Reich demands that Italian manpower reserves be mobilized without delay and put into the service of the Reich. On January 4 the Fuehrer expressed the wish that in 1944 1,500,000 Italian laborers be raised for work in the Reich."

Calls For Immediate Action

The document continued that, "as the numbers so far made available have not corresponded with [illegible] the German and his wishes, the German and Italian governments agreed to a number of measures to be carried out immediately.

NIGHT

"These included assigning of the Italian military classes of 1900 to 1921, inclusive, to work in Germany, except for some 76,000 held back for Italian military service.

Called For Skilled Labor

Mussolini also agreed that all skilled labor of other classes either be assigned Germany or left in Italian arms factories, that "superfluous" workers in Italian factories be released for service in Germany and that Italian employers hire and train women workers.

The full program agreed to by Mussolini would have yielded Hitler the 1,500,000 Italians he desired. There is no exact information here as to the extent the program has been put into effect, but it is doubtful if more than a small fraction of the number actually has gone to Germany.

His 28-year-old daughter, Rina, also withdrew from the concert, saying that if her father were barred, she would not appear. She asserted firmly that the opposition to the tenor came from "people who sing small parts in the opera—the spear carriers."

Maj. Gen. Harry H. Johnson, military governor of Rome, apparently had the last word in the controversy between Allied authorities over Gigli, although other Allied authorities had indicated earlier in the day the order might be rescinded, or not enforced.

Stating he had taken neither Gigli's voice nor his politics into consideration, Gen. Johnson said that "for expediency in the handling of the troops in Rome it was decided that this singer would not appear at the concert."

The tenor's name appeared on posters for the concert, arranged by the British army for the Royal Opera house, and Italians ripped them down, while Roman newspapers published bitter attacks against Gigli for alleged German sympathies. Obviously distressed at the turn of events, Gigli issued this reply:

"Yes, it is true that I sang for the Fascists and I sang for the Germans. Now that the Americans and the British are here I would like to sing for them, too.

"But I am an artist and I never had any interest in politics, I never wore a black shirt or a Fascist badge. My only connection was an honorary membership card they gave me, just as they did to Badoglio (Marshal Pietro Badoglio).

"This action is not due to the Allies, but to the jealousy of mean people among the Italians who are saying false things about me. I'll sing for the British and Americans any time they want, but I'll never sing for the Italians again."

Gigli Barred from Rome Opera, Vows Never to Sing for Italians

JUN 23 1944

ROME, June 22 — (AP) Banned from singing in an Army concert tonight on the grounds that the time was not propitious for his appearance in embittered Rome, Beniamino Gigli, former Metropolitan Opera company tenor, laid the opposition to him to "jealousy of mean people," and declared he would "never sing for the Italians again."

His 28-year-old daughter, Rina, also withdrew from the concert, saying that if her father were barred, she would not appear. She asserted firmly that the opposition to the tenor came from "people who sing small parts in the opera—the spear carriers."

Maj. Gen. Harry H. Johnson, military governor of Rome, apparently had the last word in the controversy between Allied authorities over art versus politics. He issued the order banning Gigli yesterday, but earlier today other Allied authorities had indicated it would be rescinded or not enforced.

KENNEDY

Johnson said he had taken neither Gigli's voice nor his political views into consideration in banning him.

DAY

"For expediency in handling troops in Rome, it was decided that this singer would not appear at the concert," he said.

It was understood, however, that as a result of bitter attacks on Gigli, mainly from Italians because of his alleged Fascist past and German collaboration, it was feared there might be a demonstration if he appeared in the concert.

Apparently greatly distressed by the ban, Gigli said:

"Yes, it's true that I sang for the Fascists and I sang for the Germans. Now that the Americans and British are here I would like to sing for them, too.

"But I am an artist, and I never had any interest in politics, I never wore a black shirt or a Fascist badge. My only connection was an honorary membership card they gave me, just as they did to Badoglio (Marshal Pietro Badoglio).

"This action is not due to the Allies, but to the jealousy of mean people among the Italians who are saying false things about me. I'll sing for the British and Americans any time they want, but I'll never sing for the Italians again."

Posters Torn Down.

The tenor was among artists scheduled to appear on a concert program arranged by the British Army for the Royal Opera House. When posters carrying his name appeared, they were torn down by Italians, and Rome newspapers published bitter attacks on him for his alleged Fascist and German sympathies.

Major-Gen. Harry H. Johnson, Military Governor of Rome, then signed an order banning him from the program and issued a public statement that Gigli "would not appear."

Gigli's 28-year-old daughter Rina, a lyric soprano who was also to sing at the concert, said with a flash of her black eyes that if her father was barred she would not appear either.

"No, you must appear, Rina," said Gigli. But Gigli's wife differed, declaring: "No, Rina does not sing if her father doesn't. That's final."

Rina asserted "it is all the jealousy of people who sing small parts in the opera—spear carriers. They have always been jealous of my father. Oh, there is so much meanness in this world."

JAPS DRIVEN BACK IN MANIPUR STATE

JUN 23 1944

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, June 22 — (AP) Remnants of Japanese troops, apparently short of artillery power and using faulty ammunition, are being driven steadily from the Imphal-Kohima road in Manipur state, India, and clearing of the road was expected within a few days, headquarters reports today said.

A junction was expected soon between British troops driving south from Kohima and those operating north from Imphal, now ten miles apart, a communique said. Enemy forces caught by surprise in these rapid movements have abandoned much equipment in their flight, the bulletin said.

NIGHT

An enemy position was taken on the Imphal-Ukhrul road, and south of Bishenpur and along the Tiddim road, air attacks "caused much disruption of Japanese movements."

In north Burma, Chinese troops have occupied Mahaung, a mile south of Mogaung, the communique said, while at Myitkyina, main Japanese north Burma bastion, a large party of Japanese attempting to escape entrapment by floating down the Irrawaddy river on rafts were shot or drowned. A few escaped, however.

On the east bank of the Irrawaddy, Maj. Gen. W. D. A. Lentaigne's Chindits have entered the village of Maingna.

Some local gains were made in the north and south sectors of besieged Myitkyina by Chinese who tunneled into Japanese positions, the communique said.

Jap India-Area Ouster Seen

JUN 23 1944

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, June 22 (AP)—Ouster of the last Japanese from the Kohima-Imphal road in Manipur state, India, is expected within a few days, headquarters reports said today.

Clearing of the road was said to be proceeding much faster than originally expected, partly because the Japanese are short of artillery and their ammunition is proving faulty. Recent reports said 60 per cent. of Japanese artillery shells are duds.

Today's communique said the British had advanced southward from Kohima until they were only ten miles from troops operating northward from Imphal, and that enemy forces caught unaware by the rapid march fled after being shot up. Much equipment was abandoned by tthe enemy.

Mahaung Occupied

In North Burma Chinese troops occupied Mahaung, a mile southeast of Mogaung on the Mandalay-Myitkyina railway and blocked the road and railway a mile south of the town.

At besieged Myitkyina local gains were made by Chinese tunneling into north and south Japanese positions, and a large party of the enemy attempted to escape from the base by floating down the Irrawaddy river on rafts. Most of the Japanese were shot or drowned, however.

JAPANESE TROOPS SCORE GAINS IN SIANG RIVER DRIVE

JUN 23 1944

CHUNGKING, June 22 — (AP) Japanese troops driving swiftly southward along the Siang river have reached a point only 33 miles north of Henyang, a Chinese communique said tonight, and the High command admitted that the threat to this strategic rail junction was becoming more grave by the hour.

Chinese defenders met the invader at Shiwan, about eight miles northeast of Hengshan, Siang river town just 25 miles north of Hengyang.

The Japanese now are advancing along a 60-mile front south of fallen Changsha. The Chinese war bulletin admitted the fall of Siangsiang yesterday morning. This town, which fell to the Japanese right wing, is 55 miles north of Hengyang, and the enemy now is advancing all along the front from Siangsiang in the west to points south of captured Chuchow and Lilino, east of the Siang river, in the all-out drive to split China in two and prepare for offensive and defensive action in the event of American landings no the China coast.

South of Liling and about 65 miles northeast of Hengyang, the communique reported close-quarter combat, with both sides suffering heavy casualties. To the east of Liling, across the border in Kiangsi province, the invader was reported attacking west of Pingsiang, but the Chinese said these attacks were thrown back.

U. S. 14th air force planes were thrown into the battle in the Changsha area again against trucks, railway installations and supply boats. The planes also ranged over the Liling-Chuchow area.

To the north, in Honan province, the Japanese drove southward again along the Peiping-Hankow railway and entered the highway center of Chowkiakow, 125 miles southeast of Chenghsien, the Chinese communique said. It added that in western Honan, Sunghsien in the Honan plain was recaptured by the Chinese yesterday afternoon and that the Chinese advanced to the outskirts of Loning, about 50 miles southwest of enemy-held Loyang and about 25 miles south of the Lunghai railway.

Japanese Increase Threat To Hengyang

Chungking, June 22 (AP) — The Japanese threat to Hengyang became grave today as the Chinese High Command disclosed that the invaders, pushing solthward from fallen Changsha along the Canton-Hankow railroad, had reached a point only 33 miles from this important railway junction.

The High Command said bitter fighting was in progress at Shiwan, about eight miles northeast of Hengshan and 25 miles north of Hengyang, in the Japanese drive to split China in two.

Admitting the fall of Siangsiang, 55 miles north of Hengyang on the Japanese right wing, the High Command disclosed that the enemy had gained ground both east and west of the railway.

Chinese Retake Sunghsien

In Honan, the Chinese recaptured Sunghsien, 45 miles south southwest of Loyang and reached the outskirts of Loning, about the same distance to the southwest of Loyang, the High Command said.

Fighting also continued east of the Peiping-Hankow railway, the Chinese communique said, with the enemy again entering the highway center of Chowkiakow, 125 miles south east of Chenghsien.

Several smaller vessels were hit by fighter planes in support of Chinese troops fighting in the Changsha area.

Better Chinese Farms Seen

JUN 23 1944

Chungking, June 22 (AP)—Vice-President Wallace asserted today that the end of the war would mark "the beginning of a century of the common man" and that the Chinese would "find the American people marching by their side" at every step worward.

He spoke to a luncheon meeting of Chinese agricultural experts and said that China's "New Deal" after the war would permit a 50 per cent. increase in farming efficiency in 15 years, an increase which he asserted required 40 years in the United States. He toured 100 miles of Szechwan province.

"No country with a wide range of climate, making possible diversified agricultural production, can be industrially strong or sound unless both its agricultural technique and the agricultural part of its society are progressive and prosperous," Wallace said, after inspecting wheat and rice fields.

"Under the New Deal that is to begin with the calling of a constitutional convention (which is to be called in China within a year after peace), China can, if she will, do in 15 years what it took the United States 40 years to do—that is, increase her agricultural efficiency by 50 per cent.

Marching Side By Side

"The war which we are winning will mark not only the end of world-wide aggression but the beginning of a century of the common man. At every step forward taken by the Chinese people, they will find the American people marching by their side."

Earlier agricultural experts taking informally with Wallace estimated that China would need 150,000,000 bushels of wheat from abroad in the first year after the war ends. The bulk of Chinese wheat land is now occupied by the

Liberators Pound New Guinea Island Flanking Biak

JUN 23 1944

Advanced Headquarters, New Guinea, Friday, June 23 (AP)—Intensified bombing of Noemfoor Island, a Japanese position flanking the American action at Biak off Dutch New Guinea, and a one-plane assault on a 15-ship convoy near Palau were announced today by headquarters.

Liberators in force pounded Noemfoor, approximately 30 miles west of Biak, Wednesday in a stepped-up assault against stores and personnel areas near the Kamiri and Kornasoren airfields.

Sinks One Of 15 Ships

Some 600 miles northward, a lone Liberator sank one of 15 merchantmen ten miles north of Kayangel Island in the Palau group. The direction of the convoy and its components were undetermined.

On Biak, American forces mopped up against still stubborn Japanese resistance. P-T boats in waters off the island halted an evident Nipponese infiltration attempt by sinking three barges, heavily laden with personnel and supplies.

Japanese resistance in strength was encountered north of Sorido village, near the third captured airstrip. Small Japanese pockets were holding out with machine guns and mortars north of Mokmer airdrome, some four miles from Sorido.

Despite adverse weather, widespread bombing assaults included forays against Truk and Woleai, in the Caroline Islands.

Nazis Should Have Spurred Fighter Output for Defense, Expert Says

MELBOURNE, Australia, June 22 (AP).—Sir Oliver Simmonds, British aeronautical authority visiting Australia, characterized Germany's robot bombers today as "the most ridiculous weapon the Germans have developed."

Sir Oliver told interviewers: "Use of such a weapon at such a time indicates the Nazi air policy is gravely at fault. It should have been manifest to them, over the last twelve or eighteen months, that during 1944 there would be a desperate need for fighters to ward off an Allied air assault. Instead of taking appropriate measures, they have frittered away their technical energies on a development that is at best a slightly modernized version of the Big Bertha, which in the last war was a nuisance to the Parisians, but never shattered their morale nor gave Germans a military victory."

GUATEMALA SUSPENDS CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS

JUN 23 1944

GUATEMALA, June 22 — (AP) The Guatemalan government suspended today five constitutional articles, including rights of public assembly and freedom of speech and of the press, stating the action was necessary because of unrest "caused by Nazi-Fascist agitation."

Signed by President Jorge Ubico the proclamation, read on street corners throughout Guatemala by squads of soldiers, also suspended constitutional articles involving arrest without warrant and the inviolability of correspondence.

In a separate statement President Ubico promised citizens restoration of all the constitutional guarantees the moment the country returns to normal.

MARRIAGE NOTHING TO JUMP INTO

JUN 23 1944

Montreal, June 22 (A. P.).—Bridegroom-to-be Sergt. Jerome Wander, of Albany, boarded a plane in New York yesterday to get to Albany for his marriage tomorrow. Owing to adverse weather the plane was unable to land at Albany and flew non-stop to Montreal.

Sergt. Wander was told that the first plane leaving here for Albany would be late this afternoon. He asked permission from Colonial Airways officials to board a morning plane flying non-stop to New York and to let him have a parachute to use to jump off when the plane passed over Albany. The officials said they were sorry but they could not oblige him.

Navy Men's Bid To 'Buy Off' Strikers Stirs Labor's Ire

JUN 28 1944

New York, June 22 (AP)—From somewhere at sea, a communication signed "the crew of the U. S. S. Coos Bay," a seaplane tender, and offering "to help pay the wage increase money-hungry strikers are demanding," today aroused labor leaders to vigorous rebuttal.

Making the point that wage demands were not involved in the strike to which the Coos Bay letter specifically referred, two labor leaders contended organized labor is doing its utmost to curb all stoppages and keep production rolling. One asserted newspaper publishers were creating a "deep feeling of antagonism between labor and the armed forces."

Crew Would "Buy Off" Strikers

The Coos Bay letter was addressed to the editorial department of the Associated Press at San Francisco, and inclosed $412 in paper money. The letter requested that the Associated Press "act as our agent to buy off the present strikers of the Wright Aircraft Corporation."

The letter, stamped "Passed by Naval Censor," began: "We, the crew of the U. S. S. Coos Bay," and ended with a postscript reading: "If the Wright strike is over, just choose another (for the distribution of the $412). There are always plenty at hand."

It was signed "The Crew of the U. S. S. Coos Bay," and appealed to workers in war plants not to strike. It called strikers "money hungry" and said, "We are willing to help pay the wage increase from our meager pay . . . if they will just continue to produce the implements necessary so that we can end this war."

Money Forwarded To Forrestal

The money inclosed consisted of three $100 bills, five $20 bills, one $10 bill and one $2 bill. The Associated Press forwarded it to James V. Forrestal, Secretary of the Navy in Washington, who read the crew's letter and said "No comment."

The letter evidently referred to an unauthorized strike which began June 5 at the plant of the Wright Aeronautic Corporation at Lockland, Ohio, near Cincinnati. The strike ended June 9.

The issue was the transfer of seven Negroes into a department of the plant which previously had only white workers. Local 647, United Automobile Workers (CIO), represented the workers for bargaining purposes. From the beginning of the walkout, officials of the union urged the strikers to return, and vigorously condemned the work stoppage.

Full Stoppage On D-Day

Robert Spitzmiller, president of the local, also telegraphed shop stewards to instruct workers to go back to their posts, and appealed to their patriotism. Production at the plant came to a full stop on June 6, D-day on the western front.

Representative Compton (R., Conn.), in Washington, told the Associated Press today that he had received a copy of the same letter. It was included with a letter from a naval lieutenant who wrote Compton last January about reaction among men in the armed services to war-plant strikes. The January letter was signed by Lieut. W. F. James. Compton said today that James was one of the authors of the letter to the Associated Press.

In the January letter, James identified himself as executive officer of the Coos Bay.

Navy records give his name as Lieut. William Francis James and lists as next of kin his wife, Mrs. Mary Baker James, St. Louis.

James was born February 6, 1918, at St. Louis and was graduated from the St. Louis University School of Commerce and Finance in 1940. He attended Naval Reserve Midshipman's School, Northwestern University, and was appointed an ensign March 14, 1941.

He was a survivor of the USS Joseph Hughes, lost off Morocco, and holds a Navy and Marine Corps Medal.

The Associated Press has requested the Navy Department to transmit a message of inquiry to the captain of the Coos Bay, and has been assured it will be sent, asking for particulars on the origin of the letter and the extent to which crew members participated in the fund-raising.

Spitzmiller and R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers (CIO), issued statements today after they were shown copies of the Coos Bay letter by the Associated Press, both asserting that unions are fighting against strikes and deploring the Wright stoppage.

Spitzmiller Blames Newspapers

Spitzmiller declared newspaper publishers have been making "efforts since the outbreak of the war to create a deep feeling of antagonism between labor and the armed forces."

"Theirs must be a feeling of great pride as they see their planned campaign blossom into hatred and misunderstanding among fellow-men.

"No one knows better than the newsmen that money was not the consideration in this work stoppage. The newspapers know that unions, as labor, are fighting against strikes. The CIO adopted an anti-strike pledge at its last national convention and is fighting to uphold this pledge but facts don't enter into the picture in the minds of our propaganda powers.

"Lies And Misinformation"

"If lies and misinformation are the means to the end, then don't let Fourth Estate principles stand in the way. We, of Local 647, suggest that the Associated Press use this money to print certificates of merit to be distributed among their members for the wonderful job they are doing in sowing hatred, intolerance and misunderstanding in the minds of Americans."

Spitzmiller dictated his statement to the Cincinnati Times-Star, in Cincinnati.

In Washington, Thomas declared "our international office has done everything it possibly can and will continue to do more to stop all such strikes as the Wright strike."

Thomas Points To Union Stand

He pointed out that the international union demanded that the Wright strikers go back to work, and he said "our members returned to work on our demands." He asserted that about 600 "non-union people did not return to work and were disciplined by the management."

[Officials of the Wright company said today that 240 workers were discharged as a result of the strike.]

Thomas said further that "our organization did put up a fight for additional pay for the soldiers. We fought equally hard to get the GI bill through Congress, and we also are putting up a fight for jobs when our servicemen return from whatever front they are on."

Navy Fighters Raise Fund To 'Buy Off' Strikers

JUN 23 1944

New York, June 22 (AP)—An appeal to workers in war plants not to interrupt the production of weapons by striking—coupled with an offer accompanied by $412 in cash "to help pay the wage increase that money-hungry strikers are demanding"—was contained in a communication received by the Associated Press marked as coming from "the crew of the USS Coos Bay," a seaplane tender, and stamped "Passed by Naval Censor."

The communication, dated June 10, in care of the fleet postoffice, San Francisco, referred specifically to "the present strikers of the Wright Aircraft Corporation" and added, "Please implore them to end their strike and accept our offer to help pay their wage increase which they feel is more important than our lives."

Union Head's Reply

Referring to the strike which lasted from June 5 to June 9 at the Lockland (Ohio) plant of the Wright Aeronautical Corporation without union authorization, and after being shown by the Associated Press a copy of the Coos Bay letter, R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers, CIO, said in Washington:

"These men in the armed service have been propagandized. Our international office has done everything it possibly can and will continue to do more to stop all such strikes as the Wright strike. . . . No wage issue was involved. It was an anti-Negro issue."

Navy Secretary Silent

Secretary of the Navy Forrestal, to whom the AP forwarded the $412 in United States paper currency that accompanied the Coos Bay letter, said he had "no comment," after noting a copy of the letter.

Robert Spitzmiller, president of Local 647 UAW-CIO, representing workers at the plant, in Cincinnati issued a statement accusing "newspaper publishers of the United States" of having a "planned campaign" to create "antagonism between labor and the armed forces." He suggested that the Associated Press use the money "to print certificates . . . to be distributed among their members for the wonderful job they are doing in sowing hatred, intolerance and misunderstanding in the minds of Americans."

Lieut. W. F. James Called Coauthor

Meantime, in Washington, Representative Compton (R., Conn.) told the AP he had received this week a copy of the Coos Bay letter which was addressed to the AP in San Francisco. The Congressman said it came to him with a letter from a naval lieutenant who had previously written Compton on the subject of reaction among men in the armed forces to strikes in war plants.

Last January 12 Representative Compton read to the House a letter from this officer who asserted, "We have a double battle, one with our external enemies and the other with our internal enemies." The letter later was placed in the Congressional Record and carried the signature of Lieut. W. F. James. Compton said today that James was one of the authors of the letter to the Associated Press.

Compton said that in view of developments he was making public a portion of the naval officer's letter to him this week, as follows:

"We out here have never let ourselves be 'thrown' by the continued strikes at home. . . . As we buried our dead some time ago, we further resolved that nothing would interfere with our final glorious victory; so resolved were we that the inclosed letter was written and the 'collection of pennies' was started."

Compton's View

Compton replied yesterday to the lieutenant that it was "particularly unfortunate that the Wright strike occurred on D-day."

"Fortunately, however," the Congressman wrote, "the great majority of the members of labor in this country are sticking pretty close to the job and, viewing the situation as a whole, the production people of this country have done a truly tremendous and magnificent job of providing the tools of war, not only for our own forces but for the forces of other members of the United Nations.

"I know how discouraging reports of strikes must be and how helpless you boys at sea must feel when you read of the dissension on the home front. It is an American trait to magnify our troubles, however, and I assure you that things at home are not really as bad from the standpoint of strikes and other home-front dissension as would appear from the daily news reports."

The letter from the Coos Bay follows:

USS Coos Bay (AVP-25),
C/o Fleet Postoffice,
San Francisco, Cal.,
June 10, 1944.

The Associated Press, Editorial Department, San Francisco, Cal.:

Sirs—We, the crew of the USS Coos Bay, which consists mainly of survivors of other naval ships or veterans of major naval engagements, and all who have seen action not once but many times and who, while on this cruise, have not had a liberty for one full year, feel that we can do more than fight and even give our lives if necessary for our country. We are willing to help pay the wage increase from our meager pay that money-hungry strikers are demanding if they will just continue to produce the implements necessary so that we can end this war. We have seen war—and we hate it.

We have chosen you as our agent or go-between to represent us in our campaign to "buy off" the present strikers of the Wright Aircraft Corporation with the money we have collected from our small crew, a total of 41,200 pennies.

"Implore Them To End Strike"

Please implore them to end their strike and accept our offer to help pay their wage increases, which they feel is more important than our lives.

Ask them not to strike in the future but, instead, to let the men in the war zone know of their dissatisfaction and they will gladly chip in each month to save them from starvation so that they may continue to produce arms for us to defeat their enemy as well as ours, and so that we may come home soon to see the ones we love, our sons and daughters whom we have never seen and our wives and mothers who haunt us with memories day and night; also to see our country, for which we are willing to die—yes—and to see you strikers. Do you want to see us?

"Can't Reach Foes At Home"

Out here we are close to our "foreign" enemies and can properly deal with them; our enemies at home we cannot reach. Therefore, in desperation, we can think of nothing but to offer our money to "buy" them back to work, this money having been earned honestly and in the belief that our efforts were the salvation and protection of those who are striking against us.

CREW OF THE USS COOS BAY.

P. S.—If the Wright strike is over, just choose another. There are always plenty at hand.

Union Had Voiced Concern

The money accompanying this letter comprised three $100 bills five of $20 denomination, one $10 bill and one $2 bill.

Thomas said in Detroit on May 27 that "public opinion has become inflamed against our union" (because of unauthorized strikes in war plants) and added:

"The UAW-CIO today faces one of the greatest crises in its history. On the outcome of this crisis will depend the possibilities of our survival in the post-war period. The test is this: Are the membership of our union and its leaders willing to abide by the democratic decisions and mandates of our constitution and conventions?"

A walkout of 15,000 started at the Wright plant June 5, after seven Negroes were transferred to a department which had been operated by white workers.

The Negroes remained at their jobs throughout the strike, which was ended June 9. The company said that about 240 workers were discharged when they refused to man machines.

Thomas' Statement

Thomas' statement today said:

"These men in the armed service have been propagandized. Our international office has done everything it possibly can and will continue to do more to stop all such strikes as the Wright strike. The people of Cincinnati at least know there was no wage issue involved. It was an anti-Negro issue. And they also know our international union demanded that these people go back to work.

"Our members returned to work on our demands, but about 600 non-union people did not return to work and were disciplined by the management. Quite obviously we have no control over people who do not belong to our union. All the people in the armed services can rest assured that all of the officers of the UAW will do everything they possibly can to help those in the armed services to bring the war to a successful conclusion.

"Our organization did put up a fight for additional pay for the soldiers. We fought equally hard to get the GI bill through Congress and we are also putting up a fight for jobs when our servicemen return from whatever front they are on."

Ohio Union Man's Comment

In Cincinnati, Spitzmiller, president of the union local, dictated the following statements to the Cincinnati Times-Star:

"Newspaper publishers of the United States should accept this letter as the fruits of their efforts since the outbreak of the war to create a deep feeling of antagonism between labor and the armed forces. Theirs must be a feeling of great pride, as they see their planned campaign blossom into hatred and misunderstanding among fellow men.

"No one knows better than the newsmen that money was not the consideration in this work stoppage. The newspapers know that unions, as labor, are fighting against strikes. The CIO adopted an anti-strike pledge at its last national convention and is fighting to uphold this pledge but facts don't enter into the picture in the minds of our propaganda powers.

"If lies and misinformation are the means to the end, then don't let Fourth Estate principles stand in the way. We of Local 647 suggest that the Associated Press use this money to print certificates of merit to be distributed among their members for the wonderful job they are doing in sowing hatred, intolerance and misunderstanding in the minds of Americans."

U. S. Casualties In War Reach 225,382 Total

JUN 23 1944

New Army and Navy Lists Show Sharp Increases in Last Two Weeks

WASHINGTON, June 22 (AP).—The war on all fronts has brought 178,677 casualties to the Army and 46,705 to the Navy.

The Army casualties cover a period through June 6; The Navy total is on the basis of a report made public today. The total of 225,382 for both services is an increase of 8,251 over figures announced two weeks ago. This increase includes casualties suffered on the first day of the invasion of Europe.

Mr. Stimson, in announcing the Army casualties, said a previous front report from Normandy listing 3,283 killed in the early stages of the invasion actually included missing as well as dead, but he did not disclose the number known to have been killed. The front report also reported 12,600 wounded.

Of the United States Army casualties, 31,289 are dead, 71,432 wounded, 39,976 missing and 35,980 prisoners. The campaign on the Italian mainland, from the landings on September 9 through June 15, brought 64,992 casualties, of whom 11,610 were killed, 44,426 wounded and 8,956 missing. American airmen operating from Italy against targets there and in Nazi-held Europe have lost during the same period, 1,186 killed, 1,373 wounded and 6,493 missing, a total of 9,052.

The Navy totals today showed an increase of 932 since an announcement two weeks ago. It is believed that the intense Navy, Marine and Coast Guard activity in the Pacific during recent weeks and days is not yet reflected in the Navy totals. The latest Navy figures place the killed at 20,044, wounded at 12,905, the missing at 9,295 and prisoners at 4,461.

Roosevelt Signs Bill on Post-War Veterans' Aid

JUN 23 1944

Urges Congress to Enact Similiar Measure to Help Men in Merchant Marine

WASHINGTON, June 22 (AP).—President Roosevelt, signing the veterans' aid bill, urged today that Congress make similar provision for unemployment compensation and government-financed education for members of the merchant marine, of whom the United States now has 155,000.

Mr. Roosevelt used ten pens to put his signature to the bill, which authorizes Federal loans, hospitalization, job insurance, education and other post-war benefits—estimated to cost from $3,000,000,000 to $6,500,000,000—for the men and women now in uniform.

After a stroke or two with each, he handed the pens one by one over his shoulder to leaders of Congress and veterans' organizations who watched him sign the measure.

He said that he wanted one thing more for veterans—extension of social security credits on old-age pension and survivors' insurance for time passed in the armed services. He also prodded Congress for action on general legislation for post-war economic reconversion. Declaring that what service men and women want most is assurance of satisfactory employment when they return to civil life.

The Senate passed and sent to the White House today a bill providing pay and allowances for missing Army and Navy personnel until receipt of a report or evidence of death by the War and Navy Departments. Existing law is interpreted so that pay and allowances cannot be credited after the date of death, even though it may not be determined until months later that a missing person is dead.

Roosevelt's Statement

Mr. Roosevelt's statement follows:

"This bill, which I have signed today, substantially carried out most of the recommendations made by me in a speech on July 28, 1943, and more specifically in messages to the Congress dated Oct. 27, 1943, and Nov. 23, 1943.

"1. It gives service men and women the opportunity of resuming their education or technical training after discharge, or of taking a refresher or retrainer course, not only without tuition charge up to $500 per school year, but with the right to receive a monthly living allowance while pursuing their studies.

"2. It makes provision for the guarantee by the Federal government of not to exceed 50 per cent of certain loans made to veterans for the purchase or construction of homes, farms and business properties.

"3. It provides for reasonable unemployment allowances payable each week up to a maximum period of one year, to those veterans who are unable to find a job.

"4. It establishes improved machinery for effective job counseling for veterans and for finding jobs for returning soldiers and sailors.

"5. It authorizes the construction of all necessary additional hospital facilities.

"6. It strengthens the authority of the Veterans' Administration to enable it to discharge its existing and added responsibilities with promptness and efficiency.

Program Nearly Complete

"With the signing of this bill a well rounded program of special veterans' benefits is nearly completed. It gives emphatic notice to the men and women in our armed forces that the American people do not intend to let them down.

"By prior legislation, the Federal government has already provided for the armed forces of this war: Adequate dependency allowances; mustering out pay; generous hospitalization, medical care, and vocational rehabilitation and training; liberal pensions in case of death or disability in military service; substantial war risk life insurance, and guaranty of premiums on commercial policies during service; protection of civil rights and suspension of enforcement of certain civil liabilities during service; emergency maternal care for wives of enlisted men, and reemployment rights for returning veterans.

"This bill, therefore, and the former legislation, provide the special benefits which are due to the members of our armed forces—for they 'have been compelled to make greater economic sacrifice and every other kind of sacrifice than the rest of us, and are entitled to definite action to help take care of their special problems.' While further study and experience may suggest some changes and improvements, the Congress is to be congratulated on the prompt action it has taken.

"There still remains one recommendation which I made on Nov. 23, 1943, which I trust that the Congress will soon adopt—the extension of social security credits under the Federal Old-Age and Survivors' Insurance law to all service men and women for the period of their service.

"I trust that the Congress will also soon provide similar opportunities for post-war education and unemployment insurance to the members of the merchant marine, who have risked their lives time and again during this war for the welfare of their country.

"But apart from these special benefits which fulfill the special needs of veterans, there is still much to be done.

"As I stated in my message to the Congress of Nov. 23, 1943, 'What our service men and women want more than anything else is the assurance of satisfactory employment upon their return to civil life. The first task after the war is to provide employment for them and for our demobilized workers . . . the goal after the war should be the maximum utilization of our human and material resources.'

"As a related problem the Congress has had under consideration the serious problem of economic reconversion and readjustment after the war, so that private industry will be able to provide jobs for the largest possible number. This time we have wisely begun to make plans in advance of the day of peace, in full confidence that our war workers will remain at their essential war jobs as long as necessary until the fighting is over.

"The executive branch of the government has taken, and is taking, whatever steps it can until legislation is enacted. I am glad to learn that the Congress has agreed on a bill to facilitate the prompt settlement of terminated contracts. I hope that the Congress will also take prompt action when it reconvenes on necessary legislation which is now pending to facilitate the development of unified programs for the demobilization of civilian war workers, for their re-employment in peace-time pursuits, and for provision in cooperation with the states of appropriate unemployment benefits during the transition from war to peace. I hope also that the Congress upon its return will take prompt action on the pending legislation to facilitate the orderly disposition of surplus property.

"A sound post-war economy is a major present responsibility."

Gets War Contract Bill

WASHINGTON, June 22 (AP).—War contract termination legislation was sent to the White House today after the House unanimously accepted a Senate-approved compromise bill to expedite the return of industry to civilian production.

The final form of the legislation followed closely the lines of the bill passed last Saturday by the House, giving the Comptroller General authority to audit settlements to detect fraud, but denying him a voice in reaching the agreements.

The legislation provides for prompt payment to contractors whose war work has been terminated and requires interim financing during the period of negotiation for a final settlement.

Colonel Eddy Nominated For Post in Saudi Arabia

JUN 23 1944

Marine Corps Officer Listed as New Minister

WASHINGTON, June 22 (AP).—Colonel William A. Eddy, of New Hampshire, was nominated today by President Roosevelt to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to the kingdom of Saudi Arabia. Colonel Eddy is in the Marine Corps.

The President also nominated Gerald Robert Corbett, of Hawaii, to be secretary of the Territory of Hawaii. Mr. Corbett, a native of Ladysmith, Wis., will succeed Ernest K. Kai, resigned.

Other nominations sent to the Senate by the President today included: James P. Moffitt, of New York, to be a secretary and consul general in the diplomatic service.

The Senate confirmed the nomination of Herbert Wechsler, of New York, to be an Assistant United States Attorney General, and also confirmed the nomination of two United States marshals. The marshals approved were Bernard Fitch, Connecticut District, and Frank C. Blackford, Western District of New York.

Wireless Rates to France Fixed

WASHINGTON, June 22 (AP).—The Federal Communications Commission granted today the request of Press Wireless, Inc., to establish an ordinary press rate of 5 cents a word and an urgent press rate of 8 cents a word for messages over its circuit with France in the European war area. The commission reconsidered an earlier ruling whereby it required establishment of a maximum of 4 cents for ordinary press messages and 6 cents for urgent press messages. No change was made in the limitation of urgent press messages to a maximum of twenty-five words.

Attempt To 'Purge' Lyttelton Seen By Rep. Sumner

JUN 23 1944

Washington, June 22 (AP)—Representative Sumner (R., Ill.) said today an attempt is being made to "purge" Capt. Oliver Lyttelton from his post as British Production Minister, adding that "probably it will not work."

Her House speech followed a demand by Senator Lucas (D., Ill.) in the Senate yesterday that Lyttelton be asked to resign for saying that American lend-lease aid to Britain provoked Japan into attacking the United States at Pearl Harbor. Lyttelton later apologized to the House of Commons, saying he did not mean his remarks as they sounded.

Said By Congressmen

Miss Sumner said "apparently the New Dealers, including the State Department, have started to try to purge members of the British Parliament for saying the same thing some of us members of Congress said at the time about the way President Roosevelt was dragging our country into war before Pearl Harbor.

"Perhaps international alienation of affection can be averted if it is pointed out now that the purge did not work successfully against Americans—indeed quite the contrary.

Churchill Quoted

"Probably it will not work against the British either. The purge in Britain might be quite a job because Sir Oliver will not be the only member of Parliament, nor even the only member of the Cabinet, unable to repress his feelings.

"For instance, the Prime Minister, Mr. Churchill, in effect, said the same thing in Parliament on January 20, 1942," Miss Sumner declared, quoting him as saying at that time:

"It has been the policy of the Cabinet at almost all costs to avoid embroilment with Japan until we were sure that the United States would also be engaged. . . . On the other hand, the probability since the Atlantic conference, at which I discussed these matters with President Roosevelt, that the United States, even if not herself attacked, would come into the war in the Far East and thus make the final victory assured, seemed to allay some of these anxieties, and that expectation has not been falsified by the events."

Regime Advised Not Recognizing Holding It Is Mar

WASHINGTON, June 22 (AP).—The State Department received information today that Stanley Ross, an Associated Press reporter, had been arrested by the Argentine regime. No information is available, the department said, as to the reason for the arrest given by the Argentine regime, which is not recognized by the United States.

[The Associated Press received advices through government chan-

Committee Approves Sending WAVES Abroad

JUN 23 1944

WASHINGTON, June 22—(AP) The House Naval committee today approved legislation permitting the Navy to send WAVES abroad but the Senate Naval committee deferred action on a companion bill until later in the year.

The bill as reported out by the House committee would allow the Navy to send volunteers to foreign posts, with Hawaii however to be considered the same as a home continent assignment.

Chairman Walsh (D.-Mass.) said members of his committee were not altogether convinced that there were not enough men available to fill the posts to which women might be assigned.

Walsh expressed the belief that compromise legislation might be worked out next fall.

Larry Allen Tells Hull About War-Prison Life

Washington, June 22 (AP)—Larry Allen, Associated Press correspondent who was captured at Tobruk, Lybia, and repatriated early this month, today gave Secretary of State Hull a first-hand account of prisoner-of-war life in Germany and the situation as he had seen it inside Europe.

Allen talked with Hull for half an hour and, he said, thanked him for the State Department's help in getting him "out from behind the barbed wire."

The Pulitzer prize-winning correspondent said he told Hull he was grateful to be back and free.

"Hull told me he was proud to have me back," Allen said, "and that's one of the finest compliments I've ever had."

Allen spent 20 months in Italian and Nazi prisons.

CANADIANS RELAX BAN ON VACATIONS

JUN 23 1944

WASHINGTON, June 22—(AP) The Canadian government has decided to permit its citizens to bring up to $150 apiece into this country for vacations, easing considerably the rigid wartime decree against taking currency out of Canada.

Senator Brewster and Rep. Margaret Chase Smith, Maine Republicans who were notified of the action by William F. Bull, commercial attache of the Canadian Embassy, immediately heralded the relaxing of the ban on vacation funds as a boon to Maine and other New England resorts.

Previously the limit per person was the equivalent of five American dollars. The $150 allowance is for one trip. If a vacationer makes two trips across the border he may carry $75 each time.

Brewster explained that the Dominion's foreign exchange control administration had taken the step in furtherance of the growing theory in Canada that Canadians, under strain of war conditions, should have recreation, and second, should be able to travel to the resorts where they are accustomed in other years to relax.

Thousands of Canadians normally use the New England beaches and mountains for their Summer recreation, but the new directive applies all along the border and would apply to vacationers on the West coast or any where in between.

NO NEED FOR CONFERENCE

JUN 23 1944

WASHINGTON, June 22.— (AP) Secretary of State Hull said today he had heard that one or two members of the diplomatic corps were talking about an Inter-American conference but he indicated that he did not see much need for a meeting now. The last such gathering to strengthen Pan-American relationships was held at Rio De Janeiro in early 1942. Hull said he believed that inter-American relations now are closer than in many years.

INCREASE ORDERED IN RUM IMPORTS

WASHINGTON, June 22.— (AP) The War Production board announced today that a 25-per cent increase would be ordered at once in the 1944 quotas for the importation of rum and other beverage cane spirits from foreign countries, along with a corresponding increase in the production quotas for Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Under previous quotas, receipts of cane spirits were limited to the 1943 volume. The output of distillers in U. S. territories and possessions was held to the same limit.

The increase was granted, WPB said, partly to let the Latin American countries share in the benefits of the improved alcohol situation which prompted WPB on Tuesday to grant U. S. distillers a month-long "vacation" from the production of war alcohol. The interval will be used for the distillation of beverage alcohol.

The WPB meanwhile had directed all distillers using grain in the production of industrial alcohol to use rye to the extent of at least ten per cent of their grain consumption effective July 1.

Bund Leaders Required To Study 'Mein Kampf'

JUN 23 1944

Sedition Trial Witness Tells of New York Area Schools

WASHINGTON, June 22 (AP).— A government witness at the mass sedition trial testified today that a curriculum consisting principally of Adolf Hitler's "Mein Kampf" and Alfred Rosenberg's "Myths of the Twentieth Century" was taught at a school in this country conducted for German-American Bund officers.

William Luedtke, former national secretary of the Bund, said the school was conducted on Long Island, N. Y., and near Passaic, N. J., in 1936 and 1937, and that national headquarters ordered all unit officers in the greater New York area to attend.

Luedtke asserted the school was opened after Severin Winterscheidt returned from a trip to Germany. Winterscheidt, he said, referred to "Mein Kampf" on "almost every occasion" and frequently used Rosenberg's "Myths of the Twentieth Century." Rosenberg is a high-ranking Nazi official.

An attorney said in an affidavit on file in United States District Court that Senator Gerald P. Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, made, but failed to keep, a promise to provide evidence for the defense in the mass sedition trial of twenty-nine defendants accused of conspiring to undermine the morale of the armed forces. Ira Chase Koehne, attorney for three of the defendants, filed the affidavit. He wants Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher to require Senator Nye to produce papers he asserts are in the Senator's possession.

CONGRESS READY TO RECESS TODAY

JUN 23 1944

Works Late to Send Five Money Measures to President.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—(AP) Congress finished work tonight on most of its accumulated appropriation bills and prepared to recess tomorrow until August 1.

Although a last-minute hitch delayed final action on the $49,000,000,000 War department supply bill for 1945, Senate and House both worked late to send five other money measures to President Roosevelt.

Two Bills Left

With only the big war-financing bill and a catch-all deficiency appropriation left on the calendar, Senate Majority Leader Barkley announced he would introduce a formal resolution for an adjournment starting Friday and continuing through both the Republican and Democratic National conventions, to August 1.

There had been some agitation for a longer recess until Labor Day, but Barkley told reporters it was decided that "we ought to come back August 1 and have another look at things; if nothing is pressing then we might recess again."

The recess resolution will carry a provision permitting either the majority or minority leaders of both Houses to call Congress back into session in an emergency."

A disagreement on a minor amendment limiting the amount of money which could be spent training medical and dental students held up final approval on the War department bill, but Senate and House conferees are expected to adjust this tomorrow.

Bills given final passage and sent to the President included:

Lend-Lease and United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation administration (UNRRA), $3,920,570,000. The House accepted a disputed Senate amendment authorizing President Roosevelt to transfer $350,000,000 from Lend Lease to UNRRA, if war relief needs require.

War agencies, $1,031,900,000, including a controversial $500,000 appropriation to continue the President's Fair Employment Practices committee (FEPC). Approved by both Houses were amendments by Senator Russell (D-Ga) barring FEPC from issuing any order contravening Federal law, permitting contractors to appeal FEPC anti-racial discrimination rulings to the President, and prohibiting the government from seizing any plant or business for failure to comply with an FEPC order. Restored to the bill was $300,000 to continue for six months the President's committee on congested areas, an agency which the House originally voted to terminate.

Labor-Federal security, $1,100,000.

Agriculture department, $562,145,918, with a compromise anti-politics amendment providing for dismissal of any of the department's 70,000 employes who violate the Hatch act, or the Federal statute prohibiting lobbying activities by Federal employes.

District of Columbia, $69,000,000.

CIO Committee Called New Deal Political Arm

JUN 23 1944

Washington, June 22 (AP)—Representative Thomas (R., N. J.), a member of the Dies committee, said in the House today that evidence in the committee's files "clearly shows that the CIO Political Action Committee is in fact the political arm of the New Deal Administration."

"Here," he asserted, "is a Communist-dominated group, wielding a $4,000,000 slush fund aimed at the political death of every Congressman who will not take its orders, stretching its tentacles into the White House itself."

Directed By New Dealers

The organization's activities, he added, "are directed from the White House by the New Deal political strategists, David K. Niles and Jonathan Daniels," administrative assistant to President Roosevelt.

Thomas made the assertion during a brief but heated discussion of a newspaper column by Westbrook Pegler claiming that evidence indicated a close tie-up between the White House and the committee.

Probe Demanded

Representative Marcantonio (A. L., N. Y.) demanded that the House investigate the source of Pegler's information, and Democratic whip Ramspeck, of Georgia, also voiced a desire to know how the columnist got a "pipeline" into the Dies committee. Representative Celler (D., N. Y.) asked whether the committee's staff was employed by the House or by Pegler.

Thomas and Marcantonio were ruled out of order during a debate on methods they said were used by Pegler and Drew Pearson, newspaper columnists, to obtain information. Thomas asserted that Pearson had access to high New Deal leaders.

JUN 23 1944

Trucks Nudge Planes, Guns On Priority List

Washington, June 22 (AP)—The production of heavy trucks, which must carry the main burden of the Allied march across Europe, today got overriding priority status previously granted only to invasion craft and heavy artillery.

The War Production Board has given the trucks "top urgency" rating, Government sources revealed, because production has been running roughly 25 per cent. behind the steeply rising curve of planned production.

Congress Extends 1944 Requisition Power

JUN 23 1944

Washington, June 22 (A. P.).—Unanimous House passage sent to the White House today legislation extending for an additional year beyond June 30 the President's power to requisition personal property and materials needed for the war effort.

The legislation requires that the authority be exercised only when the property or material needed cannot be obtained through purchase or negotiation, and compels the Government to pay a fair price for what it takes.

APPROPRIATION BILL PASSED BY SENATE

JUN 23 1944

WASHINGTON, June 22—(AP) The Senate passed a $245,728,992 second deficiency appropriation bill today after striking out a House provision that would have banned payment of salaries to any Office of Price Administration employe who sought to extend grade labeling.

A provision forbidding grade labeling was written into the Price Control law last year and was repeated in the extension measure sent to the White House last night, but the House action is attaching the amendment to an appropriation bill intended to put "teeth" into the legislative ban.

The deficiency bill now goes to a House-Senate conference committee for adjustment of differences over the deletion and over amendments adding $13,245,933 to the bill.

ARNALL THINKS F.D.R. WILL RUN

JUN 23 1944

Georgia Governor, After Visit, Predicts Roosevelt Statement

Washington, June 22 (AP)—The South captured a major share of political interest in Washington today.

Gov. Ellis Arnall, of Georgia, talked politics with President Roosevelt during a White House call which some Democrats in Congress regarded as a peace gesture by the President. Later Arnall said he thought Mr. Roosevelt would be a fourth-term nominee "and properly so." Georgia's electoral vote will be pledged to support the party's candidate, he said, adding that this could be taken as a rebuke to dissident Democrats in Texas, Mississippi, South Carolina and elsewhere.

Arnall predicted Mr. Roosevelt would make a public statement shortly after next week's Republican convention "taking the people and the Democratic party into his confidence as to his willingness to abide by party decisions irrespective of his personal desires."

Explains Southern Revolt

Representative Sikes (D., Fla.), who termed the Roosevelt-Arnall conference a "peace move" toward Southern Democrats, told the House that the threatened revolt in some parts of the South was a "movement for political and economic recognition" and "the stirrings of political independence in the South."

"If Texas, Mississippi, Louisiana, South Carolina and the States which join them are able to convince this nation," Sikes said, "that the South is not necessarily a voiceless, helpless appendage of the Democratic party, I shall personally be very proud of them." He referred to steps under way in some States to leave electoral college voters free to cast their Presidential ballots as they see fit, without regard to party candidates.

Setback In Texas

Fourth-term forces in Texas suffered a setback when the State Supreme Court upheld the regular Democratic organization's selection of Presidential electors in convention. The electors were left free not to support the party's nominees if the national convention fails to meet certain demands. Pro-Roosevelt forces bolted the convention and sought an order from the State Supreme Court for selection of electors in a primary.

The American Democratic National Committee began working in Chicago to unite all anti-fourth term Democratic groups and to hold a separate convention in the South if the Democrats renominate President Roosevelt.

Out To Kill New Deal

John U. Barr, national chairman of the Draft-Byrd-For-President campaign, declared in a statement issued here that fourth-term supporters are trying to create "the false impression that dissatisfaction with the New Deal's treatment of the race problem is largely confined to the South." Actually, he said, it extends throughout the country, and, moreover:

"Southern Democrats — along with millions of good Americans of both parties in other sections—are deeply alarmed at the totalitarian trend of the New Deal and are determined to get rid of it before it is too late."

Barr is working for the nomination of Senator Byrd (D., Va.) as the Democratic candidate for President.

ICKES STILL HAS TWO COAL MINES

JUN 23 1944

Jewell Ridge Properties Held Because Of Litigation

Washington, June 22 (AP)—Coal miners are no longer working for the Government.

All but two of the mines were back in the hands of their owners today after more than a year of Government control marked by a long struggle to write wage contracts between the operators and miners.

Interior Secretary Ickes, the coal mines administrator, restored the 300 Pennsylvania anthracite mines to private possession, also the last big batch of 700 bituminous mines, most of them in West Virginia, Virginia, eastern Kentucky and Tennessee.

Two Virginia Mines

That left him administrator for two mines only, both belonging to the Jewell Ridge Coal Corporation, Tazewell, Va.

This company is fighting a battle in the Federal courts to determine whether underground travel time should be considered working time under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Ickes said at a press conference he retained the two mines to keep the court issue alive and commented:

"The issue is no longer portal-to-portal pay for the miners. It's court-to-court pay for the lawyers."

Working Time Only

Jewell Ridge has refused to sign the final wage agreement with the United Mine Workers because the document provides for portal-to-portal pay instead of working-time pay only. If the company wins its court fight it will be in a position to challenge such payments as a wage increase in violation of the stabilization program.

"It has taken a discouragingly long time," said Ickes in a statement, "to get a wage agreement which would assure harmonious labor relationships."

The mines were first seized in May, 1943. They were all back in private hands by October 12, 1943, but were taken over again 20 days later because of fresh strikes.

Property Seizure Bill Is Passed By House

JUN 23 1944

Washington, June 22 (AP)—Unanimous House passage sent to the White House today legislation extending for an additional year beyond June 30 the President's power to requisition personal property and materials needed for the war effort.

The legislation requires that the authority be exercised only when the property or material needed cannot be obtained through purchase or negotiation and compels the Government to pay a "fair" price for what it takes.

200,000 WORKERS NEEDED THIS YEAR

JUN 23 1944

WASHINGTON, June 22—(AP) War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt said tonight that 200,000 workers must be recruited for essential industries by the end of the year in order to maintain the national labor force at full strength.

In a statement, McNutt said a WMC survey shows that between April 1 and the close of this year, 1,600,800 persons will be needed to meet basic manpower requirements. This includes 1,400,000 men for the armed services.

"The increase in the number of persons of working age will result in the net addition of 300,000 to the total labor force," he said. About 600,000 persons will become available from the declining munitions industries, and 100,000 from other industries, primarily construction.

"Return of 400,000 discharged veterans will constitute a partial offset to withdrawals from the labor market by armed force inductions."

"Above all," he added "it is necessary to prevent workers from accepting less essential work, or from withdrawing from the labor force as long as their efforts are still needed."

Manpower requirements include, McNutt said, about 10,000 men needed for foundries and about 20,000 for the coal mines to replace expected losses to the armed forces.

Possibly 50,000 will be needed in the lumber and logging industries, he said, while shipyards on the West coast require 50,000 to 60,000 more workers.

In addition, nine Navy shore establishments need 46,000 more men.

Prisoner Of Germans Is Heard In Broadcast

JUN 23 1944

Cumberland, June 22 (AP)—Lieut. Donald D. Sharps, Cumberland, who has been a prisoner of the Germans since mid-January, was heard broadcasting from an internment camp within the Reich that he was in good health and getting along fine.

He urged using the facilities of the Red Cross for expediting mail and packages to war prisoners.

The broadcast was heard Tuesday night and today mail poured in to his wife. Mrs. Jean Sharps, from points in New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio, relaying the message in the event his wife had not heard it.

Made Forced Landing

In a letter to Mrs. Sharps early this week, Lieutenant Sharps said he was taken prisoner when his plane made a forced landing after all four engines had been shot away. Two of the crew were killed, he wrote, and all the others injured except himself and his copilot.

Touching on details of life in a German prison camp, he said that he had recently made a "lucky trade" by exchanging his green gabardine shirt for a second-hand toothbrush.

"And at night," he wrote, "we while away the time playing cards under the light of a lamp made of pieces of suspenders for wicking and margarine for oil."

Lieutenant Sharps was reported missing after a raid over Brunswick, Germany, January 11, 1944.

Pro-Dewey Bloc Of 14 Georgians Wins in Chicago

JUN 23 1944

Bricker-Claimed Delegates From Mississippi Are Seated by Committee

CHICAGO, June 22 (AP).—A fourteen-member Georgia delegation

30.24 — 16469

leaded by Wilson Williams and nstructed to vote for Governor Thomas E. Dewey of New York was approved by the Republican National Committee today.

The committee, concluding hearings on contests for seats at the party's national convention opening here Monday, also voted to give places at the conclave to a six-member Mississippi delegation led by National Committeeman Perry W. Howard, uninstructed but claimed for Governor John W. Bricker of Ohio.

The Georgia group topped by National Committeeman Williams won a fight against a rival delegation dominated by Clint Hager, retiring state chairman, and Frank Doughman, an Atlanta attorney.

The Hager bloc was uninstructed but was believed to favor Mr. Dewey.

The conflicting claims were based on the fact that Georgia Republicans held two conventions and each selected a slate of delegates. Both Mr. Williams, whose delegation is divided between whites and Negroes, and Roscoe Pickett, of Jasper, counsel for the Hager group, contended their delegates were chosen in legal proceedings.

The committee decided to seat the Howard Mississippi delegation over the protests of spokesmen for a competing slate captained by George L. Sheldon, former Governor of Nebraska, and uncommitted on aspirants to the Presidential nomination.

Nelson Taylor, of Greenwood, who spoke for the Sheldon group, declared the leadership of the opposition was "not Republican but Democratic," and that Mr. Howard was not a "qualified elector" in Mississippi.

Mr. Howard rejoined that his opponents were "interlopers," that he was a qualified Mississippi voter, and that he had "made more Republican speeches than any man in the House."

The committee also voted to seat four delegates-at-large from Virginia on the slate topped by National Committeeman Henry A. Wise. The leader of the rival set, J. A. Garber, who was absent, telegraphed a request to postpone the hearing, but the case was closed without testimony from his side.

The Maryland case, with eight delegates-at-large named for the four seats and four 3d District (Baltimore) delegates chosen for two seats, was referred back to the delegation with instructions to certify "the proper number of delegates." The Marylanders wanted the committee to seat all claimants and give each a half vote.

Seats for the 3d District of Tennessee were awarded to Bethel Brown and O. T. Tindell jr., over their unsuccessful rivals, Sam J. McAllester and Walter White.

The losing factions in all disputes planned to put appeals before the convention credentials committee Monday, and the Maryland representatives decided to lay their problem before the same body.

The claims of four delegates-at-large from South Carolina led by Joseph W. Tolbert, dismissed on a technicality yesterday, were revived and referred to the credentials group. The Tolbert bloc is contesting the seating of four at-large delegates led by J. Bates Gerald.

LONDON, JUNE 22-(AP)-A SESSIONS JURY IN LONDON TODAY RULED IN EFFECT THAT POKER IS AN ILLEGAL GAME BECAUSE IT CONTAINS THE ELEMENT OF CHANCE.

JUN 23 1944

THE COURT IN CHARGING THE JURY SAID: "THE WHOLE THING DEPENDS ON WHETHER POKER IS A GAME OF MERE SKILL OR NOT. IT IS NOT A QUESTION OF WHETHER SKILL PREDOMINATES OVER CHANCE OR NOT."

THE DEFENSE IN SUMMATION HAD CALLED THE CASE A "TEST OF THE LEGALITY OF POKER, PLAYED IN THIS COUNTRY FOR MORE THAN 50 YEARS," AND SAID THE VERDICT WAS OF "VITAL IMPORTANCE TO ALL THOSE WHO ARE IN DANGER OF BEING DEPRIVED OF THAT LAWFUL RECREATION."

KEEPING THE ASSAULT GOING ON THE GERMANS' STILL ACTIVE ROCKET BOMB LAUNCHING BASES IN THE PAS DE CALAIS AREA OF FRANCE, RAF LANCASTERS AND HALIFAXES FOLLOWED AMERICAN LIBERATORS AND MEDIUM BOMBERS OVER THAT REGION YESTERDAY EVENING AND DELIVERED WHAT WAS OFFICIALLY DESCRIBED AS A "DEVASTATING" BLOW AT THE GERMAN INSTALLATIONS THERE.

JUN 23 1944

FORTY-SIX BOMBERS WERE MISSING FROM THE WIDESPREAD BRITISH OPERATIONS, WHICH INCLUDED MINE LAYING IN ENEMY WATERS.

THE GERMAN RADIO WARNED TODAY THAT ALLIED PLANES WERE OVER STYRIA--PERHAPS INDICATING THAT AMERICAN BOMBERS FROM ITALY WERE OUT.

THE DAYLIGHT RAID AGAINST BERLIN BY A FLEET OF MORE THAN 1,000 U.S. FLYING FORTRESSES AND LIBERATORS AND 1,200 ESCORTING FIGHTERS WAS THE GREATEST OF THE WAR AGAINST THE REICH CAPITAL. IT WAS DISCLOSED THAT SOME OF THE FIGHTERS AS WELL AS SOME OF THE HEAVY BOMBERS MADE THE SHUTTLE FLIGHT BETWEEN BRITAIN AND THE SOVIET UNION.

WHILE GERMAN FLYING BOMBS CONTINUED DRONING THROUGH ENGLISH SKIES OVERNIGHT, THE MOUNTING WEIGHT OF BOMBS DROPPED ON THE PAS DE CALAIS AREA INDICATED THE ALLIES WERE MAKING PROGRESS IN THEIR CAMPAIGN AGAINST THE LAUNCHING MECHANISMS FOR THESE PROJECTILES.

EAST OF THE BATTLE AREA BOMBING WAS CONCENTRATED ON THE DISRUPTED AND CHOKED RAILWAY AND HIGHWAY NETWORK OVER WHICH THE GERMANS ARE STRIVING TO PUSH REINFORCEMENTS. OVER AN AREA OF SEVERAL HUNDRED SQUARE MILES BRITISH AND AMERICAN FIGHTER-BOMBERS BATTERED BRIDGES, RAILROAD YARDS, TRACKS, TRAINS, BARGES AND OIL TANKS AT 20 DIFFERENT PLACES. AIR BASES AT ST.QUENTIN AND DREUX ALSO WERE HIT.

THE FIGHTERS WHICH ACCOMPANIED THE HEAVY BOMBERS MAKING THE SHUTTLE RAID ON BERLIN MAY OR MAY NOT HAVE SET A DISTANCE RECORD DEPENDING ON HOW FAR BEYOND THE RUSSIAN BORDER THE BASES INTHE SOVIET UNION LIE.

THE BORDER ITSELF IS SOME 900 MILES FROM BRITAIN. AMERICAN FIGHTERS HAVE GONE SEVERAL HUNDRED MILES FURTHER THAN THAT ON ROUND TRIPS ESCORTING BOMBERS TO BERLIN AND TARGETS FARTHER EAST IN GERMANY.

OPENING OF THE NEW BRITAIN TO RUSSIA SHUTTLE ROUTE BROUGHT WITH IT THE PROSPECT OF STILL GREATER RAIDS AGAINST GERMANY.

A SHUTTLE OPERATION ALREADY HAS BEEN ESTABLISHED BETWEEN THE U.S.S.R. AND ALLIED BASES IN ITALY, AND THE NEW USE OF EASTERN BASES BY BRITISH-BASED AIRCRAFT MULTIPLIES THE POSSIBILITIES FOR BEWILDERING, COORDINATED AIR ATTACKS AGAINST THE REICH.

THE RUSSIAN TERMINAL ALSO WILL GIVE ADDITIONAL HELP IN BEATING THE WEATHER'S INTERMITTENT INTERRUPTION OF OPERATIONS. ATTACKING FORCES OPERATING FROM BRITISH, MEDITERRANEAN AND RUSSIAN BASES CAN COVER VIRTUALLY ALL OF GERMANY AND MOST OF ITS OCCUPIED TERRITORY.

THE RAID YESTERDAY WAS THE AMERICANS' TWELFTH ON BERLIN. IT COST 43 U.S. BOMBERS AND 15 FIGHTERS. FORTY-NINE GERMAN FIGHTERS WERE KNOCKED DOWN, 20 BY THE FIGHTERS AND 29 BY THE BOMBERS' GUNS.

30.24— 16473

THE ATTACKING FLEET BOMBED AN AIRCRAFT ENGINE FACTORY IN THE BERLIN SUBURB OF BASDORF, THE BERLIN RAILROAD YARDS AND FACTORIES. ALTHOUGH THERE WERE SOME CLOUDS, MOST COMBAT WINGS BOMBED VISUALLY AND REPORTED GOOD RESULTS.

WHILE BERLIN WAS ROCKING TO THIS BLOW, U.S. LIBERATORS HEADED A STREAM OF PLANES IN THE ROUND-THE-CLOCK BOMBARDMENT OF THE GERMANS' ROCKET BOMB LAUNCHING POINTS IN THE PAS DE CALAIS AREA OF FRANCE.

BRITAIN'S BIG LANCASTERS AND HALIFAXES, WHICH USUALLY DO THEIR BOMBING AT NIGHT, FLEW THEIR FOURTH DAYLIGHT MISSION SINCE D-DAY, KEEPING UP THE ASSAULT AGAINST THE ROCKET BASES. THEY JOINED THE PROCESSION AFTER THE LIBERATORS AND MEDIUM BOMBERS HAD UNLOADED THEIR BOMBS AND RETURNED TO BASE.

A REPORT FROM THE RAF SAID SOME ROCKET LAUNCHING SITES ON THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA HAD BEEN CAPTURED INTACT, GIVING ALLIED SCIENTISTS A CHANCE TO DEVELOP NEWER METHODS OF COMBATTING THE JET-PROPELLED EXPLOSIVES WHICH HAVE BEEN HURLED AT SOUTHERN ENGLAND FOR A WEEK.

COUNTLESS MISSIONS WERE FLOWN THROUGHOUT THE DAY YESTERDAY BY ALLIED AIRMEN GIVING DIRECT SUPPORT TO THE NORMANDY INVASION. GERMAN TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS WERE HIT AND THE PILOTS WENT AFTER "TARGETS OF OPPORTUNITY."

IT WAS REVEALED THAT AMERICAN THUNDERBOLT FIGHTER PLANES NOW BASED IN FRANCE ARE EQUIPPED TO CARRY 2,000 POUNDS OF BOMBS ACROSS THE FRONT LINES IN SHORT-RANGE OPERATIONS SUPPORTING THE GROUND TROOPS.

AUXILIARY FUEL TANKS ARE UNNECESSARY ON THUNDERBOLTS CONDUCTING SHORT MISSIONS FROM ADVANCED LANDING GROUNDS ON THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA. IN PLACE OF THESE TANKS THE THUNDERBOLTS CARRY A 1,000-POUND BOMB UNDERNEACH WING.

SOME OF THE U.S. EIGHTH AIR FORCE FIGHTERS WHICH CONVOYED THE HEAVY BOMBERS TO BERLIN IMPROVED THEIR TIME EN ROUTE BACK TO BRITAIN BY STRAFING ENEMY AIRDROMES AND COMMUNICATIONS. ONLY ONE OR TWO BOMBER GROUPS SAW ANY ENEMY PLANES DURING THE BERLIN RAID AND THESE WERE MAINLY JUNKERS-88'S.

ONE MUSTANG GROUP REPORTED SHOOTING DOWN EIGHT GERMAN PLANES WHILE LOSING ONLY ONE. MOST OF THE AMERICAN LOSSES WERE THE RESULT OF HEAVY ANTI-AIRCRAFT FIRE PUT UP BY THE GERMANS.

AMERICAN BOMBERS IN TODAY'S FIRST ATTACK ON THE PAS-DE-CALAIS AREA, NUMBERING UP TO 250 PLANES, REPORTED HEAVY ANTI-AIRCRAFT FIRE BUT STILL NO GERMAN FIGHTERS OVER FRANCE, ALTHOUGH RAF HEAVIES ENCOUNTERED MANY OVER GERMANY LAST NIGHT.

"WE SAW MORE FLAK TODAY THAN WE'VE EVER SEEN BEFORE," SAID LIBERATOR PILOT LIEUT.WILLIAM SANDBLOM, OF MILTON,MASS. GUNNER SERGEANT ALBERT HINKLE, OF LYONS,O., AGREED THAT "THE FLAK WAS THE WORST I'VE EVER SEEN."

ATTACK FIGHTERS AND FIGHTER-BOMBERS CAME LANCING OUT OF THE SUN TO START TODAY'S ASSAULT. THEY DUMPED THEIR BOMBS AND THEN RACED ACROSS THE HEDGEROWS WITH THEIR MACHINE-GUNS RAKING THE GROUND.

BEHIND THE FIGHTERS 80 MINUTES LATER THUNDERED WAVES OF MEDIUM BOMBERS, THEIR MOTORS THROBBING UNTIL IT SEEMED THE GROUND SHOOK. THEIR BOMBS SHOWERED ON THE ENEMY STRONGHOLDS WITH SOLID THUDS.

I WENT FORWARD WITH JOHN THOMPSON OF THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE TO WITNESS THE BOMBING. WE PARKED OUR JEEP ON A DIRT ROAD NEAR THE FRONT AND THEN WALKED ACROSS THE FIELDS AND SCRAMBLED OVER HEDGEROWS TO REACH THE TOP OF A RIDGE OVERLOOKING THE GERMAN LINES.

BUT THE CRACKLE OF MACHINE-GUN FIRE AND THE THUNDER OF DIVING PLANES DROVE US TO COVER BEHIND AN EMBANKMENT. THE SKY WAS ALIVE WITH SILVERY PLANES SHOOTING OUT OF THE SUN. THEY WERE HITTING THEIR TARGETS BUT WHEN ONE OVERSHOT THE BOMBS EXPLODED UNCOMFORTABLY CLOSE, AND THEIR MACHINE-GUNS CRACKLED AS THEY ROARED OVERHEAD AT NOT MORE THAN 50 FEET ABOVE GROUND.

ON AMERICAN SECTOR OF ALLIED FRONT IN NORMANDY, JUNE 22--I DROVE AT DAWN THIS MORNING TO ITHIN 6,000 YARDS OF BESIEGED CHERBOURG. A PALE YELLOW SUN WAS JUST PEEPING THROUGH THICK GREY CLOUDS AS OUR JEEP SCUTTLED ALONG THE SILENT ROAD, LEAVING A CLOUD OF DUST IN ITS TRAIL.

THE WAR SEEMED TO BE AT A STANDSTILL UNTIL WE DREW NEAR TO CHERBOURG AND HEARD THE BOOM OF HEAVY ARTILLERY.

A CAMP-FULL OF GERMAN PRISONERS WAS JUST WAKING UP IN BACK OF THE LINE. A COUPLE OF HUNDRED GREY-CLAD PRISONERS WERE HUDDLED TOGETHER, TWO BY TWO, UNDER AN ARMY BLANKET. THEY WERE DISHEVELED AND DIRTY, BUT THEIR EYES LIT UP AS THEY OPENED THE CANS OF AMERICAN ARMY RATIONS THEY GOT FOR BREAKFAST. ALTHOUGH LIGHTLY GUARDED WITHIN A BARBED-WIRE BULLPEN, THEY OBVIOUSLY HAD NO DESIRE TO ESCAPE.

I WATCHED THEM AS THEY DEVOURED THE AMERICAN CANNED MEAT RAVENOUSLY. ONE GERMAN LOOKED SUSPICIOUSLY AT A STICK OF AMERICAN GUM THAT HE FOUND IN HIS RATIONS. HIS BUDDY POINTED AT HIS MOUTH. THE OTHER GERMAN PUT THE GUM IN HIS MOUTH WITH GREAT CAUTION, BUT THEN HE NODDED HAPPILY.

MY POLISH-AMERICAN DRIVER SPOKE A FEW WORDS TO ONE OF THE PRISONERS, THEN HE TURNED TO ME AND SAID, "THAT GUY SAID IT WAS THE BEST FOOD HE TASTED IN FIVE YEARS."

UP AT THE FRONT, DOUGHBOYS WERE ASLEEP IN DITCHES, ROLLED UP IN A SINGLE BLANKET. ALTHOUGH THE GUNS WERE NOW BELLOWING VICIOUSLY, THE MEN SLEPT ON, DEAD TIRED FROM THE NIGHT'S FIGHTING, BUT THEY AWOKE AT THE SOUND OF MY FOOTSTEPS AND POINTED TO A CAMOUFLAGED TENT OF THE COMMAND POST.

A RED-HAIRED LIEUTENANT COLONEL, UNSHAVEN AND WITH EYES BLOODSHOT FROM LACK OF SLEEP, POINTED AT HIS MAP. "THIS IS REAL SECOND FRONT STUFF," HE SAID. "IT MAY BE AS BAD AS THE FIRST ASSAULT. WE'LL JUST HAVE TO BLAST A WAY THROUGH IT."

WE TURNED THE JEEP AROUND TO MAKE A LONG TRIP BACK TO THIS ARMY TRANSMITTER AND ON THE WAY I LOOKED AT A HALF-FINISHED LAUNCHING RAMP FOR THE FLYING BOMBS THAT ARE AIMED AT ENGLAND. ALL I CAN SAY IS THAT EACH OF THESE LAUNCHING RAMPS IS AN EXPENSIVE PROJECT. IF THEY ARE DESTROYED THEY CANNOT BE REBUILT IN A DAY OR A WEEK. RAILROAD SPUR LINES ARE NEEDED TO BRING IN THE TONS OF CONCRETE AND HUNDREDS OF MAN HOURS ARE REQUIRED TO CONSTRUCT THE DEEP UNDERGROUND SHELTERS.

AND THAT'S THE ROAD TO CHERBOURG AND WE MAY BE FURTHER ALONG THAT ROAD BEFORE I BROADCAST AGAIN.

ANTI-LOUSE POWDER.

EXTRA OXYGEN WAS CARRIED FOR THE TIRING 11-HOUR FLIGHT, AND THE CREWS PLANNED TO BE "ON OXYGEN" FOR SEVEN HOURS.

EACH CREW TOOK ALONG ONE CASE OF K RATIONS AND TWO OF C RATIONS, PLUS SEVEN GALLONS OF DRINKING WATER AND EXTRA RATIONS OF CIGARETTES, CANDY, GUM AND COOKIES.

THE FORTRESSES WERE READY FOR THEIR 5 A.M. TAKEOFF, ALTHOUGH A NUMBER HAD BEEN SHOT UP IN THE RAID ON MAGDEBURG THE DAY BEFORE.

"WE WERE HIT HARDER AT MAGDEBURG THAN ON ANY RAID IN THE PAST THREE MONTHS," SAID CAPT. GLENN STONE, 3730 KERSHAW BLVD., TOLEDO, OHIO, WHO AS ENGINEERING OFFICER HAD THE JOB OF PATCHING UP THE PLANES QUICKLY.

LT.GEORGE CLARK, 2190 UNION AVE., MEMPHIS, TENN., MAP OFFICER AND FORMER ADVERTISING MAN FOR THE MEMPHIS COMMERCIAL-APPEAL, PASSED OUT THE LATEST MAPS OF THE RUSSIAN BATTLE LINE SO THE FLIERS COULD AIM FOR RUSSIAN TERRITORY IF FORCED DOWN.

GROUND CREW CHIEFS AND OTHER EXPERTS MADE THE TRIP TO HANDLE ALL PHASES OF THE HUGE OPERATION. THUS, THE FORTRESSES DEPARTED AS A COMPLETELY SELF-SUFFICIENT FORCE READY TO CONDUCT MISSIONS FROM THEIR RUSSIAN BASES BEFORE RETURNING.

OFFICERS IN CHARGE HAD PROFITED FROM THE EXPERIENCE GAINED IN THE REGENSBURG SHUTTLE RAID BETWEEN BRITAIN AND NORTH AFRICA.

MOSCOW, JUNE 22-(AP)-TAKING NOTE OF THE THIRD ANNIVERSARY OF THE GERMAN ATTACK ON RUSSIA, THE SOVIET INFORMATION BUREAU SAID TODAY IN A REVIEW OF THE WAR ON THE EASTERN FRONT THAT MORE THAN 7,800,000 GERMANS HAVE BEEN KILLED OR CAPTURED, COMPARED WITH 5,300,000 RUSSIANS KILLED, MISSING OR CAPTURED.

THE REVIEW DECLARED THAT "A CONSIDERABLE CONTRIBUTION TO THE SUCCESS OF THE RED ARMY WAS MADE BY OUR ALLIES, THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND GREAT BRITAIN, WHO SUPPLIED US WITH VERY VALUABLE STRATEGIC RAW MATERIALS AND SUBJECTED GERMANY'S MILITARY OBJECTIVES TO SYSTEMATIC BOMBING, AND THEREBY UNDERMINED GERMANY'S MILITARY MIGHT."

THE BUREAU ASSERTED THE GERMANS HAD LOST 70,000 TANKS, 60,000 AIRPLANES AND MORE THAN 90,000 PIECES OF ARTILLERY, AS AGAINST RUSSIAN LOSSES OF 49,000 TANKS, 30,128 AIRPLANES AND 48,000 GUNS.

WITH THE FIFTH AR IN ITALY, JUNE 22-(AP)-THERE HAS BEEN SO LITTLE ENEMY AIR ACTIVITY IN THE ITALIAN CAMPAIGN THAT SOME AMERICAN ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS NOW ARE BEING USED AS FIELD ARTILLERY. JUN 23 1944

ONE SUCH OUTFIT, CONVERTED SEVERAL WEEKS AGO, IS SUPPORTING AMERIICAN TANKS AND FRENCH INFANTRY DRIVING UP HIGHWAY 2--THE ROME-SIENNA ROAD---AND HAS BEEN FOUND TO BE A HANDY WEAPON.

THIS TYPE OF GUN IS FIRING AT ANTI-AIRCRAFT AND ANTI-TANK GUN POSITIONS AND MACHINE-GUN NESTS SPOSTTED UP TO 19,000 YARDS AWAY.

"WHEN OUR PLANES ARE PASSING OVER GERMAN GUN POSITIONS," SAID CPL. JOHN SUAREZ, 1631 TULANE AVE., NEW ORLEANS, LA., "WE SEND SEVERAL ROUNDS INTO THE POSITIONS TO KEEP THEM FROM FIRING AT THE PLANES."

FIFTH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, ITALY, JUNE 21-(DELAYED)-(AP)-CASUALTIES INFLICTED UPON THE GERMANS DURING THE PAST 41 DAYS OF THE ALLIED OFFENSIVE IN ITALY WERE ESTIMATED UNOFFICIALLY TODAY TO TOTAL BETWEEN 80,000 AND 100,000 KILLED, WOUNDED AND CAPTURED.

THIS ESTIMATE WAS BASED ON THE KNOWN NUMBER OF NAZIS CAPTURED--NOW MORE THAN 27,000--AND THE USUAL MILITARY "RULE OF THUMB" THAT FOR EACH ENEMY SOLDIER TAKEN PRISONER ONE IS USUALLY KILLED AND ONE OR TWO WOUNDED.

THE ALLIED OFFENSIVE IN ITALY IS NOT ONLY TAKING A BIG TOLL OF NAZI SOLDIERS, BUT IS CAUSING THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND TO RUSH NEW DIVISIONS INTO THE BATTLE. JUN 23 1944

SINCE THE FIFTH ARMY SWEPT THROUGH ROME, ELEMENTS OF AT LEAST FOUR NEW GERMAN DIVISIONS HAVE BEEN SPEEDED TO ITALY--NOT ONLY FROM NORTHERN ITALY BUT FROM OTHER PARTS OF EUROPE, INCLUDING THE WESTERN FRONT AREAS.

OF THESE DIVISIONS NWO WERE LUFTWAFFE OUTFITS--THE 20TH FROM DENMARK AND THE 19TH FROM BELGIUM. THE 16TH STORM TROOPERS WERE BROUGHT FROM THE BALKANS, THE 162ND TURKOMAN, MADE UP LARGELY OF MONGOLIANS, AND TURKOMEN CAMZ FROM FLORENCE.

THE TURKOMAN DIVISION IS ALREADY VIRTUALLY SMASHED. ONE DOUGHBOY OUTFIT ALONE HAS TAKEN 1,200 PRISONERS, OF WHOM NEARLY 800 WERE NON-GERMANS.

ARRIVAL OF THESE GROUPS BRINGS TO AT LEAST 25 THE GERMAN DIVISIONS IN ITALY.

THE TOTAL OF CASUALTIES ESTIMATED REPRESSNTS BETWEEN 10 AND 13 DIVISIONS AS CONSTITUTED NOW.

JUN 23 1944

WITH SIXTH ARMY FORCES ON BIAK ISLAND, JUNE 18-(DELAYED)-(AP)-THE RIDGE WAS LITTERED WITH JAPANESE DEAD. IN THE VALLEY BEYOND, BURSTING SMOKE BOMBS LAID A CANOPY OVER SOME OF THE HEAVIEST FIGHTING OF THE BIAK CAMPAIGN.

IT REQUIRED FOUR DAYS AND NIGHTS OF BATTLE FOR YANK INFANTRYMEN TO CLEAR THE HEAVILY-FORESTED HILLOCK. YARD BY YARD, VETERAN TROOPS, LARGELY FROM THE PACIFIC NORTHWEST, REDUCED PILLBOXES, ROOTED OUT SNIPERS, SCATTERED SUICIDE BANDS OF COUNTERATTACKING JAPANESE WITH THE FLIP OF GRENADES AND THE RATTLE OF MACHINEGUNS.

THUS THE DECISIVE BATTLE FOR MOKMER AIRDROME WAS WON.

THE HEIGHTS OVERLOOKING MOKMER WERE DUBBED "DEATH RIDGE" BY THE MEN WHO SECURED IT.

"THAT'S WHERE OUR TANKS AND MORTARS LAID DOWN A BARRAGE YESTERDAY," SAID CAPT.ALLAN BACHE, GAINESVILLE,FLA., WHOSE TROOPS HAD MOVED FORWARD UNDER PROTECTIVE COVER.

FIVE ENEMY COAST ARTILLERY GUNS -- BIG SIX-INCH FIELD PIECES WITH 15-FOOT BARRELS--WERE SILENCED AT THIS POINT DAYS EARLIER, BUT THE ENEMY INSTALLED MOUNTAIN GUNS AND KNEE MORTARS. THESE IN TURN WERE KNOCKED OUT. THE LAST JAPANESE DEFENDERS RAN OUT THIS MORNING.

"THEY WERE WEARING WATERPROOF CAPES," SAID TECH.SGT.ROBERT MILLER, PORTLAND,ORE.

"WHEN THEY RUSHED DOWN THE HILLSIDE THEY LOOKED LIKE BATS."

TWENTY-FIVE HOODED JAPANESE ATTEMPTED A SUICIDE CHARGE ON A MACHINEGUN POSITION COMMANDED BY CAPT.JAMES KINDT, SAN FRANCISCO. QUICKLY THEY WERE ELIMINATED. DOZENS MORE MET THE SAME FATE ALONG THE RIDGE.

THE TROOPS RELAXED. PRIVATES FELIX KORNACKI, PHILADELPHIA, AND GEORGE PARE, WASHINGTON,D.C., LAY ON THEIR BACKS IN A SLIT TRENCH SMOKING CIGARETTES.

"WE'VE BEEN DUCKING SO MUCH WE MIGHT JUST AS WELL STAY DOWN FOR A WHILE," THEY SAID.

A FEW MINUTES LATER, A 90 MM. MORTAR SHELL EXPLODED 25 FEET FROM US. TWO MEN WERE WOUNDED.

THE MORTAR WAS FIRED FROM THE FLATLANDS WHERE A YANK ASSAULT BATTALION ATTEMPTED TO SQUEEZE THE ENEMY AGAINST THREE LIMESTONE CAVES. THE JAPANESE HAD FAVORABLE CROSSFIRE, THOUGH, AND FORCED THE BATTALION TO WITHDRAW UNDER SMOKE. FIVE SHERMAN TANKS LAID DOWN A FURIOUS ROLL OF MACHINEGUN FIRE WHILE THE WITHDRAWAL TOOK PLACE.

WITH SIXTH ARMY FORCES ON BIAK ISLAND (OFF NORTH DUTCH NEW GUINEA) JUNE 19-(DELAYED)-(AP)-THE COMMANDER OF A SHERMAN TANK, ASKED WHAT HE THINKS OF THE ENEMY'S TANK OPPOSITION, REMARKED TODAY:

"THOSE NIPS ARE GLUTTONS FOR PUNISHMENT."

THE 30-TON SHERMANS HAVE BEEN IN THE THICK OF THE BIAK FIGHT SINCE ITS INCEPTION AND HAVE ACCOUNTED FOR MORE THAN A DOZEN OF THE ENEMY'S LIGHTER, FLIMSILY ARMORED VEHICLES.

IN A SINGLE ENGAGEMENT, TWO YANK TANKS NAMED "MURDER, INC.," AND "MASSACRE LADY," DISPOSED OF SEVEN ENEMY TANKS. THE NIP MACHINES PROVED EXCEEDINGLY VULNERABLE TO ARMOR-PIERCING 75S. THEIR OWN 37 MM. SHELLS BOUNCED OFF THE SHERMANS' TOUGH HIDE SAVE FOR ONE LUCKY HIT.

SINCE ONE BIG FIGHT, THE ENEMY HAS MADE EVERY EFFORT TO AVOID A HEADON CLASH.

TECH.SGT.CECIL WADDLEY, TULSA, OKLA., COMMANDING "MURDER, INC.," AND STAFF SGT.RAYMOND MCNEES (ADDRESS NOT GIVEN) DIRECTING "MASSACRE LADY," MET TWO WAVES OF ENEMY TANKS ROLLING DOWN UPON MOKMER VILLAGE TO ATTACK AMERICAN INFANTRY ON THE THIRD DAY OF THE INVASION.

TECH. SGT. HAROLD SMITH, CHICAGO, TRAINED HIS BIG GUN ON THE FIRST NIP. SMITH'S DRIVER, LAUREL FERRIS, ANOTHER CHICAGO BOY, MANEUVERED WITHIN 200 YARDS.

"OUR ARMOR-PIERCING SHELLS PLOUGHED THROUGH THAT JAP TANK LIKE IT WAS CHEESEBOX," SMITH SAID.

"MASSACRE LADY" CAUGHT ANOTHER DIPPING OVER THE BROW OF A HILL. THE ENEMY CREW TRIED TO CLIMB OUT. MCNEES BLEW THE TURRET OUT FROM UNDER THEM. ALL TOLD, WADDLEY'S TANK GOT FOUR NIP TANKS AND MCNEES' THREE.

IN ANOTHER ENCOUNTER, STAFF SGT.WALLACE EARLE, NEW ULM, MINN., COMMANDING "SNAFU," AND CPL. WILLIAM BERNARD, WICHITA, KAS., IN "SAD SACK," CLOSED ON THREE NIP TANKS ADVANCING IN A LINE ABREAST. "SNAFU" SET ONE AFIRE. "SAD SACK" DESTROYED A SECOND AND DAMAGED A THIRD.

TANKS HAVE BEEN PUT TO AN ODD VARIETY OF USES IN THE FIGHTING HERE. ONCE "SNAFU," "MASSACRE LADY" AND "MONTEREY," WERE LOADED ON LANDING CRAFT AND FLOATED PAST JAP CAVES ALONG A COASTAL ROAD TO THE MOKMER AIRDROME, FIRING AS THEY PASSED. THIS MANEUVER WAS REPEATED THREE TIMES.

TWO U.S.CARRIERS AND ONE BATTLESHIP SUFFERED "SUPERFICIAL DAMAGE" AND 21 AIRCRAFT WERE LOST IN COMBAT. A FLEET SPOKESMAN SAID SUPERFICIAL DAMAGE MEANS THE SHIP'S CAPACITY FOR BATTLE WAS NOT IMPAIRED, INDICATING THESE THREE PROBABLY PARTICIPATED IN MONDAY'S ACTION.

THE ATTACK OF THE FIFTH FLEET UNDER COMMAND OF ADM. RAYMOND A. SPRUANCE WAS SUCH A COMPLETE SURPRISE THAT THE JAPANESE APPARENTLY MADE NO COUNTER ATTACK AGAINST ANY OF OUR SURFACE UNITS.

ADMIRAL NIMITZ, WHO STAYED AT HIS HEADQUARTERS PAST MIDNIGHT RECEIVING BATTLE REPORTS AND STILL APPEARED BRIGHT EYED DESPITE HIS 60 YEARS, SAID THE JAPANESE FORCE CONSISTED OF FOUR OR MORE BATTLESHIPS, FIVE OR SIX CARRIERS, FIVE FLEET TANKERS AND UNSPECIFIED NUMBER OF CRUISERS AND DESTROYERS.

"ONE CARRIER, BELIEVED TO BE THE ZUIKAKU (17,000 TONS) RECEIVED THREE 1,000 POUND BOMB HITS.

"ONE HAYATAKA CLASS CARRIER WAS SUNK)

"ONE HAYATAKA CLASS CARRIER WAS SEVERELY DAMAGED AND LEFT BURNING FURIOUSLY.

"ONE LIGHT CARRIER (PROBABLY AROUND 10,000 TONS) ZUIHO TAIHO CLASS RECEIVED AT LEAST ONE BOMB HIT.

"ONE CRUISER WAS DAMAGED"

"THREE DESTROYERS WERE DAMAGED, ONE OF WHICH IS BELIEVED TO HAVE SUNK.

"THREE TANKERS WERE SUNK.

"TWO TANKERS WERE SEVERELY DAMAGED AND LEFT BURNING.

"FIFTEEN TO 20 DEFENDING AIRCRAFT WERE SHOT DOWN."

THE CARRIER ZUIKAKU IS LISTED IN JANE'S FIGHTING SHIPS AS DISPLACING 20,000 TONS AND CARRYING 60 AIRCRAFT, MOUNTING 12 FIVE-INC ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS. HER SPEED IS OVER 30 KNOTS, HER LENGTH MORE THAN 800 FEET. SHE WAS LAID DOWN IN DECEMBER, 1938 AND COMPLETED IN 1941.

THE HAYATAKA CLASS CARRIERS ARE LISTED AS "RUMORED TO EXIST." JANE'S SUGGESTED THAT THIS CLASS MAY BE CONVERTED MERCHANT VESSELS.

THE KONGO CLASS BATTLESHIPS WERE LAID DOWN IN 1912 AND 1913. THEY INCLUDE THE KONGO, HIEI, HARUNA AND KIRISIMA, EACH HAVING A NORM COMPLEMENT OF 980 MEN. THEY ARE ARMED WITH EIGHT 14-INCH GUNS WITH 14 MILE RANGES, 16 SIX-INCH GUNS, EIGHT FIVE-INCH ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS, OTHER LESSER ARMAMENT AND 21-INCH TORPEDO TUBES. THE HARUNA WAS THE BATTLESHIP ATTACKED BY THE CAPT.COLIN KELLY OFF THE PHILIPPINES IN THE OPENING DAYS OF THE WAR.

BY ALL OFFICIAL ACCOUNTS, THE FIFTH -- JUST ONE OF AT LEAST FOUR U.S. FLEETS PROWLING THE PACIFIC -- WAS READY. IT REMAINED TO BE DETERMINED IF THE ENEMY, REPORTEDLY MASSING HIS ENTIRE FLEET, WAS WILLING.

"IN THE AFTERNOON OF JUNE 19 (WEST LONGITUDE-U.S. DATE), CARRIER-BASED RECONNAISSANCE PLANES OF THE FIFTH FLEET SIGHTED A JAPANESE FLEET, WHICH INCLUDED CARRIERS AND BATTLESHIPS, APPROXIMATELY MIDWAY BETWEEN THE MARIANAS ISLANDS AND LUZON (PHILIPPINES)," A COMMUNIQUE OF ADM. CHESTER W.NIMITZ STATED.

"AIRCRAFT OF OUR FAST CARRIER TASK FORCE (REMBERT JAMES, AP WAR CORRESPONDENT, SAID MORE THAN 1,000 PLANES WERE AVAILABLE) WERE IMMEDIATELY ORDERED TO ATTACK AND MADE CONTACT WITH THE ENEMY FLEET BEFORE DUSK. ENEMY LOSSES AND OUR OWN LOSSES HAVE NOT YET BEEN ASSESSED."

THE MAJOR POINT LEFT UNANSWERED FOR THE MOMENT WAS WHETHER THE JAPANESE FLEET WAS MOVING EAST TOWARD THE MARIANAS, WHERE THE FIFTH IS SUPPORTING A PROGRESSIVE YANK INVASION OF SAIPAN, OR WAS WAITING FOR THE AMERICANS TO CLOSE THE GAP.

THE RIVAL FLEETS, SO MAMMOTH THEY ARE CAPABLE OF FIGHTING HISTORY'S GREATEST NAVAL ENGAGEMENT, HAVE EXCHANGE CARRIER PLANE BLOWS REMINISCENT OF THE UNITED STATES VICTORY AT MIDWAY IN JUNE, 1942.

RUSSIANS STRIKE ON TWO SIDES OF FORTIFIED CITY

LANDSTROM

Hundreds of Guns, Mortars Batter Nazis as Reds Launch Offensive.

BREAK THROUGH LINES

JUN 29

'Enormous Losses' Inflicted on Enemy; Battle Continues in Finland.

LONDON, Saturday, June 24—(AP) The Red army crashed into German lines on two sides of the fortified city of Vitebsk in White Russia yesterday, opening the long-expected Soviet Summer offensive, and early today Moscow announced that "enormous losses" had been inflicted on the enemy.

The westward onslaught, which the German radio said actually opened on Thursday, third anniversary of the Nazis' declaration of war against Russia, was on a mighty scale with artillery and aircraft joining in hours of terrific bombardment before the infantry started forward "in the wake of a wall of fire," a supplement to the Russian communique stated.

NIGHT

Liberate 150 Localities

The Red troops struck northwest and southeast of Vitebsk, near the center of the 2,000-mile long eastern front, and in the first day gained nearly ten miles and liberated more than 150 localities.

Carving swiftly through enemy defenses, the twin offensive cut the last railway line connecting German troops at Vitebsk with the rear and battered German fortified positions into a tangle of debris.

Hundreds of Russian guns of all calibre and mortars kept up a continuous fire against the Nazis and the supplement said that enemy firing positions not wrecked by this steady barrage were soon wiped out as the infantry broke through the German lines.

"The enemy is suffering enormous losses. German trenches and battlefields are littered with Hitlerite corpses, smashed equipment and material. Our troops captured booty and prisoners," the supplement broadcast early today said.

Finnish Attacks Continue

The Russians' new drive, along the Smolensk-Orsha road which Napoleon traversed more than 100 years ago, did not diminish the firece fighting on the Finnish fronts and the supplement said that Red troops continued to swarm across the Svir river between Lakes Ladoga and Onezhskoe (Onega) as well as to advance north of Viipuri at the top of the Karelian isthmus.

From the sector north of Lake Onezhskoe to the area northwest of Tarnapol, the Russians appeared to be pressing at least eight attacks. Besides those in the Vitebsk region and against the Finns, Moscow and Berlin mentioned assaults in the Pskov-Ostrov sector, on the Mogilev district, northwestward from the Pripyat marshes towards Pinsk and finally on a line pointed toward Lwow in old Poland.

The German radio said early today that Nazi combat planes had intervened in the "bitter fighting at many points on the Karelian isthmus and smashed repeated Soviet attempts to break through."

The broadcast said also that Finnish fighter planes had attacked Russian shipping on Lake Ladoga and sunk two large ships and several small ones and that the Finns had shot down eight Soviet planes.

Moscow, in the communique supplement, said Soviet torpedo planes sank three enemy tranports totaling 12,000 tons in the Baltic sea Wednesday night.

In a series of broadcasts the Germans said there were at least four major areas of attack along a 240-mile front on both sides of the Vitebsk hinge position, and left no doubt that they regarded the Russian drive as the long-expected big offensive from the east.

List Many Gains

The nightly Moscow communique, recorded in London by the Soviet monitor, announced that "during June 23 northwest and southeast of Vitebsk our troops, supported by massed blows from artillery and aviation, went over to the offensive against the German Fascist troops," and listed these immediate gains through heavy enemy fortifications:

Seven and one-half to nine and one-half miles on a 19-mile-wide front northwest of Vitebsk, with more than 100 towns taken; and gains of five to six miles on a 16-mile-wide front southeast of Vitebsk, with more than 50 towns freed.

The railways between Vitebsk and Orsha, 50 miles to the south, has been cut with capture of Zamostoche, 14 miles south of Vitebsk, and two railway stations on the Vitebsk-Polotsk line to the northwest are among the captured places, including the large one of Sirotino, 27 miles northwest of Vitebsk.

The White Russian front, possibly the most important of any on the east so far as defense of the Nazi Reich itself is concerned, has been quiet since February, following a strong winter offensive which carried the Russians to but not through the defensive positions which the Nazis frankly call the "bolt" of their eastern door.

The chief military correspondent of the German propaganda agency DNB declared in a broadcast late Friday night:

"Now we are face to face with the beginning of a concentric general attack on Europe.

Name Objective

"The first objective of the Soviet operation, launched on the third anniversary of the war, is to split the German southern and northern fronts by breaking through toward the Baltic states and getting a grip on this densely-knit traffic network."

A Berlin military spokesman said the Russians struck along the upper reaches of the Dnepr river south of Mogilev; along the Vitebsk-Orsha highway; in a "focal area" north of Sirotino; in the area of Novorzhev, 125 miles northwest of Vitebsk; and in the region of Ostrov, which is 40 miles still farther northwest.

The Russian communique did not portray such a widespread front, confining itself to the immediate regions on both sides of Vitebsk. The German accounts, however, said the Russians were making protective offensives farther away, and agreed with the Russians on the locale of the main blows.

The German spokesman said the attacks began Thursday afternoon in battalion strength and gradually increased in scope and ferocity, and that by Friday morning the Russians were employing hundreds of planes and tanks in support of the onslaught.

In most broadcasts the Germans made their usual concluding statement that "all attacks have been repulsed," but one commentator admitted the Russians had "succeeded in achieving a dent on the Obol river," northwest of Vitebsk and that fighting was still in full sway there Friday.

Vitebsk Status Not Clear

The status of Vitebsk itself was not clear, but apparently the Russians chose to spear past it on both sides in a familiar maneuver which has brought them tremendous success in previous offensives.

They reached to the outskirts of the city last winter, and on February 25 the Germans broadcast that the Nazi garrison had abandoned the place, but this never was confirmed either by the Russian or German high commands.

Jean Paquis, commentator on the Nazi-controlled Paris radio, said "the Soviet high command timed the summer offensive to start on the third anniversary of the outbreak of the German-Russian war with the intention of setting its armies in motion on the road to Berlin."

REDS LAUNCH TWO-PRONGED VITEBSK DRIVE

CASSIDY

Summer Offensive Aimed At Nazis' Strongest Base In Russia

JUN 23 194

Moscow, June 23 (AP)—The Red army lashed out today in a major summer offensive aimed at Vitebsk, the Germans' strongest fortified base in Russia.

After powerful artillery and aviation preparation, the Soviet communique announced, the Red army struck northwest and southeast of the partly encircled White Russian city.

Forces northwest of Vitebsk broke a 19-mile-wide gap in the German lines and advanced 7½ to 9½ miles, the communique said, while units southeast of Vitebsk made a 15-mile breach and advanced five to six miles.

Starts With Unusual Success

The offensive, which started with unusual success for an initial assault against such strong positions, scooped up more than 100 points northwest of Vitebsk and more tnan 50 southeast of the city.

The railway running south from Vitebsk to Orsha was reported cut. this road previously had been cut last winter but the Germans freed it temporarily by local counter-attacks.

The only other important communications line left to the German garrison at Vitebsk was the railroad northwest of Polotsk, and this was severed by capture of Shumilino, 25 miles northwest of Vitebsk.

The Russians now have the task of battering down a series of lines of steel and concrete fortifications which the Germans raised since early in the war around Vitebsk, now their closest point to Moscow.

Paralyzing Blow At Outset

A paralyzing blow was delivered to the defenders of Vitebsk at the start of the drive by the cutting of the Vitebsk-Polotsk railroad and the Vitebsk-Orsha highway.

Overcoming the Vitebsk fortified zone would open the way toward Minsk and Warsaw.

Commanders of the new Red army offensive were not announced immediately. The first and second pre-Baltic fronts operated in this region during the winter, but since they there has been a reshuffling of Russian forces.

Fourth Great Red Offensive

The drive began the day after the third anniversary of the German invasion of the Soviet Union. It is the Red army's fourth great offensive. Others were launched at Moscow December 6, 1941, at Stalingrad November 22, 1942, and at Orel July 5, 1943.

The earlier date of the Vitebsk thrust indicated the Red army power was growing rapidly.

This attack ended a comparative lull on most of the eastern front since mid-April which gave the main Soviet forces a chance to reorganize. During the interval, however, the Russians completed the reconquest of the Crimea on May 12 and launched an attack on Finland June 10.

Launching of the central offensive was greeted in Moscow without any fireworks salute and with the solemn realization that it may be hard going but that coupled with the Allied invasion of France it may hasten the end of the war.

Reds Advance Nine Miles on 19-mile Front —Berlin Admits Awaited Summer Drive Has Begun.

JUN 23 1944

London, June 23 (A. P.).—Moscow announced tonight a new offensive northwest and southeast of Vitebsk.

Russian troops broke through the enemy's defenses northwest of the city for gains of from seven and a half to nine and a half miles, on a nineteen-mile front, the communique said, and added that the Vitebsk-Orsha railway had been cut.

Earlier today the Germans themselves had announced this drive as the opening of the long-expected summer offensive.

The Russians' midnight communique said:

"During June 23, northwest and southeast of Vitebsk, our troops, supported by massed blows from artillery and aviation, went over to the offensive against the German troops.

"Our troops on the offensive northwest of Vitebsk broke through heavily fortified enemy defenses over the length of thirty kilometers along the front, and advanced to a depth of twelve to fifteen kilometers, at the same time capturing more than 100 populated places."

These places included Filirina, a district center of the Vitebsk region, and sixteen large populated places, as well as two railway stations on the Polotsk-Vitebsk railway.

"Our troops on the offensive southeast of Vitebsk broke through heavily fortified enemy defenses along a front of twenty-five kilometers and advanced eight to ten kilometers," the communique went on to say, adding that more than fifty populated places, including a railway station, were taken in this area.

What the Germans Say.

In broadcast statements the German High Command and Berlin propaganda agencies said that the Russians moved forward yesterday on a broad front north of the Pripyat Marshes—on the most direct road from Moscow to Warsaw and Berlin.

The Germans said that a large-scale Soviet offensive was set in motion from south of Mogilev to north of Vitebsk with heavy tank and plane support, while Moscow announced that triple Russian spearheads drove deeper against the Finns, north of Lake Onezhskoe (Oonega) and up the Aunus Isthmus, as well as along the northern beaches of the Karelian Isthmus.

Tonight's communique from Moscow also said that on the Finnish front between Lakes Onega and Ladoga, Russian troops forced the River Svir in the Podporozhye area, capturing a railway station and four populated places, while at the same time other forces continued a successful offensive on the northern bank of the Svir taking more than twenty populated places.

North of Viipuri on the Karelian isthmus Marshal Leonid A. Govorov's conquering army captured Tali, five miles north of the fallen seaport, as well as several other places in the flourishing farming and manufacturing belt that extends toward Helsinki, the Finnish capital.

Govorov's right flank was hitting toward the rail and highway center of Lappeenranta (Villmanstrand), thirty miles northwest of Viipuri. Capture of Lappeenranta would sever the Finns' main communications with their forces, estimated at 100,000 men, in the area of Lakes Ladoga and Onezhskoe, far to the northeast.

This penetration could also close a trap on the main Finnish forces remaining in the Vipuri area and east of the Saima Canal, Moscow dispatches asserted.

The Germans said a large-scale Soviet offensive was set in motion from south of Mogilev to north of Vitebsk with heavy tank and plane support.

Meanwhile Moscow announced that triple Russian spearheads had driven deeper against the Finns, north of Lake Onezhskoe (Onega) and up the Aunus Isthmus, as well as along the northern reaches of the Karelian Isthmus.

"Bitter Fighting"

The Berlin communique said the initial thrusts were parried, but "bitter fighting is still going on on either side of Vitebsk."

The assault was accompanied by local attacks northwest of Tarnopol toward Lwow, in southern Poland below the Pripyat marshes, the report added.

The first German report was made by Hammer, chief military correspondent for International Information Bureau, a propaganda agency. His account was followed by similar accounts by DNB, official news agency, Transocean, another news agency, and by the high command.

Wait-And-See

London military men adopted a wait-and-see attitude on the report. Three days after the Allied landings in Normandy the Germans announced the opening of a new Soviet drive which did not materialize.

However, in the past German reports of Russian drives almost always have preceded those from Moscow, which is inclined to wait for substantial results before putting out communiques.

It is certain that the Russians are employing only a small percentage of their rested and re-equipped forces against Finland.

There was a possibility that the operations reported by the Germans merely were masking attacks for a main Russian blow which would fall elsewhere later.

Advance Against Finns

A broadcast Russian communique and other Moscow dispatches gave this picture of the continued success of the triple offensive in Finland:

From the northern tip of Lake Onezhskoe (Onega), Red Army units rolled 10 to 15 miles westward.

To the south along the Svir river the Red army expanded its bridgehead to a depth at least six miles on the north bank, and captured Podporozhye.

Moscow, June 23 (A. P.).—The Russian press predicted today a new large-scale Allied offensive in France while applauding American and British operations in Normandy.

(No mention was made of a new Russian offensive of the Pripyat Marshes which the German Command announced had driven "local breaches" in their lines.)

Izvestia in an international review said:

"Events in Normandy in the past week prove the Hitlerites cannot prevent the carrying out of Allied strategical plans. Now that the first and second phases of invasion are completed successfully the third stage of the decisive offense begins.

"Close to Normandy are located large Allied forces which have not taken part in the battle. The introduction of large forces into the battle is the next prospective development of events in northern France."

The press published a lecture by Major - Gen. M. R. Galaktionov praising Allied troops for "taking advantage briliantly" of their sea and air superiority.

"The landing in northern France is new proof of the strength and vitality of the anti-Hitlerite coalition," the general said.

Pravda published a description of the German flying bomb and commented: "This new German arm cannot have any decisive influence."

American Units Fanning Out Over the Entire Barfleur Promontory.

JUN 23 1944

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Saturday, June 24—(AP) American troops broke through the German Cherbourg line on the southern outskirts of the city last night and also closed in swiftly from the east after capturing a key hill position near Tourlaville, a mile outside France's third largest port.

Cherbourg's fall appeared to be near despite heavy resistance by thousands of German troops who have been ordered to die by their guns or be shot for cowardice.

May Be In City

Official dispatches trailed decisive field developments by hours and it was considered possible that the Yanks already had some patrols probing into the city's outer rim.

A dispatch from Don Whitehead, Associated Press correspondent with the Yank assault forces, said a break-through of the Nazi lines occurred between Mont Du Roc and Octeville after American shock troops had been attacking the fortified Mont Du Roc, which is two and one-half miles outside Cherbourg near Nouainville. Octeville is two miles east of Nouainville and the site of one of the huge forts guarding Cherbourg. Nazi lines were ripped open before 9:15 p. m. (3:15 p.m. Eastern War Time).

Other American troops before this break occurred had stormed and captured another fortified hilltop only one mile east of Cherbourg, and headquarters predicted Cherbourg's fall was near.

Pressure Increasing

The 11:30 p. m. communique said "pressure on the Cherbourg defenses is increasing," and indicated that American troops were fanning out swiftly over the entire Barfleur promontory east of the port. "Patrols east of Cherbourg are finding little opposition in the sector between Cap Levy and St. Vaast," it said.

A statement issued earlier said: "The Cherbourg defenses are fairly formidable but a prolonged siege is unlikely."

The Americans apparently had already ringed the city completely by smashing through to the sea on both sides of Cherbourg.

As soon as the last two ridges near the Roule and Octeville forts south and southwest of Cherbourg are taken the Americans are expected to break through in force to Cherbourg's heart.

French patriots wearing identifying armbands were aiding the liberating forces attacking in the woods and hedgerows on both sides of the Divette river valley south of the city. They ranged from teenage youths to bearded veterans of the first World War.

Only local fighting was reported in the Caen-Tilly area on the eastern end of the front.

The communique said that Allied light naval forces sank one enemy armed trawler caught on a convoy escort mission south of Jersey island off the west coast of the peninsula. One of the German ships in the convoy was "left ablaze and damage was inflicted on the remainder by gunfire," the bulletin said.

Allied airmen despite restricting weather hammered Nazi bases and communications beyond the Normandy battle front.

Yank bayonets cleared the crest of one hill near Tourlaville, a mile east of the port, giving the troops a view of the harbor whose installations the enemy has been systematically wrecking.

Cuts Off Germans

This stroke cut off a suicidal band of Germans at Maupertus airfield, five miles east of Tourlaville.

Two other hilltop positions which must be seized before Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's troops can spill into Cherbourg's streets and deal a knockout blow now are being stormed, headquarters said.

One of these is near La Mare A Canards, extending two to three miles south of Cherbourg and just east of the Divette river valley. The other is near Nouainville, two miles southwest of Cherbourg and just west of the Divette valley.

"This phase of the battle for Cherbourg is just a dirty doughboy job," one officer told Associated Press Front Correspondent Don Whitehead. "There is nothing to do but dig 'em out one by one from their holes."

It's a slow bitter yard-by-yard advance against Germans fighting from behind concrete pillboxes, log-protected positions and dugouts cunningly concealed in the green undergrowth of the hill slopes just outside Cherbourg, Whitehead said.

Thursday's 1,000-plane bombardment of the German positions and the terrific artillery barrage which followed knocked out some of the enemy's prepared points, but the remaining Germans were fighting furiously. American in-fighting was so close now that Allied planes withheld their bombs and machine-gun fire.

Nazis Ordered Shot

Captive Nazis said their officers manning positions behind the forward German wall were able to shoot down any faltering soldier, and had been ordered to do so by General Von Schlieben, commander of the Cherbourg fortress.

Von Schlieben's order said: "A withdrawal is punishable by death. I empower every leader in every grade to shoot down on sight anyone who leaves his post because of cowardice. The hour is serious. Only will power and readiness for fighting and heroism to the death can help."

Information reaching headquarters gave "strong indications" that German resistance had collapsed in the entire Cape Barfleur sector east of Cherbourg with the exception of the Nazi group around Maupertus. The area includes forts at St. Vaast-La Hugue which has a small harbor the Allies can use.

Carneyville, a mile and one-half from the sea and two miles north of Maupertus, was captured during the day in the steady encirclement effort against the Germans at Maupertus. The enemy knot there has only small arms, machineguns and light artillery and probably will be overwhelmed shortly.

German units caught in the Cap De La Hague on the western side of Cherbourg also were threatened with early doom along with the big sea-ward coastal guns they have been manning.

The last inland defenses of Cherbourg itself were described by spokesmen as better than those at Tunis or Bizerte but not nearly as strong as those in the Crimea or along the Normandy invasion beachhead where the Allies blasted their way into France.

On the British end of the front heavy fighting was said to have flared up near Ste. Honorine-La Chardonnerette, four miles northeast of Caen.

But the main action swirled around Cherbourg where remnants of 77th, 423rd and 709th German Divisions were entrenched in addition to the regular garrison force and marines manning coastal batteries.

So far there has been no great bag of prisoners, but that is expected to come in the final collapse of the port and probably will more than double the present total of some 15,000 captured in the whole invasion campaign.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's office again praised the splendid French patriot movement which has struck at the Germans on a dozen "inner fronts." A special communique said the French had tied up "several German divisions" in combat, and blocked the flow of German reinforcements toward Normandy by blowing up railways and bridges, fighting pitched battles in nearly all sections of the country and even occupying several towns in the Jura, Aisne and Haute Savoie departments.

[A German DNB broadcast said "fresh troops are on the way from the United States" and are intended to be landed at Cherbourg when it is seized. Berlin also once more predicted that a second phase of the Allied invasion was to be expected with troops hitting northern France and Belgium.]

Tank Attack Repelled

The rest of the Normandy front remained primarily static as it had been for a week. The Americans pushed a slight wedge south of St. Lo-d'Ourville near the west coast 20 miles below Cherbourg.

A German tank attack was beaten off by the British near Longraye, nearly four miles southwest of Tilly-sur-Seulles.

[One German broadcast said the Allies had landed air-borne troops near Granville at the west base of the Cherbourg peninsula some 35 miles beyond American positions in the St. Lo-D'Ourville area. There was no Allied confirmation.]

Allied airmen directed their main efforts at "quarantining" Normandy by attacking German communications over a wide area.

Americans Capture Key Peak Outside Cherbourg

JUN 23 1944

Wirephotos on Pages 2, 3 and 21

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 23 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's American assault troops have stormed over one of the three fortified peaks dominating Cherbourg's military harbor, supreme headquarters announced today, and the city's speedy fall is expected.

Describing Cherbourg's defenses as "fairly formidable," a headquarters announcement said a "prolonged siege is unlikely" now.

Attacking with a storm of artillery fire and a huge array of other weapons, the Americans captured a height at Tourlaville, one mile from the sea and one mile from Cherbourg on the southeast. The Germans had been reduced to machine guns, small arms and light artillery in defending their pillboxes and other prepared positions.

Lines Too Close For Air Aid

Americans and Germans were so closely interlocked in the battle that Allied air forces were unable to give the close battle-front support that marked the opening of the all-out attack yesterday.

British and American planes concentrated on "quarantining" the battle area, hitting railways and roads in a semi-circle 100 miles deep in France as the Americans clamped a vise on Cherbourg and smashed at the other two remaining hilltop bastions.

These were at Nouainville, 2½ miles southwest of the port and three miles from the coast, and at La Mare a Canards, a ridge running two to three miles south of the city.

DAY

Three Divisions Believed Caught

Three German divisions, mixed with German naval units and a defense garrison, were believed to be caught in the American clamp.

The Germans had apparently withdrawn completely from the eastern tip of the peninsula in order to concentrate on defense of Cherbourg.

A Canadian Press correspondent reported that the Germans may have evacuated Caen, at the eastern end of the Allied line in Normandy and dispersed their forces outside the city because of the terrific bombing to which the long-contested town has been subjected.

Nazis Report More Air Troops

There was no confirmation at supreme headquarters of a German radio report that new Allied air-borne landings had been made at Gavray east of Granville on the peninsula's west coast, 60 miles below Cherbourg.

The Germans were fighting to hold Cherbourg as long as possible. Everywhere fierce resistance was encountered, and a particularly vicious battle was being fought for control of the big airfield at Maupertus, five miles east of the city.

(The British radio, quoting a British correspondent, said a captured German battle order declared the Germans in Cherbourg must "hold their positions or be shot." The broadcast was recorded by CBS.)

"Halfway Through Line"

Associated Press War Correspondent Don Whitehead, with the froces storming Cherbourg, reported in a dispatch timed 5.04 P. M. that American infantry had then battled halfway through the Cherbourgh line within 2½ miles of the city limits.

"The advance," he said, "was a bitter yard-by-yard battle against Germans fighting from behind concrete pillboxes, log-protected positions and dugouts cunningly concealed in green undergrowth on the hills outside the city." His dispatch evidently referred to one of main assault forces moving on Cherbourg. Previously points within a mile of the Cherbourg water front have been reported under attack by advanced troops.

"Dirty Doughboy's Job"

"This phase of the battle for Cherbourg is just a dirty doughboy's job," Whitehead quoted an officer. "There is nothing to do but dig 'em out one by one from their holes."

Whitehead said that yesterday's terrific air bombing and the artillery barrage which followed blasted out some of these prepared positions, but many were left. He said progress had been steady but slow since the infantry started the attack at 2 P. M. yesterday; the Americans advanced about two miles into Cherbourg's defenses and late today were fighting their way up the slopes of Mount du Roc southwest of Cherbourg. Supreme headquarters announcements said this height was near Nouainville.

The Americans were closing in from the south and east as well, Whitehead said.

(The German high command acknowledged today that the Americans made slight gains yesterday in the attack on Cherbourg. The broadcast communique was picked up by the Associated Press in London.)

Only slight German resistance was reported by American troops which cut off the eastern tip of the peninsula by capturing the road junction of St. Pierre Eglise and then driving two miles west and taking Carneville, within sight of the sea.

Advance Made On West

A report from the 21st Army Group Headquarters said this advance provided "strong indications" that the Germans had abandoned that tip of the peninsula despite strong fortifications in the St. Vaast la Hougue area on the eastern coast.

On the western tip of the peninsula, the Americans went forward in the area of Beaumont-Hague against scattered resistance,, cutting off whatever Germans are in that area.

Nazi Channel Isle Bombed

Allied bombers and fighters attacked German gunposts and barracks on Alderney, one of the Channel isles only seven miles west of Cap de la Hague. This indicated that some of the trapped Germans might be attempting to flee there.

The Allied prisoner bag, meanwhile, was described at supreme headquarters as "well over" the 15,000 announced a few days ago for the period since the June 6 landings.

Other Local Advances

Beside General Bradley's gains at Cherbourg, a few local advances were made by the Allies on other parts of the beachhead front.

The Americans drove a wedge south from St. Lo d'Ourville in the direction of La Haye du Puits, widening the corridor across the peninsula, for the only other gain on the American side of the Normandy front.

In the British-Canadian sector to the east, the Germans made a tank attack two miles southwest of Tilly-sur-Seulles, but were beaten off. British reconnaissance parties three miles east of Caen encountered determined resistance.

Steel-Works Fort Ruined

Allied bombers destroyed a steel works just outside Caen which the Germans had been converting into a fortified point to block the Allied forces less than half a mile away.

The mighty Allied air arm also battered railways over which the Germans are attempting to bring reinforcements to the battle area.

The wind dropped and the weather improved off the beachhead, permitting the Allies to resume the unloading of supplies after four bad days.

French Underground Scores

Bloody hand-to-hand fighting for Cherbourg was matched over two-thirds of France; the French underground is striking at the Germans on a dozen "inner fronts," tying up "elements of several German divisions" in combat, said a special communique from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters.

The French patriots, the communique announced, have blocked movement of German troops against the bridgehead, have fought several pitched battles, and have even occupied several towns in various parts of France. The communique said the Germans had been forced to use "considerable forces" against the French resistance movement, which is now operating in accordance with plans of the Allied high command.

Nazis Use Armor, Planes

The Germans attacked French Maquis at Vercors and Ain with armored forces, artillery and aircraft, the communique said, and the French "seriously delayed" two enemy armored divisions in southwest Farnce trying to reach the beachhead. France's interior railroads were cut in numerous places.

A special communique from Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters this morning said the Germans had been forced to use "considerable forces" against the French resistance movement, which is now operating in accordance with Allied High Command plans.

"Elements of several German divisions and a large number of local defense troops are estimated to have been contained inside France by the action of the resistance forces," the communique said.

The Germans attacked French Marquis at Vercors and Ain with armored forces, artillery and aircraft, the announcement said, and the French "seriously delayed" two enemy armored divisions in southwest France from reaching the beachhead. Numerous cuts also were made in France's interior railroads.

"Systematic disorganization of enemy transport by French forces of the interior has contributed directly to the success of the Allied operations in Normandy," the special communique said.

Cape Barfleur Nazis Weaken

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 24 (Saturday) (AP).—Information which reached headquarters here last night gave "strong indications" that German resistance had collapsed in the entire Cape Barfleur sector east of Cherbourg with the exception of a Nazi group around Maupertus. The area includes forts at St. Vaast-La-Hougue, which has a small harbor the Allies can use.

German units caught in the Cap de la Hague area, west of Cherbourg, also were threatened, along with the big coastal guns they have been manning.

With American Forces Storming Cherbourg, June 23 (AP)—American troops have broken through the Cherbourg line from the south in an advance between Mont du Roc and Octeville and now are on the city's outskirts.

NIGHT

The break-through came just before 9.15 P. M.

The Americans had been attacking hilltop positions at near-by Mont du Roc during the day.

Commandos Keep Their Pledge

JUN 23 1944

By Leonard Mosley

[Released by the British Information Service Distributed by the Associated Press]

Somewhere in Normandy, June 23—This is one of the stories I have been aching to tell ever since I landed with the Sixth British Airborne Division by parachute in Normandy—the story of a small group of daredevil men to whom most of the airborne troops owe their lives and safety today.

It is the story of tall, handsome

Brigadier Lord Lovat and the group of tough commandos under his command and how they fought were wounded and killed in order to keep Lovat's pledge to the air borne forces, "we won't let your paratroops down."

Paratroops' Mission

Lovat gave that pledge to the general commanding the Sixth Air borne Division at a conference which the two men held somewhere in southern England just before the invasion began. He had just heard what our airborne troops were expected to do—how they were to descend by glider and parachute upon vital bridges spanning the river Orne and the Caen canal and were to hold on until help arrived.

"Yours will be the first help we shall get," the general said. "You'll land on the beach ten miles from us. I want you to fight your way across country, reach the bridge we are holding and pass through to aid us in fighting the Nazis in the country beyond, and I want you to be there on time. You land on the beaches sometime after 8 A. M. on D-day. I want you to be at the bridges by 12.15, four and a quarter hours later. Do you think you can do it?"

"Will Be There"

Lovat said, "We may be a bit pressed now and then, sir, but at 12.15 we shall be there."

It was a promise that could not have been made good had not he and his men been of such caliber. For the Nazi opposition in the bridge sector was fiercer than we might have expected. Though the Germans defending the bridge were taken by surprise at first, their reaction was swift. All through D-day morning from 1 A. M., when our paratroops and gliders landed, the Nazis counter-attacked and reattacked our defenders on the bridges, and guessing that we were expecting help from the sea they massed men, tanks and guns between our airborne troops and the roads to the beaches. As attack succeeded attack the paratroopers looked at their watches gloomily and began to feel that help would not get through.

Bagpipe Signal

At 12.14 a paratroop officer said, "They'll never make it now."

Even as he spoke amid the noise of exploding shell and mortar bombs and the rattle of machine-gun fire there was the wailing of pipes in the distance and grins cracked the sweating, painted faces of the weary paratroopers. From mouth to mouth the message passed, "The Commandos are here."

Line Of Green Berets

That swirl of bagpipes was the recognition signal. If the bridge were cleared we were to send back the reveille signal by trumpet. But the road wasn't clear and instead we sounded "defaulters" to give Lovat the hint that he must find another way round. He found it. It was just 17½ minutes past 12 when a tall slim man in a green beret, with a rifle sung over his shoulder, scrambled up the bank of the Caen Canal.

Behind him came the sweating piper, 21-year-old William Millin from Sandy Hills near Glasgow, and in the rear a line of green-bereted Commandos stretching as far as I could see.

The British brigadier was waiting. He smilingly shook Lovat's hand and said: "We really are most pleased to see you."

"Thank you," said Lovat. Then, glancing at his watch. "Sorry, we were two and a half minutes late."

Lovat and his men had fought their way through some of the fiercest opposition that the British troops had encountered in the landing. They had come the whole ten miles afoot.

French Deny Allies Wipe Out Towns

With the British Forces in France, June 22 (A. P.).—Leading citizens of five coastal towns in Allied occupied Normandy have issued a statement vehemently denying assertions by the Nazi - controlled Paris radio that the seaside villages were wiped out and many hundreds of French inhabitants killed by the Allied bombardment.

"The Nazi radio has been saying that almost everybody in this town had been killed by the Allies," said a wine merchant at Luc-sur-Mer. "Actually we had only five killed out of 1,200 residents."

22 Books On Invasion

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 23 (AP)—Approximately 2,281,900 words—the equivalent of 22 books—were handled by Supreme Headquarters censors in the week ended June 18. The censors also handled 37,436 photographs in the same period.

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 23 (AP)—Large German armored, artillery and air forces have been diverted from the invasion front and are fighting the French underground in battles raging over a large part of the countryside, a special communique said today.

Systematic disorganization of enemy transport has "contributed directly to the success of Allied operations in Normandy," said the second special war bulletin of supreme headquarters. It pictured resistance reaching full battle pitch as Partisans harassed and impeded the Nazis.

[A Brazzaville radio broadcast said in southern France Partisans had fought a German army of 10,000, killing 1,200. Other Patriots were reported to have disrupted cable lines at Rouen, Cannes and three other cities. The broadcast said the Germans are adopting the subterfuge of peasant garb.]

Germans Forced To Use Armor

In some sectors where the Germans attacked with heavy artillery, air and armored forces, the Maquis have been forced to give ground, but not without inflicting losses on the enemy, the communique said. In other areas, despite considerable Nazi forces sent against them, the Partisans have held stubbornly to their positions.

"In addition," the communique said, "numerous engagements are reported from the Pyrenees, the Vosges, Marne, Ardennes, Aisne and Cruse. Elements of several German divisions and a large number of local defense troops are estimated to have been contained inside France by the action of the resistance forces.

Many Rail Lines Cut

"Many cuts on the railways, and numerous obstacles on roads have effectively hindered the passage of German reinforcements to the beachhead. In this way two armored divisions have been seriously delayed in southwest France. In the Bordeaux region, the Bordeaux-La Rochelle, La Reole-Periguez and Bayonne-Angouleme railway lines have been sabotaged. . . .

"Railway cuts also were reported throughout the Rhone Valley and in Brittainy, the Loriet, Aisne and the area north of Paris."

Gestapo Chief Killed

The French press service here quoted authoritative French sources as stating that Gestapo Chief Gisler, in command of the southern French zone, had been executed by French patriots at Murat.

As this all-out underground offensive got under way a reliable source at supreme headquarters stated that Gen. Charles de Gaulle, head of the French Committee of National Liberation, suddenly had reversed his stand and permitted French representatives to serve as liaison officers and governors of liberated sections of France, under supreme headquarters control.

On Day-To-Day Basis

The agreement was said to have been on a day-to-day basis, and to have been brought about without any formal meeting between de Gaulle and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

[The Brazzaville radio said the French provisional government in two decrees authorized its delegates in liberated France to publish laws and decrees and gave them temporarily the right of pardon.

[The right of pardon, said the broadcast, "will be temporarily exercised by the delegates of the Government in the territories where they are exercising their authority and in the cases when the public order necessitates a decision without delay."]

Maquis Keep Large German Forces Tied Up, Allies Say

De Gaulle Agrees to Co-operate

Reverses Prior Stand and Accepts Allied Control of Liberated Areas.

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 23 (A. P.).—Gen. Charles de Gaulle, reversing his previous stand, has agreed to allow French representatives to serve as liaison officers and as governors of liberated sections of France under control of Supreme Headquarters.

A reliable spokesman said today that the arrangement was made without any formal agreement or even a meeting between Gens. De Gaulle and Eisenhower, and is on a day-to-day basis.

[The Berlin radio said today that Gen. de Gaulle is preparing to visit Moscow at the invitation of Marshal Stalin. It attributed this information to an Algiers dispatch. The broadcast was picked up at New York by the Blue Network. The statement is totally unconfirmed.]

For some months Gen. De Gaulle's representative, Brig.-Gen. Joseph P. Koenig, has been working informally with headquarters in preparing a group of French officers to administer civil affairs in France on a liaison basis. Similar agreements were worked out with the Dutch and Norwegian governments. Gen. Eisenhower lacked a directive from the British and American governments for dealing with the French, and Gen. Koenig did not have power to conclude any binding agreement, so the negotiations were carried on informally.

When Gen. De Gaulle arrived in London recently he canceled the tentative arrangements a few hours before D day, leaving the civil affairs without any plan. Later he allowed a handful of officers to go to France to serve in liaison capacities. And when he went to France himself he took his own group of officers and installed them in civil affairs positions, declaring that the French Committee of National Liberation, of which he is president, would act on its own.

No further conferences were held by Gen. De Gaulle and Gen. Eisenhower, nor were any agreements arrived at.

But suddenly, a few days ago, Gen. Koenig informed the Supreme Command that Gen. De Gaulle was ready to go through with the original arrangements for the time being, at least.

"He was asked whether this meant that the officers Gen. De Gaulle took to France would come under the agreement an operate with Gen. Koenig an thus with headquarters," the i formant said. "He replied tha they would."

Since then all French officer in France have been co-operating with the Allied civil affairs groups.

The United States and Britain have refrained from recognizing Gen. De Gaulle's committee as the Provisional Government of France.

De Gaulle Said Visiting Moscow

New York, June 23 (AP)—The Berlin radio said today that Gen. Charles de Gaulle is preparing to visit Moscow at the invitation of Marshal Stalin. It attributed the information to an Algiers dispatch. Blue network monitors heard the broadcast, for which there was no French confirmation.

FRENCH CIVIL RULE TO WAIT

President Says More Of Area Must Be Liberated First

Washington, June 23 (AP)—President Roosevelt declared today that more of France must be liberated from the Nazis before action is taken to set up civil government administration in that country.

He made the remark to a news conference as word came from supreme headquarters of the Allied Expeditionary Force that French officers will do liaison work in France, under control of SHAEF, on a day-to-day basis.

This new cooperation between Gen. Charles de Gaulle and the supreme command was worked out without any formal meeting or agreement between the French general and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, a reliable informant told J. W. Gallagher, of the Associated Press.

One Tenth Of One Per Cent.

President Roosevelt made no direct comment on General de Gaulle's recent action in setting up civil administrators behind the Allied lines in France, but he told a questioner that military liberation must come first. The Cherbourg operation is going along according to schedule, he said, but he added that only one tenth of one per cent. of France has been retaken by the Allies.

Mr. Roosevelt said he has heard indirectly from French sources that de Gaulle hopes to come to Washington, probably between July 6 and 14, second of two dates the President made available to him.

Comments On Procope

Commenting on the State Department's recent action in expelling Hjalmar Procope, the Finnish Minister, Mr. Roosevelt remarked that the present Finnish Government is allied with Germany and fighting our ally, Russia He reemphasized that the Procop incident does not mean a diplomatic break.

The Procope expulsion, he said, raised the question whether this country's foreign policy is on sale for $140,000 and answered himself with an emphatic no. The sum is the approximate amount of the Finnish war-debt payment Procope made to this Government shortly before the State Department ordered him out of the country.

Third Nazi General Killed In Normandy

London, June 23 (A. P.).—Lieut.-Gen. Heinz Hellmich, whose death was announced in yesterday's German communique, was the third German general killed in action since the Normandy invasion began.

The Germans previously announced that artillery Gen. Eric Marcks and Major-Gen. Fritz Witt, commander of the Tenth (Hitler Youth) Panzer division, had been killed on the invasion front.

RAF KEEPS UP AIR ASSAULTS

Night Raids Follow U. S. Blows At Nazi Communications

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Saturday, June 24 (AP)—RAF heavy bombers in great strength ranged over France last night and early today, continuing the Allied aerial assault which has subjected the Normandy battle zone and Nazi targets beyond to almost continual punishment for more than 36 hours.

30.24—16491

Big waves of British bombers started across the Channel as darkness fell last night, heading toward France, and the Paris radio broke off its broadcasting in the middle of a midnight program.

Another RAF force was heard crossing the Dover strait at about midnight.

American Day Blows

The night attacks by the RAF followed up a series of daylight blows by American planes against Nazi communications beyond the front lines and the rocket coast of Pas-de-Calais. United States Fortresses and Liberators swept into France twice during the day.

The new campaign to disrupt the flow of German reinforcements and supplies to the front lines in Normandy was pushed throughout the day, although headquarters said bad weather during the morning somewhat restricted aerial operations.

At least 11 enemy aircraft were destroyed and eight American bombers were missing in the day's operations, headquarters said.

Romania Bombed

The assaults on Europe from Britain were coupled with raids against Romanian oil centers and Yugoslav rail targets by bombers based in Italy.

[The German radio said early this morning that "single aircraft" were over the Brandenburg district, which includes Berlin.]

In their first mission—the fourth Allied blow in 24 hours against the French rocket coast—the American heavy bombers unloaded their explosives through an overcast.

When the Eighth Air Force's heavyweights went out again hours later, the weather had cleared and they bombed visually two enemy airfields near Laon and railway bridges in the Paris vicinity.

Marauders Are Active

Other air activity over the Channel also increased during the evening as the weather improved and American Marauders took to the air in strength, some heading toward Boulogne and others toward Calais. Waves of fighters also shuttled back and forth over the Dover area and the French coast.

In their dusk missions, the Marauders and Havocs dropped more than 250 tons of bombs on six of the flying-bomb ramps, but damage was difficult to assess because of cloud cover. Crewmen said they saw no enemy fighters and that flak was moderate.

Ninth Air Force Lightnings also returned to France late in the day also and destroyed 18 locomotives and more than 450 freight cars in hitting rail targets at Quince, Chateaubriant, Champtole, Chemille, Cholet and Chateaubourg.

Started Thursday Night

The new blows strike Nazis' communications network behind the lines were begun Thursday night by the RAF, which sent Lancasters, Halifaxes and Mosquitos against 10 railway bottlenecks between Paris and the front.

Headquarters said photographs showed a great amount of enemy rolling stock destroyed in yards at Laon and Reims and the main lines effectively blocked at many points.

In turning to rail installations the tactical air units suddenly switched the bulk of their efforts from the fighting zone, where Thursday they had provided the closest support given the Allied ground forces in France since the invasion began.

Railroads Attacked

Fighter-bombers started the daylight operations by pounding rail targets over a wide area while other formations concentrated on communications behind the Cherbourg peninsula. More than 200 Thunderbolts and Lightnings participated in attacks on railroads between Tours and Portiers and between Orleans and Viervy.

Bridges at Nantes, Laroche, Saumur and Niort were hit. Rail yards north of Lemans were bombed and strafed by a formation which shot down German planes taking off from an airfield near Alencon.

Other pilots reported the destruction of two convoys of enemy trucks on roads near Gouvets and west of Marigny six locomotives, 50 freight cars and 20 oil tanks were set afire.

Three Shot Down

One Mustang force encountered ten German planes and shot down three of them without loss.

The Fortresses and Liberators striking from Mediterranean bases attacked Nazi oil installations at Ploesti and at Giurgiu on the Danube south of Bucharest in Romania, and at rail yards at the Yugoslav junction of Nisi. Lightnings and Mustangs covered the attack, encountering a considerable number of enemy fighters over Romania. Giurgiu is an oil transshipment point.

ROCKET BOMBINGS KEPT UP BY NAZIS

JUN 23 1944

Morrison Says Attacks May Not Have Reached Peak

London, June 23 (AP)—German rocket bombs exploded in south England tonight for the ninth straight night, causing deaths and damage and underscoring a warning to Parliament by Home Secretary Herbert S. Morrison that "it may be these attacks have not yet reached their peak."

Morrison today gave Parliament authoritative word that up to now the robot bombs are doing "little damage of national importance" and killing fewer people than did the Nazis' light air raids in February.

The Germans stepped up the robot attacks with darkness, and Britons in increasing numbers sought public shelters.

Incidents Cited

The Ministry of Home Security's routine evening announcement that "during the day there was enemy activity over southern England—damage and casualties were reported" included such incidents as these:

Two elderly women and a child were killed in one village; six houses were demolished and others damaged. A robot hit near two busses with fatal casualties. Another smashed a house on the town's common with some people injured and others rescued from shelters. Another blasted a church.

Morrison said "substantial results" were achieved in combating the robots and at least three more were shot down by fighters this evening.

Some Exploded In Air

Patrolling fighters tailed the bombs on the coast and chased them inland. Some were exploded in midair.

The Germans took the line that the robot is "our arm of retaliation number one" and would relieve the Nazi air force of strategic bombing and free it for western front tactical tasks.

Morrison's declaration indicated that while the bombs were causing acknowledged but scattered civilian casualties and damage, they were not disrupting any important war activities.

One feature of the attacks is that the bombs, as the carefully measured fuel sputters out, wing over and dive like a plane out of control, so no matter how carefully their prior flight is regulated there can be no certainty of their hitting a particular area.

Nazis Use Incendiary Rockets

New Robots Are Included in Heaviest Raid —British Stay in Shelters but Are Calm.

JUN 23 1944

By JAMES F. KING.

London, June 23 (A. P.).—The Germans sent new incendiary robots along with the now familiar high explosive flying bombs against southern England early today in one of the heaviest assaults since these attacks were launched.

Two blazes were started by the fire bombs, but were quickly extinguished. Most of the robots were high explosives.

Guided by powerful searchlights, R. A. F. night fighters raked a number of these pilotless flying bombs out of the sky before they got over the more populous districts.

In Britain there was growing confidence of good results in combating this blind bombing. Counter measures included battering robot launching grounds in the Pas de Calais area of France, defensive work of fighter planes, and curtains of anti-aircraft fire.

With the newness and mystery worn off, Britons are taking the robots in the stride of the old blitz days.

Britons Not Panicked.

There is no pretense here of laughing off these robots. They are respected, and more women and children are spending nights in their shelters than at any time in two years. There has been not the slightest panic, however.

A lot of casualties have been caused but not among the men carrying guns, and Britons say that "men, not robots, will win this war."

Britons have come to expect almost anything from the Nazis and the Robots have produced no hysterical hatred. Most Britons look on this indiscriminate bombing as a sure sign that even Hitler knows the end is near—and that makes them feel better.

Berlin Lists Defenses.

The German radio described Allied defenses against the rocket bombs as a tight balloon barrage, a gigantic steamroller of ack-ack fire and innumerable night fighters, and said:

"An army of tens of thousands has been set in motion not only against our explosives but against reconnaissance planes which try to bring back home confirmation of the effects of our attacks to the High Command."

Home Secretary Herbert S. Morrison told the House of Commons today that German flying bombs have cause little damage of national importance and public utilities have been only slightly affected.

"There have been periods when some ten or more flying bombs were in the air at the same time," the Home Secretary said.

Morrison contrasted the effect of the flying bombs with the German air attack early this year.

"Last February there were raids on southern England on five nights between February 18 and February 25, lasting an hour or two each night," he said. "I have compared the number of persons killed in southern England on five nights of attack by the flying bombs and the number is less than the February figure."

He described the results achieved by British fighters and anti-aircraft batteries in shooting down the flying bombs as "substantial."

Morrison told of German radio claims that the British Government had abandoned London and provoked laughter with the dry comment: "Well here we are assembled in Parliament in London."

Nazis Note Weight Of Allied Barrage

JUN 23 1944

London, Saturday, June 24 (AP)—The German radio said early today that the Cherbourg fortress had been pounded for the last 24 hours by 1,000 Allied guns of all calibers in the most powerful artillery barrage on the invasion front so far.

The broadcast by Transocean, Nazi news agency, said that aerial bombing had been going on almost without interruption.

"Taking into consideration this enormous concentration of material, the resistance of the German defenders who are numerically far inferior is extraordinary," the broadcast said.

German Air Force In 'Terrific Turmoil'

JUN 23 1944

New York, June 23 (AP)—A feud between the German ground forces and the Luftwaffe over supplies was responsible for the slight enemy air opposition over Normandy, the New York Herald-Tribune said today in a copyrighted interview with Maj. Gen. E. R. Quesada, commanding general of the Ninth Air Force.

With transportation lines wrecked and communication lines broken by Allied bombings, General Quesada was quoted by Jack Tait, Herald-Tribune war correspondent, as saying Nazi ground troops in need of gasoline and other suplies for mechanized equipment have been helping themselves to stores at German air supply depots.

As a result, the general said, the German air force is in a "terrific turmoil," although its members have been taking ground troops' supply whenever possible.

Robot Bomb Is "V 1"

JUN 23 1944

New York, June 24 (AP)—The official name for the German robot bomb is "V 1," which stands for "Vergeltungswaffe No. 1" or reprisal weapon No. 1. This was announced by Nazi Deputy Press Chief Zindemann tonight in a Berlin broadcast.

AMERICAN SLANG ENDED ROBOT FEAR

JUN 23 1944

London, June 23 (A. P.).—The medical journal Lancet credits the American slang "doodlebug" with helping take the psychological sting out of the German robot plane attack.

The pilotless plane a week ago had something eerie about it," the journal said, "and the damage it could do was seen out of perspective as something touched with mystery and horror. The Government wisely gave the country full information about the device.

"To prove it was not guided by an unseen, malevolent hand, but merely a missile, would rob it at once of much of its dignity.

"Within a few days the final stage of psychological adjustment was accomplished. The thing acquired pet names, 'buzz-bomb' and 'doodlebug,' designed to reduce its stature still further and put it once and for all among the other tools of war.'

Reverberations Heard

JUN 23 1944

A Town in Southern England, Saturday, June 24 (AP)—The reverberation of terrific gunfire which seemed to come from a distance of 40 to 50 miles was heard on the English coast for more than an hour after midnight. The ground and houses shook from the ferocity of the barrage.

BAND LEADER IN BRITAIN

Bombing Outrages Parrot

LONDON, June 23 (AP).—Britishers chuckled today at the story told by a group of rescue workers who declared they were digging in the debris of a house wrecked by a robot bomb in southern England when they heard a hoarse voice saying, "Blimey, wot a bloomin' war!" After digging frantically for half an hour, they found a parrot.

'MASS MURDER' EDEN CHARGES

JUN 23 1944

Commons Told 50 Allied Air Captives Were Foully Slain

London, June 23 (AP)—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, disclosing to an angry House of Commons the official German report on the killing of 50 Allied airmen after a prison break in Germany last March, today rejected the Nazi explanation and branded the incident a mass murder. He pledged that Britain would track down and bring to justice the "foul criminals" involved.

The killings were first revealed last month in a neutral Swiss report which told of 47 deaths. The official German report, raising the total to 50, said that all were shot resisting arrest or trying to make a new break after their capture.

"No Wounded," Eden Notes

In rejecting the German claims Eden said the most significant weakness in the German story was that "there were no wounded, as there would have been inevitably if the shootings had taken place during an attempt to resist capture."

"It is quite clear," Eden said, "that these officers were murdered."

Flatly rejecting the German report, the Foreign Secretary asserted that "the explanation now put forward by the German Government is in fact the confession of an odious crime against the laws and conventions of war."

"Foul Criminals" To Be Punished

Describing the killings as "cold-blooded acts of butchery," Eden continued:

"The Government will never cease in their efforts to collect evidence to identify all those responsible, and they are firmly resolved that these foul criminals shall be tracked down to the last man wherever they may be and when the war is over they will be brought to exemplary justice."

The German explanation said that the mass escapes from the camp, near Dresden, endangered public security and forced adoption of stern countermeasures. Eden said the details as to when, where and how the men were killed still were not known, but by the clearest implication he placed the blame on the Gestapo on the basis of evidence supplied by prisoners since repatriated.

Taken Out By Gestapo

The victims included officers of several European nationalities and some British and dominion flyers. No Americans were involved.

The Gestapo, Eden said, took the recaptured officers to a Gestapo prison, where they were held "under shocking conditions with very little food." Later a number of these men, apparently those marked for execution, were seen "being driven away handcuffed and in charge of Gestapo officials who were armed with tommy guns."

In words of unusual bitterness for the British press, an editorial in the London Star seemed to sum up the reaction of many in the House of Commons and among the public. It said:

"These gallant dead will be avenged. From now on Stalag Luft 111 will never be forgotten. And the nemesis is marching on every battlefield. We shall wipe out this creeping thing."

Nazis Charged With Murder

JUN 23 1944

London, June 23 (AP)—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told Commons today that the Germans had admitted killing 50 Allied officers at a German prison camp instead of the previously reported 47, and said that "it is quite clear that these officers were murdered."

The Germans in a communication sent to the British Government claimed that the RAF officers were shot while resisting capture after their escape from a war prison camp near Dresden on March 25 or while attempting to make another getaway following their capture, Eden said. This was the same explanation which the Nazis previously offered Switzerland, the protecting power.

"Odious Crime"

Flatly rejecting this answer to the mass killing, the Foreign Secretary said: "The explanation now put forward by the German Government is in fact the confession of an odious crime against the laws and conventions of war."

Declaring that the British Government would never cease its efforts to collect evidence "to identify all those responsible," Eden said the Government was resolved "that those foul criminals shall be tracked down to the last man wherever they may be and when the war is over they will be brought to exemplary justice."

Eden reassured Commons that the Government has no reports of mass killings except the one involving British and Allied flying officers who escaped from the camp near Dresden.

He indicated that the Gestapo did the killing and said the victims included officers of other European nationalities among the escapees as well as some British and Dominion flyers.

The Germans, in their note, claimed that serious mass escapes in March endangered public security and forced the adoption of stern counter measures.

Eden said the captives had been taken from their prison for questioning, that some were picked out, and others were returned to their cells.

Armed With Tommy Guns

"Those picked out," he said, "were seen from the prison being driven away handcuffed and in charge of Gestapo officials armed with tommy guns.

"Those shot included all officers of European Allied nationality who were recaptured. These were taken away on different days in small parties with one larger party of about 20."

The prisoners had been told, Eden declared, that those in civilian clothes would be without protection of the prisoners-of-war convention.

Says Nazi Oil Shortage Hurts Fighting Front

JUN 23 1944

London, June 23 (AP)—A spokesman for the Ministry of Economic Warfare today asserted Germany's critical oil shortage has crippled the German army's operational mobility on the fighting front and could shorten the war.

Aerial bombardments in the last three months against oil refineries in Romania, Poland, Austria, Hungary and Germany, and attacks on synthetic oil plants in the Reich have reduced the German output of liquid fuel from 15 or 16 million tons yearly to about five million, he said. As a result, the Wehrmacht is getting less than half the gasoline it needs, the spokesman added.

BRITISH EXECUTE SPY

JUN 23 1944

London, June 23 (A. P.).—Execution of a 28-year-old former Belgian Army officer convicted of being a spy in the pay of the German secret service was announced by the British Home Office today. The office identified him as Pierre Charles Neukermans, and said he was found guilty last month under the treachery act.

Neukermans was the fifteenth spy executed in Britain during this war and the second this year. The Home Office gave this account:

He was discharged from the army in Belgium in 1938 and joined up with the German secret service, who trained him in sabotage, wireless transmission and secret writing for the task of getting military information in Britain.

He came to London by way of Lisbon, posing as a loyal Belgian who had escaped Nazi oppression, and found employment as a clerk in the Belgian Government office.

Says Hitler Should Be Shot on Sight

JUN 23 1944

London, June 23 (A. P.).—Marcel de Baer, president of the Belgian Military and Maritime Courts of Appeal, asserted today Adolf Hitler should be shot on the spot by any military unit that happens to catch up with him.

He told the Luxemburg Society in London that repetition of the empty threats against war criminals made by the Allies after the last war would lead to world war III.

"If punishment is going to be imposed on Hitler and his Ministers it should be imposed as soon as they are arrested," the jurist said. "Orders should be given to any military unit to shoot them as soon as they are captured without waiting for any form of trial."

GERMANS TURN ON 8TH ARMY

JUN 23 1944

Halt Flight For Bitter Stand

85 Miles Above Rome

Rome, June 23 (AP)—German forces have halted their flight in central Italy and are making a bitter stand against the Allied Eighth Army on both sides of Lake Trasimeno, about 85 miles north and slightly west of Rome, field dispatches reported today.

[A broadcast by CBS said the Nazis had counterattacked strongly and recaptured the town of Chiusi, nine miles southwest of Lake Trasimeno and 25 miles southwest of Perugia.]

Meeting "Strong Resistance"

Heavy rains early in the week gave the Germans a much-needed breathing spell in which to reorganize and strengthen their defenses at the center of the line, and it appeared they would not be thrown into retreat again until the Eighth Army could gather itself and attack in force.

Today's Allied communique said the Eighth was meeting "strong resistance" both north and northwest of Perugia and at the southwest corner of Lake Trasimeno, where several enemy counterattacks had been repulsed.

On the two wings the Allied advance continued, though the Americans pushing up the west Italian coast and the French on their immediate inland flank encountered increasingly stiff resistance. Only in the Adriatic sector was the Nazis' flight unchecked. There Eighth Army troops crossed the Chienti river and reached the vicinity of Morrovalle and Montecosaro, less than 25 miles from the big port of Ancona.

Nearing Camerino, Macerata

Between Perugia and the Ariatic coast, Eighth Army forces were reported approaching the large towns of Camerino and Macerata, meeting but slight enemy resistance.

Allied planes flew 2,300 sorties, attacking targets in northern Italy, Albania, Yugoslavia and in the battle area. Ten planes were lost and two enemy craft destroyed.

New Nazi Stand In Italy Takes Area Hinted

JUN 23 1944

Rome, June 23 (AP)—Allied forces in Italy have made progress along both coastal sectors, but the Germans apparently are planning a determined stand along strong positions between Lake Trasimeno and Lake Chiusi and north of Perugia in the central sector, Allied headquarters indicated today.

The Eighth Army is encountering "strong resistance" north of Perugia and southwest of Lake Trasimeno, where a number of German counterattacks have been repulsed, the communique said.

25 Miles From Ancona

(Winston Burdett, of CBS, broadcast from Rome today that the Germans have recaptured Chiusi, in Italy, a town 25 miles southwest of Perugia and about 30 miles southwest of Lake Trasimeno. The British occupied the town Tuesday.)

An Algiers radio news roundup said Allied forces on the Adriatic were 25 miles from the important seaport of Ancona. The communique said troops in that sector have continued their "rapid advance and are now approaching the Chienti river." The Chienti is about 25 miles below Ancona.

Nazis Report Attack

On the west coast the Fifth Army, despite strong resistance, has pressed forward astride Highway 1, leading through Livorno to Pisa, and is approaching Folonica, some 55 miles below Pisa, believed to be the anchor of the next major German resistance line.

(The Allier after completing their regrouping again went over to the attack almost along the entire front, according to today's German communique, Reuter said.

Seven Miles From Town

(The Third Flak Brigade has shot down 114 enemy planes and destroyed 69 tanks in Italy between June 1 and June 20. Since the start of the enemy's major offensive in Italy 1,046 enemy tanks have been destroyed or captured, the communique claimed.)

Associated Press Correspondent Sydney A. Feder, in a delayed dispatch dated yesterday from Giuncarico, on Highway 1, 11 miles northwest of Grosseto, also told of increased resistance by the Germans.

Folonica is in the center of the gulf of the same name, and on whose upper tip is Piombino. Reuters said the Allies were within seven miles of Folonica.

Flying 2,300 sorties, the Mediterranean Air Force attacked targets in northern Italy and the battle area, and also in Albania and Yugoslavia. Two enemy aircraft were destroyed, compared with ten Allied planes missing.

Heavy bombers hit rail yards at Parma, Modena, Bologna, Castel-Maggiore, Fornovo and Ferrera, rail bridges at Rimini and Treviso, industrial targets in the Turin area and an airdrome at Forli.

Rail Yards Lashed

Tactical aircraft, ranging over a wide territory north of the battle area, attacked rail lines and bridges, motor transport, roads and other targets. A night attack on the rail yards at Vado Ligure in northern Italy capped the operations.

Reuter reported that Thunderbolts yesterday knocked out fourteen bridges, including seven near Pisa, damaged five others and cut several railway lines.

Allied Ban On Gigli At Concert Sticks

JUN 23 1944

Rome, June 23 (AP)—Thousands of Allied troops applauded a group of famous singers at a concert last night at the royal opera, but tenor Beniamino Gigli, prominently billed on the program posters, did not appear.

Maj. Gen. Harry H. Johnson, military governor of Rome, banned the former Metropolitan Opera Company tenor on the grounds that the time was not propitious for his appearance in embittered Rome. The Romans have accused Gigli of Fascist sympathies.

DUCE REPORTED IN NEW RELAPSE

Nazis Said to Be Ready to Move Him to Germany.

Chiasso, Switzerland, June 23 (A. P.).—Frontier reports considered reliable said today that Mussolini again had suffered a relapse and had summoned his son Vittorio from Germany and his wife to keep a vigil beside his bed.

The deposed Italian dictator is reported living at Garda Lake. He is expected to be taken to Germany should the Nazis withdraw to the Alps.

Editor Concetto Pettinato of the Fascist La Stampa of Turin wrote today that Fascism in northern Italy is "at the mercy of the rebellion" as rump government authority dwindles and partisan strength grows. Pettinato declared that military operations were going badly.

Fascisti Leaders in Germany.

Roberto Farinacci, former fiery secretary of the Fascist party, was reported by Der Bund to have gone to Munich. Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, Mussolini's Minister of War, was said to have gone to Vienna.

The newspaper Libera Stampa said Fascist recruits in northern Italy were staying in barracks only long enough to obtain uni forms and weapons before flee ing. Even the Carabinieri were reported joining Partisan bands.

Partisans were said to have vir tual control of the northern Alps and were reported active on the Po plain, especially in Lombardy. They were said to control the western mountain passes of Little Saint Bernard, Mount Genevre and Larch to France and to have established contact with French patriots.

ese disintegration.

Flee in Disorder

In his disorganized flight the enemy failed to destroy the Karong bridge over the Barek river, the largest on the road, and his final collapse came after relentless ground pressure and constant Allied air hammering of his lines of communications.

Only the Japanese in the north of Imphal, now in scattered parties, remain to be mopped up.

The scope of the Japanese attacks in Manipur and Assam were fixed officially for the first time, after the clearance of the Manipur road.

The Japanese were said to have used 75,000 troops in a "major effort," and to have lost 14,000 dead in the fruitless campaign. Two fifths of the badly mauled enemy force remaining in the Manipur area now are retreating toward Ukhrul and the remaining three fifths are concentrated south of the Imphal plain, the spokesman estimated.

RAF and IAF fighters and fighter-bombers of the Third Tactical Air force maintained their offensive against enemy positions.

Japanese Forces Cleared From Kohima-Imphal Road

J. C. ROVER

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, June 23.—(AP) The Kohima-Imphal road has been cleared completely of enemy forces, a communique announced tonight, and Allied vehicles already are using the highway in the previously surrounded Imphal plain, heretofore supplied and garrisoned by air transport.

NIGHT

There were indications of still more Japanese withdrawals in the India theater, particularly in the Bishenpur area, where the communique said the enemy was laying mines and damaging the Silchar track.

Drive Must Continue

The steady, slugging Allied pace in the theater must be continued throughout the monsoon period, a spokesman said, to thrust the enemy completely out of positions whence he can continue to menace the Manipur road.

Present indications were that the Japanese intended to make a grim effort to hold the Tamu-Palel and the Tiddim road areas, and a bitter struggle was expected before neutralization of his forces in the Uktrul area.

The ten-mile gap in the Kohima-Imphal road was closed when British forces driving northward routed the enemy from roadblocks and met other British units driving southward from Kohima at Milestone 109.

Tanks were an important factor in the final ouster of the Japanese from the area, and the capture of 800 rounds of anti-tank ammunition at Maran had crippled enemy forces before the final phase of the road clearance started at Viswema. The British imperials had plunged miles southward since June 16 the face of progressive Japan-

Japs Cleared Off Imphal Road

JUN 23 1944

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, June 23 (AP)—The last Japanese troops have been cleared from the Imphal-Kohima road in Manipur state and British troops driving from both ends of the important highway have effected a juncture, it was announced officially today.

Kohima is about 65 miles north of Imphal, and reestablishment of direct overland communications between the two bases was regarded as an important success in the Allied counteroffensive to drive the Japanese from northeast India.

The Japanese had controlled the Imphal-Kohima road since March 20, and Allied troops on the Imphal plain had been supplied entirely by air.

DAY

The rapid advance of the Allied forces disorganized the fleeing Japanese, who failed to destroy the Karong bridge over the Barek river, largest structure on the road, some 25 miles south of Kohima.

75,000 Japs In Attack

Today's communique from Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's headquarters for the first time gave an official estimate of the Japanese forces employed in the abortive invasion of India, declaring the enemy used about 75,000 troops in a "major effort."

The communique estimated enemy dead in the fruitless campaign at 14,000.

Two-fifths of the badly-mauled enemy forces remaining in Manipur are retreating in the Ukhrul area, 24 miles northeast of Imphal, and three-fifths are concentrated south of Imphal, the announcement said.

Enemy preparations for withdrawal from the Silchar track in the Bishenpur area were indicated in the communique which said the Japanese had damaged the track and laid mines.

Chinese and Chindit patrols were active from the southwest to the southeast of the town of Mogaung in north Burma, and encounters with the enemy were reported.

ALLIED BOMBERS HIT PORT BLAIR IN SURPRISE RAID

GRUMAN

JUN 23 1944

WITH A CARRIER TASK FORCE OFF THE ANDAMAN ISLANDS, June 21.—(Delayed)—(AP) Fighters and bombers of the fast-expanding Allied eastern fleet caught the Japanese completely by surprise early today and delivered a smashing blow at the enemy's installations at Port Blair, capital of the Andaman islands group in the Bay of Bengal and an outpost guardian of Japanese shipping lanes to Rangoon in Burma.

Attacking through a rainstorm, carrier-borne fighters first sent Japanese ground gunners scurrying for cover through a hail of machine-gun fire and then the bombers went in and pin-pointed their selected targets. No air opposition was encountered and but one Allied plane failed to return to its deck.

Among the structures demolished or damaged was a radar station and tower, a seaplane station and troop barracks. Port Blair's airfield was raked with bombs and bullets and two grounded Zero fighters were set afire. Workshops, motor transport and military buildings received direct hits. An oil fire was started at the seaplane base.

(A Japanese English language broadcast recorded by U. S. Government monitors said damage was confined to "one small boat, which was hit by an enemy bomb and set ablaze." It claimed six Allied planes were shot down and four damaged by anti-aircraft fire.)

NIGHT

This, the third Allied strike at Andamans, was commanded by Vice Admiral Sir Arthur Power, second in command of the Eastern fleet. As in the previous blows at Sabang and Soerabaja, the Japanese air force appeared to have been taken completely by surprise. No enemy shipping was seen during the mission.

(A communique from Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's southeast Asia headquarters at Kandy, Ceylon, said Friday that Allied heavy bombers followed up Wednesday's dawn attack with an assault that night against Port Blair's main airfield. Visibility was poor and the result were not announced.

(As the Allies are not known to have carriers capable of handling heavy bombers, it was assumed the night attack was flown either from Ceylon, a distance of about 900 miles, or from India, a minimum of some 750 miles).

Warships, Planes Hit Andamans

JUN 23 1944

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, June 23 (AP)—An Allied carrier task force raided Port Blair, capital of the Andaman Islands, and scored hits on a powerhouse, workshops, yards and a seaplane base, where an oil fire was started, headquarters disclosed today.

One radio location station was destroyed and another heavily damaged, a special communique said. The Japanese made no attempt to attack the warships and the planes encountered no enemy fighters. Two enemy planes were set afire on the field.

Vice-Admiral Sir Arthur John Power directed the operation which took place Wednesday. Heavy bombers followed up the attack, striking in a night raid at the No. 1 airfield of Port Blair. Visibility was poor, however, and results were not announced.

The radio location station was demolished first, thus opening the way for an undetected approach for long-range land-based planes.

Other pin-pointed targets were attacked through rainstorms, including a barracks and the seaplane station, where a slipway was fired.

DAY

AA Fire Heavy At First

Anti-aircraft fire was heavy until just before the bombers arrived. Evidently the carrier-based fighters had sent the ground crews scurrying with a vicious strafing attack.

"Considerable damage" to military installations was reported.

(The Tokyo radio earlier reported a combined formation of 35 bombers and fighters had raided the Japanese garrison at Port Blair, and claimed little damage was done. The broadcast said "losses were confined to damage to one small boat which was hit by an enemy bomb and set ablaze," and asserted that six planes were shot down and four damaged.)

The islands, 300 miles northwest of Sumatra, astride the Ceylon-Calcutta supply route in the Bay of Bengal, are the westernmost points occupied by the Japanese in the Indian Ocean.

The Japanese took the islands in March, 1942, and since that time they have been attacked a number of times by Allied planes. The last attack was by American Liberators April 22 this year.

JAPANESE UNITS APPROACH VITAL RAIL JUNCTION

JUN 23 1944

CHUNGKING, June 23—(AP) Thousands of Chinese civilians are fleeing the rail junction of Hengyang, the Chinese announced tonight, making no attempt to minimize the city's peril as the Japanese closed in within 25 miles of their goal in a drive which may become a virtual battle for China.

Fighting raged furiously in Hengshan, 25 miles north-northeast of the city, and the invader was pouring troops into the fight—even drawing them from the vital Peiping-Hankow rail area in Honan province to the north, in the all-out drive to split China in two and prepare for further American landings in the embattled country.

Upwards of 120,000 Japanese troops now were estimated to be engaged in the drive southward from fallen Changsha, along a broad front of from 80 to 100 miles. Within Hengshan itself, small groups of the enemy in civilian clothes had infiltrated, a Chinese communique said, but they were wiped out yesterday.

Coupled with this all-out offensive was the constantly increasing pressure against the Chinese defenders of a gap in the Peiping-Hankow railway to the north in Honan province, part of the Japanese campaign to win complete domination of the long north-south Canton-Hankow railway through the heart of China. A Chinese army spokesman said that here the Japanese evidently were determined to frustrate any Chinese attempt to reopen gaps in the road.

The spokesman said, however, that in northwest Honan, the situation had been stabilized with Chinese recapture of Lingpao on the Lunghai railway, near the eastern Shensi province border, and with the reoccupation of Sunghsien, 45 miles south-southwest of enemy-held Loyang.

NIGHT

On the Yunnan province front near the Burma border, the Chinese carried out fierce attacks on Sungshan, called by the communique the "last Japanese position locking the re-opening of the Burma road west of the Salween river."

Chinese troops in that area were said to have cut the enemy's westward retreat line, and to have captured many barracks and 55 pillboxes, obtaining a foothold on the crest of a fortified enemy mountain position. Half of this position now is held by the Chinese, the communique said.

East of Lungling, from which Chinese forces had withdrawn some time before to prevent an enemy encirclement movement, a Japanese attack was blocked by counter attacks, and positions were regained on high grounds east of the city. Most of a village in the area was reoccupied, the bulletin said.

The High command reported that all enemy forces have been driven west and south of the Shweli river, and that one Chinese group reached a point less than ten miles north of Tengchung, main Japanese Yunnan base. Chiangtso, about 20 miles northeast of Tengchung, fell to the Chinese in this drive, the communique said, and large quantities of artillery, ammunition and small arms were taken there.

American air forces aided the embattled Chinese in all three provinces—Hunan, Honan and Yunnan, a communique of Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters said.

WALLACE ASSURES CHINA OF VICTORY

JUN 23 1944

DAY

Chungking, June 23 (A. P.).—Vice-President Wallace today expressed confidence that China can survive "this very dark hour," an indirect reference to the situation in Hunan province where the Japanese have captured Changsha and are driving swiftly southward.

He said he had several discussions with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and would have more.

Before the press conference correspondents were informed the Vice-President would not answer any questions on the forthcoming United States election.

5 Enemy Ships Definitely Sunk, Nimitz's New Report Reveals

JUN 23 1944

New York, June 23 (AP)—A Tokyo broadcast beamed to North America said tonight that "at least 60" American carrier-based planes attacked Guam today. The Domei agency report, recorded by the FCC, claimed 15 planes were shot down. It also claimed Japanese planes had "heavily damaged" two American aircraft carriers off Saipan today.

Air arm of Allied Eastern Fleet raids Jap base at Port Blair, Andamans Islands capital, in Bay of Bengal.....Page 3

United States Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, June 23 (AP)—Japan's naval defeat in the Philippines Sea mounted in proportions today when it was disclosed officially that one of her biggest and newest aircraft carriers probably was sent to the bottom by a submarine.

The carrier was of the Shokaku class, probably a 28,000-ton, 815-foot-long warship.]

The announcement of Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, made in a communique, also listed the definite sinking of a destroyer.

Revised Score Of Sea Battle

That made the score for the June 18-19 action:

Definitely Sunk—A Hayataka-class carrier, a destroyer and three tankers. (5).

Probably Sunk—A Shokaku-class carrier. (1).

Damaged — A Hayataka-class carrier "left burning furiously"; a Zuikaku-class carrier, hit with three 1,000-pound bombs; a light carrier, hit by two aerial bombs; a Kongo-class battleship, a cruiser, two destroyers and two tankers. (9).

In addition, the Japanese lost more than 360 carrier planes.

Two United States carriers and a battleship sustained superficial damage and lost 70 planes.

The Shokaku-class carrier was hit by three torpedoes Sunday, the first day of a victory scored largely by aircraft of Task Force 58, commanded by Vice-Admiral Marc A. Mischer.

Boring Northward On Saipan

The communique did not mention the fighting on Saipan Island, in the southern Marianas, the invasion of which by American assault forces goaded a major part of the Japanese fleet into action. When that force was defeated in Sunday's air battle in its attempt to assist some 20,000 defenders of Saipan, it turned back.

American ground forces, aided by this victory, were last reported boring northward in steady gains. Enemy forces were under constant pressure from the air, land artillery and big naval guns.

Nimitz made no claim in today's report that the light enemy carrier hit by aerial torpedoes was sunk or even probably sunk. Naval men, however, pointed out that two such hits must have caused great damage.

One Of Japan's Best

"Janes Fighting Ships" describes the Shokaku type carrier probably sent to the bottom by submarine attack as one of Japan's best.

The Shokaku itself is 800 feet long, has a speed of 30 knots and carries 60 aircraft.

Its keel was laid December 11, 1937, and the ship was completed in 1941, probably shortly before the Japs made the Pearl Harbor attack.

In tonnage and overall length the Shokaku compares, roughly, with the American carrier Enterprise, one of the United States Navy's largest.

The Shokaku, meaning crane, was originally armed with 12 5-inch anti-aircraft guns.

370 Planes Two-Day Toll

Nimitz said two Nipponese navy twin-engined bombers were shot down by American planes returning Monday from their attack on the enemy fleet force.

This increased Japanese air losses for Monday to at least 17 and made a stunning total of 370 enemy planes downed in the two-day engagement.

The claim that the big Shokaku class carrier was "probably sunk" is extremely cautious. The communique did not specify the location of the submarine's successful attack, but it is presumed to have been in the Philippine Sea area west of the invaded Marianas.

Three Other Carriers Crippled

Besides the Hayataka-class carrier sunk and the Shokaku carrier probably sunk, three other carriers hit in Monday's air strike were badly crippled and probably will be out of action for weeks or months.

Thus the battle of the Philippine Sea has deprived the enemy of the service of at least five critically needed carriers.

In the war to date Japan has lost seven flattops with two more listed as probably sunk.

Truk And Ponape Bombed

Joining Southwest Pacific-based air forces in a two-way smash at by-passed Truk, in the Carolines, heavy bombers of the Seventh Army Air Force dropped 70 tons of bombs on that target Tuesday and Wednesday, Nimitz reported. Enemy interceptors attempted to interfere with both strikes, and one American plane was damaged in each raid. All planes, however, returned to their base in the Marshall Islands.

Ponape, in the Carolines, and isolated enemy forces in the Marshalls also were bombed.

Task Force 58 On Prowl

Task Force 58—the greatest naval armada the world has ever known—was prowling the far Western Pacific still eager for the showdown with the Japanese navy that appeared so close at hand earlier. Without losing a vessel or turning a gun on an enemy warship, this mighty force had repulsed with its aerial arm alone the Japanese bid to bolster Saipan.

Admiral Raymond A. Spruance who already has inflicted imposing victories against the Japanese, is in over-all command of Force 58.

Tokyo's Version Of Losses

The Japanese admitted some losses today. An official communique, broadcast by the Tokyo radio, placed these at one carrier, two tankers and 50 planes. The usual extravagant claims of having inflicted heavy losses on the opposing fleet were made.

"Five enemy aircraft carriers and more than one battleship were sunk or damaged and more than 100 enemy planes were shot down," said the Tokyo communique.

Bombers and torpedo planes were sent in pursuit. They were to slow the enemy's withdrawal, Worden said, so fast American battleships could catch up.

In the fading light of day they swarmed on the enemy ships. When darkness closed in, they had scored the victory Nimitz reported from his headquarters here Thursday.

Some felt the fight for Hengyang might well become a virtual battle for China.

Several American and other foreign agencies already have transferred from Kukong, provisional capital of Kwangtung, to Kweilin, provisional capital of Kwangsi, but nervousness also prevails in the latter capital because of a fear that the Japanese, if successful in taking Hengyang, might then turn southward along the Kwangsi railway.

Yunnan Drive Gains

All Japanese forces have been driven west and south of the Shweli river and one advanced Chinese unit has reached a point less than ten miles north of Tengchung, the main enemy base west of the Salween in China's Yunnan province, the Chinese high command announced.

Reinforced Japanese troops from Lungling, southeast of Tengchung, attacked Chinese troops along the Burma Road to the east of the town, however.

Chinese Cross River

The Chinese have crossed the Shweli river following the capture of Chiangtso where 150 Japanese dead and quantities of artillery, ammunition and small arms were found, the communique said.

The Japanese drive from Lungling was supported by five tanks.

The 14th Air Force strafed a pack train of 400 animals and caused heavy casualties, the communique added.

Japs Nearing Hengshan In Siang River Drive

Chungking, June 23 (AP)—Japanese forces were only 25 miles north-northeast of the rail junction of Hengyang, in south-central Hunan province, and were closing in on the town of Hengshan in their swift drive down the Siang river from captured Changsha, a Chinese army spokesman said tonight.

The spokesman said that six Japanese divisions totaling from 100,000 to 120,000 troops were engaged in this all-out drive aimed at splitting China in two and wresting the entire Canton-Hankow railway route from the Chinese.

More Jap Troops Ready

He added that the enemy was preparing to throw even more troops into the battle, including two divisions transferred from southern Honan province, where a drive also was in progress to seal the gaps in the Peiping-Hankow line recaptured by the Chinese.

In western Honan, the spokesman said, the position has become stabilized through Chinese recapture of Lingpao on the Lunghai railway near the western border, and of Sunghsien, 45 miles southsouthwest of enemy-held Loyang. Fighting, however, continued both east and west of the Peiping-Hankow route.

Yank Gains Cheer Chinese

The spokesman said the Chinese had been heartened by the American advance on Saipan Island because, although the Hunan province situation was serious, the general Allied situation in the war against Japan was improved.

Thousands of Chinese civilians already were reported fleeing from threatened Hengyang before the enemy Hunan offensive.

Chinese quarters here made no attempt to conceal belief that the situation was immensely grave.

Fleet's Flight Irks Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, June 23 (AP).—President Roosevelt today expressed disappointment that a Japanese fleet got away this week before American naval forces could annihilate it. He told his news conference that the joint chiefs of staff were disappointed because the Japanese fleet simply ran away. He observed that it is a difficult thing to destroy a fleet that has run away.

Greatest Artillery Barrage of Pacific War Covers American Advance.

BIG BATTLE IS STILL AHEAD

Yanks Hold Every Card for Victory, but Showdown Battle Is Yet to Be Fought

By HOWARD HANDLEMAN.

Representing the Combined U. S. Press. Distributed by the Associated Press.

Aboard the Joint Allied Expeditionary Flagship Off Saipan (via Navy Radio), June 23 (A. P.).—Freed from any immediate threat of naval intervention by Monday's defeat of the Japanese fleet, American Marines and Army units pushed up the slopes of Mount Tapotchau today in preparation for a climax in the battle for Saipan Island.

Vice-Admiral Marc Mitscher's carrier aircraft, which routed the Japanese fleet, wiped out any chance the Japanese had of holding Saipan, and thus reduced the battle for the island to the familiar pattern of fanatical Japanese fighting to kill as many Americans as possible before dying themselves.

Moving behind an artillery barrage unprecedented in the Pacific war, the Americans continued to suffer casualties from Japanese mortar and artillery fire. In retreat, the Japanese were believed to be withholding their best troops for a final effort, and the American general commanding the operation said: "We have not met the bulk of the enemy forces yet. A lot of their best men are concentrated back of Tapotchau."

Japs Number 20,000.

This climax battle was expected at Tanapag Harbor, north of the town of Garapan, which has undergone terrible sea and air bombardments during the past few days.

The downslope of Tapochau is heavily fortified to protect the town and harbor but the fortifications may be pointed the wrong way for this action with the Marines and soldiers moving down from behind.

With aerial superiority plus preponderance in man power and fire power, the Americans hold every card for victory in the approaching showdown with the bulk of Japanese infantrymen, believed to total 20,000. This superiority was augmented yesterday when the first squadron of American fighter planes landed at captured Aslito Airfield.

Great artillery batteries are alert to avert a heavy infantry battle if possible with land and air spotters constantly searching for concentrations of Japanese troops. Several concentrations already have been broken up and, once Tapotchau is secured, American artillery will nearly control the whole island.

Foe Loses Material.

Meanwhile the Japanese are losing a great amount of fighting material. The Americans continue to uncover great stores of material hidden in mountain caves and reinforced concrete storage planes that look like bomb shelters. In the vicinity of Aslito airfield Seabees found a cache of airplane parts, including many brand new aircraft engines with a complete stock of spare parts in addition to several flyable Zeros lined up before a hangar.

War material booty already is greater than any previously captured and the Americans have still to reach the heaviest garrison concentrations. Japanese determination to make a last-ditch stand was evidenced last night on Tinian Island, three miles from Saipan, when searchlights beamed at an airfield until a few rounds from an American battleship made the Japanese handle repair work in the dark.

Japanese fighting tactics are new for them though. Infiltrations have been made at night but not on the scale of other operations. There are some evidences of Japanese fanaticism, such as when seventy-five Japanese stood shoulder-high in marsh water sniping near the American-held town of Charan Kanoa, but the general Japanese pattern has been of retreat.

One Marine officer pointed out that the retreat is involuntary as "artillery shells mix up things written on paper."

Marine Private Wonders Why Allies Want Saipan

Lecture on Health Dangers Gives Rise to Question

The following, by Sergeant John B. T. Campbell jr., of Los Angeles, a Marine Corps combat correspondent, was distributed by The Associated Press.

SAIPAN, Marianas Islands, June 16 (Delayed)—On the eve of the American invasion of this island, a medical officer called members of a Marine artillery unit together and warned them:

In the surf, they must beware of sharks, barracuda, sea snakes, anemones, razor-sharp coral, polluted waters, poison fish and, of all things, giant clams capable of snapping on a man like a bear-trap.

Ashore, the men must take precautions against leprosy, typhus, filiarisis, yaws, typhoid and paratyphoid fevers, dengue fever, dysentery, an assortment of skin and eye infections, saw grass or saber grass, a wide variety of insects, snakes and giant lizards.

They were instructed not to eat anything found growing on the island, nor to drink its waters, nor to approach its inhabitants.

At the conclusion of his lecture, the doctor asked if there were any questions. A private raised his hand.

"Yes?" queried the doctor.

"Sir," said the private, "Why don't we let the Japs have the island?"

Baltimorean Survives Shell Blast At 10 Feet

JUN 23 1944

[The following story was written by Technical Sergeant Pete Zurlinden, a Marine Corps combat correspondent and former Annapolis reporter for the Associated Press.]

Somewhere in the Pacific (Delayed)—A mortar shell that burst 10 feet in front of him sent 20-year-old Marine Pfc. Martin Robert Beck, Emersonian Apartments, Baltimore, to the hospital for two months following the battle of Tarawa, but not until he had put two Japs beyond the stage where hospitalization would have done them any good.

Receiving the medal of The Order of The Purple Heart during ceremonies conducted by his commanding officer, Capt. Leonard G. Hicks, of Portland, Ore., Private Beck told how he and two other members of the Second Marine regiment had attacked an enemy bunker, destroying the Japs with hand grenades.

Attacked From Behind

"We were out in the middle of the Tarawa airstrip when the Japs, who had infiltrated to a bunker behind us, opened fire," he said.

"The others covered me while I crawled close enough to toss in a couple of grenades. I think I got 'em, but we dropped a few more through the gun slits for good measure before going inside to check up."

Private Beck was moving along the front lines with his outfit when the shell fragments wounded him November 23, the final day of the fighting.

"Terrific Roar"

"There was a terrific roar—and the next thing I knew I was covered with blood and couldn't walk."

After two months in the hospital Private Beck has returned to duty and at present has been assigned to a communications message center.

"My legs, which got it the worst, are all healed up now," he declared. "I feel as good as I ever did."

Enlisted In 1941

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Sol E. Beck, the young marine is the only member of his immediate family now serving in the armed forces. A brother, Howard, 24, served in the Pacific area with the army until recently given a medical discharge.

Private Beck enlisted in the Marine Corps October 13, 1941, at Baltimore, when he was a senior at Garrison High School.

Eyewitness Describes Nippon's Biggest Air Disaster Off Guam

JUN 23 1944

By William L. Worden

[Representing Combined American Press]

Aboard the Flagship, United States Fifth Fleet, June 21 (AP via Naval Radio—Delayed)—This huge force today completed the rout of a powerful segment of the Japanese grand fleet from waters east of the Philippine Islands—without firing a salvo or losing a ship.

Japanese losses in the two-phased plane-versus-fleet battle included at least 358 planes downed in an attack on our fleet off Guam and possibly one carrier blown up and another set afire badly when our planes rained bombs and torpedoes on the enemy.

First Disclosure

(Admiral Chester Nimitz announced Jap plane losses were at least 368 and that 14 enemy ships were sunk or damaged. Worden's story was the first disclosure, however, that Guam was the site of the Sunday air battle in which 353 enemy planes were downed. Guam is the southernmost and largest of the Marianas Islands, which include Saipan.)

Our losses in the second phase—on Monday—were moderate and a majority of downed airmen were rescued despite the hazardous return to carriers for night landings at sea. It was believed today the Japanese fleet has fled behind the Philippines and that the threat of ship or sea-based plane action against our landing forces of Saipan has ended.

Great Aerial Disaster

The first phase occurred June 19 when planes and anti-aircraft guns of Admiral Raymond Ames Spruance's fleet, within sight of Guam, turned the Jap attack into one of the war's greatest aerial disasters for the Axis. Enemy planes attacked from the west in long-range flights from carriers, struck the American fleet with obvious intention of going on to Guam to refuel. Spruance, however, held the fleet near Guam all day and sent waves of bombers over Guam and Rota, and prevented enemy planes from landing on those islands.

He made it virtually certain no planes survived the aerial battle, which ranged over hundreds of miles of sea. The Jap planes which escaped our fighters and anti-aircraft almost certainly were lost attempting to return to their carriers, which were out of fuel range.

Jap Flyer Losses High

Enemy personnel losses were almost 100 per cent., since the battles took place in an area controlled by Spruance's fleet and the Japanese could make no attempt at rescuing their pilots.

Naturally it was impossible to see much of the first phase which was a series of encounters from 10 A. M. until dark, but part of the battle did rage within sight of the flagship.

The first action was the take-off of hundreds of American planes as the Japs were reported approaching. In a few minutes black puffs of anti-aircraft fire appeared over battleships on the horizon. The distant ships seemed wreathed in fire as multiple batteries threw up an unbelievable wall of steel.

Ack-Ack Thickens

Almost immediately bomb bursts spouted in the water and two enemy planes started burning in the air and crashed. Puffs of ack-ack thickened and spread until a quarter of the horizon was a polka-dot of smoke balls in the still-soundless battle.

The enemy was reported approaching from three sides. Vapor flowed from friendly planes climbing into the sky. The vapor trails intermingled and formed artificial clouds. The planes were visible only when sunlight flashed on their wings.

More Planes Appear

The first attack was repelled on the fringes of the fleet. An hour later more bombers appeared. One crossed our stern under intense AA and dropped one bomb. It missed. The bomber caught fire when the flagship's 40-mm. shells found it. The plane hesitated like a tired bird and fell slowly into the sea.

The fleet turned and twisted, but other Japs came in. A battleship on the horizon appeared to have a continuous belch of flame from its guns, firing steadily for 20 minutes.

A torpedo bomber off our starboard quarter passed over frantic fire of destroyers without apparent hurt, but then he banked over the waves and crashed wing down into the sea, afire.

Silent And Invisible

Overhead the war in the clouds went on silently and invisibly, the guns of the ships drowning out that conflict.

Another torpedo plane flew over the destroyer and then dived spectacularly, the destroyer blowing him apart. A wing came off and floated down like paper. The engine fell out flaming and the plane dived slowly as a torpedo fell out of its belly end over end.

Before noon the near battle was over. Ack-ack still dappled the horizons but no more planes came in. At 12.30 Spruance set the example by going to lunch.

Fuelless Japs Trapped

New attacks hit the fringes of the fleet during the afternoon but the battle center moved toward Guam and Rota, where Americans caught the fuelless Japs trying to land. There also were fighters there trying to protect the airfields and they were downed. On one Guam field only five planes remained next morning of more than a hundred which the Japanese had planned to have there.

At dusk the last American planes returned to the circling carriers and added up the incredible score—353 to 21.

Some of the downed American pilots were later picked up. Carriers worked until after dark easing stragglers onto decks.

No Further Alarms

One landing in full darkness was made on a carrier which proudly flew the Lone Star flag of Texas under the United States emblem. Doubtless the Japanese would have been confused about a new ally of the United Nations if any had lived to tell about seeing it. But none did.

By 10 P. M. there were no further alarms, nothing anywhere on the sea as the fleet rushed toward Japanese ships to the westward, nothing except occasional floating wreckage of what had been Nippon's sea-based aerial fleet.

This phase ended the immediate threat to the Marianas landing, but Spruance was still trying desperately for a surface battle with the Japanese which he has been seeking for more than a year. Because of the distance between the fleets this was an outside chance.

Bombers Take Off

However, the Japanese were definitely located the next afternoon by scout planes and a big American bombing and torpedo fleet was launched late in the afternoon to try to reach and slow down the Japanese so that the fast battleships could catch them.

Bombers took off into the setting sun with only a couple of hours of light left and a trip ahead of them which was almost at the maximum range of carrier planes. Carriers cleared decks for a strike, sent out everything on their flight decks while the fleet increased speed to the westward.

For hours there were no reports from the bombing fleet.

Silence Is Broken

Hours went by and still there was no report.

Finally, long after dark, planes broke radio silence just once:

"Two carriers smoking."

Then there were more hours of silence.

Then the first planes returned to the blacked-out fleet. First there was one lone bomber circling overhead with landing lights showing on wings.

Turn Into Wind

More and more planes appeared, more light covered the sea. (Remember this is halfway between Marianas and the Philippines and well west longitudinally of Tokyo.)

Unfortunately, from the standpoint of the chase against the Japanese it was necessary to turn carriers into the wind, which was from the east, in order to land the planes. This cost valuable time but was unpreventable.

Planes circled and the intership radio was frantic. All planes were perilously low on gasoline, some virtually out. Within a few minutes the first of those with dry tanks were forced to land on the sea, unable to get aboard the carriers quickly enough. Crewmen of the downed planes clambered on rubber rafts and added blinking flashlights to the confusing battery of lights illuminating the sea.

Starshells fired to aid stragglers hung on the edges of the clouds. From the flagship it was possible to watch the hazardous landings on the carriers. Plane lights circled, dropped lower, lower, approached the sterns of flight decks guided by illuminated paddles held by perspiring deck officers. Sometimes they made that perilous last ten feet safely. Sometimes they were too high as the pilots strained to see in the dark. Then they bounced sickeningly, sometimes wrecked landing gears or smashed into barriers, where plane handlers dared whirling propellers to haul wrecks forward so others could land.

The planes returned faster than they could be landed.

Saved By Destroyers

Behind us destroyers slowed to pick him up.

In a couple of hours it was all over. Ship lights went out and the fleet resumed its almost hopeless chase after the Japs. Not until this morning was anything very clear. Then a checkup showed many planes were on the wrong carriers, correcting earlier fears they had been lost.

Most of those downed because of lack of fuel were picked up during the night or next morning, when rescue planes joined in hunting for them on a blue sea stained here and there with dye thrown out by pilots to attract attention.

Saw Carrier Blow Up

A pilot named Wilkinson said:

"I got on a raft. I saw one Jap carrier blow up. Another with planes on deck was flaming brightly." This report was verified by other pilots.

We never did catch the Jap fleet and today nothing remains anywhere in the waters east of the Philippines except a few pieces of floating wreckage and some huge oil slicks.

The admiral took his customary two-hour walk on deck this afternoon.

But his step was a little more springy than it was yesterday.

'Free Truthful World Press Can Stop Wars'

JUN 23 1944

Somewhere in Australia, June 23 (AP)—Kent Cooper, executive director and general manager of the Associated Press, told Australians in a rebroadcast address tonight he hoped Australians and Americans would work steadily together to remove a basic cause of wars—perverted presentation of international news.

His message was delivered in a transcribed radio address via the Australian National Broadcasting station as guest speaker on the nation-wide "America Talks to Australia" program.

Urges "World Free Press"

Cooper said the ideal of a free press in a free world should be sought.

"Should we achieve this goal or even approach it, the tremendous sacrifice of this hour won't have been in vain."

Control of news is the first tool any national leader requires to drive his people to war, Cooper said, adding that Hitler's first move was to take control of information agencies.

"The most powerful thing in the world is truth. If news may flow freely, if controls permitting systematic distortion are rigidly prevented, we may have an abiding peace based on truth will prevail.

Favorable Conditions Needed

"For truthful world news, I am convinced can be attained only under the following conditions: First, by guarantees of freedom of the press in each country, thereby ensuring equality of access to news at its source by news agencies, native and foreign.

"This would prevent the danger of Government control and subsidized agency poisoning or throttling of the flow of news.

"Third, by insuring equality for all in availability of news transmission facilities. Fourth, if not a penalty for distortion of news, at least a declaration in denunciation of that form of news presentation."

"Newsmen Will Be Out"

He visualized politicians and soldiers in the role of statesmen sitting at peace tables after the war and said it was too much to expect that newsmen would be invited—although "certainly newsmen have competent knowledge of one basic cause of war and that is perverted presentation of international news."

"I am gratified your Australian newspapers cling so tenaciously to the tenets of a free press," Cooper continued. "I hope Australian newspapers will go even further in taking up the crusade for a free world press.

Some Gains Inevitable

"Even if our efforts could not for a time gain any perceptible change in countries where governments control what the press may print, it surely would gain two important guarantees.

"First, that news shall be freely available to all newsmen everywhere and, second, that no country shall give preferential transmission facilities to its own press against the press of any other country. . . ."

"It is because I believe it true that unbiased news is the most vital moral concept in the world today that I earnestly hope the future will find Australians and Americans with our firm bonds of sympathy and mutual understanding working together for the ideal of a free press in a free world."

New York, June 23 (AP)—Japanese imperial headquarters acknowledged today the loss of a Japanese aircraft carrier, two oil tankers and 50 planes in an engagement with an American naval task force west of the Marianas, and admitted that the Japanese had been "unable to inflict a decisive blow upon the enemy."

The broadcast, recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, said part of the Japanese combined fleet had participated in the action which began on June 19 (Japanese time) and continued until the following day.

Five Carriers Hit, Japs Say

A communique issued earlier by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz had announced that American carrier-based planes had sunk a Japanese carrier of the new Hayataka class and three fleet tankers in addition to damaging a battleship, three carriers and other warcraft. The bulletin acknowledged the loss of 49 American planes and superficial damage to three warships.

The Tokyo communique asserted that the Japanese had sunk or damaged five Allied aircraft carriers and one or more battleships, and asserted that 100 Allied planes had been destroyed.

The Japanese said their battle fleet had carried out "a forestalling action."

Bomber Pilot Tells About Crash Near Ponape.

Somewhere in the Marshall Islands (A. P.) (Delayed). — The four-man crew of an Army Mitchell Medium Bomber which crashed into the Pacific just twenty-miles from the Jap-held isle of Ponape, lived to tell the tale, and relate the lengths to which armed forces of our country will go to rescue men when there still is a chance to save them.

The men rescued were First Lieut. Henry M. Phillips, the pilot; Co-pilot Second Lieut. Warren W. Huffstutter; Second Lieut. Charles J. Glowina, bombardier-navigator, of New Britain, Conn., and Staff Sergt. Eugene T. Doyle of Newark, radio gunner.

The pilot told the story.

"We were doing a low-level strafing job and dropping incendiaries on plantation houses and warehouses near the air strip," he said, "when Jap ack-ack hit one of the engines. I immediately heeled out and headed homeward, giving the word to Lieut.-Col. Ted Willis, our squadron C. O.

"We got up to about 1,000 feet, and I tried to feather the damaged engine. It was no go and soon the other engine started to give out. I gave the word to the boys to brace themselves and started down.

Got a Raft Out.

"We hit the water at about 100 miles an hour and got out through the safety hatch.

"We got one of the life rafts. I tried to salvage what equipment could be useful to us, but there wasn't much I could get. The swells were about twenty-five feet high. The men were all sick from swallowing gasoline and salt water.

"Lieut.-Col. Willis dropped us a life raft and radio, but the waves carried them off before we could reach them. We didn't have time to secure our canteens, and so we had no water. To make it worse, we could see the dark outlines of sharks around us.

Could See Ponape.

"When dawn broke we saw Ponape right in front of us. I guess all of us must have done some praying then. It didn't take long for our prayers to be answered, because there was the rescue plane. We managed to fire the Very pistol and they came toward us.

"They couldn't land because of the rough water, but dropped us supplies. Again the waves swept the stuff away. The rescue plane blinked a message that a destroyer was coming and, sure enough, in a short while there she was, the most welcome sight I ever saw. They gave us swell treatment on board, too."

Lieut. Phillips and his crew, as soon as they landed back here, were given a quick check up by the doctor, and except for a few cuts and bruises, were pronounced fit. They are now on their way back to the States for a good rest and a little fun.

7 Officers Executed For Insulting Hitler

JUN 23 1944

New York, June 23 (AP)—The Office of War Information today said a document issued by the German high command and captured in Italy showed that seven officers in the German army had been executed for "breach of their oath of allegiance to the Fuehrer by slandering, mocking and insulting his person," among other charges.

Declaring that "mercy for saboteurs and traitors to the Fuehrer and his work is out of the question," the document said that in the event of the discovery of more opposition to Hitler, "an inquiry will be made to see whether superior officers have failed to carry out their duty in the field of national socialist leadership and ideological training."

The document said Hitler had ratified the death sentences against the seven officers.

Four High-Ranking Japs Reported Dead

JUN 23 1944

New York, June 23 (AP)—Deaths of four high-ranking Japanese military and naval officers were announced today by the Japanese Domei news agency in broadcasts recorded by the Federal Communications Commission.

Domei said Vice-Admiral Hoshimasa Nakahara, a former member of the navy general staff and former chief of the navy ministry personnel section, had "died from an illness" while "actively engaged at the front."

Two lieutenant generals identified only as Motomura and Yokoyama died "in action on the China front," the Japanese agency said, and a Major General Mara "succumbed to an illness" in Manchuria.

19 Nations' Action On Bolivia Hailed

JUN 23 1944

Washington, June 23 (AP)—Recognition of the Bolivian Government of Major Gualberto Villarroel today by 19 American nations, including the United States, solved one of the Western Hemisphere's main political problems, leaving the question of Argentina on the pending list.

Diplomats hailed the joint action. Six months ago all the republics except Argentina refused to recognize the revolutionary regime because of alleged Nazi influence in the coup which established it.

Mentioned As Ambassador

Recognition meant that in the opinion of the 18 foreign offices and the State Department the steps the Bolivian Government has taken to eliminate Nazi-tainted officials and oust Nazi agents were satisfactory proofs of Bolivia's intention to remain in the lineup for hemispheric security.

It was learned at the Bolivian Embassy that discussions in La Paz on selection of a new Ambassador to Washington are centering on Luis Fernando Guachalla, who was Ambassador here at the time of the coup, and Victor Andrade, Minister of Labor in the present Government.

Prime Problem

Argentina, whose Government has been recognized by Bolivia, Chile and Paraguay and partially recognized by Ecuador, is now the prime problem of Pan-American diplomacy.

Carlos Dorado, charge d'affaires of the Bolivian Embassy, issued a statement asserting that recognition will accelerate steps already taken by the Vilarroel Government which he called "incontrovertible evidence of friendship and solidarity in the cause of the United Nations."

U.S., Britain, 17 Others Favor Bolivia

JUN 23 1944

Washington, June 23 (AP)—The United States and 17 other American republics today recognized the Governmet of Bolivia—ending six months of diplomatic isolation of the South American nation.

(The British Government has recognized the new Bolivian Government, a Reuter's dispatch from London this afternoon said.)

(A Reuter's dispatch from Rio de Janeiro said: "The Foreign Office announces that Brazil has recognized the Bolivian Government.")

One other nation, Uruguay, has agreed to extend recognition but will not take the technical step necessary for a day or so.

Recognition by the neighbor countries followed a decision that the Bolivian regime definitely favors the United Nations' cause.

U. S. Action Taken

The United States' action was taken at La Paz, Bolivia, by Robert F. Woodward, charge d'affaires of the embassy there, who presented a note to Foreign Minister Enrique Baldivieso announcing resumption of diplomatic relations by the United States. State Department officials said they could not say immediately whether Ambassador Pierre Boal would be returned to Bolivia.

The department made clear that the action to recognize resulted from at least six specific steps by the regime of Major Gualberto Villarroel evidencing Bolivia's desire to be restored to its place in the council of the United Nations.

Statement Issued

The State Department issued this statement on Bolivia:

"The United States Embassy in La Paz this morning under instructions presented a note to the Foreign Minister of Bolivia renewing relations between the United States and Bolivia.

"Between January 24 and January 28, 1944, 19 American republics after full exchange of information and consultation with one another declared their intention to withhold recognition from the Bolivian Junta, which came into power on December 20, 1943. They concluded that recognition of the new Bolivian regime would not be in the interest of the security of the hemisphere and the success of the Allied cause. This was the criterion, and the only criterion, which they considered in passing upon the status of the Bolivian regime.

Points To Friendly Acts

"Since last January the provisional government of Bolivia has carried out a number of decisive and affirmative acts in support of hemisphere security and the cause of the United Nations. Accordingly, the American governments have reviewed the situation again by exchanging information and consulting with one another. The concensus is that there is no longer reason for withholding recognition.

"The exchange of information and consultation which led to the decision by the sovereign states concerned that the Bolivian Government should be recognized took place pursuant to resolutions 22 and 23 of the Inter-American Emergency Advisory Committee for Political Defense, located at Montevideo, which has now been apprised of the decision of this Government."

U. S. Friendship 'Not For Sale', F. D. R. Says

JUN 23 1944

Washington, June 23 (AP)—President Roosevelt said today that this country's foreign policy is not for sale for $140,000, the approximate World War I debt payment made by Finland shortly before the State Department ordered Finnish Minister Hjalmar Procope, to leave the United States.

The President declined to comment further on Procope's expulsion but said we must remember that the present Finnish Government is allied with our common enemy, Germany, and fighting against our common ally, Russia.

A reporter pointed out that the State Department explained that the expulsion did not mean diplomatic rupture between the two governments and asked what Procope had done personally to offend the United States. The President said only that the diplomat is persona non grata.

Representatives Chosen

The President named 12 Government leaders and prominent economists to represent the United States at an international monetary conference to be held at Bretton Woods, N. H.

In an earlier letter to Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., the President emphasized that decisions of the conference will not bind this or any other government. The conference will consider proposals for an $8,000,000,000 currency stabilization fund and a $10,000,000,000 world bank for reconstruction and development.

The American delegation will be headed by Morgenthau and will include a bipartisan representation from the Banking and Currency Committees of the Senate and House.

Mr. Roosevelt said still to be named are technical experts who will advise the delegates.

Vinson In Group

Serving with Morgenthau will be:

Fred M. Vinson, economic stabilization director, vice-chairman; Assistant Secretary of State Dean Acheson, Edward E. Brown, president of the First National Bank of Chicago; Foreign Economic Administrator Leo T. Crowley, Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve board of governors; Mabel Newcomer, professor of economics at Vassar College; Representative Brent Spence (D., Ky.), chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency; Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.), member of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency; Senator Robert F. Wagner (D., N. Y.), chairman of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency; Harry D. White, assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury; Representative Jesse P. Wolcott (R., Mich.), member of the House Committee on Banking and Currency.

16 JAP VESSELS DESTROYED B.Y AMERICAN SUBS

JUN 23 1944

WASHINGTON, June 23. — (AP) Another heavy blow against waning Japanese seapower was disclosed today in a Navy announcement that roving American submarines have destroyed 16 more enemy ships, including 15 cargo vessels and a naval auxiliary.

The report came out almost simultaneously with an expression of regret from President Roosevelt that the Nipponese war fleet fled instead of accepting battle to the finish after losing heavily in a long-range aerial engagement with a U. S. Task force east of the Philippines this week.

The President observed that it is a difficult thing to destroy a fleet that has run away. Before it ran, however, the Japanese armada lost one aircraft carrier and three other vessels certainly sunk and 10 more damaged.

No indication was given of where the submarines scored their latest victories. But they have acted as a vanguard of American fleets in all actions and have prowled the coast lines of Japan beating down vital supply vessels.

The newest bag includes 11 medium cargo vessels, four small cargo carrying ships and a medium-sized naval auxiliary not otherwise identified.

These sinkings boost to 774 the number of Japanese craft sunk, probably sunk or damaged by American submarines since the war started.

Disclosure of the sinkings also showed that the rate of destruction by submarines has climbed to better than two Japanese vessels a day, with 50 sinkings announced already this month.

tion of nations is the first definite step for permanent world cooperation."

In another statement, however, 21 House Republicans declared that while this nation has a "moral and practical responsibility" to share in rebuilding war-ravaged nations, the Administration's World Monetary plan is not the proper approach.

They proposed instead as the first step the creation by Congress of an American reconstruction fund under the supervision of an American board of directors, confirmed by the Senate. The fund would act separately or in joint account with foreign governments, individuals or corporations with all loans or credits made "in consideration of approved plans seeking to balance the budget of the recipient country."

Senators Overton (D-La) and McKellar (D-Tenn) said they hadn't heard Guffey talk but that they regretted any criticism had been made of Bailey during the North Carolinian's absence.

Overton said that "there does not walk on the floor of the Senate any finer, better or nobler character" than Bailey and that the North Carolina senator "rises above any criticism from the senator from Pennsylvania or any other source."

McKellar described Bailey as "one of the finest men who ever adorned the Senate by his presence."

FDR Names Delegation To Monetary Conference

JUN 23 1944

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(AP) President Roosevelt named a bipartisan delegation today to represent the United States at the United Nations monetary and financial conference.

He reiterated, in a letter to Secretary Morgenthau made public today by the Treasury chief, that neither this nor any other government would be bound by decisions of the conference to be held at Bretton Woods, N. H., starting July 1.

The President's letter also said the American delegation would be expected to adhere closely to previously announced principles covering proposals for an $8,000,000,000 currency stabilization fund and a $10,000,000,000 world bank for reconstruction and development.

Among the delegation, headed by Secretary Morgenthau are both Republican and Democratic members of the Senate and House Banking and Currency committees.

Senator Tobey (R-NH), whose appointment as an American delegate to the conference was announced today, said "this associa-

Spirit Bombs Reported Controlled

JUN 23 1944

Washington, June 23 (AP)—Information reaching this capital today indicated that some, presumably a small percentage, of the German rocket bombs being sent against England are radio-controlled, although the greater number are directed by gyro-compasses.

The type of control varies, as does the size of the bombs, their weight and speed.

'Mein Kampf' Banned In Germany, Report

JUN 23 1944

Washington, June 23 (AP)—H. R. Baukhage, Blue Network commentator, said in a broadcast today that "Mein Kampf," Hitler's autobiography and plan of conquest, was being suppressed in Germany and that Germans found reading it would be jailed. He said he received the information thtrough an unimpeachable European underground source.

Banning of the book, he said, did not mean the Nazi party was on its way out, but that "the Nazis have found it necessary to do everything possible to keep the populace quiet, to keep them from thinking too much about how they got where they are."

Roosevelt Picks O'Dwyer For Italian Control Post

JUN 23 1944

Appoints Ex-Brooklyn D. A. Official on Economics

WASHINGTON, June 23 (AP).—President Roosevelt today appointed Colonel William O'Dwyer, District Attorney on leave of Kings County, N. Y., to be the ranking American official on the economic section of the Allied Control Commission for Italy.

In this capacity Colonel O'Dwyer holds the title of vice-president and the personal rank of minister and represents the Foreign Economic Administration in the State Department. He succeeds Henry F. Grady, who held the post on a temporary basis.

The Allied Control Commission supervises the execution of armistice terms for Italy and acts in an advisory capacity for the Italian government. It operates directly under the theater commander, General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson.

Mr. Grady is scheduled to come back to this country to return to private affairs. He is president of American President Lines and chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank at San Francisco.

JUN 23 1944

Washington, June 23 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Willis H. Hale has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal for his participation in bomber flights over Japanese strongholds during operations against the Gilbert and Marshall islands.

The awards, the army announced today, were made by Lieut. Gen. Robert C. Richardson, commander of army air forces in the Central Pacific. Hale, now commanding general of the shore-based air force, forward area, in that theatre was commander of the Seventh Air Force at the time he made the flights.

Pilot Saves 15 Flyers Under Fire, Gets DSC

JUN 23 1944

Washington, June 23 (AP)—Defying heavy enemy fire and tossing seas, Lieut. Nathan G. Gordon, 27, landed his clumsy Catalina flying boat in Kavieng harbor to rescue 15 airmen from death or capture. Today he has the Congressional Medal of Honor.

A citation accompanying the award says, "Lieutenant Gordon unhesitatingly responded to a report of the crash (of an army bomber) and flew boldly into the harbor, defying close range fire from enemy shore guns to make three separate landings in full view of the Japanese and pick up nine men, several of them injured."

Then with his flying boat dangerously overloaded he took off only to receive reports of another group floating in a raft 600 yards from the enemy shore on the Bismarck archipelago.

"Promptly turning back," his citation continued, "he again risked his life to set his plane down under direct fire of the heaviest defenses of Kavieng and take aboard six more survivors."

Navy Sends Strike Squad Back to Coos Bay Crew

JUN 23 1944

Probe Breaks Regulations Is Being Studied

WASHINGTON, June 23 (AP).—The Navy Department issued the following statement today:

"The Associated Press has turned over to the Navy $412 in currency together with a photostatic copy of a letter having, in lieu of a signature, the typewritten line 'The Crew of the Coos Bay.' The letter requested The Associated Press to use the money said to have been collected from the crew to 'buy off' the strikers at the Lockland plant of the Wright Aeronautical Company or any other struck war plant.

"The Navy Department in Washington has no information about the letter or the alleged collection among the crew. Steps are being taken to obtain such information.

"Having received the $412 from The Associated Press, the Navy Department has no recourse except to return it to the commanding officer of the Coos Bay. This is being done.

"The Navy holds no brief for strikers in war time. Its attitude toward them needs no reiteration. Neither does the Navy condone expressions by its personnel or resentment, however sincere, which are in disregard of official regulations, which may be founded on imperfect knowledge of the issues, and which are so handled that they can be construed to be publicity seeking."

SENATE CONFIRMS ARMY PROMOTION

JUN 23 1944

WASHINGTON, June 23 (AP)—Senator Connally (D-Tex) withdrew today an earlier protest against the promotion of Col. Ernest J. Dawley to the rank of brigadier general, and the Senate confirmed the nomination.

Connally said he objected originally because of "reports" reaching him that Col. Dawley, then a temporary major general commanding an Army corps at the battle of Salerno, had ordered a battalion to undertake a dangerous mission against the advice of the division commander.

Connally added that Major General Dawley subsequently was demoted last September to his permanent rank of colonel on orders of General Eisenhower, returned to the United States, and now is stationed at Camp Hood, Tex.

The senator said he decided to withdraw objections to the promotion after Lt. General Joseph T. McNarney, deputy chief of staff, had appeared before the Senate Military Affairs committee in an executive session this morning to "strongly recommend" the promotion.

General McNarney told the committee, Connally said, that he could neither affirm nor deny the incident which the Texan described, explaining he had no official knowledge of it. Connally said the battalion was a unit of the 36th division, composed largely of Texas troops, which spearheaded the Salerno attack.

Delays Action on Admirals

JUN 23 1944

House Refuses to Act Until Marshall's Rank Corresponds

WASHINGTON, June 23 (AP).—The House refused today to take action that would have resulted in giving two admirals highed corresponding rank than that held by General George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff.

Representative Carl Vinson, Democrat, of Georgia, chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee, brought up a Senate measure granting a new title—Fleet Admiral—to Admirals Ernest J. King and William D. Leahy, so they might rank with their Allied Nations' counterparts.

But because the military committee had not acted on a similar proposal to elevate General Marshall and General H. H. Arnold, Air Force chief, to the rank of "Generals of the Army," Representative Paul W. Shafer, Republican, of Michigan, objected and the proposition was shelved temporarily.

Navy Appropriation Signed

JUN 23 1944

Washington, June 23 (AP)—President Roosevelt today signed a $27,569,798,301 appropriation bill for the navy. The action raised to more than $57,000,000,000 the total funds given the world's largest navy in the last two years. The new funds are to be expended during the fiscal year starting July 1.

NAVY CASUALTIES

JUN 23 1944

Washington, June 23 (A. P.).—The Navy Department today listed the names of 19 additional casualties in the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard, which makes a total of 46,724 casualties reported by the Navy since December 7, 1941. Of this total 20,050 are reported dead, 18,903 wounded, 9,310 missing and 4,461 prisoners of war. The following Marine from this district, with next of kin, was included in today's list:

67 BILLION VOTED FOR APPROPRIATIONS

JUN 23 1944

WASHINGTON, June 23—(AP) Senator McKellar, (D-Tenn.) acting chairman of the Senate Appropriations committee told the Senate just before it adjourned tonight Congress appropriated $67,199,237,127 during the present session and had approved contract authorizations totaling $8,029,665,901.

He said this compared with appropriations of $114,564,008,594 and contract authorizations of $13,446,339,945 in the first session of the 78th Congress.

The figure for 1945, however, did not include reappropriations of funds unexpended from the current year's allotments.

The Senate cleared away the last of its must measures with passage of a $241,318,922 second deficiency appropriations bill.

The Legislation carried an administration-opposed provision banning grade pricing or labeling of processed fruits and vegetables by the OPA

Combat Pay Measure Approved

JUN 23 1944

Washington, June 23 (AP)—Senate approval sent to the White House today bills granting extra pay to specially qualified men of the army's combat ground forces and to put army and navy glider units on the same pay basis as the air forces and paratroops.

Congress Acts to Halt 'Abuse' of Free Mail

JUN 23 1944

Also Authorizes Simpler Way to Send Sums Up to $10

WASHINGTON, June 23 (AP).—Congress completed action today on two major pieces of legislation affecting the postal service.

One bill tightens Congressional control on the Executive Departments' use of postage-free mail, and another sets up a simplified system, to be known as "postal notes," for transmitting small sums up to $10 tthrough the mails.

Citing the tremendous growth in volume of "penalty" mail in recent years, from a postage equivalent value of $23,094,882 in 1934 to $120,180,056 last year, the Post Office Committee said action was necessary to control the volume of such mail and "prevent abuse" in its use.

The bill would require all departments using penalty mail covers—so named from the phrase "Penalty for private use to avoid payment of postage, $300," appearing in the stamp corner—to obtain such covers through the Post Office Department, and obtain appropriations from Congress to reimburse the Post Office Department for the cost of handling such mail.

The "postal note" plan provides for sale of such notes, in dollar denominations up to $10, for a flat fee of five cents each. Odd cents would be taken care of by adhesive stamps.

Using Of Liberty Ships To Carry Troops Hit

JUN 23 1944

Washington, June 23 (AP) — The Senate Truman Committee today praised the Liberty ship's contribution to the war as "the truck horse of the sea," but scored its use as a troop carrier or hospital ship.

In its long-awaited report on the Maritime Commission's merchant shipping the group declared that "because of its slow speed, necessity for convoy, and the possibility of damage at sea from fractures, the Liberty ship ought not to have been used as a carrier of troops or as a hospital ship."

Precautions Urged

Those Liberties already converted to transport, it added, should not be used to move soldiers "except in cases of very great emergency, and then only after special precautions are taken to strengthen the ship and to provide adequate convoy protection."

The committee quoted a War Department report that through conversions of the all-welded, one-time "ugly duckling," it "has been able to deploy overseas upward of 800,000 troops that otherwise would not have reached the fighting front" without loss of personnel that could be attributed to the ship.

Held Without Merit

The Committee termed "without merit" the explanation that only 50 troop transports were constructed for 1943 b[illegible]itional construction would be [illegible]en "at the expense of the cargo carrying program."

Reporting on its inquiry into cracks and other damages to 510 of 2,159 Liberties investigated, the Committee found in 240 cases only minor damages corresponding "to a large degree to those that would be encountered in normal ship operation," while only 103, or 20.2 per cent. could be considered "in the serious classification."

Improvements Noted

Improvement of construction in the latter part of 1943 and early 1944 "have apparently reduced the danger of structural damage," it reported, and it agreed with Admiral Emory S. Land of the Maritime Commission that available records indicate "more riveted ships than Liberty ships have completely failed structurally."

Referring to conversion delays, the report continued:

"The additional time of 60 to 90 days needed to convert a Liberty ship to a troop transport after it has initially been delivered, increased the construction time at the expense of the entire construction program.

Scheduling Hit

"A proper scheduling of construction would have permitted one or more yards to build transport ships. This would have avoided the waste incident to building cargo ships complete and then converting them to troop transports."

The report said (A) six Liberty ships have been converted for use as hospital ships, (B) 22 others have been converted to troop transports and four others are in process of conversion for that purpose, (C) the navy has taken delivery of 15, of which six are now operating as cargo-troop combinations in limited service and nine are under conversion for that use, and (D) in adidtion to these, 235 Liberties have been fitted out for transporting 300 to 500 prisoners of war per vessel, and 17 for occasional use in carrying up to 308 troops in limited operations.

Complaints Cited

The report said the committee had received complaints involving most, if not all of the shipyards building the ship to the effect that "they have not followed contract specifications, and the Maritime Commission inspectors have not been permitted full freedom."

Rails Authorized To 'Bump' Civilians

JUN 24 1944

Washington, June 23 (AP)—Railroads today were authorized by the Office of Defense Transportation to "bump" civilian travelers from trains when space is needed to transport wounded servicemen.

The order also authorizes the roads to discontinue passenger train service where necessary. With increasing frequency this summer, ODT officials said, it would be necessary to cancel reservations and tickets and to forbid the boarding of trains by any passengers except invalid troops and their attendants.

Legislation giving all furloughed members of the armed services travel priorities was offered in the House by Representative Hendricks (D., Fla.), who said the yielding of a seat "seems the very least that a civilian can do for these men who are fighting for us."

APPOINTMENT CONFIRMED

WASHINGTON, June 23—(AP) President Roosevelt nominated Llewellyn M. Williams of Wrangel, Alaska today to be Secretary of the Territory of Alaska, and within two and a half hours the appointment was confirmed by the Senate. Williams succeeds Edward L. Bartlett.

Bloc Favors Byrd on Ticket Of Republicans

JUN 23 1944

Congressmen Believe Democrat Would Help to Swing States in South

WASHINGTON, June 23 (AP).—A group of Republican Congressmen started a Byrd-for-Vice-President boom today, but the Democratic Senator from Virginia declared he was not a candidate.

He barely took time out from a renewal of his governmental economy demands and an excoriation of Senator Joseph F. Guffey, Democrat, of Pennsylvania, to tell reporters: "I'm not a candidate on any ticket whatsoever."

That also had been his response to Southern anti-fourth-term moves to make him head of the Democratic ticket.

But the talk of a Republican excursion outside party lines went right on with Representative Harold Knutson, ranking Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee, saying he would promote at the Republican National Convention the idea of offering the second place on the ticket to Senator Byrd. Representative Knutson will arrive in Chicago Saturday.

"There appears to be a great deal of sentiment for Senator Byrd," said Representative Joseph W Martin, Republican, of Massachusetts, House Republican leader, who will be permanent chairman of the Chicago meeting.

Senator Harlan J. Bushfield, Republican, of South Dakota, told newsmen he thought the nomination of Senator Byrd "would be a splendid move for the Republican party and the country."

The discussion arose while Senator Byrd was on the floor submitting a report of his economy committee and taking oratorical swings at Senator Guffey.

He accused the Pennsylvanian of making a "bitter, vindictive and, I think, untruthful attack" on Senator Josiah W. Bailey, Democrat, of North Carolina, at a time when he knew that Senator Bailey had been absent for some time because of illness. Then Senator Byrd declared with every evidence of anger: "I wish to say in his (Guffey's) presence that we Southerners do not appreciate being lectured by the Senator from Pennsylvania. We intend to work out our own problems in the South in our own way."

Roosevelt Again Refuses To Reply on 4th Term

JUN 23 1944

With a Grin, He Waves Aside Queries on Arnall Statement

WASHINGTON, June 23 (AP).—President Roosevelt declined with a grin today to confirm or refute a prediction by Governor Ellis Arnall, of Georgia, that the Chief Executive soon would express his willingness to accept a fourth-term nomination.

A reporter asked Mr. Roosevelt at today's news conference if he planned such a statement shortly after next week's Republican national convention, as forecast by Governor Arnall.

The President commented that it was the same old question taking a new form today.

"A new form in the light of recent events," the reporter said.

Well it won't work, Mr. Roosevelt replied.

"Don't I get anything for the effort?" the reporter asked.

No, said the President, and told him he would have to write it off as a total failure. Another reporter asked the President if he will consult political leaders before making a decision on a Presidential nomination. The President replied that this occasion was supposed to be a news conference and that the inquiry was a boudoir question at the present time.

Congress Calls Recess After 6-Month Session

JUN 23 1944

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(AP) Congress left Washington today for a five-week vacation after a six-month session devoted largely to charting the course for return to normalcy when peace comes.

Reflecting the belief of many of its members that the major battles of the war will be won in the not-too-distant future, Congress rushed through in the final days of the session legislation to expedite the return of industry to civilian production and put a one-year limitation, to June 30, 1945, on the extended life of the wartime price, rent and wage control act. The business legislation was designed to expedite settlement of terminated war contracts and give industry quick capital for conversion to civilian production.

Aid to Service Men

Fully half of the six-month meeting was spent blueprinting a program of aid to returning service men. The main measures give them mustering-out pay, and provide, through the "G.I. Bill of Rights," a program for their restoration to civilian life through educational and job opportunities, hospitalization and loans.

Mindful also of the weight the soldier vote might throw into the balance in the forthcoming election, the Congress wrote a soldier-ballot law to expedite voting by members of the armed services abroad, resolving a bitter controversy in favor of giving the individual states the maximum of control over the absentee-voting.

To keep the national debt from bulging through its war-weakened ceiling, it enacted a law boosting the debt limit to $260,000,000,000. President Roosevelt estimated the actual debt would reach $258,000,000,000 by July 1, 1945, if the war continues.

On the other side of the financial picture, appropriations fell to the lowest figure since the war started, aggregating approximately $66,000,000,000 in new money, compared with last year's $114,564,008,594 and a record of $147,071,208,961 the year before. Largest single allotment went to the Navy, which received $27,569,798,301, almost the same as last year. The Army's share fell to $15,434,814,795, plus some $33,000,000,000 left over from previous appropriations. This session's appropriations, however, boosted to an estimated $220,000,000,000 the war and defense funds authorized in appropriations and obligations since July 1, 1940.

Tax Bill Vetoed

The dramatic highlight of the session came on February 22, when the President tartly vetoed the $2,300,000,000 second wartime tax bill. The administration had asked for $10,500,000,000.

Mr. Roosevelt's sharply-worded message led to the bitterest break between the White House and Congress since he took office, with Senate Majority Leader Barkley of Kentucky, the "dear Alben" of past years, parting company temporarily with his White House chief. Congress overrode the veto and put the legislation on the law books.

The next tax bill that came up, simplifying the tax computation statutes for some 50,000,000 persons, passed with little controversy.

Outstanding legislation defeated would have incorporated the women's airforce service pilots (WASPS) into the Army, and set aside a fund to finance paid newspaper advertisement of war bonds.

Princess Martha Sees End Of Nazis In Norway

JUN 23 1944

New York, June 23 (AP)—Crown Princess Martha of Norway today declared "invasion day was the day our people have been waiting and praying for."

Speaking at the opening of a Norwegian Government-sponsored exhibit, she said the Allied invasion of France marked the beginning of the end of German occupation of Norway.

"Our ships aided in the invasion; our airmen and our soldiers are awaiting in England for a further signal to proceed," she said. "Norway awaits the return of its King and its Government, and this event shall come soon."

U. S. Plane Has Rocket Bombs

JUN 23 1944

WATERVLIET, N. Y., June 23 (AP).—The "flying bazooka," an adaptation of the tube-like rocket used by the Army's ground forces, has come into its own in the Asiatic war area, Brigadier General A. G. Gillespie, commanding officer at the Watervliet arsenal, said tonight. Dive-bomber crews in the China-Burma-India zone are firing rockets "with deadly effect against all types of ground, sea and air targets," he said. Loaded with both bombs and rockets, planes can dive with a speed of more than 400 miles an hour, he added.

Dr. MacCracken on World Court

JUN 23 1944

SCHENECTADY, June 23 (AP).—Establishment of a court of international justice to "sustain the rights of mankind" was urged tonight by Dr. Henry Noble MacCracken, president of Vassar College. "The right of peoples to choose their own government, and be undisturbed in thei ruse of it, is the principle in our Declaration of Independence, in the British declaration of right and in all other declarations of a similar nature," Dr. MacCracken said in an address prepared for broadcast.

GENTILE STUDYING ARMY'S JET PLANE

JUN 23 1944

Dayton, Ohio, June 23 (A. P.).—Capt. Don S. Gentile, the Piqua, Ohio, fighter ace who destroyed thirty Nazi planes on the western front, has been assigned to study the Army's new jet-propulsion plane at nearby Wright Field.

Col. F. W. Warburton, chief of the command flight section, today said that Capt. Gentile, who recently completed his thirty-day furlough, had been temporarily attached to the Materiel Flight Command and had been flying the new plane for several days.

Col. Warburton said that there was no indication how long Capt. Gentile would be at Wright Field, or what his ultimate destination would be.

Col. Warburton added that Capt. Gentile had been flying other types of pursuit ships than the Mustang, in which he made his combat record.

Free Press Held Essential To Prevent Future War

JUN 23 1944

Committee of 13 Editors to Seek World Status for Principle

DETROIT, June 23 (AP).—Terming freedom of the press throughout the world a means of preserving the future peace, John S. Knight, president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, today appointed a committee of thirteen editors whose objective will be to establish the principle in future national and international agreements.

"The people do not desire war and all peoples would discourage it if the real causes or motives for war were exposed through the daily publication of news free from the influence of self-interest," said Mr. Knight, publisher of "The Detroit Free Press," "The Akron Beacon Journal" and "The Miami Herald."

Appointment of the "committee on freedom of communications" was provided for in a resolution adopted at the April meeting of the A. S. N. E. Its first action, Mr. Knight said, would be to seek adoption of freedom of the press resolutions by the Republican and Democratic national political conventions.

Members of the committee are Ralph E. McGill, "The Atlanta Constitution," chairman; Carl W. Ackerman, of the graduate school of journalism of Columbia University, vice-chairman; Palmer Hoyt, of "The Portland Oregonian"; Laurence L. Winship, of "The Boston Globe"; Ralph Coghlan, of "The St. Louis Post-Dispatch"; Raymond McCaw, of "The New York Times"; Paul Scott Mowrer, of "The Chicago Daily News"; Nelson D. Poynter, of "The St. Petersburg Times"; Carl D. Groat, of "The Cincinnati Post"; Sevellon Brown, of "The Providence Journal Bulletin"; James E. Plan Missions To Japan After War

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 23 (A. P.).—Delegates to the national convention of Congregational Christian Churches were told here today that missionaries plan to return to Japan after the war to play an important part in post-war reconstruction.

"Only Christian principles can save and restore the people of Japan in the vast changes that must follow the defeat of military dictatorship," a report by the prudential committee to the Foreign Missions Board declared.

DEWEY'S BACKERS CLAIM NEW GAIN

JUN 23 1944

Bricker's Manager Calls 'Draft' a 'Joke', Sees Ohioan as Winner.

CHICAGO, June 23—(AP) Supporters of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey for the Republican presidential nomination claimed "substantial" additions to their cause today, but heard a manager for Gov. John W. Bricker call their "draft" move a "joke" and predict Bricker's nomination on the third or fourth ballot.

Backers of Lt. Comdr. Harold E. Stassen also asserted Stassen was in the race to the finish and that he would not take a vice-presidential nomination.

As platform-makers for the convention opening Monday received a variety of proposed foreign and domestic planks, all factions seemed to agree that key states such as Pennsylvania, California, and Illinois may hold the answer to the party's choice. These delegations — controlling 179 of the convention's 1,057 votes—will caucus Sunday and Monday.

J. Russel Sprague, New York national committeeman and a "draft-Dewey" leader, said there have been "very substantial additions" to the list of leaders from 22 states he announced yesterday as having volunteered to help nominate the New Yorker. He did not name the new states the reported aid came from.

Dewey Claims Disputed

Rep. Clarence J. Brown, of Ohio, floor manager for Bricker, arrived and hotly disputed the claims of the Dewey forces that the New Yorker will be nominated on the first or second ballot.

"This draft move to me is rather a joke," Brown told a news conference. "Before we go to buy a product at least we ought to look in the sack and see we are not getting a pig in a poke."

With 529 votes needed for a nomination, Brown said he estimated Dewey's first ballot strength at 385. Some unnamed "Dewey people" he had talked with only a few days ago, he said, listed Dewey's first ballot votes at 391.

Brown figured Bricker would receive between 200 and 225 on the first roll call, that he would "gain on the second and be nominated on the third or fourth, or the convention will go into a deadlock."

"The Dewey people know he has to win on the first ballot," he declared. "If he doesn't win on the first or second Dewey is through. We all know that."

The big congressman from Ohio's 7th district then said flatly: "This convention is not going to nominate anyone on the first or second ballot."

Dewey Hits "Bureaucracy"

Dewey's name figured also in a busy round of platform discussions during the day. As head of a Mackinac Island Postwar Advisory Council committee on government reorganization, he sent a message to the platform drafters terming the Roosevelt administration a "sprawling, overlapping bureaucracy." He called for a new regime with the President and Congress acting in concert to "raise the Federal service to a high level of efficiency and competence."

The message was read after Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, head of another Mackinac committee, presented a foreign plank advocating international organization of "peace forces" to prevent future wars.

A report on postwar finances, presented by Senator Taft of Ohio, Resolutions committee chairman, recommended reduction of individual income taxes after the war and elimination of Federal excise levies on all items but liquor and tobacco, with gasoline taxes left to the states.

Speculation that Taft may be the beneficiary in event of a Dewey-Bricker deadlock brought this comment from Brown:

"Senator Taft is an ardent supporter of Bricker and will be for Bricker through the last roll call. Taft will never be in the picture as long as Bricker is in it. Of course, if Bricker thought he couldn't be nominated Taft would be acceptable to him."

In response to further questions, Brown said Bricker would support the nominee of the convention whoever he may be.

Asked about a move among certain congressional Republicans to urge Senator Byrd (D-Va) as the Republican vice-presidential choice, Brown said: "Everybody knows there's not going to be any hybrid ticket out here."

Hearings Concluded

The general outlines of a platform promising cooperation with a free world for future peace and a "new spirit in Federal government" took shape as the Resolutions committee concluded public hearings.

Submission of a foreign policy plank declaring against the formation of a "world state" shared interest with a detailed blueprint for proposed changes in government administration, furnished by Dewey.

Platform committee members scanned closely a personal message Dewey sent members accusing the Democratic administration of abuse of power as well as a 43-page report calling on the Republicans to "restore harmony in government."

Dewey criticized the Roosevelt administration as a "sprawling, overlapping bureaucracy" which he said was "undermined by executive abuse of power, confused lines of authority, duplication of effort, inadequate fiscal controls, loose personnel practices, and an attitude of arrogance previously unknown in our history."

"We need," he continued, "an administration wherein the President, acting in harmony with Congress, will effect these necessary reforms and raise the Federal service to a high level of efficiency and competence."

Charging that "we have a divided government in the time of the nation's greatest emergency," the report recommended:

1—"Restore harmony in government, recreate good will and respect for the three branches of the Federal government."

Would Cut Payroll

2—Reduce the number of Federal employes and eliminate "partisan politics" in the civil service.

3—Change the philosophy of national welfare. The report declared "there is no place for a Federal government which assumes the right, without the mandate of the people, to reorganize the life of the country according to blueprints worked out by unknown and irresponsible presidential advisers."

4—"Unscramble" war agencies and reduce the number of government corporations.

5—Enforce stricter budget controls, pre-audit government expenditures and expand congressional checks on appropriations requests.

6—"Establish definite principles of Federal functions under the Constitution and limit Federal activities to those which are in accord with this principle."

The report said the spirit of the Democratic administration "has manifested itself especially in the attitude of the government toward newspapers, the radio, the medical profession, and the banking business," adding:

"These interests have been subject to personal attack by administration officials and to unwarranted prosecution."

Foreign Policy Views Studied

The foreign policy plank, which Senator Austin (R-Vt.) forecast would form the basis for a final platform declaration proposed the creation of "peace forces" to prevent and repel military aggression. It pledged "responsible participation" by this government in collective security, but did not go into details on the machinery to be used.

Other tentative proposals for planks:

Business—Speedy return of industry to peace production, with "paramount consideration" given to "the preservation and strengthening of the American system of free, competitive enterprise."

Taxes—Postwar reduction of individual levies and readjustment downward of business taxes.

Agriculture—A program based "upon an economy of abundance rather than an economy of scarcity," with agriculture given "equality with industry."

Taft Interprets Phrase In Foreign Policy Plank

JUN 23 1944

Says 'Armed Forces' Are Pledged to Repel Aggression

CHICAGO, June 23 (AP).—Senator Robert Taft, of Ohio, chairman of the Republican platform committee, in a radio interview tonight over the National Broadcasting Company network on the proposed foreign policy plank, interpreted the plank's phrase "peace forces" to prevent or repel military aggression as "armed forces." First reading of the proposed plank led some Republican National Convention resolutions committee members to say that the phrase was meaningless.

The proposed plank, as fully reported Thursday night, reads in part: "We favor responsible participation by the United States in a post-war co-operative organization among sovereign nations to prevent military aggression and to attain permanent peace with organized justice in a free world. Such organization should develop effective co-operative means to direct peace forces to prevent or repel military aggression. Pending this, we pledge continuing collaboration with the principal United Nations to assure these ultimate objectives."

"Peace forces," Senator Taft said tonight, "simply means that they are organized by the different nations" to put down aggression. He added that such forces "are not necessarily the usual type of aggressive military force."

Senator Taft said the foreign policy plank "represents today the only substantial issue on which we finally agree."

"I don't think there will be a great difference in the domestic planks, but they won't be ready for presentation to the people for several days, because they require careful consideration," he said.

Asked how peace would be enforced under the proposed Republican plank, Senator Taft said: 'Exactly the same as under the plank proposed by Mr. Hull and Mr. Roosevelt, by the agreement of the nations that when a crisis arises again . . . all these nations will band together to use their armies and navies to suppress that aggression before it gets to the point which was reached by Japan or Germany when they were let alone for a considerable time."

Dr. Thomas Mann Becomes U. S. Citizen

JUN 23 1944

Los Angeles, June 23 (AP)—Dr. Thomas Mann, the author and philosopher, became a United States citizen today, and his first words as an American were to predict the fall of his native land, Germany, within a year.

"I don't think the German people or their army can endure through another war winter," said Dr. Mann, whose wife received her papers at the same time.

Dr. Mann was stripped of his German citizenship by edict of Adolf Hitler.

THE BIG BRITISH LANCASTERS AND HALIFAXES TOOK UP THE ASSAULT AS DARKNESS BROUGHT THE GERMANS THE ONLY PERIOD AROUND THE CLOCK THAT THI NOW DARE MOVE FORCES IN ANY CONSIDERABLE AMOUNT.

BRITISH MOSQUITOS ALSO MADE AN ATTACK ON HAMBURG LAST NIGHT, THE AIR MINISTRY ANNOUNCED.

THIS MORNING SOUTHERN ENGLAND RECEIVED ONE OF ITS HEAVIEST FLYING BOMB ASSAULTS SINCE THE GERMANS LAUNCHED THE ROBOT ATTACKS A WEEK AGO. NEW INCENDIARY TYPES OF ROBOTS, ALONG WITH THE NOW FAMILIAR HIGH EXPLOSIVE WINGED BOMBS, WERE USED BY THE NAZIS.

DURING YESTERDAY'S TITANIC ALLIED DAYLIGHT OPERATIONS GROUND TROOPS IN NORMANDY RECEIVED THE BEST AIR SUPPORT SINCE THE INVASION BEGAN, AND POWERFUL BLOWS WERE SCORED AGAINST ROBOT LAUNCHING PLATFORMS IN THE PAS DE CALAIS AREA.

WITH REPORTS ON SOME MISSIONS STILL UNANNOUNCED, IT WAS DISCLOSED THAT 23 ALLIED PLANES, INCLUDING 11 HEAVY BOMBERS AND TWO MEDIUMS, WERE LOST AND SIX GERMAN PLANES WERE SHOT DOWN.

THESE WERE THE HIGHLIGHTS OF YESTERDAY'S OPERATIONS:

1--MORE THAN 1,000 U.S. MEDIUM AND LIGHT BOMBERS AND FIGHTER-BOMBERS POUNDED THE LAST WALL OF NAZI FORTIFICATIONS SEPARATING AMERICAN GROUND TROOPS FROM THE CHERBOURG WATERFRONT. MARAUDERS, HAVOCS, LIGHTNINGS, MUSTANGS AND THUNDERBOLTS SWEPT OVER THE GERMAN LINES EVERY FIVE MINUTES FOR TWO HOURS, AND SOME WERE ONLY 500 YARDS AWAY FROM LT.GEN.OMAR N.BRADLEY'S FRONTLINE TROOPS. SO CLOSELY WERE THESE OPERATIONS COORDINATED THAT MANY PILOTS WERE IN THE AIR OVER THE TARGET AREA BEFORE OBTAINING FINAL RADIO ORDERS FROM ADVANCED POSTS ON EXACT OBJECTIVES.

2--A FORCE OF 250 U.S. FLYING FORTRESSES AND LIBERATORS, AND HUNDREDS OF BIG BRITISH LANCASTERS AND HALIFAXES, BLASTED THE PAS DE CALAIS ROCKET BOMB EMPLACEMENTS. BRITISH HEAVY BOMBERS, NORMALLY USED IN NIGHT OPERATIONS, FLEW OUT IN MIDAFTERNOON FOR THE FIRST TIME SINCE 1942.

3--SOME 750 U.S. HEAVY BOMBERS ESCORTED BY 500 FIGHTERS MADE AN EVENING ATTACK. WHILE SOME OF THESE PLANES WERE DELIVERING THE DAY'S SECOND PUNCH AT ROCKET BOMB EMPLACEMENTS, OTHERS STRUCK AT AIRFIELDS, BRIDGES, TRANSFORMER STATIONS, RAILWAY WORKSHOPS, SIDINGS AND FUEL TANKS OVER A WIDE AREA. RAILWAY YARDS AT LILLE, FRANCE, AND GENT, BELGIUM ALSO WERE HIT.

4--U.S. NINTH AIR FORCE MARAUDERS, HAVOCS AND THUNDERBOLTS RAIDED ALDERNEY ISLAND, EIGHT MILES WEST OF CAP DE LA HAGUE, NEAR THE TIP OF THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA, AND ALSO HIT GERMAN FIELD HEADQUARTERS, FUEL DUMPS AND RAILROADS BEHIND THE NORMANDY FRONT. THESE SWEEPS CAME JUST BEFORE DARK.

CATCHING THE STRONG GERMAN GARRISON OF ALDERNEY BY SURPRISE, THE AMERICANS DROPPED BOMBS ON A CHAIN OF GUN POSITIONS AND BARRACKS BEFORE A SINGLE SHOT WAS FIRED AT THEM. A NAZI HEADQUARTERS AT BARON, SIX MILES SOUTHWEST OF CAEN, WAS A MAINLAND OBJECTIVE.

SOME ALLIED PLANES OVER THE CHERBOURG AREA DROPPED LEAFLETS TELLING THE GERMANS THEY WERE ENCIRCLED AND CALLING UPON THEM TO SURRENDER.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS REPORTED THE AMERICAN AIR ARMADA WHICH BOMBED BERLIN WEDNESDAY ENCOUNTERED ONLY 200 GERMAN FIGHTERS WHERE SEVERAL MONTHS AGO IT MET 600, INDICATING THE NAZI AIRFORCE, ALTHOUGH STILL FORMIDABLE, WAS DWINDLING.

(ADVANCE)...AN AMERICAN BEACHHEAD IN NORMANDY, JUNE 23-(AP)-MEN NEWSPAPER CORRESPONDENTS HAVE DESCRIBED ITS TERROR AND TRAGEDY AND ITS HUMAN COMEDY, AND STRATEGISTS IN AND OUT OF UNIFORM HAVE TALKED ABOUT TACTICS AND THEIR SIGNIFICANCE.

THEY KNOW ABOUT SUCH THINGS. I DON'T.

BUT I DO KNOW NOW WHAT THIS HARD-WON BEACHHEAD LOOKS LIKE TO A WOMAN.

AS ONE OF SEVEN WOMEN WAR CORRESPONDENTS--THE FIRST IN FRANCE--I TRIED TO SEE WHAT WOULD MEAN THE MOST TO THE WOMEN BACK HOME--TO ALL THE FOLKS BACK HOME.

PRIMARILY THERE IS THE AMERICAN MEDICAL CARE OF THE WOUNDED. THAT IS WHY I WENT--TO GET THE STORY FIRST HAND--AND IT IU A STORY TO MAKE ALL AMERICANS PROUD.

WE WERE FLOWN BY THE NINTH AIRFORCE SERVICE COMMAND'S TRANSPORT GROUP, COMMANDED BY COL. CARL R. FELDMAN, SABETHAN, KAS. THESE C-47'S CARRIED AS MUCH AS 100,000 POUNDS OF FREIGHT DAILY TO FRANCE AND BROUGHT OUT AS MANY AS 700 WOUNDED IN ONE DAY. THEY HAVE GOTTEN MEN BACK TO HOSPITALS IN BRITAIN 3 1/2, TO FIVE HOURS AFTER THEY WERE WOUNDED.

PILOT LT. ART STINNETT, SACRAMENTO, CALIF., WHO TAUGHT SHORTHAND IN PHOENIX, ARIZ., TO GET MONEY FOR FLYING LESSONS, INVITED ME TO RIDE IN THE CO-PILOT'S SEAT. ENGINEER SGT. ALBERT YARBROUGH, EL PASO, TEX., CLAMPED PHONES OVER MY EARS, I HEARD THE CONTROL ORDER, "TAKE OFF SOUTHWEST." AT ANOTHER FIELD WE TRANSFERRED TO A DIFFERENT PLANE BOUND FOR FRANCE.

THE PLANES CARRY AN ARMY FLYING NURSE AND A MEDICAL TECHNICIAN. ON OURS WERE SGT. KENNETH WARDEN, STEVENS POINT, WIS., MAKING HIS FIFTH TRIP WITH LT. EDITH BROWN, PORT HURON, MICH., ON HER FOURTH.

WITH S ALSO WAS MAJOR WILLIAM JORDAN, SQUADRON SURGEON AND A GRADUATE OF EMORY UNIVERSITY WHO PRACTICED A NUMBER FOR YEARS AT MILLEDGEVILLE, GA. CAPT. WILLIAM A. SAVIN OF PHILADELPHIA, PA. WAS OUR CONDUCTING OFFICER.

LT. LESTER DALE SKEETS, LANSING, MICH., TOOK THE SECOND PLANE OFF, WITH LT. EDWIN A. ERWIN, HATTIESBURG, MISS., AS CO-PILOT. THERE WAS NO RIDING IN THE CO-PILOT'S SEAT FOR ME NOW. WE WERE TO GO CLOSE ENOUGH TO SEE BATTLE HAZE OVER THE CHERBOURG AREA.

RADIO OPERATOR PFC EARL R. PALMATIER, AMSTERDAM, N.Y., WAS TENSE OVER HIS INSTRUMENTS. ENGINEER PFC FREDERIC HOAGLUM, BIG FORK, MINN., WATCHED FOR HOSTILE AIRCRAFT. THE UNARMED C-47'S SOMETIMES HAVE FIGHTER COVER; SOMETIMES THEY DON'T.

TWO FIGHTERS ESCORTED US TOWARD FRENCH FIELDS NEAT AND GREEN, AND WE LANDED SHARPLY ON A STRIP LAID DOWN BY DETACHMENTS OF THIS SAME TRANSPORT GROUP.

WE WERE APPROACHED AT ONCE BY SOLDIERS CURIOUS ABOUT THE NEW ARRIVALS. THEY WERE TIRED AND GRIM, SAYING LITTLE AT FIRST, YET WANTING TO TALK. THEIR FIELD UNIFORMS WERE DUSTY, BUT THEY HAD FOUND TIME TO SHAVE.

THEY WATCHED AND LISTENED AS YOU WROTE ONE MAN'S NAME AND EXPERIENCES IN A NOTEBOOK.

"WILL THE STORY BE IN MY HOMETOWN PAPER?" WAS THE CLOSEST ANY OF THEM CAME TO ASKING ANYTHING OUTRIGHT. THEY ASK THAT BECAUSE IT IS A WAY OF LETTING THE HOMEFOLKU KNOW THEY ARE SAFE.

IT WAS THE SAME WITH BOTH MEN AND OFFICERS. AMONG THEM WERE SEAMAN SECOND CLASS JOHN DOLAN, WEST ORANGE, N.J.; CAPT. ROBERT MULLIGAN, CAPRON, ILL., AND WARRANT OFFICER CURTIN FERRELL, PONTOTOC, MISS.

HOME THINGS COME FIRST IN THEIR CONVERSATIONS WITH A WOMAN CORRESPONDENT, BUT THEY ALSO ARE EAGER TO KNOW ALL ABOUT THE FLYING BOMBS THE GERMANS HAVE BEEN FIRING INTO SOUTHERN ENGLAND.

TRUCKS COME FOR THE PLANES' LOADS AND HURRY OFF. AMBULANCES RUMBLE UP. PATIENTS ARE QUICKLY TRANSFERRED TO THE PLANES--USUALLY ABOUT 24 LITTERS TO EACH ONE--AND THE PLANES TAKE OFF. IT IS NOT SAFE TO LINGER.

WELL CAMOUFLAGED IS THE TENT OF MAJOR MILTON EVANS, GULFPORT, MISS., COMMANDER OF ADVANCE HEADQUARTERS REACHED BY CROSSING A CLOVER FIELD.

YOU STAY IN THE PATH RESISTING THE TEMPTATION TO PICK BEAUTIFUL RED POPPIES. THERE IS A DULL BOOM--AND DUST THROWN HIGH ON THE BEACH SHOWS WHY. MINES ARE STILL BEING FOUND.

ENROUTE TO THE HOLDING STATION OUT AMBULANCE DRIVER, PRIVATE ALBERT L. MCNALLY, VINE GROVE, KY., POINTED TO A CLUMP OF TREES. HE SAID: "A SNIPER HID THERE. IT WAS DAYS BEFORE WE COULD GET HIM OUT."

MCNALLY CAME IN ON "D-PLUS-ONE." THE FIRST THREE DAYS ASHORE HE GOT NO REST. "COULDN'T TAKE THE TIME," HE SAID.

A GRAND JOB IS BEING DONE BY ALL THE LITTER BEARERS AND AMBULANCE DRIVERS. A WOUNDED SOLDIER SAID TO ME, "THOSE MEDICS"--FIRST AID MEN AND LITTER BEARERS WHO GO INTO THE FRONT LINES UNARMED--"ARE GRAND GUYS."

"OVER AND OVER I'VE HEARD THAT 'EVERY LITTER BEARER ON THE BEACH SHOULD RECEIVE A CITATION,'" SAID CAPT. ARTHUR KLEINMAN OF BUFFALO, N.Y., A DENTIST ON DUTY AS ADMISSIONS OFFICER AT A HOLDING STATION.

CAPT. WALTER SHEPHERD OF OSOSSO, MICH., A SURGEON, AND LT. JACK H. MERICLE OF LIMA, OHIO, AGREED.

"MANY DIDN'T SLEEP FOR 48 HOURS," MERICLE SAID.

HE DIDN'T HIMSELF.

THIS HOLDING STATION HAS REALLY SEEN ACTION. IT CAME AS THREE SEPARATE UNITS D-DAY AFTERNOON. IT IS NOW CONSOLIDATED UNDER LT. COL. GEORGE MCSHATKO OF PORTLAND, ORE.

"WOUNDS WERE VERY BAD THE FIRSTS DAYS," KLEINMAN SAID, "AS THEY WERE MULTIPLE. THEY ARE NOW LESS SEVERE AND THERE ARE MORE SINGLE WOUNDS. WE'RE BEGINNING TO GET COMBAT EXHAUSTION CASES, BUT NOT SO MANY AS EXPECTED."

MERICLE SAID "MEDICAL SUPPLIES HAVE BEEN WONDERFUL. THEY DIDN'T LET US DOWN."

THE LAST PLANES WERE LOADING NOW AND THE TIME WAS SHORT BUT I NOTED PUP TENTS AND SLIT TRENCHES LATELY OCCUPIED BY THE GERMANS AND THE ROOFING ON THE ADJOINING NAZI DUGOUT, WHERE KLEINMAN AND CAPT. WALTER SIELSKI OF BUFFALO, NY., LIVE.

I SAID GOODBYE TO CAPT. J.W. PACE OF SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, IN CHARGE OF ALL EVACUATIONS FROM FRANCE, AND HIS ASSOCIATE, CAPT. W.B. OLIVER OF BELVIDERE, ILL., WHO ARE AIDED BY CAPT. WILLIAM C.PHILLIPS OF RICHLAND, GA.

ABOARD THE PLANE, LT. GERTRUDE M. BERLINGS OF SHELTON, CONN., AND WASHINGTON, D.C., AND SGT. LORA PEARMAN OF NEWPORT, IND., MEDICAL TECHNICIAN, ATTENDED THE PATIENTS.

LT.NORMAN CORMAN OF WOODSTOCK, VA., WAS PILOT AND FLIGHT OFFICER LEONARD KETNER OF READING, PA., WAS CO-PILOT ON THE RETURN TRIP.

WHEN THEY SET THE PLANE DOWN IN BRITAIN PATIENTS NOT REQUIRING IMMEDIATE TREATMENT WERE TAKEN TO A "TRANSIT" HOSPITAL. PATIENTS NEEDING FURTHER CARE ARE SENT AFTER A FEW DAYS TO GENERAL HOSPITALS

FAR FROM HITLER'S FLYING BOMBS.

WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES IN FRANCE JUNE 23.-THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA, FIRST MAJOR AMERICAN BATTLEFIELD OF THE WAR IN FRANCE, IS FULL OF EVIDENCE OF THE VIOLENCE WITH WHICH THE GERMANS WERE CUT IN TWO AND PART OF THEIR DEFENSE FORCES PUSHED BACK INTO THE PORT OF CHERBOURG.

THE TOWNS THEY ATTEMPTED TO DEFEND HAVE BEEN VIRTUALLY OBLITERATED. THE WRECKS OF GERMAN TANKS, GUNS AND VEHICLES SIT ON CHARRED SPOTS ALONG THE ROADSIDE. REINFORCED CONCRETE TELEPHONE POLES HAVE BEEN SMASHED AND BROKEN, ROADS TORN BY BOMB CRATERS AND MARKED BY SHELL EXPLOSIONS.

THE GREATEST DEVASTATION APPEARS IN TOWNS SUCH AS MONTEBOURG AND VALOGNES WHICH THE ENEMY WANTED TO DEFEND. MOST OF THE BUILDINGS WERE PULVERIZED. A CANNING FACTORY AT CARENTAN WAS DESTROYED TO AN EXTENT DIFFICULT TO IMAGINE. ABOUT THE ONLY THING IN THE WRECKAGE APPEARING UNBROKEN ARE SMALL PILES OF CHARRED CANS. MANY ISOLATED HOUSES BETWEEN SUCH TOWNS HAVE BEEN WRECKED.

THE AMERICANS HAVEN'T PULLED ANY PUNCHES IN THE ATTACK ON THE GERMAN DEFENDERS, WHICH IS ONE REASON FOR THE ENEMY FALL-BACK INTO CHERBOURG.

SPREAD OVER SEVERAL ACRES OF SMALL GREEN FIELDS ALONG THE CHERBOURG HIGHWAY NEAR VALOGNES ARE ABANDONED GLIDERS WHICH BROUGHT IN THE AIRBORNE AMERICAN TROOPS. THE AREA FOR THE LANDING WAS WELL CHOSEN BECAUSE IN MANY OTHER PARTS OF THE PENINSULA FIELDS WERE PLANTED WITH WOODEN POSTS AS A DEFENSE AGAINST AIRBORNE ATTACK.

ANY FORWARD GERMAN ARMY UNIT IN EXPOSED POSITION ON THE NORMANDY FRONT IS ONLY 20 MINUTES FROM DEATH WHEN ONE OF "PECK'S BAD BOYS," THE AERIAL EYES OF THE ARMY, SPOTS IT.

CODE MESSAGES ARE RADIOED BACK TO TACTICAL AIR HEADQUARTERS AND A TASK FORCE OF FIGHTER-BOMBERS IS DISPATCHED. THE ORIGINAL SCOUTFLIER MEETS THE FORMATION AT A RENDEZVOUS POINT AND LEADS THEM TO THE QUARRY.

WITHIN 20 MINUTES OF THE ORIGINAL MESSAGE ANY TARGET WITHIN 60 MILES OF THE FIGHTER-BOMBER BASE CAN BE ATTACKED. EVERY ADDITIONAL 20 MILES TAKES FIVE MINUTES MORE, UP TO 300 MILES.

"PECK'S BAD BOYS" ARE COMMANDED BY STOCKY, RED-HAIRED 29-YEAR-OLD COL.GEORGE W.PECK, OF 225 PURITAN AVE., DETROIT.

FLYING HIGH-ALTITUDE LIGHTING FIGHTER PHOTOGRAPHIC PLANES AND ARMED VISUAL RECONNAISSANCE MUSTANGS, THEY WORK BOTH FOR AIR FORCE AND GROUND ARMIES.

BEFORE D-DAY THEY PHOTO-MAPPED THE WHOLE INVASION AREA ONCE WEEKLY, SO THAT WHEN THE ALLIED ARMIES SURGED ASHORE, "NOT A STATIC GUN FIRED THEY DIDN'T KNOW ABOUT, AND NOT A GERMAN DIVISION MOVED WE DIDN'T HAVE TAPPED FROM THE MOMENT IT STUCK ITS NOSE OUT OF THE BIVOUAC AREA," PECK SAYS.

NOW THEY ARE PHTOOGRAPHING THE TEN-MILE STRIP BEHIND THE BATTLE LINE TWICE DAILY.

ALONG WITH SPOTTING THE "SHORT ORDER" TARGETS FOR THE AIR FORCE, THEY HAVE BEEN DOING SIMILAR SLEUTHING FOR THE GROUND FORCES' LONG-RANGE GUNS.

"LONG TOMS" SHOOT 12 MILES. WHEN ONE OF "PECK'S BAD BOYS" CALLS THE TARGET OVER THE RADIO, IT CAN BE DEMOLISHED IN SIX MINUTES -- THAT IS THE AVERAGE.

THE GROUND FORCES RECIPROCATE. WHEN A RECONNAISSANCE PLANE IS BOTHERED BY FLAK, IT CALLS DOWN THE FLAK GUN POSITIONS TO THE ARMY, AND HOWITZERS START HAMMERING THEM CROSS-COUNTRY.

IN 4,000 SORTIES SINCE THE FIRST OF THE YEAR (A MISSION SELDOM INVOLVES MORE THAN A PAIR OF PLANES) PECK'S GROUP HAS LOST EIGHT PLANES. JUST SINCE D-DAY, THEY SHOT DOWN TEN GERMANS. "SO WE'RE EARNING OUR KEEP, JUST AS FIGHTER PILOTS ALONE," PECK SAYS.

THE NURSE, LT.GERTRUDE M.BERLINGS, OF WASHINGTON, D.C., WHO WAS MAKING HER FOURTH TRIP BACK FROM THE BEACHHEAD WITH A LOAD OF WOUNDED SMILED AS SHE SMOOTHED THE ARMY BLANKET.

"TAKE IT EASY -- YOU'LL GET BACK," SHE REPLIED.

"AFTER I GOT HIT I WALKED BACK TO THE MEDICAL AID STATION," THE MECHANIC CONTINUED. THERE WAS YOUNG PRIDE IN THAT. HE WANTED TO TALK.

A 28-YEAR-OLD INFANTRY PRIVATE WHO WAS WOUNDED WHEN SEVERAL COMRADES WERE KILLED WANTED TO TALK, TOO, BUT MOST OF ALL HE WANTED TO SHOW PICTURES OF HIS WIFE AND CHILD BACK HOME.

HE SQUIRMED ABOUT. UNDER THE BLANKET FOLDED FOR A PILLOW WAS A BILL FOLD.

"I'VE GOT PICTURES OF THEM IN IT -- WOULD YOU LIKE TO SEE THEM?" HE ASKED.

I FOUND THE BILLFOLD AND HE TOOK IT SLOWLY, FOR IT WAS A GREAT EFFORT FOR HIM -- BUT HE WANTED TO DO IT HIMSELF. THERE WERE SEVERAL CRUMBLED SNAPSHOTS. ONE SHOWED AN ATTRACTIVE YOUNG WOMAN AND A SMALL BOY WITH A BIG SMILE.

"HERE'S ALL THREE OF US," SAID THE SOLDIER. THE PICTURE HAD BEN TAKEN - AS MANY SUCH HAVE BEEN -- ON THE LAWN OF HIS HOME. IT SHOWED HIM IN UNIFORM - WITH HIS AROUND HIS WIFE - AND STANDING IN FRONT SQUINTING AT THE CAMERA WAS JUNIOR.

A CHAP ON THE OPPOSITE LITTER TUGGED AT MY SLEEVE.

"WHERE ARE WE?" HE ASKED.

"YOU'RE OVER ENGLAND NOW AND YOU'LL BE LANDING SOON," I SAID, AND HE TURNED TO LOOK OUT THE WINDOW OF THE PLANE, BUT CLOSED HIS VERY TIRED EYES.

WITH AMERICAN FORCES STORMING CHERBOURG, 5:04 P.M., JUNE 23-(AP)-AMERICAN INFANTRY BATTLED HALFWAY THROUGH THE CHERBOURG LINE TODAY TO WITHIN 2 1/2 MILES OF THE CITY LIMITS AGAINST ENEMY SOLDIERS WHO HAD BEEN ORDERED TO STAND BY THEIR GUNS OR BE SHOT AS COWARDS BY THEIR OWN OFFICERS.

THE ADVANCE WAS A BITTER YARD-BY-YARD BATTLE AGAINST GERMANS FIGHTING FROM BEHIND CONCRETE PILLBOXES, LOG-PROTECTED POSITIONS AND DUGOUTS CUNNINGLY CONCEALED IN GREEN UNDERGROWTH ON THE HILLS OUTSIDE THE CITY. (THIS DISPATCH EVIDENTLY REFERS TO ONE OF MAIN ASSAULT FORCES MOVING ON CHERBOURG. PREVIOUSLY POINTS WITHIN A MILE OF THE CHERBOURG WATERFONT HAVE BEEN REPORTED UNDER ATTACK BY ADVANCED TROOPS.)

"THIS PHASE OF THE BATTLE FOR CHERBOURG IS JUST A DIRTY DOUGHBOY'S JOB," ONE OFFICER SAID. "THERE IS NOTHING TO DO BUT DIG 'EM OUT ONE BY ONE FROM THEIR HOLES."

YESTERDAY'S TERRIFIC AIR BOMBARDMENT AND THE ARTILLERY BARRAGE WHICH FOLLOWED BLASTED OUT SOME OF THESE PREPARED POSITIONS, BUT MANY WERE LEFT AND THE DEFENDERS IN THEM PUT UP A STUBBORN DEFENSE.

PROGRESS HAS BEEN STEADY BUT SLOW SINCE THE INFANTRY JUMPED OFF TO THE ATTACK AT 2 P.M. YESTERDAY. THE AMERICANS ADVANCED ABOUT TWO MILES INTO CHERBOURG'S DEFENSES AND LATE TODAY WERE FIGHTING THEIR WAY UP THE SLOPES OF MOUNT DU ROC SOUTHWEST OF CHERBOURG.

(SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ANNOUNCEMENTS SAID THIS HEIGHT WAS NEAR NOUAINVILLE.)

THE AMERICANS WERE CLOSING IN FROM THE SOUTH AND EAST AS WELL.

THE GERMANS WERE FIGHTING LITERALLY WITH GUNS AT THEIR BACKS AND IN FRONT OF THEM. TWO PRISONERS SAID THAT OFFICERS WERE IN POSITIONS TO COVER THEIR OWN TROOPS SO THAT IF ANY OF THEM LEFT HIS POST HE WOULD BE SHOT DOWN.

THE NAZI COMMANDING GENERAL OF THE FORTRESS OF CHERBOURG ISSUED A "FIGHT OR DIE" ORDER TO INJECT FEAR INTO THE TROOPS AND FORCE THEM TO MAN GUNS.

THE ORDER WENT OUT: "WITHDRAWAL IS PUNISHABLE BY DEATH. I EMPOWER EVERY LEADER IN EVERY GRADE TO SHOOT DOWN ON SIGHT ANYONE WHO LEAVES HIS POST BECAUSE OF COWARDICE. THE HOUR IS SERIOUS. ONLY WILLPOWER AND READINESS FOR FIGHTING AND HEROISM TO DEATH CAN HELP."

THIS ORDER TO THE TRAPPED DEFENDERS WAS SIGNED BY GEN. VON SCHLIEBEN.

GERMAN ARTILLERY WAS EXCEPTIONALLY LIGHT CONSIDERING THE WEIGHT OF THE ATTACK PRESSING IN ON THEM, BUT THERE WERE STILL 88S AND 105S RANGED IN ON THE APPROACHES WHICH OCCASIONALLY OPENED UP WHEN A CLEAR TARGET PRESENTED ITSELF.

APPARENTLY THE ENEMY WAS CONSERVING ALL THE AMMUNITION POSSIBLE FOR THE SEIGE.

THE ENEMY RANGED IN ON A CROSSROAD NEAR AN ADVANCE UNIT TODAY AS I WAS GOING FORWARD WITH THREE OTHER CORRESPONDENTS. APPARENTLY THE GERMANS WERE FIRING AT TANKS AHEAD OF US, WHICH PULLED UNDER COVER OF AN EMBANKMENT AND BEGAN FIRING AT ENEMY STRONG POINTS. THE FIRE DROVE US INTO A STONE BARN WHERE TWO SAD-EYED COWS TURNED TO LOOK AT US QUESTIONINGLY.

A FRENCH FARMER PEERED FROM HIS DOOR, THEN RAN TO TAKE COVER WITH US.

"HOW ARE THINGS GOING?" WE ASKED HIM.

"FOR THREE DAYS IT HAS BEEN THIS WAY," HE SAID. "VERY HOT!"

AHEAD OF US, TROOPS WERE FIGHTING TO CLEAN OUT NAZI STRONG POINTS.

30. 24— 16507

DURING THE NIGHT ADVANCE THEY HAD BY-PASSED SOME CONCRETE POSITIONS WHICH THE FOLLOWING UNITS WERE MOPPING UP.

ONE PARTICULARLY STRONG POSITION WAS BY-PASSED SOUTH OF CHERBOURG AND WAS ABLE TO HOLD UP THE FOLLOWING UNITS SO THAT THE SPEARHEAD ELEMENTS WERE CUT OFF FROM AMMUNITION SUPPLIES.

"GET THE AIR ON THEM," AN OFFICER ORDERED, AND DIVE BOMBERS WERE INSTRUCTED TO GO TO WORK ON THE POSITION.

IN DESPERATION, THE GERMAN COMMANDER HAS THROWN EVERY ABLE-BODIED MAN INTO HIS FRONT LINE WITH A GUN. DOCK WORKERS, CONSTRUCTION CREWS, MARINES, NAVY PERSONNEL, COOKS AND OTHERS HAVE BEEN PUT INTO THE GERMAN DEFENSE LINE.

"THEY ARE NOT TRAINED, BUT THEY HAVE GUNS AND CAN SHOOT," ONE AMERICAN OFFICER SAID. "THAT MAKES OUR JOB THAT MUCH TOUGHER."

CAPTURED MEMBERS OF ONE ANTI-AIRCRAFT REGIMENT WHICH HAD BEEN PUT INTO THE LINE AS INFANTRY SAID THEY BLEW UP THEIR GUNS WHEN THEY MADE THE TRANSFER.

ONE DOUGHBOY UNIT SPOTTED WHITE FLAGS ON SOME ENEMY PILLBOXES, BUT THE GERMANS INSIDE REMAINED SILENT WHEN ORDERED TO COME OUT. APPARENTLY THEY WERE AFRAID THEY WOULD BE SLAUGHTERED BY GERMAN MACHINE-GUNNERS FARTHER BACK IF THEY TRIED TO SURRENDER.

FRENCH PATRIOTS, WORKING WITH THE DOUGHBOYS THROUGH THE WOODS AND HEDGES, RANGE IN AGE FROM YOUTHS WITH THEIR FIRST WISPY BEARDS TO TOUGH OLD VETERANS OF THE WORLD WAR.

I SAW TWO TODAY WITH RIFLES ACROSS THEIR SHOULDERS, AMMUNITION HUNG AROUND THEIR WAISTS AND KNIVES IN THEIR BELTS. BOTH WERE VERY YOUNG AND NONCHALANT. SLEEVE BANDS IDENTIFIED THEM AS PRO-ALLIED FRENCHMEN.

EAST OF CHERBOURG, NEAR HAU LUCAS, THE GERMANS THREW UP THEIR STRONGEST DEFENSES AROUND AN AIRPORT AND MUNITIONS DUMPS. THE DEFENDERS WERE ARMED MOSTLY WITH MACHINE GUNS, MACHINE PISTOLS AND RIFLES.

THE AMERICANS KEPT UNRELENTING PRESSURE ON THE CHERBOURG LINE, SO THAT A BREAK ANYWHERE WOULD LET THE ATTACKERS POUR THROUGH.

NO GERMAN PLANES WERE ENCOUNTERED BY THE BOMBERS AND FIGHTERS IN THE PAS-DE-CALAIS ATTACKS AND ALL RETURNED. THE ATTACK WAS THE NINTH THIS WEEK ON THE LAUNCHING RAMPS BY BOMBERS OF THE AMERICAN EIGHTH AIR FORCE.

BELEAGUERED EUROPE ALSO WAS ROCKED ANEW BY HEAVY ASSAULTS FROM THE SOUTH, STRONG FORCES OF AMERICAN FORTRESSES AND LIBERATORS STRIKING FROM MEDITERRANEAN BASES AT NAZI OIL INSTALLATIONS AT PLOESTI AND AT GIURGIU ON THE DANUBE SOUTH OF BUCHAREST IN ROMANIA, AND AT RAIL YARDS AT THE YUGOSLAV JUNCTION OF NIS. LIGHTNINGS AND MUSTANGS COVERED THE ATTACK, ENCOUNTERING A CONSIDERABLE NUMBER OF ENEMY FIGHTERS OVER ROMANIA. GIURGIU IS AN OIL TRANS-SHIPMENT POINT.

FROM BRITAIN AMERICAN AND BRITISH FIGHTER-BOMBERS RANGED OVER A WIDE AREA BEHIND THE BATTLEFRONT, SEEKING OUT COMMUNICATION TARGETS IN WEATHER DESCRIBED HERE AT HEADQUARTERS AS UNFAVORABLE.

ONE FORMATION OF AMERICAN FIGHTER-BOMBERS DIVE-BOMBED AND STRAFED ENEMY TRANSPORT IN THE PARIS AREA AND OTHERS CONCENTRATED ON RAILROADS ON THE WESTERN SIDE OF THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA IN THE REGION EAST OF GRANVILLE, SOUTH OF THE AMERICAN-HELD CORRIDOR. OTHERS RANGED FARTHER SOUTHWARD AND ATTACKED SIMILAR TARGETS IN THE AREA NORTH OF BORDEAUX.

SOME 250 FORTRESSES AND LIBERATORS WITH AN EQUAL NUMBER OF ESCORTING MUSTANGS FOUND THE SKIES OVERCAST ABOVE THE PAS-DE-CALAIS BUT THEY USED THEIR CLOUD-BOMBING TECHNIQUE AND DUMPED AT LEAST 750 TONS OF EXPLOSIVES ON THE FLYING-BOMB INSTALLATIONS.

THE GERMANS, WHO OPENED A VIRTUALLY CEASELESS ATTACK AGAINST SOUTHERN ENGLAND WITH THEIR NEWEST DESTRUCTIVE GADGET A WEEK AGO LAST NIGHT, HURLED THE "BUZZ-BOMBS" ACROSS THE CHANNEL THROUGHOUT THE DAY, ALTHOUGH THE LAUNCHING RAMPS HAVE BEEN BOMBARDED NIGHT AND DAY SINCE JUNE 16.

THERE WAS NO OFFICIAL EXPLANATION FOR THE SHIFTING OF TACTICAL UNITS FROM CLOSE SUPPORT OF GROUND TROOPS TO ATTACKS ON COMMUNICATIONS ROUTES, BUT IT IS POSSIBLE THAT THE ALLIED COMMAND FELT THE NEED FOR BLOCKING GERMAN REINFORCEMENTS MORE URGENT AT THE MOMENT THAN THE IMMEDIATE GROUND SUPPORT.

BEACHHEAD PATROLS WERE CARRIED ON, HOWEVER, PRINCIPALLY BY RAF FIGHTERS OF THE BRITISH TACTICAL AIR FORCE. SPITFIRES DESTROYED

FW

THREE MESSERSCHMITT 109S AND TWO FOCKE WULF-190S AND DAMAGED SEVERAL OTHER GERMAN PLANES IN FORMATIONS THEY ENCOUNTERED OVER THE BEACHHEAD. NO SPITFIRES WERE LOST.

AS THE ALLIED ARMIES CONSOLIDATED IN NORMANDY AND BCOME INCREASINGLY SELF-SUPPORTING IN AIR DEFENSE AGAINST THE GERMAN AIR FORCE'S RARE APPEARANCES OVER THE FIGHTING ZONE, MORE AND MORE BRITISH TACTICAL SQUADRONS ARE BEING SWITCHED FROM PROTECTIVE DUTIES TO OFFENSIVE CHORES SUCH AS THE ATTACKS ON GERMAN LINES AND SUPPLIES.

DESPITE SEVERAL DAYS OF BAD WEATHER THE STAF HAS FLOWN MORE THAN 25,000 SORTIES IN THE PAST TWO WEEKS, INCLUDING CONSTANT ATTACKS BY MOSQUITO, BOSTON AND MITCHELL MEDIUM BOMBERS, IT WAS DISCLOSED TONIGHT AT SUPREME HEADQUARTERS. WELL OVER 100 GERMAN PLANES HAVE BEEN DESTROYED IN COMBAT BY THE RAF PILOTS DURING THAT PERIOD.

THE RENEWED CAMPAIGN AGAINST THE RAILWAY NETWORK RADIATING FROM PARIS BEGAN LAST NIGHT WHEN THE RAF SENT OUT HEAVY BOMBERS WHICH ATTACKED YARDS AT REIMS AND AT LAON, BOTH ABOUT 80 MILES NORTHEAST OF PARIS. BRITISH CANADIAN AND DUTCH MITCHELLS AND BOSTONS AT THE SAME TIME MADE CONCENTRATED ATTACKS ON A STEEL WORKS NEAR CAEN WHICH THE NAZIS WERE MAKING INTO A FORTRESS TO BLOCK THE BRITISH-CANADIAN ADVANCE.

ALLIED NIGHT FIGHTERS PATROLLED THE FRENCH SKIES AND SHOT DOWN SEVEN GERMAN PLANES AND BROUGHT THE TOTAL ENEMY CRAFT DESTROYED IN THE 24-HOUR PERIOD ENDING AT DAWN TODAY TO 13. THE ALLIED LOSS FOR THAT PERIOD WAS 26, INCLUDING 18 HEAVY BOMBERS.

A SECOND IS THE FACT THAT THE BOMBS GENERALLY HAVE BEEN COMING OVER SINGLY, THEREBY HAVING MUCH LESS CHANCE OF HITTING A PRE-DETERMINED LOCALITY THAN IF A "SHOT-GUN" BARRAGE OF SEVERAL WAS SENT OVER TOGETHER.

THIS MIGHT POINT TO A LACK OF COORDINATED LAUNCHING FACILITIES--EITHER THROUGH ALLIED BOMBARDMENT OF THE BASES OR THE NECESSITY FOR DISPERSING THEM WIDELY FOR PROTECTION--AND POSSIBLY TO A LIMITED SUPPLY OF THE PROJECTILES.

FINALLY STANDS THE FACT, NO NEWS TO MILITARY MEN BUT REASSURING TO THE PUBLIC, THAT EVEN THE MOST DENSELY POPULATED AREAS CONSIST UPWARDS OF 90 PER CENT OPEN SPACE--PARKS, STREETS AND YARDS--SO THAT A LONE MISSILE'S CHANCE OF STRIKING A STRUCTURE IS SOMETHING LESS THAN EVEN.

NEARLY TWO BATTALIONS OF ENEMY INFANTRY WERE ENCOUNTERED STRADDLING THIS KEY HIGHWAY TUESDAY AND REPORTS FROM FORWARD ELEMENTS SAID ANOTHER WAS IN A SIMILAR POSITION TODAY, WHERE THE ROAD SWINGS WESTWARD TO THE SEA.

THE RESULT HAS BEEN A LARGE INCREASE IN PRISONERS TAKEN BY THIS PARTICULAR OUTFIT, WHICH ALREADY CLAIMS MORE THAN 4,000 NAZIS CAPTURED SINCE BEING IN THE LINE.

A BATTERY OF THREE MARK SIXES TOOK UP A POSITION ON A HILL OVERLOOKING THE ROAD FROM THE WEST TODAY AND STARTED LEVELLING THEIR GUNS ON

THE HIGHWAY. AFTER SEVERAL MINUTES AMERICAN ARTILLERY FOUND THE RANGE AND KNOCKED OUT TWO OF THESE ARMORED GIANTS. THE THIRD FLED TO SAFETY.

ANOTHER MARK SIX WAS DESTROYED EARLIER THIS WEEK.

THIS IS ONE OF THE FEW SECTORS WHERE THERE IS ANY MARKED NAZI INFANTRY STRENGTH STILL IN EVIDENCE. IN MOST OF THE OTHER FIFTH ARMY SECTORS, ARTILLERY, ANTI-TANK SELF-PROPELLED GUNS, AND MACHINE GUN NESTS HAVE BEEN ABOUT THE ONLY KIND OF BATTLE THE GERMANS HAVE BEEN PUTTING UP THIS WEEK.

IN THIS AREA, HOWEVER, THE GERMANS HAVE BEEN ABLE TO PULL THEIR USUAL TRICKS OF BENEFITTING FROM THE TERRAIN. BUT IT HAS BEEN COSTLY TO THE GERMANS, FOR MANY PRISONERS HAVE BEEN TAKEN, AMONG THEM MEMBERS OF THE 162ND TURKOMAN DIVISION AND THE 19TH AND 20TH CONVERTED LUFTWAFFE OUTFITS.

THE TRICK WORKED BRIEFLY. FRENCH INFANTRY, MARCHING UP A SECOND DRY ROAD SEVEN MILES EAST OF HERE, WAS CAUGHT BY FIRE FROM A GRAINFIELD. HOWEVER, SUPPORTING AMERICAN TANKS CAME THROUGH THE FIELDS LIKE REAPERS AND WIPED OUT THE POSITIONS.

HE WAS COMMANDING ONE OF TWO PLATOONS IN THIS ACTION. THE OTHER WAS LED BY SGT. EARL SWEIGART, OF LOS ANGELES, WHO MARRIED A RICHMOND, VA., GIRL JUST BEFORE HE LEFT FOR EUROPE ON THANKSGIVING DAY, 1942. HE TOOK OVER COMMAND OF A GROUP OF LIGHT TANKS A FEW DAYS AGO AFTER HIS COMMANDER WAS WOUNDED.

A LARGE NUMBER OF NAZI HELMETS WAS FOUND, ALL PAINTED WHEAT COLOR. THEY ARE SLIGHTLY DIFFERENT IN SHAPE THAN THE USUAL ENEMY HELMET AND ARE WITHOUT THE EXTENDED METAL PIECE TO PROTECT THE BACK OF THE NECK.

"THEY ARE SOMETHING LIKE THEIR PARATROOPER HELMETS," EXPLAINED LT.COL.WALTER C.DICKEY, DES MOINES, IA., WHO IS TANK COMMANDER FOR THIS AREA.

THIS PARTICULAR TANK OUTFIT ALREADY HAS KNOCKED OUT FOUR ENEMY TANKS, INCLUDING A PAIR OF MARK VI'S THIS WEEK. THE GERMANS HAVE BEEN INCREASING USE OF ARMOR IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD OF THE ROME-SIENA HIGHWAY THE LAST 48 HOURS. TWELVE TANKS, BELIEVED TO BE MARK V'S, WERE OBSERVED IN THIS SECTOR YESTERDAY. TODAY FIVE OF THEM WERE IN ONE GROUP AND AN AMERICAN ARTILLERY BARRAGE WAS LAID DOWN. AFTER SHELLS LANDED WITHIN A FEW YARDS THE TANKS FLED DOWN THE ROAD.

ALONG WITH TANKS, INFANTRY AND MACHINE-GUN FIRE, THE NAZIS ARE POURING IN ARTILLERY FROM THE NORTHEAST TO DELAY FURTHER THE FIFTH ARMY'S ADVANCE, NOW SLOWED DOWN BY WEATHER AND DEMOLITIONS.

THE NAZIS ALSO SENT HALF A DOZEN PLANES OVER YESTERDAY. THEY DROPPED TWO BOMBS AND STRAFED THE ROAD, BUT DID LITTLE DAMAGE.

BY HOWARD M.NORTON
BALTIMORE SUNPAPERS WAR CORRESPONDENT
(DISTRIBUTED BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)

(BA)-AT A COMMAND POST ON SAIPAN, JUNE 22-(DELAYED)-AS THE BATTLE FOR SAIPAN ENTERS ITS SECOND WEEK, IT BEGINS TO APPEAR THAT LACK OF DRINKING WATER MAY TURN OUT TO BE THE FATAL WEAKNESS OF THIS ISLAND'S STRONG DEFENSES.

THERE IS EVIDENCE THAT THE WATER SUPPLY IS CRITICALLY LOW BEHIND THE JAP LINES. PRISONERS INVARIABLY BEG FOR WATER WHEN BROUGHT IN AND MANY HAVE TO BE FORCIBLY RESTRAINED FROM SNATCHING THE CANTEENS OF THEIR AMERICAN CAPTORS.

THE NAVAL ARTILLERY SMASHED BIG JAP WATER DISTILLING APPARATUS AND FRESH WATER TANKS BEFORE THE FIRST WAVE OF MARINES HIT THE BEACHES AT CHARAN KANOA. SINCE THEN THE JAPS PROBABLY HAVE EXISTED ON THE ISLAND'S FEW WELLS AND RAINWATER CISTERNS, MOST OF THE LATTER ALREADY EMPTY BECAUSE OF THE EXTREMELY LIGHT RAINFALL SINCE THE INVASION.

THE DEFENDERS ON VITAL MT.TAPOTCHAU, COMMANDING A MAJOR PART OF THE ISLAND, DEPEND ON TWO SMALL WELLS FOR THEIR ENTIRE WATER SUPPLY. THOSE WELLS HAVE BEEN LOCATED SO BY TODAY ACCURATE AMERICAN ARTILLERY HAS PROBABLY REMOVED EVEN THIS SMALL TRICKLE FROM THE PARCHED THROATS OF THE JAPS.

PROMISES OF PLENTY OF DRINKING WATER PROVED AN EFFECTIVE MEANS OF GETTING JAPS TO COME OUT OF THEIR PILLBOXES AND SURRENDER--WHICH THEY ARE DOING HERE IN LARGE NUMBERS.

"WHY DIE OF THIRST?" SAYS AN AMERICAN VOICE IN JAPANESE LANGUAGE THROUGH LOUDSPEAKERS NEAR THE FRONT LINES.

"YOU'VE FOUGHT AS WELL AS ANY SOLDIER OF THE EMPEROR SHOULD DO. NOW COME OUT WITH YOUR HANDS UP AND HAVE A DRINK OF THIS GOOD WATER SO YOU'LL BE ALIVE TO SERVE YOUR COUNTRY WHEN THE WAR IS OVER."

AMERICAN FORCES ARE RATIONED TWO OR THREE CANTEENS OF WATER DAILY BUT THE SUPPLY ON OUR SIDE OF THE LINES IS INCREASING AS MORE AND MORE DISTILLING PLANTS ARE SET UP. WATER HAS BEEN GIVEN A NUMBER ONE PRIORITY--ON A PARALLEL WITH AMMUNITION.

A FORWARD ARMY COMMAND POST, SAIPAN, MARIANAS ISLAND, JUNE 22-(DELAYED)-(AP)-THE BATTLE OF THE RIDGE IS OVER. IT WAS A SMALL PHASE OF THE FIGHTING TO SEIZE THIS STRATEGIC ISLAND BUT IT GIVES AN IDEA OF WHAT OUR TROOPS HAVE FACED.

TWO COMPANIES OF RIFLEMEN WERE DUG IN ON THE SLOPES OF THE RIDGE ABOUT 1,000 YARDS SOUTHEAST OF ASLITO AIRFIELD (NOW OPERATING IN AMERICAN HANDS). THEY MOVED UP OUT OF CANEFIELDS IN SQUAD RUSHES, IN LEAPFROG FASHION.

AS ADVANCE GROUPS STARTED DOWN INTO THE SHALLOW VALLEY BELOW, HEAVY MACHINEGUN AND MORTAR FIRE WAS TURNED AGAINST THEM.

"WHEN A MORTAR SHELL LANDED ABOUT 15 FEET FROM ME I HIT THE GROUND SO HARD I JARRED MYSELF," A LONG ISLAND, N.Y. SERGEANT REMARKED. "THEN I DUG, BROTHER, WITH MY HANDS."

THERE WERE SIX OR SEVEN ENEMY PILLBOXES ABOUT 100 YARDS AWAY, SAID AN INFANTRYMAN.

"BUT WE DIDN'T SEE THEM RIGHT OFF," HE ADDED. "THOSE JAPS PLOUGHED INTO US WITH MACHINEGUNS FROM THOSE PILLBOXES, WHICH WERE JUST LITTLE MOUNDS OF CONCRETE COVERED WITH CANE AND DIRT. I THINK THEIR MORTARS WERE BEHIND THOSE PILLBOXES. ANYWAY, THEY PINNED US DOWN."

AMERICAN MACHINEGUNS OPENED UP ON THE PILLBOXES TO COVER THE DARING ADVANCE OF A SMALL GROUP OF COMBAT ENGINEERS. BAZOOKA SHELLS WHOOSHED AGAINST THE EARTH MOUNDS. MEN PULLED OUT RIFLE GRENADES. THEY FORCED THE JAPANESE TO STAY AWAY FROM THE NARROW PILLBOX VENTS.

ONE MAN, A CHARGE OF DYNAMITE UNDER HIS ARM, DASHED TOWARD A PILLBOX. A FEW YARDS FROM THE OBJECTIVE HE WAS BLOWN HIGH INTO THE AIR. THE REST OF THE GROUP WAS PINNED DOWN AS ANOTHER SALVO OF MORTAR SHELLS DROPPED NEAR THEM.

A BROOKLYN STAFF SERGEANT RUSHED FORWARD, FINALLY, TO A GOOD FIRING POSITION. HE LAUNCHED FOUR RIFLE GRENADES. TWO OF THEM HIT THE PILLBOX. AS HE MOVED ON AGAINST ANOTHER PILLBOX A SECOND SERGEANT TOSSED THREE GRENADES THROUGH A FIRING SLIT.

A TECHNICAL SERGEANT LED THE PLATOON IN THE BATTLE'S FINAL PHASE WHEN ITS OFFICERS WERE INACTIVATED. HE DIRECTED HIS MEN IN BUILDING UP A LINE OF FIRE AND GIVING THE WOUNDED A CHANCE TO BE EVACUATED. THEN HE PULLED THE MEN BACK IN AN ORDERLY WITHDRAWAL FROM ITS UNTENABLE POSITION. HE EXPLAINED LATER:

"WE HAD ABOUT THREE OF THOSE DAMNED PILLBOXES BLOCKING OUR ADVANCE. THEY'RE TOUGH OPPOSITION FOR INFANTRYMEN. WE COULDN'T GET NEAR ENOUGH TO HAVE OUR COMBAT ENGINEERS SLIP CHARGES INSIDE ALL OF THEM."

THE AMERICAN LINE WAS PULLED IN TEMPORARILY -- BUT ONLY TEMPORARILY. FINALLY THE PILLBOXES WERE ELIMINATED AND THE BATTLE WAS WON.

(WX)...SAIPAN--(DELAYED)--CAMPAIGN FOLLOWS CAMPAIGN FOR DOUGHTY, VETERAN LEATHERNECKS, BUT BESIDES STIFF FIGHTING WITH THE JAPANESE THEY CAN USUALLY LOOK FORWARD TO LEARNING A NEW LANGUAGE TO CONFOUND THE FOLKS AT HOME WHEN WORLD WAR II ENDS.

JUN 23 1944

LEATHERNECKS OFTEN HAVE COME INTO CONTACT WITH NATIVES WHO SPEAK DIFFERENT TONGUES. BECAUSE OF THE BRITISH INFLUENCE IN THE SOLOMONS, THE VARIOUS TRIBES THERE USED 'PIDGIN ENGLISH' AND MARINES FINALLY MANAGED TO CTNVERSE WITH THEM.

AT TARAWA, IN THE GILBERTS LAST NOVEMBER, THE MARINE COMBATANTS MET MICRONESIANS WHO HAD A LANGUAGE ALL THEIR OWN, KNOWN AS 'GILBERTESE.' PHONETICALLY, GILBERTESE WAS DIFFICULT TO SPEAK BUT NOT TOO HARD TO LEARN.

HERE, WHERE THE JAPS HAVE DEVELOPED THE ISLAND SINCE IT WAS MANDATED TO THEM AT THE CLOSE OF WORLD WAR I, THE PREVALENT LANGUAGE IS JAPANESE. HOWEVER, A STRANGE COMBINATION OF SPANISH, MICRONESIAN, AND POLYNESIAN TONGUES IS USED EXTENSIVELY BY THE NATIVE INHABITANTS, CHAMORROS, DESCENDANTS OF INTERMARRIAGES BETWEEN EARLY SPANISH CONQUISTADORES AND THE ISLANDIC PEOPLES.

SCHOOLED LIBERALLY IN JAPANESE, MARINES EXPECT TO BE ABLE TO MAKE THEMSELVES UNDERSTOOD BY THE CIVILIAN POPULATION WHENEVER NECESSARY. BUT THE CHAMORRO VOCABULARY, WHICH IS A CURIOUS MIXTURE OF SPANISH AND NATIVE TONGUES, MAY PROVE TROUBLESOME AT FIRST.

JUN 23 1944

U.S.PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS,PEARL HARBOR,JUNE 23--TWENTY THOUSAND JAPANESE, APPARENTLY ABANDONED TO THEIR DEATH BY A ROUTED NIPPONESE FLEET, WERE HIT HIGH AND LOW TODAY ON SAIPAN BY A YANK INVASION ARMY WHICH NOW OUTNUMBERS THE FOE.

SENSING ALMOST CERTAIN VICTORY IN THE DISTANT MARIANAS AS THE AFTERMATH OF A ONE-SIDED SEA TRIUMPH, THE REINFORCED SANKS SCALED THE HEIGHTS AND PROBED THE FLATLANDS OF THAT ISLAND GATEWAY TO JAPAN, CHINA AND THE PHILIPPINES.

THE SCALES WERE TIPPED HEAVILY IN FAVOR OF THE UNITED STATES MONDAY BY "TASK FORCE 58," A NEWLY-DISCLOSED FAST AND MIGHTY ARMADA WITH PERHAPS 20 OF THE NEARLY 100 U.S. CARRIERS IN ACTION AGAINST JAPAN.

SAIPAN'S POTENTIAL NAVAL SUPPORT WAS SENT SCURRYING BETWEEN LUZON AND FORMOSA INTO THE FAR CHINA SEA BY CARRIER PLANES OF THIS SPECIALIZED GROUP WHICH SANK ONE JAPANESE CARRIER, HEAVILY HIT THREE OTHERS AND DAMAGED A BATTLESHIP AND CRUISER. IN ALL, FOUR ENEMY SHIPS DEFINITELY WERE SUNK AND 10 OTHERS ARD HIT.

TASK FORCE 58, WHICH NAVY OFFICIALS IN WASHINGTON SAID HAS BEEN ASSIGNED "THE ENTIRE PACIFIC OCEAN TO THE GATES OF JAPAN AS ITS STAMPING GROUND," THUS PAVED THE WAY FOR A STEPPED-UP DRIVE ON SAIPAN ITSELF. LAST NIGHT, ADM. CHESTER W. NIMITZ REPORTED THAT THE INVASION OF THAT ISLAND, 1,500 MILES FROM TOKYO BUT 3,800 MILEU FROMHQEARL HARBOR, WAS GOING WELL.

SUPPORTED BY PLANES OPERATING OFF CAPTURED ASLITO AIRDROME AND OUTGUNNING THE NIPPONESE ON THE GROUND, THE YANKS DROVE AHEAD MORE THAN A MILE ON THE EAST SIDE OF THE ISLAND AT MAGICIENNE BAY.

IN THE CENTER, THEY WERE SCALING 1,540 FOOT MOUNT TAPOTCHAU. IN THE SOUTHEAST TIP, THEY HAD WIPED OUT HALF OF AN UNSPECIFIED TOTAL OF TRAPPED JAPANESE AND SEIZED 500-FOOT MOUNT NAFUTAN.

TODAY TOKYO CONCEDED IN A DISPATCH HEARD OVER THE GERMAN RADIO THAT THE YANKS ARE POURING ASHORE, ALONG WITH HEAVY GUNS, ON SAIPAN.

NIMITZ' COMMUNIQUE SAID "HEAVY PRESSURE IS BEING MAINTAINED NIGHT AND DAY AGAINST ENEMY TROOP CONCENTRATIONS AND DEFENSE WORKS BY OUR AIRCRAFT, ARMY AND MARINE ARTILLERY AND NAVAL GUNFIRE."

THE ONLY MENTION OF ENEMY AIR ACTION WAS AN ATTEMPT TO BOMB AMERICAN TRANSPORTS BUT IT "DID NO DAMAGE."

ASSESSING MONDAY'S ATTACK FAR TO THE WEST OF SAIPAN ON THE JAPANESE FLEET, NAVY SECRETARY FORRESTAL SAID IN WASHINGTON "OUR FLEET DID A MAGNIFICENT JOB BUT THE NAVY IS NOT GOING TO BE SATISFIED UNTIL THE JAPANESE FLEET IS WIPED OUT."

HE SAID THE JAPANESE "NEVER CAME VERY FAR TO THE EASTWARD" AND "WE WERE ABLE TO SEND HOME BUT ONE AIR ATTACK AT VERY LONG RANGE FROM OUR CARRIERS JUST BEFORE DARK."

THE DYNAMITE PUNCH OF THE TASK FORCE OBVIOUSLY WAS A PAINFUL SURPRISE FOR THE JAPANESE WHOSE CARRIER PLANES, AT A COST O. 353, SUPERFICIALLY DAMAGED TWO U.S. CARRIERS AND A BATTLESHIP SUNDAY.

THE TIMING OF THIS BLOW, MORE THAN A WEEK AFTER THE U.S. FIFTH FLEET APPEARED OFF THE MARIANAS FAR FROM HOME BASE, SUGGESTED THE JAPS HAD WAITED FOR AN OPPORTUNE MOMENT AND HAD NOT FORESEEN "58" WAS HELD IN RESERVE.

SOUTH OF THE WESTERN PACIFIC BATTLE AREA, GEN. DOUGLAS MACARTHUR ANNOUNCED TODAY THAT AN ENEMY MERCHANTMAN IN A 15-SHIP CONVOY NEAR PALAU HAS BEEN SUNK BY A LIBERATOR. PALAU IS A NAVAL AND AIR BASE WHICH MACARTHUR'S AIR ARM HAS BEEN ASSIGNED TO KEEP FROM FIGURING IN THE SAIPAN OPERATION.

U.S.PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS,PEARL HARBOR, JUNE 23--

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NAVAL ARMADA -- U.S. TASK FORCE 58--

PROWLED THE FAR WESTERN PACIFIC TODAY EAGER FOR A SHOWDOWN WITH THE JAPANESE FLEET THAT ELUDED SUCH A TEST MONDAY WHEN FRUSTRATED IN ITS EFFORTS TO AID 20,000 EMBATTLED NIPPONESE ON SAIPAN ISLAND.

WITHOUT LOSING A VESSEL OR TURNING A GUN ON AN ENEMY WARSHIP, THIS MIGHTY FORCE COMMANDED BY ADM.RAYMOND A.SPRUANCE STOPPED WITH ITS AERIAL ARM THE ENEMY ATTEMPT TO BOLSTER INVADED SAIPAN.

THE JAPANESE ADMITTED SOME LOSSES TODAY. AN OFFICIAL COMMUNIQUE, BROADCAST BY THE TOKYO RADIO, PLACED THESE AT ONE CARRIER, TWO TANKERS AND 50 PLANES. THE USUAL EXTRAVAGANT CLAIMS OF HAVING INFLICTED HEAVY LOSSES ON THE OPPOSING FLEET WERE MADE.

"FIVE ENEMY AIRCRAFT CARRIERS AND MORE THAN ONE BATTLESHIP WERE SUNK OR DAMAGED AND MORE THAN 100 ENEMY PLANES WERE SHOT DOWN," SAID THE TOKYO COMMUNIQUE.

ADM.CHESTER W.NIMITZ ANNOUNCED YESTERDAY THAT 14 ENEMY SHIPS HAD BEEN SUNK OR DAMAGED IN THE CLASH THAT AT FIRST HELD THE POSSIBILITY OF BEING A DECISIVE ACTION. FOUR VESSELS SENT TO THE BOTTOM WERE A CARRIER AND THREE FLEET TANKERS. DAMAGED SHIPS INCLUDED THREE CARRIERS AND A BATTLESHIP.

NIMITZ PLACED ENEMY AIRCRAFT LOSSES AT ABOUT 370 AND ACKNOWLEDGED LOSS OF 70 PLANES. THE CREWS OF MANY, HOWEVER, WERE RESCUED.

SOME DETAILS OF THE HISTORIC TWO-DAY ENGAGEMENT BECAME KNOWN

TODAY AS AMERICAN ASSAULT FORCES DROVE AHEAD TO NEW SUCCESSES ON SAIPAN. THEY SHOWED THAT AMERICAN BRAVERY AND BRAINS AGAIN HAD TURNED THE TABLES ON THE ENEMY.

WILLIAM L.WORDEN, ASSOCIATED PRESS WAR CORRESPONDENT ABOARD A FLAGSHIP OF THE FIFTH FLEET, DISCLOSED THE ACTION WAS FOUGHT OFF GUAM, FORMER AMERICAN ISLAND OVERRUN BY THE JAPANESE EARLY IN THE WAR.

ENEMY CARRIER PLANES STRUCK AT SPRUANCE'S SHIPS SUNDAY WITHIN SIGHT OF GUAM. THEIR OBVIOUS PURPOSE, WORDEN SAID, WAS TO USE THE ISLAND AS A REFUELING BASE.

THEY WERE OUTSMARTED, HOWEVER, WHEN SPRUANCE HELD HIS POSITION AND SENT WAVES OF BOMBERS AND FIGHTERS OVER GUAM AND NEARBY ROTA. NIPPONESE PLANES THAT ESCAPED AMERICAN FIGHTERS AND SHIPS' GUNFIRE ALMOST CERTAINLY WERE LOST AT SEA WHEN THEIR FUEL WAS EXHAUSTED. THEIR CARRIERS WERE OUT OF RANGE.

THE ENEMY'S AIRCRAFT LOSSES IN THIS CLASH -- AT LEAST 353 PLANES -- SMASHED THE EFFORT TO INTERFERE WITH THE SAIPAN INVASION AND FORECAST THE DOOM OF SOME OF TOJO'S SHIPS THE NEXT DAY.

STILL TRYING FOR A SURFACE CONTACT WITH THE ENEMY, SPRUANCE SENT SCOUT PLANES OUT MONDAY TO LOCATE THE FLEEING FLEET. IT WAS SPOTTED LATE IN THE AFTERNOON.

BOMBERS AND TORPEDO PLANES WERE SENT IN PURSUIT. THEY WERE TO FOLLOW THE ENEMY'S WITHDRAWAL, WORDEN SAID, SO FAST AMERICAN BATTLESHIPS COULD CATCH UP.

IN THE FADING LIGHT OF DAY THEY SWARMED ON THE ENEMY SHIPS. WHEN DARKNESS CLOSED IN, THEY HAD SCORED THE STUNNING VICTORY NIMITZ REPORTED FROM HIS HEADQUARTERS HERE THURSDAY.

WHILE TASK 58, WHICH INCLUDES PROBABLY A SCORE OF THE LATEST AND LARGEST FLATTOPS, SEARCHED FOR THE ELUSIVE ENEMY, AMERICAN INVADERS OF SAIPAN ADVANCED THEIR LINES. WITH THE SUPPORT OF PLANES BASED ON ASLITO AIRDROME, CAPTURED EARLIER, THEY STORED UP MOUNT TAPOTCHAU, 1,540-FOOT PEAK AT THE ISLAND'S CENTER.

ALONG THE SHORES OF MAGICIENNE BAY, ON THE SOUTHEASTERN SIDE OF THE ISLAND, LINES WERE PUSHED A MILE NORTHWARD.

PLANES, ARTILLERY AND NAVAL GUNFIRE, NIMITZ REPORTED THURSDAY NIGHT, WERE MAINTAINING "HEAVY PRESSURE" DAY AND NIGHT AGAINST TROOP CONCENTRATIONS AND DEFENSES.

ETSUZO KURIHARA, CHIEF OF THE NAVAL PRESS SECTION OF JAPANESE IMPERIAL HEADQUARTERS, DECLARED IN A FORMAL STATEMENT BROADCAST BY TOKYO TODAY THAT THE "BATTLE SITUATION IN THE SAIPAN AREA IS THE MOST CRITICAL ONE SINCE THE BEGINNING OF THE WAR."

THE STATEMENT, RECORDED BY THE OFFICE OF WAR INFORMATION, SAID A MAJOR EFFORT WOULD BE NECESSARY TO TURN BACK ADVANCED NAVAL ELEMENTS "CENTERED AROUND MORE THAN 20 AIRCRAFT CARRIERS AND MORE THAN A DOZEN BATTLESHIPS WITH MORE THAN 100 TRANSPORT SHIPS."

"THE ENEMY'S PLAN OF ADVANCE IS THE GREATEST SINCE THE BEGINNING OF THE WAR IN THE STRENGTH OF THE MAIN FORCE AND IN THE FURIOUSNESS OF THE ENEMY'S FIGHTING MORALE," KURIHARA'S STATEMENT SAID.

HE SAID THAT SAIPAN IN THE MARIANAS ISLANDS IS 1,268 NAUTICAL MILES FROM TOKYO AND 1,500 NAUTICAL MILES FROM THE PHILIPPINES.

"THEREFORE, IF THE ENEMY SUCCEEDS IN BUILDING A POWERFUL AIR BASE HERE, THE INFLUENCE ON OUR SEA AND AIR SUPREMACY IN THE WESTERN PACIFIC WILL BE EXTREMELY GREAT. IF THE ENEMY USES LARGE TYPE BOMBERS, THE HOMELAND OF JAPAN AND THE PHILIPPINES WILL BE EXPOSED WITHIN THE BOMBING SPHERE OF ENEMY PLANES."

THE STATEMENT BROADCAST ON THE JAPANESE HOME RADIO AS WELL AS ABROAD ACKNOWLEDGED THE SAIPAN OPERATION AS AN "ADVANCE OF THE ENEMY INTO OUR INNER LINE." THE NAVAL PRESS CHIEF SAID:

"BY MOBILIZING THE ENTIRE STRENGTH OF THE LAND, SEA AND AIR FORCES IN THIS AREA, WE MUST EXERT OUR EFFORTS FOR THE DESTRUCTION OF THE ENEMY IN THE FUTURE. THE BATTLE ON SAIPAN IS ONE OF THE MOST DIFFICULT FOR THE ENEMY AND THE SUFFERING OF THE ENEMY IS CLEARLY SEEN IN THE FOREIGN AND WAR REPORTS FROM THIS AREA.

Carrier Force Hits Four Enemy Isles; New Gains Made On Saipan

ERICKSON

NIGHT

Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, June 24 (AP)—The sinking of five additional Japanese ships and destruction of 72 enemy planes by American carrier bombers and fighters was reported today by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz.

The admiral's communique said a speedy Yank task force sent its planes against Japanese island strongholds within 800 miles of Tokyo in a series of aerial smashes designed to neutralize Nippon air power within easy range of American-invaded Saipan.

Over Kazans And Marianas

The planes were from the powerful task force that earlier in the week ranged far westward to beat strong Japanese fleet units.

The latest reported aerial strikes carried American sky fighters over Iwo island, in the Kazan group south of the Bonins, and over Tinian, Pagan and Rota in the Marianas. The Yanks lost five fighters.

Added to the toll of ships previously taken by the carrier task force were five Japanese cargo vessels, four small and one medium.

A dozen Japanese planes filtered through the Yank sky screen to find the carrier task force but all were shot down by fighters.

Bomber And Escort Downed

A twin engine bomber with five Zero escorts was intercepted some distance from the task force and all six were destroyed.

None of the American surface ships was damaged.

Airfields on Tinian Island were bombed and shelled by naval guns. Japanese coastal guns on that island, only seven miles from Saipan, intermittently have shelled ships at anchor off the invasion beach head.

Two Nippon planes spotted just off Saipan were downed by Yank fighters.

Ships Sunk At Pagan

Pagan and Rota islands were hit Thursday. At Pagan four small cargo ships were sunk and four grounded planes destroyed. A wharf and fuel dump were blasted as were airfield runways and buildings.

An aerial torpedo sank a medium Japanese cargo ship during the raid on Rota wheer teh airstrip and buildings weer bombed.

On Saipan island marines and soldiers were pushing forward slowly. They made new gains along the northern shore of Magicienne Bay. Land mines and booby traps planted by the retreating Japanese ma de the going very tough.

Kuriles Also Hit

Navy Venturas hit Shumushu, in the Kuriles, and carried out neutralization raids in the Carolines and the Marshalls.

As official American reports added a large modern Japanese aircraft carrier to the list of vessels probably sunk during the air-sea fight between the Marianas and the Philippines, Yank land forces on Saipan gained in three sectors and probed the outer fringes of one of their major objectives—the town of Garapan, which was under artillery fire.

Americans Enter Laulau

Dispatches said American marines and soldiers advanced a mile and entered Laulau, on the east coast. Other Yanks were fighting their way up the steep wooded slopes of Mount Tapotchau, volcanic peak, where the Japanese have gun emplacements, a concrete blockhouse and numerous pill-boxes.

Most of the 20,000 Japanese defenders of the island are in the north. Hourly the Americans captured new stores of war materials and took droves of prisoners, including civilians.

Carrier aircraft gave American land forces on Saipan complete sky protection.

2d Jap Carrier Added To Toll Off Saipan

Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, June 24 (AP)—A new 28,000-ton Japanese aircraft carrier was believed today to be at the bottom of the Philippines Sea — latest reported addition to the disaster which beset Nippon's navy when it hesitantly tried to stay the impending doom of Saipan's garrison.

An American submarine rammed three torpedoes into the costly Shokaku class flattop Sunday and the navy, disclosing the action last night, conservatively stated "the Japanese carrier is regarded as probably sunk." Sunday was the day Jap carriers loosed a costly, long distance attack on the United States Invasion fleet at Saipan.

Coastal Craft Sunk

The navy at first announced that American carrier planes, giving chase to the enemy fleet Monday, sank four enemy ships, including a 19,000-ton carrier, and damaged ten other ships, including a battleship, two 19,999-ton carriers, a light carrier and a cruiser. Last night's communique added a fifth ship, a destroyer, to the carrier and three tankers previously listed as definitely sunk. The recapitulation apparently made the final toll six ships sunk and nine damaged.

Increasing Japan's shipping woes, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced today his bombers probably sank an enemy merchantman and destroyed five coastal vessels off northwestern Dutch New Guinea. Yesterday the navy in Washington reported submarines recently sank 15 Japanese cargo vessels and a navy auxiliary.

There was no official word Friday on the invasion of Saipan, in the Marianas, where steadily reinforced Yanks are striving to wipe out 20,000 Japanese. Howard Handleman, representing the combined Allied press, wrote yesterday aboard a flagship off Saipan that the enemy was believed withholding his best troops for a climax battle at Tanapag harbor, north of Garapan.

DAY

Only 70 Planes Lost

To date the United States Navy has reported superficial damage to two carriers and a battleship and the loss of 70 planes as the price paid for inflicting defeat on the Japanese navy and shooting down more than 360 enemy carrier planes.

Each report filtering in heightened the possibility that many of the Nipponese warships reported damaged actually sank. Of the three carriers listed only as damaged one was seen burning furiously, another took three 1,000-pound bomb hits and the third received two.

By-passed Truk, enemy naval base more than 600 miles east of Saipan, was kept ceaselessly occupied by neutralizing air attacks. Admiral Chester W. Nimitz last night reported a 70-ton bombing by Seventh Army Air Force Liberators, spread over Tuesday and Wednesday. MacArthur's Southwest Pacific Liberators swept up from the Admiralties to blast the air-base town of Dublon, in Truk's atoll.

Yanks Enter Laulau In Saipan Smash

By Richard W. Johnston

JUN 25 1944

[Representing the Combined American Press]

Distributed by the Associated Press

Aboard a Joint Expeditionary Flagship, Saipan, June 24 (June 23, United States Time—Via Navy Radio) — American troops have reached the town of Laulau on Saipan's east coast, while others have probed into the suburbs of Garapan, the island's biggest town, with virtually no opposition.

Around volcanic Mt. Tapotchau, the Yanks clawed their way up steep jungled cliffs in the most savage terrain encountered in the Pacific war since the battle of Attu.

The one-mile advance into Laulau above Magicienne Bay came after the entire southwestern sector of the island below captured Aslito airdrome had been turned into a mighty artillery base which is hurling shells day and night into Japanese positions in the knife-blade ridges and mountain slopes.

Sitting in a forward battalion command post almost directly above Garapan, I watched the artillery bombardment play along the still higher cliffs like a giant hammer. The Japanese have virtually abandoned the foothills and coastal plains and have fallen back on the densely foliaged ravines and the numerous limestone caves.

Garapan Resembles Cassino

One member of a patrol which entered Garapan's suburbs returned riding a Japanese bicycle. The city's business district resembles Cassino in Italy—only chalky-white walls rise here and there among the rubble. On the flanks of the city the red tin roofs of the native dwellings make a colorful pattern amidst the desolation.

Unlike treeless, barren Attu, Saipan's sheerest cliffs are tangled with foliage. Huge breadfruit trees grow in profusion on the slopes and every valley is dotted with terraced gardens, banana groves and farm homes.

DAY

Enemy Abandons Stores

The Japanese still are abandoning stores of food and ammunition. One marine force has been operating a huge mortar battery for four days using nothing but 81-mm. shells captured from the enemy.

Most of the enemy guns which rained motar shells on American landing parties and on the enemy-held town of Charan Kanoa on the first day of the campaign have been silenced.

No Massed Defense

All during the campaign, the Japanese have not attempted any massed infantry defense in any sector and even where tanks were sent out in strength, the Japanese failed to follow up with coordinated foot-soldier drives.

As a result, the coastal plain—ideal tank country—is littered with burned out Japanese medium and light tanks.

Japs Reduced At Pt. Nafutan

On the southeast tip of Saipan, Americans are reducing the pocketed Nipponese at Pt. Nafutan.

The return of United States carrier-borne aircraft to this area after their smashing victory against the Japanese navy has given the invaders overwhelming aerial supremacy — American superiority was not lost even during the height of the fleet action—and it appears unlikely that there will be a repetition of Wednesday's incident when Japanese planes harassed United States ships and shore positions with night raiders.

Morale Is Excellent

There is excellent morale. Troops holding the western coastal plain awaiting the straightening of the line across the island are eager to attack and many wounded officers and men evacuated to hospital ships earlier in the campaign are rejoining their units for the bigger battle ahead.

Despite their unwillingness so far to commit large masses of infantry to a fight, the Japanese still are making this the toughest Pacific island to be won thus far and American air supremacy has not relieved infantrymen of the tedious job of digging out the burrowing enemy. The terrain and jungle growth make it possible for the Japanese to fight a stronger rear-guard action without major losses and it is safe to say the main battle for Saipan is still to come.

Civilian Prisoners

Civilian Japanese prisoners, meanwhile, huddled in temporary stockades on the American beachhead, hardly noticing the endless movement of men, tanks and guns in their misery. Even the deep blasts of near-by artillery fire seem to go unobserved.

Japanese women sit with gaunt, tired faces, but without tears. One has picked a shell crater in which to nurse her child.

The children, most of them too young to realize what is happening, whimper, not so much from fear as to ask for food and water, which they get.

A Few Koreans

Most civilians are short and wiry, either of Japanese or native Chamorro origin. There may be a few Koreans among them also in this enclosure, not more than 100 feet from the beach.

Care of Saipan's civilians promises to be a huge job, considering that the island's 1938 population included more than 25,000 Japanese and 3,200 natives.

Wounded civilians are getting medical attention as fast as they are brought in. Women line up for rations of fresh water, something none of us has enough of in these first few days. Food is handed out from captured stocks.

Radio Tells Japs To Give Up

By Morrie Landsberg

JUN 25 1944

Magicienne Bay, Saipan, June 9 (AP—Delayed)—Risking their lives to provide the enemy with a chance to surrender, American intelligence officers set up a loudspeaker today on a ledge over a network of caves and broadcast to Japanese garrisons trapped inside, a guarantee of safe surrender.

Soldiers were giving up along with numbers of dazed Japanese civilians. At least one Nipponese officer chose suicide, however.

It was something of a feat for the Americans to pack 500 pounds of equipment down a steep trail, in the face of possible sniper fire, to set up the loudspeaker on rocky cliffs overlooking Magicienne Bay.

Overwhelming Odds

The proclamation, read in Japanese, told the enemy that although it had fought bravely and well it had no chance against overwhelming odds, and would suffer no disgrace in surrendering.

One American sergeant, to make an even more direct offer, lowered himself down a crude ladder to a ledge where, covered by the guns of his comrades from above, he could try to persuade the Japanese to give themselves up.

Several Japanese emerged from their hiding places. One, an officer, carried a sword and limped from a leg wound.

The sergeant instructed the Japanese officer to return the sword to its sheath and drop it. The officer held the sword high in the air, as if to show obedience. Again ordered to drop the weapon, the officer turned toward the sea and walked into the choppy surf. He disappeared under the water, still carrying his sword.

give the Americans a dominating observation point for the entire island as well as command of Tanapag harbor on the northwestern side.

DAY

Other army units continued a cleanup of southern sectors where possibly 500 Japanese remain in the caves and crevices of the Magicienne Bay area. The main enemy defense force of possibly 20,000 is in the northern end of the island.

Ground troops received their first air support yesterday from army fighter planes operating from newly-captured Aslito airstrip.

Positions Lashed

Again today, planes were bombing and strafing enemy positions.

Snipers remained a problem. One patrol, making search of Suspue swamp near Charan Kanoa, which was seized the first day, killed 15 Japanese and captured two men caught sniping at a hospital area. Two American soldiers were killed and four wounded.

The Japanese appear to have evacuated the island's largest town, Garapan.

Dead Carried Away

It is apparent that the Japanese are carrying their dead with them. Marines came across two truckloads of Japanese bodies left behind in one retreat. Almost 500 enemy dead were found in a field in the southern sector where installations wouldn't have required that number of men. The Japanese are believed to be burying some of their dead in caves which are then sealed, and are throwing other bodies into the sea.

Water is the greatest problem, not food. Japanese civilians now in custody in many cases are working willingly, and they are getting the equivalent of three canteens of water a day—the same as the rest of us are drawing.

Saipan Caves, Tunnels Defy Allied Artillery

By Morrie Landsberg

JUN 25 1944

A Forward Command Post, Saipan Island, June 23 (AP—Delayed)—American army troops and marines fanned out on the rugged slopes of Mt. Tapotchau today for a major attempt to isolate one of the key Japanese defense points on battle-torn Saipan.

Tapotchau, a formidable volcanic citadel and the highest peak on the island, has many artillery-defying caves and tunnels and has been coated by the enemy with armament.

Near its peak, aerial reconnaissance has disclosed a huge concrete blockhouse surrounded by pill-boxes, believed to be the enemy's island headquarters.

Would Command Harbor

A pincers drive on Tapotchau seeks to block off the strategic position, capture of which would give the Americans a dominating observation point for the entire island as well as command of Tanapag harbor.

Downed Pilot Aids Landing

Aboard the joint Allied Expeditionary Force Flagship off Saipan, June 17 (AP—Delayed)—Shot down off Saipan in a carrier-plane strike two days before American troops landed in the Marianas, a navy flyer took soundings off a reef and obtained valuable information, the navy disclosed today.

The flyer, who was under machine-gun fire from the Japanese at Charan-Kanoa for three hours while he awaited rescue by a destroyer, was Commander William Inman Martin, 33, Washington, D. C., leader of a squadron of Avenger torpedo bombers.

DAY

Martin, uninjured, was only 300 yards offshore during most of the three hours. Officers directing the amphibious landing at Saipan said data obtained by the slender Naval Academy graduate were of considerable value in the landing.

Saipan Airfield Named For Col. Conroy

On the American Beachhead, Saipan Island, June 23 (AP—Delayed)—Shortly after the capture of Aslito airstrip, Saipan's most important landing field, the victorious force radioed back to the command post: "Conroy Field has been taken."

Aslito has been renamed Conroy Field in memory of Col. Gardiner Conroy, of New York, who was killed in the invasion of Makin Island in the Gilberts last November.

The Japs fled the airstrip hastily, leaving a number of enemy planes in revetments with tools lying near by.

Near the field was a vault filled with ammunition and many supplies, including cases of Japanese beverages. A large quantity of yen notes also was found.

Liberators Hammer Jap Planes In Yap Raid

JUN 25 1944

30. 24— 16523

Advanced Headquarters, New Guinea, Sunday, June 25 (AP)—In a midday strike at Yap—northernmost target of the 13th Air Force—Liberator bombers destroyed or damaged 22 Japanese aircraft on the ground, headquarters announced today.

The communique made no mention of Japanese interception when the bombers made their second land-based assault June 22 on Yap, southwestern flank of the Marianas, which are 650 miles away.

The bombers unloaded 33 tons of explosives, destroying 12 planes and damaging 10. They also hit revetments and started six large fires and many smaller ones.

Scores Hits On Buildings

One Liberator also went to Ulithi in the Yap group, approximately 90 miles northeast of Yap, scoring hits among buildings. On the same raid other Liberators partially destroyed the pier at Sorol island, 160 miles southeast of Yap. They started fires and strafed installations.

Mitchell bombers, ranging far to the west of Dutch New Guinea, set fire to a 1,500-ton freighter in the Banda sea and two smaller vessels. One Mitchell failed to return.

A spokesman for Gen. Douglas MacArthur said Japanese killed and captured on Biak Island, in the Schoutens, totaled 2,333 up to June 23. This represented a 10-1 score compared to American dead and captured. Several hundred Americans were wounded, however, in bitter fighting for the island's Mokmer airstrip, captured June 7 after an 11-day conflict.

GERMANS SMASH INSTALLATIONS IN VITAL SEAPORT

Besieged City Almost Blotted from View by Black Smoke Pall.

NAZI VESSELS SUNK

British Coastal Forces Destroy Two; Three More

Believed Sunk.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Sunday, June 25. — (AP) American shock troops closing in for the kill last night drove to within 1,000 yards of Cherbourg's southern city limits, and were so close that observers could see the Germans destroying installations inside the city, which also was torn by the explosion of ammunition dumps.

A dispatch direct from the field by Don Whitehead, Associated Press correspondent, said Cherbourg was almost blotted from view by a black smoke pall as the Americans steadily expanded their deep wedge in cracked German lines despite fierce resistance.

New Penetration

The new American penetration occurred early last night, said Whitehead's dispatch which was filed at 8 p. m. (2 p. m. Eastern War Time). There also were some signs of enemy demoralization, he had said in an earlier report.

Headquarters Communique No. 38 issued at 11:30 p. m., told of steady progress on a semi-circular front around the city and said "each link in the chain of defenses is being systematically destroyed."

The bulletin said the Americans were less than two miles from the heart of the city, but this version was outdated by late reports direct from the field.

A French civilian who reached American lines said Cherbourg's remaining civilians had hidden wine and champagne with which to celebrate the Americans' expected entry soon into the city.

The Yank infantrymen were fighting through a maze of ravine and 400-foot plateaus where the Germans were dug in with guns mounted as to lay down a murderous cross-fire.

They also had cracked a formidable concrete barrier in the city's southern outskirts, finding only four bomb-dazed Germans alive in a pile of dead.

British naval forces thwarted a German sea escape attempt early Saturday morning, sinking possibly five small German ships, as the Americans ashore battered their way toward Cherbourg from the south, east and southwest.

Have Artillery Support

The Americans had the support of Allied artillery firing at point blank range. Air support also was the closest yet, so close that American officers had to withdraw their forward patrols early yesterday as hundreds of U. S. Marauder medium bombers blasted the German pillbox positions with 250 tons of explosives. American airmen were only a few minutes flying time from Cherbourg, using newly-created Normandy landing fields.

Information reaching headquarters was hours old, and it was considered possible that American patrols might already have entered Cherbourg.

The first German attempt to flee by sea from the doomed city was smashed by British light coastal forces, headquarters disclosed.

"Two enemy vessels were destroyed and three more believed sunk," out of an escorted convoy of seven small ships, the communique said.

The ships presumably were carrying key technicians and the undamaged vessels sought refuge at Alderney island off the northwest tip of the Cherbourg peninsula, where Allied planes or heavier Allied naval forces apparently will finish them off.

The British motor torpedo boats which attacked them suffered some damage and personnel casualties.

Rocket-firing Allied planes and fighter-bombers also damaged three 1,000-ton German motor vessels near St. Malo at the base of the Brittany peninsula, to the south, leaving one of them afire, headquarters announced.

Allied heavy bombers and fighter bombers kept up their pounding of enemy reinforcement arteries in a semi-circle west and south of Paris as the Americans strove for a quick decision at Cherbourg.

Eisenhower in Normandy

During the day Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower spent four hours in Normandy, conferring with Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, the American field commander, and other U. S. officers. It was the Allied Supreme commander's second visit to the battle front.

Hundreds of Germans were surrendering in the grim fight swirling within sight of charred Cherbourg's trans-Atlantic docks, but the majority was obeying Hitler's "fight to the death" order. Allied headquarters predicted savage street fighting before Cherbourg is freed.

The Allied eastern end of the Normandy front flamed into action as British troops knocked out 20 German tanks and captured Ste. Honorine-La Chardonnerette, on the eastern side of the Orne river, four miles northeast of the German stronghold of Caen.

In pre-dawn attacks on the western side of the Orne the British and Canadians also struck at the defense rim of Caen in the Cambes-Epron sector two to three miles north of the city.

These powerful local thrusts were delivered after Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery had amassed a great weight of heavy artillery and reinforcements during a relative calm of several days in which the British and Canadians held off four German armored divisions in order to facilitate the American encirclement of Cherbourg.

American troops attacking Cherbourg from three sides under cover of rain of Allied shells and bombs were within 2,000 yards of the city's southern rim in an area astride the railroad leading into the city.

Hand-to-Hand Fighting

Advances were measured by yards in bitter hand-to-hand fighting with bayonets, field dispatches said. The Americans were being forced to destroy every German pillbox previously cleaned out, because the enemy was slipping back into them at night.

Yank spearheads were withdrawn early Saturday, while another artillery and air attack dumped explosives on a heavy line of concrete emplacements southeast of Octeville. The infantrymen then attacked again, widened their breach in the enemy's southern line, and found only four non-commissioned Germans alive amid many enemy dead. The four were suffering from shock.

The entire battle on the perimeter of Cherbourg was confused, field reports said. The Americans filtered through German lines in some places, leaving rear waves to clean up by-passed pillboxes whose interlocking fire thus far had prevented a quick break-through into the city.

On the eastern side of Cherbourg, where the Americans also could see into the town, there were fanatical bands of Germans holding out behind the U. S. lines.

But the situation as a whole was favorable, and headquarters said operations on the entire front were on schedule despite an anticipated but unlucky run of weather. The weather cleared during the day, hastening the unloading of supplies on the beachheads.

Nazi Airfields Hit

Aside from the medium bomber attack on the Cherbourg defenses U. S. Flying Fortresses and Liberators roared out twice over France, attacking German rear airfields, railroads and bridges, and objectives in northwest Germany.

The Americans were using at least 1,000 guns in the shelling of Cherbourg, chewing away steadily at the naval port's elaborate system of French-built fortifications.

In the past 24 hours infantrymen had taken more than 1,200 prisoners of the elements of four Nazi divisions defending the city.

Six-foot-thick concrete pillboxes and gun positions were being encountered in a depth extending two to three miles outside Cherbourg. Each of these strongpoints is self-contained, and the Americans found them well-stocked with ammunition and supplies.

Although the Americans have driven a deep wedge into this intricate defense belt front dispatche said there was no grand surge against Cherbourg. Instead, the battle is one of slow annihilation.

With the exception of the fighting around Caen, the other sectors of the front were quiet.

2 Of 7 Vessels Sent To Bottom And 3 More Damaged

JUN 25 1944

By J. W. Gallagher

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 24 (AP)—British motor torpedo boats smashed a German attempt to flee Cherbourg, sinking or damaging five of seven merchantmen, in a night-running convoy, supreme headquarters announced today, as an American spearhead battered to within 2,000 yards—little more than a mile—of the port from the south.

Field dispatches declared German defenses ringing Cherbourg "showed signs of crumbling," and supreme headquarters said German resistance at the port "might turn into stubborn street fighting."

The German high command apparently tried to sneak valuable technicians and important material out of Cherbourg under cover of darkness last night, but the swift torpedo boats crashed through the protecting German escort ships into the center of the convoy.

Two Ships Sunk, 3 Damaged

Two of the seven merchantmen were sunk and three damaged before the convoy ran for the refuge of the Channel islands west of the jutting Cherbourg peninsula. The British ships suffered some damage and casualties.

Supreme headquarters declared the Nazi garrison at Cherbourg had been ordered to "fight to the last." Street fighting would delay Allied capture of the great supply port.

Breach In Line Widened

American troops today widened a breach made in the Cherbourg line by spearhead forces that battered within 2,000 yards of the city itself, Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead reported this afternoon.

This thrust from the south drove through the stubborn, interlaced Nazi pillbox defenses to the railroad southeast of Octeville, on Cherbourg's outskirts. It was strengthened this morning, Whitehead said, when doughboys knocked out one of the enemy's strongest points, by-passed by the forward troops.

East of Cherbourg the Americans shoved forward a little more than a mile. Whitehead said "the entire front has broken down into hard knots of resistance, some of them even behind our own lines," skirted in the doughboy advance.

"Within Sight Of The Docks"

Headquarters said the doughboys fought forward slowly and had all but reached the sea on both sides of the besieged port in a hand-to-hand struggle with Germans resisting fanatically. The assault troops are battling "within sight of the docks," supreme headquarters said.

However, the Reuter news agency quoted one officer at headquarters as saying: "It is not a pushover by any means."

Whitehead wrote that 1,200 prisoners have been taken in the last 24 hours.

Big Guns Cut Loose

Last night American artillery laid a heavy barrage against the strong points, Whitehead said. The guns fired all night long and the air trembled with concussions. Then, this morning, under clear skies, medium bombers roared over in waves, blasting the enemy positions. Our most advanced elements pulled back to a safety zone to let the bombers work, then went forward again.

When the Germans swept through the Low Countries in 1940, their aircraft were leashed to their tanks, but "the Allied command is using its air strength like a giant cat-o-nine-tails to scourge everything German within its reach," Reuter quoted an air force officer.

"No Grand Surge"

"There is no grand surge forward against Cherbourg," Whitehead continued. "That is not the way this fight is progressing even though our troops have blasted a wedge into the enemy's lines which is in depth all the way back to the city itself. When the doughboys reach the city they expect to have to fight their way from house to house unless there is a sudden close of the enemy such as there was at Cape Bon.

"The Germans still have a hard knot of resistance holding out in the most intricate maze of defense systems most of our troops have encountered since they landed. Six-foot-thick concrete pillboxes and gun positions are staggered in depth on commanding ground with fields of fire interlocking, so that if one position is knocked out the troops come under fire from another.

Nazi Morale Worse

"Each of these strongholds is a self-contained unit. The doughboys found them well stocked with ammunition and supplies after they had blasted out the defenders of many of them who were thrown into the line in a last-minute desperate effort to stave off the American advance.

"There are signs among the prisoners of deteriorating morale, despite the fact that German officers are holding guns to their own men's backs to keep them at their posts."

On the eastern wing of the Normandy beachhead Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery lashed out in a swift attack yesterday at the outer perimeter of Caen's defenses and 20 Nazi tanks were wrecked in day-long battle. British troops captured Ste. Hororine la Chardonnerette, four miles northeast of Caen, and the Germans fell back to Cuverville, a mile to the southeast. Montgomery struck after a powerful buildup of his forces.

A field dispatch from this British sector declared the German command was moving up reinforcements from deep in France, and even drawing on strategic reserves in Germany itself "to replace forces thrown into the beachhead area."

Reuter heard the German Transocean News Agency broadcast today that "on the Orne estuary strong forces are being landed in the Caen-Tilly area. When the battle of Cherbourg is over General Montgomery obviously intends to launch an offensive from this sector to the south and east."

A field dispatch from the Cherbourg front said an American break-through was made between Mont du Roc and Octeville. Fortified Mont du Roc is two and a half miles southwest of Cherbourg's city limits near Nouainville where rises one of the three peaks dominating the port. Octeville is a Fortress site two miles east of Nouainville.

Before this break-through other American forces captured by storm a fortified high point at Tourlaville, a mile east of Cherbourg, another of the peaks.

"Making Steady Progress"

Presumably these two breakthroughs were being exploited in bitter fighting, for the supreme command's Communique No. 37 noted this morning that "we are making steady progress and now are within a short distance of the north coast on both sides of the fortress."

(Berlin radio this morning said that after several hours of heavy fighting the Americans had broken into the outer defense zone in the south and southeast, but asserted that they were stopped there. It declared that "no fewer than eight infantry and two tank divisions" had been thrown into the assault.

Nazis Report Landing Effort

(The German communique today acknowledged that Americans had captured a number of strong points and made further progress toward Cherbourg. Local attacks were repulsed elsewhere in Normandy, and Nazi coastal batteries "scattered" an Allied landing unit east of the Orne river, the high command added, with naval units sinking a 3,000-ton Allied landing vessel and a destroyer.)

(Reuter heard the Vichy radio say that German planes last night heavily attacked the Allied invasion fleet off Normandy. "Two destroyers, a transport of 10,000 tons, one tanker and one freighter were sunk. One heavy and one light cruiser were damaged," the radio said.)

Cherbourg Pattern

The attack on Cherbourg followed the monotonous, deadly pattern of first an artillery barrage and then an infantry assault with hand-to-hand fighting to take a pillbox, to gain 20 yards, and then repeat the process.

At last reports, two key fortified hills south and west of the city were still in German hands but the German controlled Vichy radio said the Americans had driven through German defenses to Fort du Roule, less than a mile from the docks.

Nazi General Killed

Falling winds and bright sunlight in the English Channel permitted much more rapid unloading of supplies and allowed use of Allied air superiority in support of the invasion. Yesterday bad weather held the Allied air forces to 3,000 sorties directed at Nazi railways and roads.

The Allied supreme command said another German divisional commander had been killed in the fighting. He was General Salley, of the 91st Division.

Beside the 91st Division, elements of the 243d, 77th and 709th German divisions now have been identified in the peninsula trap.

In the La Haye du Puits sector, 24½ miles south of Cherbourg, American patrols found that resistance had strengthened considerably.

Along the rest of the front there was nothing new to report.

Allied Flyers Scoring

Under clearing skies strong formations of Allied planes flew across the Channel and into France.

The Allied air attempt to smash all Nazi communications leading into the battle area was encountering a large degree of success, the Eight Air Force alone destroying ten bridges yesterday.

Fighters and fighter bombers flying under low-hanging clouds destroyed or damaged 450 freight cars, some loaded with munitions and others with armored vehicles.

The German air force, although refusing combat in most cases, was more active than on any day since the invasion began, making hit-and-run raids at various points.

Eleven German planes were shot down over the battle area.

Witness Pictures Cherbourg Push

By Don Whitehead

With American Forces Advancing on Cherbourg, June 24 (AP—1.20 P. M.)—American troops widened the breach in the Germans' Cherbourg line today in an advance that carried spearhead forces within 2,000 yards of the port city.

The entire enemy front has broken down into hard knots of resistance, some of which have been bypassed by the Americans and are behind our lines.

Enemy defenses showed signs of crumbling soon after the Allied drive through the perimeter of Cherbourg's defenses last night.

Yanks Reach Railroad

With medium bombers, dive-bombers, artillery and mortars hurling tons of explosives into their positions, the Germans were literally fighting with guns in their backs—their officers have been ordered to shoot them down as cowards if they leave their posts.

The American spearhead from the south carried to the railroad southeast of Octeville on the outskirts of Cherbourg, and was strengthened this morning when one of the enemy's strongest points was knocked out after being bypassed.

(The break was made between Octeville and Mont du Roc to the west, Whitehead reported last night.)

Bombers Crush The Fort

This strongpoint consisted of sttel-reinforced concrete emplacements which covered the doughboys' approach to Cherbourg from the south. The advance units fought their way by it and left it for others behind to clean up. For a time yesterday the advancing units were almost cut off from supplies by the fire from this fort.

But early today waves of medium bombers attacked, and after that the American infantrymen moved in to clean up the position.

They found, four German noncommissioned officers left in the strongpoint, all dazed by the shock of the bombing. All others in the position were dead.

Gain Made To East

East of Cherbourg the Americans shoved forward a little more than a mile, with the front there broken into confused pockets.

From the west our troops moved on the heights of Mont du Roc. They were now fighting on the west an don the south in sight of Cherbourg.

The confusion of the front lines was evident when I tried to get forward to advanced elements with two other correspondents.

We turned off the main road to a winding dusty lane, but we got no further htan the ridge, from which we could see shellbursts ripping into enemy positions.

Yanks Use Nazi Ditch

As we drove along the road about two miles from the spearhead, the enemy began shelling the area. Shells began whistling across from both directions. To the east a lively machine-gun and small-arms battle was in progress at one of the pockets bypassed by our troops.

We took cover behind an embankment while dusty doughboys crouched and ran to shelter in an anti-tank ditch dug by the Germans.

The soldiers shouted to us not to move over in that direction because engineers were blowing up enemy pillboxes.

"Not Too Many Casualties"

It is necessary to destroy the pillboxes as they are cleaned out. At first the troops left them intact, but found that the Germans slipped back into them under cover of darkness.

At one stop two tired, red-eyed liaison officers were just getting up from their blankets laid along a hedgerow.

"We haven't had too many casualties," one of them said, "but we've killed a lot of Germans. We lost one officer."

GEN. EISENHOWER TOURS BEACHHEAD FOR SECOND TIME

ROBERTS

ALLIED ADVANCE COMMAND POST, June 24.—(AP) Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower returned here today after his second tour of the American beachhead positions in France.

He spent four hours in Normandy conferring with Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley and talking to many G.I.'s in the field.

Accompanied by Aide

The Supreme commander was accompanied only by his aide, Lt. Col. Ernest R. Lee, and a correspondent as representative of the combined press.

Eisenhower crowded as much as possible into his four-hour visit. He spent an hour talking with Bradley and other U. S. leaders and most of the remainder of his time with infantrymen, gunners and tankmen. He whizzed through Normandy in a three-jeep caravan that startled the MP's.

It was his first visit to the American sector since June 12 and he came away with his face wreathed in satisfaction at what he saw.

He spent much of his time with units recently arrived in France, shooting questions to see if the men could handle themselves in case of attack.

He asked Pvt. Louis Bernard Rochester, N. Y., "what would you do if a German plane were suddenly to appear over your encampment?"

"I'd fire three shots of warning, sir, and then shoot at him, sir," Bernard quickly replied.

Eisenhower smiled and nodded and then walked briskly over to Pfc. Bagdon Odadzian, Akron, Ohio.

"Where are you going to sleep tonight?" he asked.

"In a ditch, under vines for camouflage, sir," the soldier replied.

Surprises Sharpshooter

A day-dreaming G.I., surprised by the general's hasty approach, stammered, "I don't know, sir," to a question regarding his proficiency with the rifle. Eisenhower lectured him quietly for two minutes. He told him his country wanted to know that he could hit a man's heart at 200 yards and that by God he should know it, too.

As the general passed on, a junior officer asked the crestfallen soldier: "Don't you even know your rating?"

The soldier instantly replied: "Sharpshooter."

The officer asked why he failed to tell the general that.

Replied the G.I.: "I looked up and saw who it was and I guess it scared the wind out of me."

20 Enemy Tanks Destroyed In Caen Attack

By Roger Greene

With British Forces in France, June 24 (AP) — British armored forces and Tommies knocked out 20 Nazi tanks in a day-long battle east of the Orne river yesterday, handing the Germans one of their sharpest defeats in the 19-day-old Normandy campaign. Today they consolidated their hold on newly captured Ste. Honorine la Chardonnerette, four miles northeast of Caen.

The Germans fell back to Cuverville, a mile to the southeast, after the heavy battle in the woods between the two towns. While 20 out of 35 German tanks were wrecked, British losses were described officially as "very small."

Troops Arrive From Germany

The British struck in synchronized pre-dawn attacks yesterday at the outer perimeter of Caen's defenses, and fighting flared on both sides of the Orne river.

Field Marshal von Rundstedt still is trying to move up forces from deep in France, and some German troops are even being sent from Germany to replace forces thrown into the beachhead struggle.

The British seized Honorine on the east bank of the Orne at 5 A. M. yesterday.

Advance On Chateau

On the west side of the Orne the British advanced to a chateau about midway between Cambes and Epron, north of Caen in bitter hand-to-hand fighting. They twice seized the bastion and twice were driven back as the Germans threw in tank reinforcements.

Rocket-firing Typhoons blasted German motor transport east of Orne. They strafed tanks, troops and gun positions, and in a spectacular sky battle shot down nine out of 15 F-W 190's without any loss to the Allies.

Caen Bombed Heavily

Simultaneously Mitchells and Bostons attacked targets. Caen was bombed heavily again. German anti-aircraft fire was livelier than usual, and from a hilltop I watched a crew of a black, smoking Fortress parachute to safety just inside the Allied lines.

One, an American whose name was unavailable, walked into advance headquarters. He said he took part in the attack on Berlin recently, and he described the Nazi capital as a "mass of ruins blazing like a blast furnace."

(A Reuter dispatch reported fighting of a confused and hand-to-hand nature still going on in the Hottot sector. "The Germans are just as keen to keep Hottot as we are to take it," said a staff officer.)

Another Nazi General Killed in Normandy

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 24 (A. P.). — Headquarters announced today that another German divisional commander had been killed in the fighting in Normandy. He was Gen. Salley of the Ninety-first Division.

Nazis Fighting To 'Last Bullet' In Cherbourg

RASTSCHKE

Berlin Radio Calls Front 'Fire-Spitting Hell,' Says U. S. Is Using 6 Divisions

LONDON, Jue 24 (AP).—Cherbourg is a "fire-spitting hell," and German troops are retreating into its recesses "only after they have fired their last bullet," the Berlin radio said tonight in quoting a front-line report.

"Never before have the defenders had to withstand such assault waves," said the report of the German correspondent, Lutz Koch. "They could not help but retreat. From land—with infantry and tank divisions and an artillery barrage—and from the sea German positions were constantly shelled while the town and supply roads are under constant air bombardment by day and night."

The Americans were using five infantry divisions and one tank division in the attack, Koch said.

Other German broadcasts said strong American tank concentrations had been sighted north of St. Lo, mid-Normandy communications city, and forecast that "a new break-through attempt will be made in that sector," forty-three miles southeast of Cherbourg.

The Nazi Transocean News Agency quoted the German high command as saying that German bombers had attacked "a great Allied fleet" protected by balloons and a strong force of destroyers and cruisers near the mouth of the Orne River at the eastern end of the Normandy front. It declared "great fires and explosions" were observed. There was no Allied confirmation of this assertion.

Another German report said a British battleship was pouring heavy fire against German lines in the area.

80 Nazi Vessels Sunk At Boulogne, Le Havre

London, June 24 (AP) — Eighty enemy vessels were sunk by the RAF in the ports of Le Havre and Boulogne in day-and-night attacks June 14 and 15, which put a substantial proportion of German Channel forces out of action, the Air Ministry announced today.

Photographs showed some ships sunk at their berths, and undoubtedly the remainder did not leave the harbor but were sunk, the announcement said.

Included were 22 E and R boats, three torpedo boats, one corvette, one M-class mine sweeper, three M-class tenders, six tank landing craft, a score of naval auxiliaries and another score of vessels of various types.

Nazis In Normandy Raise 'Murder' Cry

London, June 24 (AP) — Adolf Hitler's headquarters announced tonight that German prisoners had been reported "murdered" in Normandy and declared that "ten American soldiers will be shot for every German" if the reports proved true.

The broadcast statement followed by only a few days various reports from Allied soldiers that both American and Canadian soldiers had been shot down by German forces who had taken them prisoner.

The German announcement said that reports had been received that members of the German army taken prisoner in the Cherbourg area were shot despite the fact they were in uniform with proper insignia and that, if they proved true, "ten American soldiers will be shot for every German."

Presidential Citation Asked For P-51 Unit

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 24 (AP)—First to fly the new type P-51 in the European theater, a famous pioneer Mustang group, destroyers of 361 enemy aircraft in battles over Europe, has been recommended by Lieut. Gen. Lewis H. Brereton, commander of the Ninth United States Air Force, for a Presidential citation.

The group, headed by Col. George R. I. Bickell, of Nutley, N. J., had two of America's most famous fighter pilots as commanders—Col. James H. Howard, of St. Louis, Mo., and Col. Kenneth R. Martin, Kansas City, Mo.

Howard gained fame January 11 when he tackled 30 Nazi fighters single-handed and shot down three. Later he was assigned to a staff position in the Ninth Fighter Command.

Martin was shot down over Germany in February, but a German broadcast said he had landed safely and was interned.

20 Gets D. S. C.'s in France

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 24 (AP).—Sergeant Leonard Lomell, of Point Pleasant, N. J., was among twenty officers and enlisted men who received Distinguished Service Crosses at a ceremony at field headquarters yesterday. They were members of a Ranger battalion in the first assault wave to hit the French beach near Vierille.

French Shot To Stop Sabotage

Port Bou, Spain, June 24 (AP)—In a bloody attempt to halt sabotage, the Germans were reported today to be shooting French hostages in groups of ten in several villages and towns between Toulouse and Bordeaux as saboteurs severed both rail and canal communications between the Mediterranean and Atlantic in southern France.

At the same time another report reaching here said the Germans had scored a victory over French Maquis, or guerrilla forces, in one Jura mountain town, but that the battle was but one of many raging between the Nazis and southern Frenchmen.

100 Shot, Says Report

Approximately 100 Frenchmen have been shot in southern France by German firing squads since Wednesday, a report said, relating that several weeks ago the German commander of the Tarnet-Garonne department ordered all mayors of towns and villages along railroad and canal routes of the area to keep day and night guard against sabotage.

The Saturday following D-day, the report said, both canal and railroad routes were cut. The next night the Midi Canal locks were dynamited.

[A report from Madrid said Maquisards cut the railroad between Bayonne and Bordeaux at Mees, several miles south of Dax, wrecking a train and killing 20 passengers and crewmen.]

Last Thursday morning, a witness said, a force of 200 Germans arrived at the little town of Grenade, north of Toulouse, and selected 10 Frenchmen at random. The hostages were machine gunned in front of the populace which had been assembled by the Nazis.

Snipers Get Nazis

Similar executions took place the same day at several other towns in the district.

The report said a number of German soldiers had been slain recently by snipers.

The Germans succeeded in breaking the Maquis' hold on the town of Oyonnax where French patriots had trapped several hundred collaborationist militiamen, but lost six armored cars to the Maquis' version of the Molotov cocktail, these reports said.

Patriot Forces Escape

A third of the 300 militiamen holding out in the town were killed or wounded during the four-day siege which was broken Wednesday night, it was reported, and the patriot forces slipped into the mountains opposite the Swiss frontier when their hold was broken.

Reports of continued desertions from Vichy militia forces continued to trickle across the border. Collaborationists forces in the Toulouse region were said to have been reduced to less than a half of their pe-invasion strength by desertions to the Maquis or by the simple disappearance of militiamen too well known as collaborationists to join the Maquis but who hope to vanish into civilian life outside their known haunts.

15 Hour Lull.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Sunday, June 25—(AP) RAF heavy bombers thundered out over the southeast coast of England early today in the fifth large-scale Allied aerial mission in 24 hours with the Germans' flying-bomb ramps in northern France their apparent objective.

The RAF attack was made as the robot bombs fell again on Britain after a 15-hour lull.

Open New Assault

Numerous formations filled the night air, taking three-quarters of an hour to pass over a coastal town, as they opened a new week of aerial assault, combining support for the invasion and defense against Hitler's rocket weapon.

Soon after the planes had passed out of sight heavy gunfire was heard from the Calais and Dunkerque areas.

At 4 o'clock this morning the German radio said there were no enemy planes over the Reich, but earlier it told of "nuisance raiders" leaving the Rhine, Hannover and Brunswick areas.

Both U. S. and RAF heavies made attacks Saturday afternoon and night aaginst the launching ramps of the Nazi flying bombs, following up earlier attacks on the same targets by medium bombers.

Some casualties and damage in southern England was reported caused by the attacks of the flying bombs early today. Before one crashed, gunfire was heard and explosion and fire followed.

The weather was unfavorable during most of the day, somewhat hampering operations, but the big sunset for their tenth attack on the mysterious, camouflaged rocket ramps around Calais. They also hit a number of railway switching stations around Boulogne.

RAF Lancasters and Halifaxes also struck the rocket ramps during the late afternoon in what the Air Ministry called a "well concentrated" bombing.

After a 15-hour lull in which no flying bombs attacked Britain a pilotless plane was heard to land in southern England shortly after midnight.

Planes Blast Trains

Fighters and medium bombers ranged far and wide over France, blasting trains, truck convoys, bridges and airfields, and dealing precision attacks on German gun positions in Cherbourg.

Two separate formations of American Fortresses and Liberators, escorted by Thunderbolts, Mustangs and Lightnings, raided the continent this morning and afternoon, while American heavy bombers based in Italy plastered the Ploesti oil field area of Romania for the second straight day.

The total sorties flown during the daylight was easily in the thousands but it is doubtful that this was near the record operations.

Harassing communications from Cherbourg far inland, the Ninth airforce fighters alone made more than 600 individual attacks before 6 p.m. when planes still were streaming out. At a cost of three fighters they knocked down two Germans.

Altogether the RAF fighter bombers downed 19 enemy planes at a loss of five.

Rail Centers Hit

Marauders and Havocs also were out again during the evening for their third trip of the day, during which more than 300 tons of bombs were dropped. The twilight attacks were directed against six French rail centers and an important bridge crossing the Seine, ten miles northwest of Paris. Two Marauders were reported missing.

In three missions Saturday the Eighth Air force lost six bombers and one fighter.

The fighters in addition to shooting up enemy communications and other targets destroyed at least 30 grounded Nazi planes.

Fly Through Cloud Cover

Flying through an almost solid cover of clouds in their second mission of the day, American Fortresses and Liberators smashed at targets announced only as "military objectives" in Germany. The German news agency, DNB, earlier had broadcast a report that bombers were headed toward Berlin.

The bomb-carrying Thunderbolts served a double purpose in the attacks near Calais. They escorted the Marauders and Havocs for the attacks and then dived to dump their own explosives on the same camouflaged targets. All planes returned from these assaults.

Low Strafing Attacks

Many of the day's air attacks consisted of low strafing of anything the pilots could see moving. The assaults included many low-level strafing and bombing missions on railway yards and airfields behind the lines.

One Thunderbolt group swooped within ten feet of the Dreux rail sidings, 40 miles west of Paris, and destroyed 33 cars loaded with gasoline and ammunition.

A Mustang formation strafed troop trains and damaged a highway viaduct 150 miles inside France, and other fighters hit rail bridges at Nantes, Houdan, Chartres, Avranches, Cerisy and Ecrosnes, as well as three enemy gun emplacements north of La Haye du Puits, on the northwest coastal sector behind the Cherbourg battlefront.

Rocket Starts Landslide

One RAF rocket-plane pilot reported firing into a high embankment and starting a landslide covering a French main-line railroad for some distance.

HEAVIES RAID ROCKET COAST

Dusk Mission Is Third For Fortresses And Liberators

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 24 (AP)—American heavy bombers blasted nine German flying-bomb nests on the French coast at dusk tonight in their third mission of a day of widespread air assaults aimed at wrecking Adolf Hitler's crumbling transportation system, cutting his dwindling oil supply, and crushing the launchers of his winged rockets.

[Shortly after midnight the German radio said "nuisance raiders" were approaching northwest Germany, and two hours later the Nazis broadcast enemy planes were "leaving the Rhine, Hannover and Brunswick areas."]

Reich Targets And Ploesti

Pounded

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 24 (AP). Fortresses and Liberators hammered targets in northwest Germany this afternoon, following up morning blows by heavy bombers upon rail bridges, airfields and installations behind the Normandy battle zone.

The bombers striking Germany bombed through heavy clouds and were escorted by Thunderbolts, Mustangs and Lightnings. Details were not disclosed immediately.

Some 500 bombers and escorting fighters ranged over France today in close support of the battle operations, while Marauders ripped up four German gun positions blocking the advance of the infantry into Cherbourg. BEAUMEAR

Ploesti Pounded Again

A dispatch from Rome said American Liberators blasted the Ploesti area in Romania and Fortresses attacked a rail bridge on the Oltul river near Piatra-Neamt on the main line from Ploesti across Romania to central Europe.

Intense flak and a number of enemy planes were encountered during the raid on Ploesti, which also was hit yesterday by Fortresses.

Other Liberator formations bombed a railway repair depot at Craiova, 80 miles southeast of the Iron Gate, and 30 miles west of Piatra-Neamt. DAY

Excellent Bomb Pattern

Medium forces carried out the raids, escorted by Lightnings, Mustangs and Thunderbolts.

An excellent pattern of bomb hits was reported on the bridge over the Oltul river and at Craiova. The results at Ploesti were not observed, headquarters said.

A Reuter dispatch said the Paris radio reported that the Paris region was attacked by Allied planes today.

The Channel skies were jammed with Allied planes of all types which roared back and forth continuously for more than five hours this morning and which were still going strong at noon.

Explosives Hit Big Guns

Renewing their close support of the troops, the Marauder medium bombers, under a Thunderbolt escort, dumped more than 250 tons of explosives on the heavy guns near Cherbourg.

Encountering only negligible anti-aircraft fire and no German planes at all, the entire force of Marauders and escorts returned from the mission.

The Germans sent their flying bombs against southern England in spurts throughout the night and after daylight today, and additional damage and casualties were reported in a number of districts. RAF fighters intercepted some.

"All Weather Weapon"

In a broadcast recorded by the Ministry of Information, the Berlin radio said the robot was an "all weather weapon" and declared it could "change its place of operation and its objectives rapidly without much work."

The Germans apparently have shifted their strategy in the use of rocket bombs in the last 24 hours. Instead of sending them over steadily, they now are massing them in waves at less frequent intervals—obviously to overwhelm ground and air defenses which have been blasting more and more of the flying bombs out of the sky.

Today's Marauder attack followed a night smash by RAF Lancasters at Nazi rail bottlenecks some 250 miles south of the Normandy fighting zone and Mosquito raids on rail yards at Lisieux, Vire, Dreux, Evreux, Veneuil and Mezidon.

Blast Yards at Saintes.

The daylight blow came after R. A. F. Lancasters smashed at Nazi rail bottlenecks some 250 miles south of the Normandy fighting zone, and after Mosquitoes struck rail yards at Lisieux, Vire, Dreux, Evreux, Veneuil and Mezidon, and downed two German planes over the beachhead.

The big British Lancasters blasted the yards at Saintes, north of Bordeaux, and at Limoges, thus maintaining for thirty-six hours the Allied campaign aimed at sealing off French rail lines now choked with German reinforcements for the Normandy battlefront. Two heavy night bombers were missing from this operation.

Meanwhile speedy British Mosquitos attacked Bremen and laid mines in enemy waters, and heavy night bombers struck the Pas de Calais installations. The Air Ministry said six planes were missing from these operations.

The Germans' rocket bomb attack on southern England continued through the night and until after daylight. The drones ing pilotless projectiles plopped down on various sectors in bigger batches than ever, although at less frequent intervals.

Flying Bomb Shot Lown

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 24 (AP)—Lieut. Recognizing the object as a "spook" bomb, he took out after it.

Another Odd U. S. Weapon

The "Sea Mule" Is a Virtually Unsinkable Invasion Tug

A BRITISH PORT, June 24 (AP).—American invasion forces have come through with another odd weapon—the "sea mule."

This craft is used for pushing and towing. It takes the place of a tug but is more maneuverable, and is cheap to build. It is shipped across the ocean in five parts, is easily assembled at invasion ports for the trip across the channel, has a two-foot draft, carries a five-man crew, has two powerful engines and is virtually unsinkable.

D-Day Glider Reclaimed On Fly By Skytrain

A Field in Normandy, June 23 AP(—Delayed)—A transport skytrain swooped over this field, snatched a D-day glider up in the air and towed it back to England today, inaugurating the new army salvage program for the motorless boxcars. WILSON

This is the first time the gliders have been reclaimed on the fly from the combat areas, from anything but prepared landing strips, said Col. Glynne M. Jones, of Lafayette, La., Ninth Troop Carrier Command officer, adding "we hope to salvage a considerable number of the hundreds that landed during the invasion assault."

"The glider pilots return after such operations now," he said, "and we want to make it complete and bring back the gliders."

Russ Airdromes Raided

SHUTTLE BOMBER AIRFIELDS BLASTED

WASHINGTON, June 24. — (AP) A number of American planes were destroyed in a recent German air raid on two Russian airdromes used by the American Air force in shuttle bombing operations over Europe, the War department announced tonight.

Three crewmen also were lost as a result of the attack on the fields, apparently those used by Italian-based and Britain-based bombers in the shuttle flights over Axis targets.

While the type of the destroyed planes was not specified, they presumably were Flying Fortresses or other heavy bombers.

TWO RED ARMIES CLOSING TRAP ON NIGHT

NAZIS IN VITEBSK BROUGH

Central Fighting Front Lengthened to Approximately 150 Miles.

ENEMY LINES RIPPED

Germans Rushing Reinforcements into Battle for Fortified City.

LONDON, Sunday, June 25. — (AP) Two mighty Red armies are closing pincers from the north and south on Vitebsk in White Russia and the German-fortified town already is threatened with encirclement, Moscow said early today.

More than 7,500 Germans were killed in this area as Soviet infantry fought its way forward with the massed support of artillery and aircraft, the Russians asserted.

Make New Gains

In closing in around the Nazi fortress, Hitler's closest remaining outpost to Moscow, Red troops made two new break-throughs in Nazi defenses to the south, advanced forward up to 25 miles in the north and lengthened the whole central fighting front to approximately 150 miles.

More than 900 places were liberated in fighting on all fronts yesterday, including more than 200 which had been held by the Finns in the lake region to the north.

The early morning supplement to the Russian communique said the Germans were rushing reinforcements into the battle for Vitebsk by forced march from the south. The last remaining railway into the town from the Germans' rear was cut Friday on the first day of the offensive on the main eastern front.

Fighting grew in ferocity, but the supplement said Red troops were hitting relentlessly at disorganized Nazi formations and were moving ahead on both sides of Vitebsk. NIGHT

2,000 Germans Killed

On the northwestern flank of the town more than 2,000 Germans were killed and huge quantities of equipment destroyed or captured. Southward toward the rail junctions of Orsha and Mogilev, where the new break-throughs occurred, the supplement said approximately 3,500 German soldiers were slain in bitter battles. Six hundred dead were counted in one small sector.

Premier Stalin announced that the two-day old offensives northwest and southeast of Vitebsk had been expanded to 50 miles on each side of the town and in addition new break-throughs farther south in the direction of Orsha and Mogilev were revealed.

The momentous Soviet successes on all active fronts were recounted in a series of three special orders of the day by Stalin and the regular nightly communique, which said a total of nearly a thousand places had been liberated in the widespread fighting.

Announcing gains of up to 25 miles northwest of Vitebsk and 15 1-2 miles southeast of that Nazi-fortified town in the first two days of the new offensive on the main eastern front, the premier said that another break-through had been accomplished in the direction of Orsha, an important railway junction approximately 50 miles south of Vitebsk.

This new puncture in the German lines in White Russia was made to a depth up to 9 1-2 miles on a front 12 1-2 miles wide.

Stalin devoted a special order to each of three battle zones — the Finnish front, the wedge northwest of Vitebsk and the fighting to the southeast of that place—and directed a salute of 20 rounds from 224 of Moscow's big guns for each.

Commanders Cited

In his orders he disclosed the names of the two commanders directing operations in White Russia —Col. Gen. Ivan Bagramian of the First Baltic army northwest of Vitebsk, and Col. Gen. Ivan Chernia-khovsky of the Third White Russian army south of there. It was Bagramian's army which made the original advance close to Vitebsk last winter.

The premier said Red troops on the northern front had swarmed across the Svir river all along its 100-mile course between Lakes Ladoga and Onezhskoe (Onega), gaining up to 19 miles in three days, and had freed more than 200 places from the Germans.

The communique broadcast later by Moscow and recorded by the Soviet monitor said that 150 miles farther north at the tip of Lake Onezhskoe the Russians liberated Medvezhegorsk, a district center of the Karelo-Finnish Soviet Socialist republic and an important station on the Leningrad-Murmansk railway.

New Break-Through

The comunique also announced the new break-through in the Mogilev direction, saying that "our troops passed over to the offensive, forced the River Pronye, broke through strongly fortified enemy defenses north of Chausi and advanced up to 20 kilometers (12½ miles) while widening the break-through to a front of 50 kilometers (31 miles)." In this new thrust the Red army ocupied 70 populated places.

This drive made a virtually continuous front of 100 miles which the Reds had punched into the German lines south of Vitebsk since the big summer offensive opened Friday and coupled with the 50-mile wide wedge hammered into the enemy's defenses northwest of the town, presented an early threat of encirclement for the Nazi stronghold.

The Soviet infantry was being given thundering support by artillery and Red airmen ranged up and down the battle lines and beyond. The communique said 54 German planes had been brought down during Friday's fighting.

Liberate 300 Places

In his order dealing with the offensive south of Vitebsk, Stalin said, "Troops of the Third White Russian front, supported by massed blows of artillery and aviation, broke through strongly fortified defenses which the Germans had developed south of the town of Vitebsk, on a sector of 30 kilometers (19 miles), advanced in two days of offensive fighting to a depth of 25 kilometers (15½ miles) and widened the break-through to a front of 80 kilometers (50 miles), liberating more than 300 populated places.

"At the same time in the Orsha direction troops of the (same) front broke through strong, deeply-echeloned enemy defenses north of the River Dnepr on a front of 20 kilometers (12½ miles) and advanced up to 15 kilometers (9½ miles)."

This special order followed the ones on the Finnish fighting and the front northwest of Vitebsk.

The campaign began with assaults both northwest and southwest of Vitebsk, hinge of the German defense positions on the vital White Russian front that represents the most direct route to the heart of the Reich.

The Russians now stand about 275 miles from the borders of East Prussia.

ADVANCE ON FINNISH FRONT

Gain 12 to 19 Miles in 3-day Drive Above Lake Ladoga —Cross Svir River.

London, June 24 (A. P.).—Premier Stalin announced tonight in a second special order of the day that the Red Army has extended its break-through northwest of Vitebsk in White Russia to a width of fifty miles.

The order disclosed that Col.-Gen. Ivan C. Bagramian is in command of the new offensive.

It said that Soviet troops had crashed through to the western Dvina River on a twenty-two-mile sector. They had penetrated the Nazi defense belt to a depth of ten miles.

Earlier in the day the Premier announced that Red armies on the Finnish front had crossed the Evir River on a 100-mile front between Lakes Ladoga and Onezhskoe (Onega), advancing twelve and one-half to nineteen miles in three days, Premier-Marshal Stalin announced today.

DAY

The first order of the day, declared that the offensive on the Finnish front had seized more than 200 populated places in three days of fighting. Russian columns were striking deep into Finnish lines after other forces had captured Viipuri on the other side of Lake Ladoga.

The Germans have suffered enormous losses in the main offensive in the Vitebsk area, Moscow declared earlier.

A broadcast Russian communique, detailing first gains in the new offensive that rounds out the United Nations strategy of hammering Hitler's Europe from the west, south and east, said yesterday's attacks cut the last railway line connecting German troops at Vitebsk with the rear.

Artillery and aircraft battered Nazi fortifications for several hours, then in the wake of a wall of fire Red Army infantry began the attack, the Russian communique said.

These were the immediate gains listed:

Seven and a half to nine and a half miles on a 19-mile-wide front northwest of Vitebsk, with more than 100 towns taken; gains of five to six miles on a 16-mile-wide front southeast of Vitebsk, with more than fifty towns freed.

The railway between Vitebsk and Orsha, 50 miles to the south, was cut with the capture of Zamostochye, 14 miles southeast of Vitebsk. Two railway stations are among the captured towns, including the large one of Sirotino, 27 miles northwest of Vitebsk.

Russians appeared to be pressing at least eight attacks from the sector north of Lake Onezhskoe to the area northwest of Tarnapol. Besides those in the Vitebsk region and against the Finns, Moscow and Berlin mentioned assaults in the Pskov-Ostrov sector, in the Mogilev district, northwestward from the Pripyat marshes toward Pinsk and on a line pointed toward Lwow in old Poland.

Nazi Planes Enter Fight.

Nazi combat planes were said by the German radio to have entered the fighting on the Karelian Isthmus.

A Soviet war map published in Moscow has disclosed that Russian troops on the presently quiet front in old Poland are only forty-five miles from Brest-Litovsk, which the Germans captured three years ago, and are within 460 miles of Berlin.

The map shows Russian lines curl around Kowel, important railway city, on three sides. Their positions above Kowel are astride the railway linking the city and Brest-Litovsk, which fell to the Germans June 23, 1941, the day after they launched their invasion of Russia.

75 Miles From Latvia

Moscow, June 24 (AP)—The Red army, in a new central front offensive that was an integral part of Allied grand strategy, rolled westward in spectacular fashion today and reached points only 75 miles from the Latvian border.

The Russians battled swollen streams and considerable mud northwest of Vitebsk, where they pushed upon Polotsk, 32 miles away.

Reports from the Finnish front were that the new offensive had detracted nothing from the drive toward Helsinki and the liberation of the Leningrad-Murmansk railway. Progress was reported in all the fighting areas, with the Finns apparently still unable to hold the weight of Russian armor and infantry.

Move Toward Minsk

Southeast of Vitebsk, on the central front, where the Russians have been across the highway from Vitebsk to the German-held fortress of Orsha, the Red army surged forward and cut the railway which parallels the highway. It moved in the general direction of Minsk.

Operations in this sector across the Nazi communications line appeared to be outflanking Vitebsk badly, so badly that the big Nazi garrison has no railways into the city.

(The German radio said the Russians, using 11 divisions, have broken into German positions on both sides of Vitebsk and that "heavy fighting goes on, with the Russians attempting to encircle the town.")

First Phase of Drive

Military observers in Moscow point out this is probably the first phase of Russia's summer offensive, recalling that last winter Stalin drove swift feints in several directions, then struck home with his main blows.

The Red army's tactics of late have been based wholly on attrition—striking hard at one point, then, when the Germans shifted to meet the attack, hitting somewhere else. The process was repeated again and again.

Great Preparations

The Red army has made major preparations for the summer offensive. Numerous trips to frontal areas this spring and early summer have disclosed preparations such as have never been seen before in three years of war here. There is every indication that Hitler will experience the mightiest offensive of all from the east.

Russians appeared to be pressing at least eight attacks from the sector north of Lake Onezhskoe to the area northwest of Tarnapol. Besides those in the Vitebsk region and against the Finns, Moscow and Berlin mentioned assaults in the Pskov-Ostrov sector, in the Mogilev district, northwestward from the Pripyat marshes towards Pinsk and on a line pointed toward Lwow in old Poland.

Nazi Planes In England

Nazi combat planes were said by the German radio to have entered the fighting on the Karelian Isthmus.

Henry Cassidy, Associated Press correspondent, said the overcoming of Vitebsk, strongest Nazi fortified base in Russia, would open the way toward Minsk and Warsaw for the Red army.

It was considered likely in London that the Russians would seek quick liquidation of German control in the Baltic states, possibly by a push along the railroad to Riga, Latvia. The Finnish campaign would be tied in with such a plan, since with control of southern Finland the Russians could take over the German stronghold of Tallinn, Estonia, and knock out Baltic submarine nests.

A Soviet war map published here had disclosed that Russian troops on the presently quiet front in old Poland are only 45 miles from Brest-Litovsk, which the Germans captured three years ago, and are within 460 miles of Berlin.

FINNS DESTROY PLANT

JUN 25 1944

LONDON, June 24 (AP) Retreating Finns have destroyed the Svir Hydro-Electric plant, the Moscow radio said tonight in a broadcast recorded by the Soviet monitor.

Russians, who captured the site, found the four main turbines and two auxiliaries blown up, the broadcast said.

Moscow added that "the Finnish barbarians completely burned down a workers' settlement" at the plant.

Peter and Tito Are Expected To Meet Soon

May Draft Final Details for Unifying All Yugoslav Patriots Against Nazis

LONDON, June 24 (AP).—King Peter II of the Yugoslav government in exile and Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) of the Yugoslav Partisans probably will meet soon to draft final details for unification of all anti-Nazi elements into a wartime government for all-out blows against the Germans.

Reports reaching London today said that Marshal Broz and Peter's new Premier, Ivan Subashitch, had reached a preliminary agreement on these four points:

NIGHT

Marshal Broz to accept King Peter's sovereignty and King Peter to let the Yugoslavs choose their own form of government after the war;

The Partisans and the government group to stop propagandizing against each other;

Military collaboration and discussion of means of creating a government including all patriotic Yugoslav elements.

While these points were unconfirmed, diplomatic circles did not doubt them.

King Peter and Premier Subashitch now are in Italy, and it was expected that a meeting between the King and the marshal would be arranged soon.

Tito-Subasic Accord Reported

London, June 24 (AP)—The Evening News said today that Marshal Tito and King Peter's representative, Premier Ivan Subasic, had reached a preliminary agreement on Yugoslav collaboration.

The account, at present unconfirmed by London representatives of either side, said the tentative accord contained these points:

1. Tito would accept King Peter's sovereignty while Peter agreed to let the Yugoslav people choose their own form of government after the war.
2. Both groups would cease propaganda against each other.
3. They would collaborate in a military way.
4. They would discuss ways of creating a government to include all patriotic elements.

Norway Sub Gets Nazi Ships

By Ernest Agnew

[Associated Press Correspondent Representing the Combined American Press]

At a Northern British Naval Base (AP—Delayed) — Forty-two thousand tons of German shipping and a 600-ton German naval vessel were sunk and damaged by the Royal Norwegian submarine Ula during a recent series of operations in Norwegian waters, her captain announced today.

The Ula headed into this base cockily flying from her bridge a Jolly Roger of skull and cross bones decorated with eight white stripes, showing eight merchant vessels sunk; one red stripe for a naval vessel, and two daggers for two special operations which thus far are a secret.

The captain said the biggest of the vessels torpedoed was an iron ore vessel. The Ula also scored hits on a 6,000-ton tanker and six freighters of between 3,000 and 4,000 tons. The naval vessel which was torpedoed was believed to be a trawler.

During this strike the Ula survived with virtually no damage despite more than 100 depth charges hurled at her, an incident that the captain dismissed with a wry, "It wasn't much fun."

British Distillers Await Word On Scotch

London, June 24 (AP)—British distillers have been promised a decision within three months as to whether they will be able to resume production of Scotch whisky in the autumn or spring.

However, even if production is resumed, one distiller said it will not likely affect exports to the United States, as more whisky is going to America now than any other country in the world. No figures are available for publication on the amount of Scotch being sent to the United States.

DAY

J. J. Llewellin, Minister of Foods, made the promise for a decision on whisky production on a visit to Scotland last week. Whisky production has been at a standstill since autumn in 1942, when distillers were permitted to make 30 per cent. of their average output during the 1938-39 period.

Martial Law in Copenhagen

Nazis Execute 8 Danes After Rifle Factory is Wrecked

STOCKHOLM, June 24 (AP).—The Germans have proclaimed martial law at Copenhagen and in the Island of Sjaelland, following a new outbreak of sabotage, the Free Danish News Service said today. The purpose is to permit German courts-martial to act more quickly, the agency said.

Dispatches from Copenhagen said the Germans executed eight Danes yesterday in reprisal for the most extensive single act of sabotage yet achieved in Denmark. It left a rifle factory in the Danish capital in ruins.

TANKS STIFFENING NAZI ITALY FIGHT

TUCKER

Fresh Armor And Air Force Thrown Into Defense

Rome, June 24 (AP)—The Germans hurled fresh armor and their air force into the battle of Italy today, but French elements of the Fifth Army thrust on through the mountains to the south bank of the Ombrone river at a point about 115 miles northwest of Rome.

In this advance, the Fifth Army overran Roccastrada, which is about 70 miles southeast of Pisa.

The point reached on the Ombrone was six miles northeast of Roccastrada. The French had to fight through the heaviest enemy artillery fire of the week and thread through heavy minefields to reach it.

Sever Lateral Road

This spectacular gain severed an important lateral road leading east from Roccastrada to Highway 73, adding to the problems of Field Marshal Gen. Albert Kesselring in withdrawing his army through the mountains.

West of Roccastrada on the coast another column of Allied infantry and tanks was fighting at the outskirts of Fallonica, which straddles the coastal highway leading north to Pisa.

Bad weather, which has given the Germans some respite from tactical air attack, did not keep a force of from 250 to 500 United States Liberators from blasting the Ploesti oil fields of Romania today for the second straight day, and attacking a rail bridge over the Oltul river on a main line from Ploesti to central Europe.

NIGHT

Fires In Giurgiu Harbor

Fires blazed in the harbor and storage area of Giurgiu, 40 miles south of Bucharest, which was bombed yesterday despite strong aerial resistance which cost the enemy 31 aircraft, a communique announced. Ten Allied heavy bombers and eight other planes are missing from Friday's operations, in which Mediterranean airforce planes made 1,500 individual flights in spite of unfavorable weather.

Intense flak and a number of enemy planes met the United States heavy bombers returning to the attack today.

Other formations struck the railway-repair depot at Craiova, 80 miles southeast of the Iron Gate on the Danube. Good results were reported from the raid on the Oltul bridge and at Craiova.

Nazis Regain Chiusi

On land, the Germans registered one of their few successes since the big Allied push began by recapturing Chiusi, nine miles southwest of Lake Trasimeno on the center of the front.

The British Eighth Army beat off counterattacks north of Perugia, which lies east of the lake, captured the village of Corciano and cleared the enemy from Monte Gioga, three miles north of Perugia.

Fifth Army Troops Close In On Follonica

JUN 25 1944

KENNEDY

Rome, June 24 (AP)—Fifth Army tanks and infantry, advancing against strong resistance, today occupied Roccastrada, on Highway 73, and cut a lateral road to the north, while another column closed in on Follonica, astride Highway 1, along the coastal route to Livorno and Pisa.

The Germans, facing the Eighth Army in central Italy, are continuing to offer strong resistance east and west of Lake Trasimeno and, in general, the situation in Italy is little changed, an Allied headquarters' communique said.

Counter-Blows Repelled

Hard fighting continued around Chiusi, nine miles southwest of Lake Trasimeno, which the enemy regained by infiltration. New German counterattacks north of Perugia were repulsed.

On the Adriatic coast sector Allied troops had reached the outskirts of San Elpedro. Earlier reports had placed other units of the Eighth Army near the vicinity of Morrovalle and Montecosaro, less than 25 miles from the port of Ancona.

French Advance

French Colonials, fighting to the east of the Americans, have reached a point slightly north of Castiglione d'Orcia, 17 miles west of Chiusi. Between Perugia and the Adriatic coast, Eighth Army forces were driving toward Camerino and Macerata.

Poor weather caused cancellation of most medium-bomber missions by the Mediterranean Army Air Force yesterday, but in more than 1,500 sorties over a wide area Allied planes downed 31 enemy aircraft, at a loss of ten heavy bombers and eight other craft.

Bridges Attacked

Fighter bombers and light bombers struck at roads, rail lines and bridges in northwestern Italy and on the Adriatic coast. Medium forces of heavy bombers hit objectives near Ploesti, in Romania, and oil installations at Giurgiu, also in Romania, as well as the rail center at Nis, in Yugoslavia.

Reconnaissance and infantry units, descending from the hills east of Follonica, moved toward the coast and leading elements were within two miles of the town, latest official reports said. German self-propelled guns and tanks and elements of the Turkoman Division opposed this sweep.

Drive To River Bank

French infantry on the right of the Americans pushed on to the south bank of the Ombrone River.

Once the coast is reached a cordon of troops will have been drawn around some 225 square miles of rugged terrain south of Follonica and east of the main highway. Most of the Germans, however, appear to have pulled out.

Other Fifth Army tanks and infantry inland from the Follonica area fought their way to a point two miles south of Poggibano, on a side road northeast of Follonica.

Tanks Knocked Out

The enemy counterattacked sharply in the area north of Roccastrada, losing tanks to American artillery fire.

Elements of the 42d Jaeger Division, which the Germans used in the occupation of Hungary and then returned to northern Italy, have been rushed to the west coast area of the front from Genoa and La Spezia.

In the raid over Ploesti fighter planes escorting the Flying Fortresses shot down 23 enemy planes, while the heavy bombers accounted for eight. Approximately 75 enemy fighters attempted to disrupt the bombing attack.

Unfinished Rimini Line Is Suggested

By SIDNEY FEDER

With American Forces in Italy Approaching Follonica, June 24 (AP). The possibility that the recent rush of fresh enemy troops into the Italian battle may have been precipitated because the Pisa-Rimini line fortifications to the north have not been completed was voiced in some quarters today as the American forces neared this seaport.

At least five new Nazi divisions have been put into the battle since the liberation of Rome and all have been ordered "to hold at all costs."

NIGHT

Prisoners from one Parachute division said they were told this when they were sent into action.

As a result, German resistance has stiffened along the Fifth Army front in the last 72 hours.

Along with new units of infantry the German high command is also throwing in heavy tanks, indicating the Germans may want more time to set up the Pisa-Rimini line—their last bastion in Italy.

Even though the Germans have sent in fresh divisions, the Americans already have taken a heavy toll in prisoners and casualties among them.

AMERICANS RAID PLOESTI FIELDS

Other U. S. Bombers Blast Cherbourg Gun Positions.

Rome, June 24 (A. P.).—American Liberators today blasted the Ploesti area in Romania and Fortresses attacked a railway bridge across the Oltul River near Piatra-Neamt on the main line from Ploesti across Romania to central Europe. Intense flak and a number of enemy planes were encountered during the raid on Ploesti, which had been hit yesterday by Fortresses.

DAY

Other Liberator formations bombed a railway repair depot at Craiova, eighty miles southeast of the Iron Gate, and thirty miles west of Piatra-Neamt. Medium forces carried out the raids, escorted by Lightnings, Mustangs and Thunderbolts.

An excellent pattern of bomb hits were reported on the bridge over the Oltul River and at Craiova. The results at Ploesti were not observed, headquarters said.

Street Battles In Milan And Bologna Reported

Bern, Switzerland, June 24 (AP)—Reports from the Italian border today told of street fighting in Bologna and Milan, a general strike in Genoa and strikes in several factories in Turin, with the German-Fascist grip on northern Italy weakening steadily.

The Swiss Telegraphic Agency said German SS troops established permanent guards in Milan factories to combat strikes and check a wave of sabotage.

DAY

The confusion and disorder resembled that of the northland when the cities wildly celebrated the removal of Mussolini.

The newspaper La Suisse reported that an Italian general was commanding Partisans in the Turin sector, including former French, British and Russian prisoners of war. The publication said that the Bologna Partisans numbered 80,000 and that the electrical works and the German barracks were attacked. Fascist Party Secretary Pavolini reported to Mussolini that the situation was grave. The account said the Bologna Mayor had been killed.

Other Battles Reported

There also were reports that Partisan battles had occurred in Coni province and the Adige Valley.

La Suisse said that the forces at La Spezia naval base were in revolt, and that partisans around Sienna, Arezzo and Florence were attacking the retreating 228th German Division.

Other reports said partisans wearing German uniforms appeared before the Como prison warden and obtained the release of all prisoners, who joined French guerrillas.

A German major and a Fascist captain were reported to have been assassinated at Baveno, near Lake Maggiore.

Nazi Forces In Italy Are Believed Halved

New York, June 24 (AP)—ABSIE, the American broadcasting station in Europe, estimated tonight that German strength in Italy, originally computed at 25 divisions, already has been "cut in half by General Alexander's smashing advance."

The broadcast, recorded by CBS, said that Marshal Kesselring now has "the equivalent of 12½ divisions left to fight with," and added that about 70,000 of these were deployed across the front.

AMG Purging Rome Of Fascist Writers

Rome, June 24 (AP)—Lieut. Col. Charles Poletti, of the Allied Military Government in Italy, has ordered a purge of Roman newspapermen with Fascist records and has appointed Senator Alberto Bergamini to carry it out and submit a list of journalists now qualified to practice their profession.

The approved journalists will be given press cards and will be permitted to circulate after the curfew.

DAY

Bergamini, a strong anti-Fascist, started Il Giornale d'Italia in 1901 and also directed the newspaper Corriere Della Sera of Milan, both of which campaigned for Italian intervention on the Allied side during World War I. The Fascists later pushed him out. (After the fall of Mussolini's government Bergamini was reported to have replaced the Fascist mouthpiece, Virginio Gayda, as editor of Il Giornale.)

Poletti said he noticed several newspapermen with Fascist records present at his first conference for Italian journalists on Thursday.

Three Italian Ministers Refuse To Take Oath

New York, June 24 (AP)—Radio France at Algiers in a broadcast tonight said three Ministers in Premier Ivanoe Bonomi's new Italian Government had declined to swear an oath of allegiance to Prince Umberto as "Lieutenant General of the Realm."

The broadcast said the three were Benedetto Croce and Alberto Cianca, Ministers without portfolio, and Admiral Raffaele de Courten, Navy Minister.

Fascist Police Chief Captured

New York, June 24 (AP)—The United Nations radio at Algiers today said Italian patriots had captured Pietro Caruso, Fascist chief of police in Rome during German occupation, at Bagnoregio, near Viterbo. The broadcast was recorded by the Federal Communications Commission.

Badoglio Tells Roosevelt Italo-U. S. Amity Is Goal

In Message, He Says He Will Continue His Efforts

WASHINGTON, June 24 (AP).—President Roosevelt has received from Marshal Pietro Badoglio of Italy the latter's assurance of continued efforts as a sponsor of friendship between the United States and his country.

Badoglio was replaced as head of the Italian government soon after the fall of Rome when a new Cabinet was formed with Ivanoe Bonomi as Premier. The Bonomi government has not been formally recognized by the United States or Great Britain.

The White House made public this text of Marshal Badoglio's message to the President: "I wish to thank you, Mr. President, for the assistance and support which you have been kind enough to give the people of Italy in especially difficult and hard moments. My separation from the government will not for a single day interfere with my activity as a sponsor of friendship between the United States of America and Italy. I shall retain the memory of your friendship as one of the best of my public life."

De Gaulle Rumor Denied

Algiers Officials Say He Has No Plan to Visit Moscow, as Nazis Said

ALGIERS, June 24 (AP).—French authorities here said today there was no plan at present involving a visit to Moscow by General Charles de Gaulle, head of the French Committee of National Liberation.

CHINESE FORCES START NEW DRIVE IN NORTH BURMA

JUN 25 1944

JUN 25 1944

30.24 — 16529

J. GROVER

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, KANDY, Ceylon, June 24.—(AP) American and Chinese forces have launched new attacks in north Burma, while in the fighting in India victorious Allied forces which cleared the Kohima-Imphal road of Japanese have made contact 18 miles to the northeast with enemy troops on the Ukhrul road, headquarters announced tonight.

American troops, driving from the north into the besieged north Burma Japanese stronghold of Myitkyina, advanced another 300 yards and took two new positions, a communique said, and heavy fighting has broken out anew in the Mogaung sector.

Chinese and British Chindit troops on the outskirts of Mogaung have inflicted heavy casualties on the Japanese. Twelve miles west of Mogaung, the Chindits occupied the village of Sawngching. In these actions the Chindits reported they killed 200 Japanese, including ten officers, and the Chinese seized a quantity of guns and ammunition.

In the Manipur hills of eastern India, Allied forces made contact with the enemy at Litan, 18 miles northeast of Imphal, along the Ukhrul road, from which the Japanese still were in a position to menace the Kohima road. This drive will continue through the Monsoon season, headquarters has indicated, in a campaign to throw the Japanese entirely out of India.

To the south, widespread minor activity by patrols and artillery was reported to have inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy.

The speed of the Allied advance which culminated in complete mastery of the 60-mile stretch of Kohima-Imphal road so surprised the Japanese that large numbers of them were killed without loss to the Allied forces, and much booty was captured, the communique que said. R.A.F. fighter-bombers aided in the drive, attacking enemy concentrations and transport in the Manipur area and along the Tiddim road.

Chindits Take Burma Town; Kill 200 Japs

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, June 24 (AP)—Heavy fighting has broken out in the outskirts of Mogaung, in North Burma, and 12 miles to the west of the town Maj. Gen. W. D. A. Lentaigne's Chindit forces have occupied Sawngching, a headquarters communique said today.

The Chindits killed 200 Japanese, including ten officers, and the Chinese in the area captured a 150-mm. gun, three heavy mortars and an ammunition dump, the communique said.

Allies Mopping Up

In the India fighting, the speed of an Allied advance which cleared the 60-mile stretch of the Kohima-Imphal road had surprised the Japanese, the bulletin said, and large numbers were killed. Booty included ten 75-mm. guns. Allied troops were mopping up a few small enemy detachments east and west of the road.

Along the Ukhrul road, contact was made with the enemy 18 miles from Imphal.

American troops in the area of besieged myitkylina, in northern Burma, were reported to have launched a dawn attack from the north, advancing 300 yards and taking two positions.

JAPANESE TAKE LAST BARRIER TO HENGYANG

MOOSA

CHUNGKING, June 24. — (AP) The last major barrier in the swift Japanese march on vital Hengyang apparently has fallen, and there were indications that the enemy in this drive would employ encirclement tactics against the Hengyang rail junction similar to those which brought about the fall of Changsha, the Chinese High command intimated tonight.

A communique placed the fighting now four and one-half miles below Hengyang, the last Hunan province stronghold north of Hengyang, and slightly more than 20 miles above that Japanese objective, whose fall, the Chinese have admitted readily, would have grave implications, and would go far toward accomplishment of the enemy effort to split China in two and prepare against the eventuality of American landings on the China coast.

The Japanese were driving fiercely down both sides of the Canton-Hankow railway. Columns on the eastern bank of the Siang river were engaged by the defenders at Leichishih, and farther east at a point on the north bank of the Mi River about 12 miles southeast of Hengshan. Bloody fighting was proceeding in these areas.

To the west of the Siang river, heavy fighting raged on a front stretching from points south of Siangtan to west of Siangsiang. This line, with its western anchor about 50 miles north of Hengyang, extends about 75 miles east to a point south of the Japanese-captured city of Liling. The Chinese communique said there were little positional changes in these sectors.

While the Japanese to the south were advancing southward from Hengshan directly against Hengyang, the belief was prevalent here that they intended to by-pass the city on both sides and encircle it, just as they did in the case of Changsha.

The Fourteenth U. S. Army Air force has been active throughout the Hunan province battle areas, striking heavy blows against Japanese river craft near Chuchow, south of Changsha. Supply and troop boats were strafed on the Siang river. P-40's also attacked enemy cavalry and infantry in the vicinity of Siangtan, said a communique from Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters.

Hengyang Fall Is Hinted By Chinese

Chungking, June 24 (AP)—Hengshan, last important stronghold in the path of the Japanese advancing rapidly down the Canton-Hankow railway against the vital rail junction of Hengyang, probably has fallen, the Chinese high command indicated tonight.

A communique placed the fighting along the Siang river about 20 miles from Hengyang, and Hengshan is 25 miles north-northeast of the city. The high command said fighting was raging at points about 4½ miles south and 12 miles southeast of Hengshan.

Positions Change Little

There was a possibility that the Japanese intended to by-pass Hengyang, rather than launch a frontal assault.

The fighting on the broad front north of Hengshan and south of Changsha continued unabated, the communique said, but there was little change in position.

Planes Lash Foe

Meanwhile, heavy air blows have been struck by the 14th Army Air Force against Japanese troops in Hunan province, a communique from Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters disclosed.

P-40's strafed a triple-decked river steamer loaded with troops at Chuchow, on the Siang river below Changsha, probably destroying the vessel and causing numerous casualties, the communique said. Supply boats also were damaged.

In the vicinity of Siangtan, also below Changsha and northwest of Chuchow, P-40's attacked Japanese cavalry and foot soldiers, inflicting casualties. Troop-carrying boats on the Siang river were also hit.

Mission To Chungking Concluded By Wallace

Chungking, June 24 (AP)—Vice-President Henry A. Wallace ended his mission to Chungking today with a joint Chinese-American press release which declared that enduring peace in the Pacific would depend on permanent demilitarization of Japan; understanding, friendship and collaboration among China, Russia, Britain and the United States, and recognition of the right of self-government for Asiatic peoples now dependent.

The statement said that Wallace, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and other Chinese officials who held discussions in "an informal, frank and friendly atmosphere," had "found themselves in agreement on basic principles and objectives."

It declared "prosecution of the war against Japan in Asia is an urgent job, and mutual assistance in every possible way to get that job done quickly and efficiently is fundamental in Chinese-American relations."

Wallace, Chiang Reach Accord

Chungking, June 24 (AP)—United States Vice-President Henry A. Wallace, President Chiang Kai-shek and other officials of the Chinese Government have discussed matters of common interest and concern and "found themselves in agreement on basic principles and objectives," a joint Chinese-American press release said today.

"Prosecution of the war against Japan in Asia is an urgent job, and mutual assistance in every way possible to get that job done quickly and efficiently is fundamental in Chinese-American relations," said the statement, issued at the conclusion of Wallace's visit.

The discussions were held in "an informal, frank and friendly atmosphere," it added.

China's Position

The statement said that recognition "of the fundamental right of presently dependent Asiatic peoples to self-government" was one of the essentials for enduring Pacific peace, and added that "cognizance was taken of the cornerstone position of China in Asia and the importance of China in any structure for peace in the Pacific area."

"The objective of victory in the Pacific is establishment of a democratic peace based on political and social stability deriving from a government devoted to welfare of the people," the statement said.

Other essentials for that peace, it declared, would be "effective permanent demilitarization of Japan" and "understanding friendship and collaboration among China, the Soviet Union, the United States and the British Commonweatlh of Nations, and among all the United Nations willing to share in the responsibilities of a post war international order."

Prepare For Self-Rule

The statement advocated "early adoption of measures in political, economic and social fields to prepare dependent peoples for self-government within a specified and practical time limit."

"It was assumed as axiomatic that essential to such a peace structure would be continuation of ties of friendship that characterized American-Chinese relations for over a century and maintenance of relations on the basis of mutual understanding between China and the Soviet Union—China's nearest great neighbor—as well as between China and her other neighbors," the statement said. "No balance of power arrangement would serve the ends of peace."

It was disclosed that Vice-President Wallace had brought to China a scroll which President Roosevelt gave to the people of Chungking as his symbol of admiration for their bravery during enemy air raids. It was presented by the mayor of Chungking to the city's provincial municipal council, now in session.

The scroll paid tribute to the people of Chungking who "held out firm and unconquered," saying they "proved gloriously that terrorism cannot destroy the spirit of a people determined to be free."

GUATEMALAN HEAD SCORED

Popular Union Chiefs Charge He Curbs Individual Rights

MEXICO CITY, June 24 (AP)—Directors of the Guatemalan Popular Union in Mexico asked President Manuel Avila Camacho today to intercede in behalf of Guatemalans who might be affected by the decree of President Jorge Ubico which, they said, curbs individual rights.

Gen. Federico Aguilar, Col. Miguel Garcia Granados and Francisco Carti, the directors, asked President Avila Camacho in a telegram to intercede with the Guatemalan Government.

They said the decree affected constitutional guarantees of freedom of thought, assembly and personal liberty, and the inviolability of correspondence.

Jorge Garcia Granados, former representative in the Guatemalan Congress, charged in a statement today that President Ubico "has discontinued the most important constitutional guarantees."

Señor Granados said President Ubico "has oppressed the Guatemalans for more than thirteen years without taking account of the constitution which has been maintained in force only for his personal satisfaction."

Raid On Iwo Jima Reported By Tokyo

New York, June 24 (AP)—A Domei broadcast from Tokyo said today that "aerial battles in various areas in the Central Pacific are growing in intensity in conjunction with the furious battle around Saipan Island," and reported new aerial attacks today on Iwo Jima, 800 miles south of Tokyo.

The report, recorded by United States Government monitors, said Yap and Palau west of Truk and Tobi Island, midway between Palau and the northwestern tip of New Guinea, also were attacked yesterday.

Carrier Hits Claimed

Other Japanese-originated reports via Berlin radio asserted 'two more" United States aircraft carriers were heavily damaged off Saipan and 15 out of 60 United States carrier-based planes shot down during an attack on Guam yesterday morning.

All the reports were without Allied confirmation.

The Berlin broadcast, quoting Domei, said two Japanese land-based planes were lost in the attack on the carriers at Saipan and three more in the engagement over Guam.

No Details Given

The attacks on Yap, Palau and Tobi were by "large-type enemy bombers," Tokyo said, and added that no detailed reports were yet available of the raid on Iwo Jima.

Another broadcast Domei dispatch, recorded by United States Government monitors, said that "when that day comes in which our whole navy will be deployed in the waters of the Marianas Islands, the Pacific will be turned into a watery graveyard for the whole United States Pacific Fleet."

"That day, that hour, is approaching second by second," said the dispatch, directed to the Japanese-controlled press in occupied Asia.

Japs 'Put B-29 On Display'

New York, June 24 (AP)—A Domei broadcast from Tokyo today said the "wreckage of the enemy's vaunted Superfortress which fell victim to our interception fire" in the raid on northern Kyushu June 15 had been put on exhibition at Anmatsuya department store.

"Parts exhibited" included bullet-proof glass, a double-barrelled cannon, shells and cartridges, Domei reported.

The Japanese originally claimed to have shot down seven of the planes, but later acknowledged that they had succeeded in bringing down only one. They later reported salvage operations off Kyushu in an effort to find three or four more.

The War Department announced that one of the bombers was lost over the target, that another is missing and that two more failed to get back to their bases because of accidents.

Swedes Sensing Grave Problems

New York, June 24 (AP)—Premier Per Albin Hansson of Sweden said today in a radio address that while the fighting in the west was "relatively far away" its repercussions were felt in Scandinavia and "both belligerents are considering active measures in this part of the world also."

Hansson, whose address was broadcast by the Swedish radio and recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, said "we are conscious of the fact that we may have to face grave problems, an indication of which is the strengthening of our military preparedness."

The Swedish leader said his country was concerned with Finland's fate and that he was hopeful of a settlement.

"Swedish public opinion and the Government have not been able to remain indifferent when events in Finland have taken a fateful turn. It has always been clear that it has been up to Finland herself to make her own decisions without uncalled-for intervention.

"But Finnish requests for assistance and support in serious situations have always evoked the Swedish will to assist. It is obvious that the possibility of such situations has been discussed, and the view of the Swedish Government has been conveyed.

"I cannot make any public announcement of the present situation. Sweden's interest in an independent Finland is undiminished, and I hope there is still a possibility for a settlement that leaves open the prospect of a future free Finland on good relations with her great neighbor in the East."

NAVY TO CUT PILOT TRAINING

Half of Cadets in Pre-flight Will Be Dropped.

Washington, June 24 (A. P.).—With casualties in aerial combat one-third less than had been expected, the Navy reported today that it must reduce substantially the pilot training program.

Because of the lowered needs, a Navy statement said, it will be necessary to discontinue training of many cadets at the pre-flight stage. It was learned that the reduction will be about 50 per cent.

The fine fighting qualities and the superior training and equipment of the Navy and Marine pilots have produced the high rate of survival, the Navy said.

Personal letters were sent by Rear Admiral A. W. Radford, acting deputy chief of naval operations for air to all naval cadets telling them of the decision to reduce the training program.

The Navy said it hoped that the majority of the cadets affected would remain within the aeronautical organization, either as combat air crewmen or as seamen on new carriers. Those with previous training in the V-12 program will be given opportunity to complete their training and may be commissioned in non-aviation branches of the Navy.

Those who have had two years of college training will be given an opportunity to train as reserve midshipman with ultimate commission as deck officers.

Also, the Navy said, each cadet will be permitted, if he wishes, to serve in enlisted capacity in non-aviation duty, or to withdraw from the service.

Missing American Ace Awarded Navy Cross

Washington, June 24 (AP) — Award of the Navy Cross to Major Gregory Boyington, Okanogan, Wash., 31-year-old Marine Corps ace now listed as missing in action, was announced by the navy today.

Boyington was listed as missing after an attack on Japanese planes over New Britain Island on January 3.

He had tied the existing American record of 26 enemy planes shot down just before he plunged into the jungles during this action.

Boyington previously had been awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Two Liberty Ships Sunk

Five Lost From Vessels Named for Yale Men

WASHINGTON, June 24 (AP).—Liberty ships named for two noted figures in the history of Yale University, Elihu Yale and Walter Camp, have been lost through enemy action, the War Shipping Administration reported today.

Five persons were missing after the bombing of the Elihu Yale. The ship was lost off the Anzio beachhead during preparations for the 5th Army's drive on Rome.

The Walter Camp, named for the Yale football coach, was torpedoed in the Arabian Sea, without loss of life.

Bard Sworn Into Navy Post

Takes Oath as Under Secretary in Forrestal's Office

WASHINGTON, June 24 (AP).—Ralph A. Bard, of Highland Park, Ill., was sworn in today as Under Secretary of the Navy. The oath was administered by Rear Admiral Thomas L. Gatch, Judge Advocate General, at ceremonies in the office of Navy Secretary Forrestal.

Bard has been Assistant Secretary of the Navy since 1941. He was married in 1909 to Mary Hancock Spear. They have four children. Both of their daughters are married to officers in the armed services. They are Mrs. Thomas J. Johnson jr., of Chicago, and Mrs. Martin E. Manulis, of New York City, whose husband is a lieutenant in the Navy on overseas duty.

NAVY TURNS BACK COOS BAY PURSE

Washington, June 24 (A. P.).—The Navy Department today issued the following statement:

"The Associated Press has turned over to the Navy $412 in currency, together with a photostatic copy of a letter having, in lieu of a signature, the typewritten line 'The Crew of the Coos Bay.' The letter requested the Associated Press to use the money, said to have been collected from the crew, to 'buy off' the strikers at the Lockland plant of the Wright Aeronautical Company or any other struck war plant."

"The Navy Department in Washington has no information about the letter or the alleged collection among the crew. Steps are being taken to obtain such information.

"Having received the $412 from the Associated Press, the Navy Department has no recourse except to return it to the commanding officer of the Coos Bay. This is being done.

"The Navy holds no brief for strikes in wartime. Its attitude toward them needs no reiteration. Neither does the Navy condone expressions by its personnel of resentment, however sincere, which are in disregard of official regulations, which may be founded on imperfect knowledge of the issues, and which are so handled that they can be construed to be publicity seeking."

Jakey Fitch, Class Anchor Man, One of Navy's Fighting Leaders

WASHINGTON, June 20.—(AP) Jakey Fitch is ready to "fight anything that comes along" and usually comes out on top in any type of encounter.

That's the Navy's appraisal of the new Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Air. And his willingness to fight is cited by none other than Admiral William E. Halsey, Jr., himself no slouch as a scrapping navy man.

Jakey—nobody uses his full name and title,—Vice Admiral Aubrey Wray Fitch—doesn't wait for a fight in most advances.

December 7, 1941, he was ashore at Coronado, Calif., when word of the Pearl Harbor attack was received. He know where some of his staff officers were playing golf. He strode across the golf course, gathered them up and went to sea.

Before he sailed in the aircraft carrier Saratoga, he sent a message to his commander-in-chief. It didn't require an answer, and he expected none. It read: "Unless otherwise directed, Admiral Fitch and staff will bring the Sara out, starting tomorrow."

He rounded up a destroyer escort—he had no orders—and started his search for a scrap, any kind of a scrap, just so a Japanese was on the receiving end.

The Sara and her escort carried their hunt well into Japanese territory, cruising beyond Midway and Wake on a fruitless search.

They couldn't find a Japanese ship of any kind to do battle, but Jakey subsequently had plenty of opportunities to show the Jap what a fighting-mad American naval outfit can do.

A Man of Action

One occasion was in the Coral sea when the old Lexington carried his flag. There the Japs were plastered soundly. Fitch's airmen outfought two Japanese task forces, but the Lex was damaged fatally. Fitch turned to the skipper, Captain Frederick Sherman, and said: "Well let's get to hell off the ship."

They did, and it was his decision to abandon the crippled Lex, that made it possible to save the lives of 2,700 men of her crew.

He's one of the top strategists of the Navy now, and he learned the tricks of battle the hard way, in actual combat.

He flunked his first entrance examinations for Annapolis. He made it—narrowly—the next year. He stood out in athletics and in friendships throughout his academy training, but was "anchor man"—last— when his class received diplomas and commissions.

The white-haired, baldish admiral, whose scalp is dotted with freckles from South Pacific sun, originally was a destroyer man. But in 1929—he was 46 then—went to Pensacola to learn to fly. Designated a naval aviator in 1930, he held assignments as commanding officer of the Wright and Langley, Nos. 1 and 3 respectively in the list of aircraft tenders, before duty ashore as commandant of Naval Air Stations.

Navy Rations 'Wine Mess'

Each Officer Limited to Three Bottles of Spirits a Month

WASHINGTON, June 24 (AP).—Strict rationing of all liquor sales to officers at naval shore establishments operating "wine messes" has been placed in effect.

The rationing program, it also was learned today, is based upon the total personnel of the establishment and not upon individual sales. It limits the total consumption of a station's officer personnel to three bottles of spirits monthly for each officer permanently assigned there.

The total consumption applies to sales of spirits by the bottle for home use and to sales made in individual drinks at stations where bars are operated. The rationing became effective on May 1. There is no comparable situation in the Army.

U. S. Chamber Scouts Fears on Gold Standard

Reports Growing Sentiment for Its Use in Proposed International Money Plan

WASHINGTON, June 24 (AP). — Fears expressed in some quarters in the past that the huge stock of gold held by the United States would be worthless appear to have had no basis, the United States Chamber of Commerce said today.

Increasing sentiment has developed in the United States for reliance upon gold to a degree consistent with modern monetary management, the organization declared, quoting from studies prepared by Dr. Arthur W. Crawford, of the Chamber's research staff. The reports were issued on the forthcoming international monetary conference which begins July 1 at Bretton Woods, N. H.

"The plan for an international monetary fund does not go far toward the restoration of the old gold standard," the Chamber said, adding: "Nevertheless, gold forms the foundation of the proopsed exchange mechanism, and its value as the principal monetary metal seems assured."

Gold no longer circulates in the United States, but the Federal Treasury values its gold assets at more than $21,200,000,000. Thirty financial experts of various countries have agreed in principle upon a stabilization fund to which the United States would contribute $2,500,000,000; Britain, $1,250,000,000, and Russia, $1,000,000,000. The rest to make a total of $8,000,000,000, would be provided by other of the United Nations. A $10,000,000,000 world bank for reconstruction and development also has been proposed.

The Treasury's tentative proposal for a United Nations bank for reconstruction and development raises important questions, the Chamber of Commerce said. It asked: "Is American participation in a world bank advisable as against independent loans by the United States government and its nationals? To what extent may the proposed government action affect private lending? Is it possible that, given the conditions under which such a bank might operate, there would be no clear need for it as against private and more limited government undertakings?"

WASHINGTON, June 24 (AP).—Lieutenant Colonel William B. Harding, formerly vice-president of the Defense Supplies Corporation, was appointed today director of the aviation division of the Surplus War Property Administration.

Colonel Harding, a resident of Holmdel, N. J., shared in direction of the government's program by which Axis ownership was eliminated from Latin-American air lines.

Titanium Cartel Laid To Firms By U. S.

New York, June 24 (AP)—The anti-trust division of the Department of Justice filed suit today in Federal Court to enjoin three American chemical companies from continuing what the complaint charged was a world-wide monopoly of patents in the war-essential titanium industry.

Named in the complaint were the National Lead Company; its subsidiary, Titan Company, Inc., and the E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co.

The Government charged that National Lead and the du Pont company were principal parties in the creation of a series of agreements controlling titanium and that they have allocated world markets to other companies in various countries.

War Uses

Titanium compounds, 98 per cent, of which now are used for war purposes, are used principally as pigments in the manufacture of paints, glass and rubber.

The defendant companies were indicted here June 29, 1943, on charges of creating an international cartel in titanium compounds, in conspiracy with German, Japanese, Italian, British and other foreign chemical companies.

At that time Fletcher W. Rockwell, president of the National Lead Company, declared that when "these transactions were made they were considered legal and proper.

"Today, under current conceptions of law enforcement, they are considered illegal by the Department of Justice."

Foreign Firms

The complaint asserts the cartel was initiated some time in the early 1920s and has continued to the present. Among foreign companies hamed as coconspirators were the German I. G. Farben-Industrie, the Japanese Kokuesan Kogyo Kaibu-hiki Kaisha, and British Titan Products, Ltd.

The Government asked compul-sory royalty-free licensing of all patents utilized in carrying out the alleged restraints, and requested issuance of an injunction against renewal of cartel agreements.

Election Decision Not Made: Willkie

JUN 25 1944

New York, June 24 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie, Republican 1940 Presidential nominee, said today he had not yet reached a decision concerning his plans for the 1944 Presidential campaign.

He made the statement in an interview in which he said that Russell W. Davenport, his 1940 campaign coordinator, was expressing "his own, not my" views in a speech and interview at Hartford, Conn., last night.

Davenport Statement

Davenport was quoted as saying he (Davenport) would not support the Republican party this year if Gov. Thomas E. Dewy were nominated or if he were unconvinced by the party's platform and candidate that it would crusade for world freedom.

"Mr. Willkie and I have been close for many years and our views are pretty much the same," Davenpodt added.

Decision Not Indicated

Willkie, emphasizing that he never authorized anyone to speak for him and that he had not indicated to anyone what he intended to do, said:

"Mr. Davenport was associated with my campaign in 1940, and we are friends. Of course he has the right to express his own views. But I have never discussed with him my intentions about the 1944 campaign, nor have I as yet come to a decision about my plans."

Davenport has based his opposition to Dewey on the ground that he was not satisfied with Dewey's position on international issues.

LORD HALIFAX GETS A BOWDOIN DEGREE

JUN 25 1944

Brunswick, Me., June 24.—Lord Halifax, British Ambassador to the United States, and Chief Justice Harlan F. Stone of the United States Supreme Court were among the prominent persons awarded honorary degrees today in commencement exercises marking the 150th anniversary of Bowdoin College. The degrees were presented by Kenneth C. M. Sills, president of the college.

Sixteen other honorary degrees were presented. Among the recipients were the following:

Arthur Chapman, Justice of the Maine Supreme Court; Dr. Cornelius P. Rhoads, Bowdoin graduate and cancer research specialist; Edward Eames, headmaster of Governor Dummer Academy; Prof. Roscoe James Ham, Bowdoin scholar for the last forty years; Lucien Libby, Bowdoin graduate and Portland, Me., schoolmaster; W. W. Thomas, Bowdoin graduate and trustee and Portland banker, and Earle Thompson, Bowdoin graduate and president of the American Water Works & Electrical Company.

Lord Halifax was guest speaker at a luncheon following the presentation of awards.

"We hear a great deal of talk of the re-education of the Nazis, when this war has been won," Lord Halifax said. "That is likely to be a task more intractable than any other. But of one thing we may be sure. We shall make nothing of it, unless simultaneously we re-educate ourselves. We can only hope to set and keep the world in order if we make our own lives, and that of our nations, a pattern of that which we would fain make the world."

Failure to Feed Patriots In Nazi Areas Assailed

Aid for Occupied Zones Urged at Friends' Conference

CAPE MAY, N. J., June 24 (AP). The four freedoms are a pathway to a better life, rather than an ultimate goal, George A. Walton, principal of George School, told delegates to the twenty-sixth biennial conference of the Society of Friends today.

"The world today is not fighting principally for freedom, but for the benefits resulting from freedom," he said. "Freedom is not the pathway toward reconstruction of the inward life, but merely an opportunity for self-discipline with which we can reconstruct our lives."

Asserting that "hungry people can never be free," Mr. Walton said American forces have taken no action to feed Allied sympathizers in occupied lands despite instructions from Congress to do so.

He said "there is no greater crime against God's moral order than that of starving people to enforce acceptance of policies or political ideology."

Sumner Welles Speaks On World Organization

Easton, Pa., June 24 (AP)—Sumner Welles, former Under Secretary of State, said today that "the ultimate and the practical solution" of the problems leading to war "must be sought in the creation of an international order in which the same principles as those which have given rise to the American democracy will be found."

At the same time, he said in an address at Lafayette College commencement exercises, he was "unable to believe" such a solution could be found "in projects for universal federal unions or in proposals for United States of the World."

Welles said President Roosevelt's recent proposals for a future international organization "seem to me to be wholly practicable and altogether realistic." Expressing confidence they would be accepted by the other United Nations, he said they would "make possible a reconciliation of the individual sovereign liberty of nations with the over-riding general welfare of humanity as a whole."

"LITTLE MAN" URGED TO VOTE

JUN 25 1944

Virginia-Born Worker Heads CIO Political Action Unit

Atlanta, June 24 (AP)—A Virginia-born former educator, preaching racial tolerance and practical politics, is tackling for the Congress of Industrial Organizations the task of getting the South's "little man" to vote.

He is George S. Mitchell, of Richmond, a Rhodes scholar and former economics instructor at Columbia University, who directs the CIO's Political Action Committee in nine Southern States.

Fundamentally, explains Mitchell, "it's to get the 'little people' to turn in their ballots," adding: "Most of our people never did vote before."

Explains CIO Stand

The Government, argues the CIO, runs the war and controls wages, hours, prices, housing, taxes and other matters vitally affecting each individual. Hence, says Mitchell, "we're interested in the kind of Congressmen who will use their power to help the people in these great public matters. The chances of keeping much post-war work going rests in labor voting."

One of the obstacles encountered by PAC has been the South's traditional poll taxes. The other has been hostility of white democrats to proposals for Negro voting in Democratic primaries.

The Political Action Committee tackled the first problem by campaigning to get all who could afford it to register and pay their poll taxes. Mitchell says the unions do not use their own treasuries to pay poll taxes.

How Problem Was Handled

The racial problem was tackled by promoting "frank and trusting talks between those who have come to the top among Negroes and those who have come to the top among whites.

Since CIO labor unions have no racial barriers, Negro membership may run as high as 60 per cent. of the total enrollment in some locals on the Southern coast. The percentage is less in mid-South manufacturing areas, and in some unions Negro membership is negligible or non-existent.

Racial tolerance came to the CIO "because of hard necessity," explains Mitchell. "We tried time and again to get wages up and each time we split on the Negro question."

Denies Social Equality

Understanding and tolerance have been promoted, he says, by meetings of both races under the same roof to discuss their similar problems and economic aims. There is no question of social equality, he continues. Union business is on the economic level.

Nevertheless, CIO leaders find it no easy matter to promote racial harmony because, says Mitchell, "a good many people in each southern industrial town would like to see unions disappear.

"One natural way to do this is to promote race differences."

Talks between white and Negro leaders usually have ironed these out.

Although the CIO Political Action Committee has indorsed President Roosevelt for a fourth term, and although it has been outspoken in opposition to cretain representatives in Congress, Mitchell says that the committee refrains from telling members how to vote. Instead, the committee is spending liberally from its $700,000 national fund to educate the "little man" in the use of his ballot.

Local Candidates Discussed

Local units discuss and decided on support of local candidates, and State groups similarly determine labor support of State candidates. The regional committee may advise and aid, but restricts its activities to national and Congressional races.

Mitchell believes it is not difficult for the "little man" to decide whom he will support. Records and platforms are checked thoroughly. Meetings are held at which candidates are invited to speak, and at which they are discussed. In short order, the "little man" is decidedly aware how candidates feel on questions affecting him.

For the most part, PAC refrains from indorsement of Southern candidates—at least for publication.

Registration Not Limited

Registered of voters was not confined to industrial workers. Farmers, white-collar workers and others in the lower income brackets were also urged to register.

What happened in some Southern towns was reported by Charles Gilman, Georgia CIO director and chairman of the State Political Action Committee. He undertook a survey of registrations, and here is what he found:

Atlanta area—4,000 persons went to the courthouse and registered. Most of them never had voted beforcee. Many of them were not CIO members, but working people of the lower income group. Scores were women and 'teen-agers, the latter newly enfranchised by Georgia's constitutional amendment extending voting to those 18 years of age.

Americus—Twelfe hundred registered, including many farmers and 'teen-agers. The total population of Americus in 1940 was 10,000.

Galton, Ga.—One thousand registered. Population 10,000.

Greensboro-Union Point, Ga.—One thousand registered. Combined population 4,000.

DEWEY, WARREN TICKET BOOMED

JUN 25 1944

G.O.P. Delegates Pour into Chicago for Convention Opening Monday.

CHICAGO, June 24. — (AP) Republican legions stormed Chicago tonight for their first wartime convention since 1864 amid increasing talk of a "hands across the nation" ticket headed by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York and Gov. Earl Warren of California.

After nearly a week's preliminaries, the rank and file of delegates and campaigners poured in. They taxed hotels and transportation. They perspired and argued in hotel rooms, lobbies and bars. They overwhelmed restaurants.

Most of all, they got seriously, excitedly ready to nominate a candidate for President of the United States—but amid speculation that climactic developments might come even before the convention starts.

Key States to Caucus

The speculation grew and spread as plans were laid for caucuses of the big delegations of California with 50 votes, Pennsylvania with 70, and Illinois with 59.

Decisions by these states to throw first—or second—ballot support to Dewey would, his headquarters believed, clinch the nomination for the man who still says he's "not a candidate."

A break toward Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio would reverse the so-called "draft Dewey" tide, perhaps engineer a complete turn. There was continuing speculation also that if Bricker does not receive the presidential nomination he might consider the second spot.

Representative Joseph W. Martin of Massachusetts, permanent convention chairman, arrived and predicted that Gov. Warren of California—most-discussed vice presidential possibility — will take the second place spot if offered it. Warren has said he wants nothing from the convention.

Believes Dewey Is Available

Martin, asked whether Dewey would accept a nomination, said with a smile:

"I'm inclined to think he will."

With all of this in mind, both Bricker and Dewey headquarters went all-out in the battle for delegates as National Chairman Harrison E. Spangler predicted a fast-moving convention, highlighted by:

1. Swift approval of the party's 1944 platform after its presentation to the convention Tuesday by the Resolutions committee.

2. Nomination of a presidential candidate by Wednesday night, a vice presidential candidate Thursday morning.

3. Speech of acceptance by the nominee Thursday afternoon.

Dewey adherents came here with more pledged and otherwise favorable delegates than any candidate. A tabulation of delegates credited to Dewey by state party leaders, his supporters in the various states, and polls among delegates themselves showed Dewey to have at least 390 pledged and claimed. The Bricker camp—through Representative Clarence Brown of Ohio, floor manager—gives Dewey 385 on the first ballot, estimating Bricker's initial strength at from 200 to 225, conservatively, with hopes of producing up to 300.

There will be 1,057 delegates, with 529 needed for a nomination.

Here, in brief, is the day-to-day convention program; subject to change:

Monday—Opening gavel by Chairman Spangler at 10:15 a.m. (C.W.-T.), welcome address by Governor Green, temporary roll call, election of temporary officers, selection of committees; recess until 8:15 p.m. with Gov. Warren delivering the keynote address.

Tuesday—Reports of committees on credentials and permanent organization, election of permanent chairman, address by permanent chairman, election of national committee, report of resolutions committee (presenting the party's platform); addresses by former President Herbert Hoover and Representative Clare Boothe Luce of Connecticut.

Wednesday — Nominations for President, roll call; nominations for vice-president, roll call.

Thursday—Continuation of roll call if necessary; acceptance speech by nominee (probably in afternoon).

Mrs. Luce Urges Total German Disarmament

JUN 25 1944

Chicago, June 24 (AP)—Total disarmament of Germany for two or three generations, was advocated today by Clare Booth Luce, Connecticut Congresswoman member of the Republican convention's foreign relations platform subcommittee.

Mrs. Luce expressed only personal views to a jammed press conference, declining comment as a platform committee member. A United Nations disarmament commission in Germany with power to destroy munitions factories and occupations troops assigned voluntarily by the Allies were among her suggestions.

Recent articles on foreign policy by Wendell L. Willkie, were described by Mrs. Luce as "forward looking."

Ball Opposes '3-Man Peace'

JUN 25 1944

Chicago, June 24 (AP)—Senator Joseph Ball (R., Minn.) proposed today that Republican platform drafters eliminate from a tentative foreign plank a provision opposing the formation of a world state to enforce the peace.

Appearing before a division of the committee drafting a platform for convention action Tuesday, Ball urged that the peace should be written by a United Nations association and not by "three men working in secret."

Obviously he alluded to President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin.

Sees "Rubber Words"

The Minnesotan proposed that the party platform declare that "the surest way to achieve maximum justice in the peace settlements is to have the final decisions made by a United Nations association organized for that purpose and applying agreed-upon principles."

Later, at a news conference, Ball called the proposed GOP plank "very similar" to recent statements of Administration foreign policies. Compiaining that the Republican draft contained some "rubber words," he characterized it as an "advance" over the party's Mackinac Island declaration.

Would Eliminate Phrase

In urging elimination of a phrase, "and not by joining a world state," Ball said he did not propose that any of the United Nations give up its sovereignty, but urged some delegation of power to an international organization.

Senator Edward V. Robertson (R., Wyo.) proposed that the platform deciare opposition to an international police force and to "an international new deal with the United States playing Santa Claus."

Russian Freighter Sinks at Drydock

Portland, Ore., June 24 (AP)—A Russian freighter with a crew of thirty-five aboard capsized and sank today at the Portland Drydock, with one woman crew member believed trapped in her quarters, Sergt. W. J. Blake of the harbor patrol announced.

Capt. K. A. Prehn, Portland harbormaster, said that the 7,500-ton vessel was the former private yacht of the Czar.

Three other crew members, all men, were injured while attempting to reach the dock. Divers were sent out with cutting torches to try to reach the woman.

THE BLOWS IN THE DIRECTION OF BOTH MOGILEV AND ORSHA HAD BEEN MENTIONED BY GERMAN BROADCASTERS FRIDAY AND EVEN AS THE BATTLES IN THESE NEW SECTORS WERE BEING CONFIRMED BY THE RUSSIANS, FRESH GERMAN DISPATCHES WERE SAYING THAT "THE WHOLE EASTERN FRONT IS ON THE MOVE."

ALL THE RUSSIAN BREAK-THROUGHS WERE BEING EXPLOITED TO THEIR FULLEST EXTENT. MOSCOW ANNOUNCED THE LIBERATION OF MORE THAN 350 PLACES IN THE VARIOUS BATTLES SOUTH OF VITEBSK, MORE THAN 200 TO THE NORTHWEST AND MORE THAN 200 IN THE FIGHTING AGAINST THE FINNS.

"TROOPS OF THE FIRST BALTIC FRONT, PASSING OVER TO THE OFFENSIVE WITH SUPPORT OF MASSED BLOWS OF ARTILLERY AND AVIATION, HAVE BROKEN THE STRONGLY AND DEEPLY-ECHELONED GERMAN FORTIFIED AREA NORTHWEST OF VITEBSK ON A SECTOR 35 KILOMETERS (22 MILES) IN LENGTH, AND HAVE ADVANCED IN TWO DAYS OF OFFENSIVE BATTLE TO A DEPTH OF FROM 20 TO 40 KILOMETERS (12.5 TO 25 MILES)," SAID STALIN'S ORDER, "AND, WIDENING THEIR BREAKTHROUGH TO 80 KILOMETERS (50 MILES) ALONG THE FRONT, HAVE REACHED THE WESTERN DVINA RIVER ON A SECTOR OF 35 KILOMETERS (22 MILES)."

THE GERMANS, HOWEVER, WERE THROWN INTO CONFUSION, HE SAID, BY THE SOVIET ARTILLERY FIRE, WHICH DROVE THEM OUT ONTO THE MUDDY ROADS WHERE THE INFANTRY AND TANKS COULD DEAL WITH THEM.

THE HIGH COMMAND THREAT WAS TRANSMITTED BY THE NAZI DNB AGENCY IN AN ENGLISH LANGUAGE BROADCAST WHICH SAID REPORTS HAD BEEN RECEIVED THAT MEMBERS OF THE GERMAN ARMY TAKEN PRISONER IN THE CHERBOURG AREA WERE SHOT ALTHOUGH IN UNIFORM AND "CLEARLY RECOGNIZABLE" AS COMBATANTS.

JUN 25 1944

THIS THREAT CAME A DAY AFTER BRITISH FOREIGN SECRETARY ANTHONY EDEN TOLD PARLIAMENT THAT GERMANS HAD ADMITTED 50 BRITISH RAF OFFICERS HAD BEEN SHOT ATTEMPTING TO ESCAPE A PRISONER CAMP. IT ALSO FOLLOWED REPORTS THAT U.S.AIRMEN PARACHUTING INTO GERMANY FROM DAMAGED PLANES

HAD BEEN LYNCHED.

THE TEXT OF THE GERMAN SUPREME COMMAND ANNOUNCEMENT TODAY:

"IF THESE REPORTS SHOULD PROVE TRUE, FOR EVERY SUCH MURDER COMMITTED ON GERMAN COMBATANTS 10 UNITED STATES PRISONERS OF WAR WILL BE SHOT."

EDEN, IN TELLING COMMONS OF THE NAZI PRISON CAMP SHOOTING MONDAY, TERMED IT A "MASS MURDER" AND SAID ENGLAND PROPOSED TO SEEK THOSE RESPONSIBLE AFTER THE WAR AND PUNISH THEM.

ALTHOUGH THERE HAS BEEN NO ALLIED CONFIRMATION OF THE REPORTED LYNCHING OF U.S.AIRMEN, ONE BERLIN REPORT ON JUNE 2 PLACED THE NUMBER LYNCHED AT SIX. BY GLADWIN HILL

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, JUNE 24-(AP)-PLANS FOR AN INVASION OF FRANCE WERE BEING STUDIED AS EARLY AS 1940, WHEN THE GERMANS STILL WERE PLOTTING TO OVERRUN ENGLAND, IT WAS DISCLOSED TONIGHT, AND AT ONE TIME THE BRITISH DECIDED THAT A SINGLE DIVISION WOULD SUFFICE TO CAPTURE THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA.

ONLY A SHORT TIME AFTER THE DUNKERQUE DELIVERANCE IN JUNE, 1940, PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL WAS TURNING FROM HIS PEP TALKS TO THE BRITISH PEOPLE TO ATTEND SECRET CONFERENCES WITH THE THEN HEAD OF COMBINED OPERATIONS, ADMIRAL SIR ROGER KEYES, SAID A SOURCE WHICH MUST NOT BE IDENTIFIED.

JUN 25 1944

THIS SOURCE DESCRIBED THE PLANS AS HAVING TAKEN THIS COURSE:

BY THE TIME THE COMMANDOS HAD RETURNED FROM THEIR NORWEGIAN FORAYS IN DECEMBER, 1941, THE BRITISH ARMY STAFF COLLEGE WAS WORKING ON THE SPECIFIC PROBLEM OF RECAPTURING THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA.

THE EXPERTS AGREED THAT A SINGLE DIVISION COULD DO IT -- BUT THAT THE INVADERS PROBABLY COULD NOT GET MUCH FARTHER THAN THE PENINSULA. THEY FIGURED THAT THE GERMANS WOULD OPEN THE TIDAL FLOODGATES IN THE LOWLANDS AT THE BASE OF THE PENINSULA -- JUST AS WAS FRUITLESSLY DONE IN MEETING THE PRESENT LATERAL ATTACK -- AND THUS SEAL OFF THE INVADING FORCE.

IN JULY, 1942, THE UNITED STATES ARMY CHIEF OF STAFF, GEN. GEORGE C.MARSHALL, VISITED ENGLAND SECRETLY, AND IT FINALLY WAS DECIDED TO ATTACK NORTH AFRICA FIRST. IN THAT CONNECTION, IT WAS SAID THAT THE RUMOR THAT THE CHOICE LAY BETWEEN A BRITISH AND AN AMERICAN "SECOND FRONT" PLAN WAS UNTRUE. BOTH PLANS WERE LAID BY MIXED TEAMS OF AMERICAN AND BRITISH OFFICERS.

THE DIEPPE RAID OF AUGUST, 1942, SHOWED THE PLANNERS THAT A BIG CONTINENTAL LANDING WOULD BE A DUBIOUS SUCCESS WITHOUT HEAVY AIR AND SEA BOMBARDMENT IN ADVANCE.

THE FINAL PLAN FOR THE INVASION OF FRANCE WAS BEGUN DURING THE SICILIAN CAMPAIGN LAST SUMMER, AND THE SICILIAN LESSONS WERE LEARNED WELL.

THE BRITISH AND AMERICAN ARMIES' ASSIGNED ROLES IN SICILY --WHICH DID NOT GO COMPLETELY ACCORDING TO PLAN--WERE REVERSED IN NORMANDY, WITH THE BRITISH DOING THE HOLDING JOB WHILE THE AMERICANS GRABBED TERRITORY THE SAME WAY THINGS ACTUALLY WORKED OUT IN SICILY.

JUN 25 1944

THE FINAL NORMANDY INVASION PLAN CONTAINED A PROVISION THAT IT COULD BE UNDERTAKEN ONLY IF THE GERMANS DID NOT INCREASE THE TROOPS AND DEFENSES THEY THEN HAD IN FRANCE. THEX GERMANS DID INCREASE BOTH, STEADILY, BUT THE ALLIES DECIDED TO ATTACK ANYHOW, AND IT WORKED.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, SATURDAY,

JUNE 24-(AP)-ONE OF THE CLEAREST MEASURES OF ALLIED SUPERIORITY ALONG THE NORMANDY INVASION FRONT HAS BEEN THE GERMANS' CONTINUED PREOCCUPA WITH [redacted] DEFENSE AND A HOLDING ACTION ALONG THE SOUTHERN BATTLELINE WHILE STRONG AMERICAN FORCES ARE TIED UP IN ACTION AT THE TIP OF THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA.

JUN 25 1944

WHEN THE AMERICANS SWUNG NORTH AND THE ALLIES ACTUALLY WERE FIGHTING IN TWO DIRECTIONS, MARSHAL ERWIN ROMMEL HAD ONE OF HIS BEST OPPORTUNITIES. THE GERMAN COMMANDER still HAS IT, [redacted] AS BUT HIS TIME GROWS SHORT THERE [redacted] IS NO SIGN OF A GERMAN MASSING IN A[redacted] ADEQUATE FORCE FOR A BIG-SCALE BLOW.

30.24— 16537

[redacted] THE GERMAN RESERVES MOVING UP FROM THE [redacted] AREA [redacted] AND FROM THE [redacted] SOUTH PROBABLY NUMBER SEVERAL DIVISIONS, BUT THESE TROOPS WILL BE NEEDED JUST TO TRY TO PLUG THE LINE [redacted] AFTER THE AMERICANS TAKE CHERBOURG AND ARE [redacted] READY TO HIT SOUTH AGAIN.

STEADY ALLIED AERIAL ATTACK AND FRENCH DISRUPTION OF COMMUNICATIONS IS ONE COMBINED REASON WHY MARSHAL [redacted] VON RUNDSTEDT IS HAVING TROUBLE REINFORCING ROMMEL'S TROOPS. BUT ANOTHER [redacted] REASON STILL IS APPARENT--VON RUNDSTEDT'S WORRY OVER WHERE GENERAL EISENHOWER'S FORCES WILL STRIKE NEXT.

A THIRD FACTOR IN THE STRATEGIC PICTURE IS GEN. SIR BERNA L. MONTGOMERY'S INTENTIONS AT THE EASTERN END OF THE ALLIED LINE. WITH HIS FLAIR FOR MASSIVE BREAK-THROUGH TACTICS IT SEEMS TO BE N MILITARY SECRET THAT MONTGOMERY CAN BE COUNTED UPON TO lash a [redacted] JUST AS SOON AS HE HAS AMASSED ENOUGH POWER. AND NEITHE VON RUNDSTEDT OR ROMMEL ARE LIKELY TO HAVE [redacted] ANY ADVANCE

CLUE AS TO WHERE THE BLOW WILL FALL--NORTH TOWARD ROUEN AND THE PAS-DE-CALAIS AREA, [redacted] EAST TOWARD PARIS, OR SOUTH IN AN EFFORT TO CUT OFF BRITTANY. IMPROVING WEATHER AFTER THREE BAD DAYS HAS GREATLY SPEEDED THE LANDING OF ALLIED SUPPLIES.

ROMMEL'S MEN ALREADY ARE "EXTREMELY [redacted] SENSITIVE," AS [redacted] HEADQUARTERS SAYS, TO THE BRITISH AND CANADIAN POUNDING ON THE CAEN FLANK WHERE ROMMEL HAS PARTS OF FOUR ARMORED DIVISIONS IN ACTION. RESERVES ARE BACKING UP THE GERMAN DIVISIONS WHICH ARE DESCRIBED AS AMONG THE BEST GERMAN FORCES IN FRANCE.

LAST NIGHT HEADQUARTERS DISCLOSED THAT THE GERMAN 91ST DIVISION IS AMONG THE 14 OR 15 DIVISIONS NOW IN ACTION IN NORMANDY.

GLIDER SALVAGE IS IMPORTANT BECAUSE THE CRAFT IS USED PRIMARILY AS A TRANSPORT FOR MATERIALS. A MINORITY OF THE GLIDERS LANDED DURING THE FIRST THREE DAYS XXX OF THE INVASION CARRIED TROOPS, HE SAID, THE MAJORITY SHARING THE TASK OF CARRYING MORE THAN A MILLION POUNDS OF SUPPLIES, HUNDREDS OF JEEPS, ARTILLERY PIECES, AMMUNITION AND FOOD.

JUN 25 1944

THE GLIDER JERKED ALOFT TODAY WAS ONE OF 12 DOTTING THE GREEN NORMANDY FIELD. SOME OF THEM HAD SHATTERED WINGS, AND NO ATTEMPT WAS BEING MADE TO TOW THESE BACK. VALUABLE PARTS WILL BE RECLAIMED AND THE SKELETONS

WATCHING THE HUGE SKY TRAIN ROAR DOWN WITHIN A FEW FEET OF THE GROUND AND PICK UP THE GLIDER THROUGH MEANS OF A DANGLING HOOK WHICH CAUGHT THE GLIDER TOWLING STRETCH ON A PICKUP POLE, PFC. FLOYD MISSPAUGH OF DENVER, COLO., MACHINE GUNNER AND A SPECTATOR, SAID "THEY CAN DO ANYTHING THESE DAYS."

THE RIDGETOP ON WHICH WE LAY WAS GASHED AND SCARRED BY BATTLE. ON THE APPROACH TO AN ANTI-TANK DITCH WAS THE BLACKENED HULL OF A BURNED-OUT TANK. BEYOND IT WERE THE CHARRED SKELETONS OF SMASHED GERMAN VEHICLES AND AN ABANDONED GUN. NAR THEM WAS THE WRECKAGE OF A LONE JEEP.

AND IN THE DITCH WAS SPRAWLED THE STILL FORM OF AN AMERICAN BOY, WITH A RED CROSS BRASSARD ON HIS ARM. HIS HEAD LAY CRADLED IN THE CROOKED CURVE OF HIS RIGHT ARM, WHILE HIS LEFT ARM WAS FLUNG OUT LIKE A CHILD IN SLEEP. THE DUST OF PASSING VEHICLES HAD POWDERED HIS BODY LIKE LIGHT DRIFTING SNOW. SOON SOMEONE WOULD COME AND TAKE HIS BODY AWAY TO A NORMANDY GRAVEYARD.

WITHIN THE LAST 24 HOURS THE AMERICANS HAVE TAKEN MORE THAN 1,200 PRISONERS. THE NUMBER OF ENEMY DEAD WITHIN THAT DEFENSE OF DEATH IS NOT KNOWN. THE CHERBOURG LINE WAS A DEATH TRAP FOR HUNDREDS OF GERMANS WHO DID NOT ACCEPT THE ULTIMATUM TO SURRENDER WHICH WAS OFFERED TO THEM BEFORE THE DOUGHBOYS THREW IN THEIR HEAVY ATTACK.

LAST NIGHT AMERICAN ARTILLERY ERUPTED WITH A HEAVY BARRAGE AGAINST THE STRONGPOINTS TO HELP THE DOUGHBOYS IN THEIR PUSH FORWARD. THE GUNS RUMBLED ALL NIGHT LONG AND THE AIR TREMBLED WITH CONCUSSIONS. THEN, THIS MORNING, UNDER CLEAR BLUE SKIES, MEDIUM BOMBERS ROARED OVER IN WAVES AGAIN BLASTING ENEMY POSITIONS.

JUN 25 1944

OUR MOST ADVANCED ELEMENTS PULLED BACK TO A SAFETY ZONE TO PERMIT THE BOMBERS TO GO TO WORK, THEN THEY WENT FORWARD AGAIN WHEN THE BOMBERS HAD FINISHED THEIR JOB.

THERE IS NO GRAND SURGE FORWARD AGAINST CHERBOURG. THAT IS NOT THE WAY THIS FIGHT IS PROGRESSING EVEN THOUGH OUR TROOPS HAVE BLASTED A WEDGE DEEP INTO THE ENEMY'S LINES WHICH IS IN DEPTH ALL THE WAY BACK TO THE CITY ITSELF. WHEN THE DOUGHBOYS REACH THE CITY THEY EXPECT TO HAVE TO FIGHT THEIR WAY FROM HOUSE TO HOUSE UNLESS THERE IS A SUDDEN CLOSE OF THE ENEMY SUCH AS THERE WAS AT CAPE BON.

CHERBOURG IS DOOMED AS AN ENEMY STRONGHOLD. THAT MUCH IS CERTAIN, ALTHOUGH THE GERMANS STILL HAVE A HARD KNOT OF RESISTANCE HOLDING OUT IN THE MOST INTRICATE MAZE OF DEFENSE SYSTEMS MOST OF OUR TROOPS HAVE ENCOUNTERED SINCE THEY LANDED. SIX-FEET-THICK CONCRETE PILLBOXES AND GUN POSITIONS ARE STAGGERED IN DEPTH ON COMMANDING GROUND WITH FIELDS OF FIRE INTERLOCKING, SO THAT IF ONE POSITION IS KNOCKED OUT THE TROOPS COME UNDER FIRE FROM ANOTHER.

EACH OF THESE STRONGHOLDS IS A SELF-CONTAINED UNIT. THE DOUGHBOYS FOUND THEM WELL STOCKED WITH AMMUNITION AND SUPPLIES AFTER THEY HAD BLASTED OUT THE DEFENDERS OF MANY OF THEM WHO WERE THROWN INTO THE LINE IN A LAST-MINUTE DESPERATE EFFORT TO STAVE OFF THE AMERICAN ADVANCE.

THERE ARE SIGNS AMONG THE PRISONERS OF DETERIORATING MORALE DESPITE THE FACT THAT GERMAN OFFICERS ARE HOLDING GUNS TO THEIR OWN MEN'S BACKS TO KEEP THEM AT THEIR POSTS.

EISENHOWER POKED HIS WAY INTO A THICKET AND FOUND S/SGT.GEORGE P. TERHANKO, OF YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO, DIGGING A SLIT TRENCH. POINTING HIM OUT TO THE STAFF OFFICER WITH HIM, EISENHOWER SAID NOW THERE WAS A SOLDIER WHO WAS PROPERLY CONCEALED.

FARTHER ON, THE GENERAL CAME UPON PVT.JOHN BURNS, OF NILES, OHIO, SCOOPING OUT A SLIT TRENCH UNDER A TREE. EISENHOWER ASKED HIM WHETHER HE HAD BEEN SEA SICK ON THE WAY OVER.

"NO, SIR," REPLIED BURNS, "I'VE SAILED BEFORE. ON LAKE ERIE."

AT ONE SPOT, WHERE BUTTERCUPS WERE KNEE HIGH, EISENHOWER ASKED A PRIVATE IF HE KNEW WHERE HIS SQUADRON LEADER WAS LOCATED IN CASE OF AN ATTACK. WHEN THE GI HESITATED MOMENTARILY, A MAJOR GENERAL STANDING BEHIND THE GENERAL PROMPTED HIM FRIENDLY IN SIGN LANGUAGE.

STANDING ON THE EDGE OF A TRENCH IN WHICH PVT.ROBERT OLSON OF PITTSBURGH WAS DIGGING, EISENHOWER ASKED HIM WHAT HE DID BEFORE HE ENTERED THE ARMY.

"I WAS A PLUMBER FOR FIVE YEARS."

WHEN THE GENERAL ASKED HIM HOW OLD HE WAS, AND OLSON REPLIED 20. EISENHOWER GRINNED AND ASKED IF HE WAS SURE HE HAD BEEN PLUMBING FOR FIVE YEARS. OLSON INSISTED HE HAD.

LATER, EISENHOWER STOPPED SGT.JOSEPH PONZIO, OF PHILADELPHIA, AND DEMANDED TO KNOW WHAT HE'D DO IF A GERMAN MECHANIZED RAIDING UNIT CAME CRASHING IN ON HIS POSITION. PONZIO RATTLED OFF THE ANSWER, AND APPARENTLY IT WAS ON THE TARGET BECAUSE EISENHOWER SMILED, AND NODDED VIGOROUSLY.

AMONG THE TROOPS THE GENERAL PASSED WAS A SOLDIER DRIVING A BULLDOZER. HE WAS WEARING A HIGH SILK HAT. WHEN HE SPOTTED THE CHIEF, HE STOOD UP AND WAVED IT, WHILE A NEGRO SOLDIER NEARBY YELLED:

"MAN! IT'S THE BIG SHOT."

JUNE 24-(AP)-AMERICAN TROOPS REACHED WITHIN A 1,000 YARDS OF CHERBOURG EARLY TONIGHT, CLOSING IN TO CRUSH FINAL RESISTANCE IN A CITY FOGGED BY THE SMOKE OF GERMAN DEMOLITIONS.

FORWARD ELEMENTS HEARD THE EXPLOSIONS OF AMMUNITION DUMPS AND SAW THE OILY BLACK SMOKE OF DESTROYED FUEL DUMPS ROLLING ACROSS CHERBOURG AND ALMOST BLOTTING THE CITY FROM THE VIEW OF TROOPS NEARING THE VITAL PORT.

THE AMERICANS HAD CRACKED GERMAN OUTER DEFENSES ON FRIDAY NIGHT, DRIVING A DEEP WEDGE INTO STUBBORNLY DEFENDED POSITIONS. THIS WEDGE WAS BEING WIDENED STEADILY.

THROUGH THE SMOKE POURING UP FROM BURNING FIELDS AND WOODS AND FROM DEMOLITIONS INSIDE THE CITY, OBSERVERS SAID THEY COULD SEE THE GERMANS WORKING AT THE WRECKING OF INSTALLATIONS.

NOW THE DOUGHBOYS ARE CLOSING IN FOR THE KILL AFTER BATTLING THROUGH DEFENSES OF CONCRETE AND STEEL WHICH RING THE CITY, AND BEHIND WHICH THE ENEMY HAD HOPED TO STAVE OFF THE AMERICAN DRIVE IN A DO-OR-DIE STAND.

BY ROBERT WILSON

A NINTH AIRFORCE FIGHTER BASE IN FRANCE, JUNE 23-(DELAYED)-(AP)-IF AMERICAN TROOPS ASSAULTING CHERBOURG ARE TO GET ANY CLOSER AIR SUPPORT THAN THAT THEY ARE NOW ENJOYING FROM THIS THUNDERBOLT BASE, THEY'LL HAVE TO WIDEN THEIR FOXHOLES AND MOVE THE PLANES RIGHT IN WITH THEM.

TODAY SEVEN THUNDERBOLTS ROARED OFF FROM A STEEL CARPET AND DISAPPEARED INTO THE MIDDAY HAZE.

JUST 15 MINUTES LATER THEY FLASHED IN FOR A LANDING.

"WE KNOCKED OUT A BRIDGE, CUT A RAIL LINE AND HIT A GERMAN BIVOUAC AREA NEAR ST.LO, AND SMASHED THAT STRONGPOINT NEAR CHERBOURG THAT HAS BEEN HOLDING UP OUR TROOPS," MAJ.HARVEY CASE JR., OF HOUSTON, TEX., REPORTED TO THE COLONEL.

HAVING THIS AIRFORCE ON TAP WITHIN MINUTES OF THE ADVANCED LINES GIVES THE AMERICANS A TREMENDOUS ADVANTAGE. THE BASE IS MEETING NO SERIOUS OPPOSITION FROM THE GERMAN AIR FORCE.

MOST OF THE TIME THE THUNDERBOLT PILOTS ARE TOO BUSY TO ENGAGE IN AERIAL COMBAT WITH JUST ANY GERMAN CRAFT THAT MIGHT BE SNOOPING ABOUT, BUT THEY ARE EAGER FOR A SCRAP WHENEVER THE GERMANS ARE WILLING TO MIX IT UP. YESTERDAY THIS FORCE DESTROYED FOUR FOCKE-WULFS WITHOUT LOSS TO ITSELF AND MAJ.ROCKFORD V.GRAY OF CINCINNATI, OHIO, A PILOT, HAS ADDED THREE FW-190S TO HIS CREDIT RECENTLY.

AFTER MAKING THEIR REPORTS, THE PILOTS BACK FROM THE LATEST BRUSH WANDERED OFF TO THEIR FOXHOLES HIDDEN IN AN ORCHARD. THEY HAVE FEW COMFORTS, ALL ARE EATING RATIONS AND COOKING OVER OPEN DITCHES, BUT THEY NEVER HAVE TIME TO GROW BORED.

THEY ARE CONTINUALLY JUMPING FROM FOXHOLE TO COCKPIT WHENEVER THE ARMY AT THE FRONT LIFTS A BECKONING FINGER.

"WE'RE HERE TO SCRAMBLE OFF FOR ANY TARGET THEY ASK FOR," SAID ONE.

JUN 25 1944

ON THE AMERICAN BEACHHEAD SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE, JUNE 24-(AP)- AMERICAN TROOPS ADVANCING ON CHERBOURG HAVE CAPTURED SEVERAL SITES FROM WHICH THE GERMANS MAY HAVE INTENDED TO LAUNCH ROBOT BOMBS AGAINST BRITAIN.

TWO SITES -- ONE WHERE THE INSTALLATIONS WERE OF GIANT PROPORTIONS AND THE OTHER ABOUT ONE-SIXTH AS LARGE -- HAVE BEEN INSPECTED AND ENGINEERING OFFICERS ARE MAKING AN INTENSIVE STUDY OF THEM.

THE BIG ONE, WHICH ONE OFFICER SPOKE OF AS RESEMBLING "THE FOUNDATIONS FOR ANOTHER BOULDER DAM," WAS SET IN AN ELEVATED VALLEY WITH THE TREES CLEARED SUFFICIENTLY TO PERMIT THE MISSILES TO BE SENT IN ANY DIRECTION. THE MASSIVE PROJECT WAS FAR FROM COMPLETE.

THE PRINCIPAL FEATURE WAS A SLIGHTLY ELEVATED CONCRETE RAMP ABOUT 70 FEET WIDE AND 50 FEET THICK AND 750 FEET LONG. THE RAMP'S RISE APPEARED TO BE NO MORE THAN THREE FEET FROM ONE END TO THE OTHER.

THERE WAS EVIDENCE OF ALLIED AERIAL BOMBARDMENT AT THE SITE. ONE BOMB, PERHAPS A 1,000-POUNDER, HAD BITTEN A CRATER FOUR FEET DEEP AND 20 FEET IN DIAMETER IN THE FLOOR OF THE RAMP.

AT THE ELEVATED END OF THE RAMP THERE WAS ANOTHER REINFORCED CONCRETE STRUCTURE ABOUT 300 FEET LONG, 120 FEET WIDE AND 38 FEET HIGH WITH A TUNNEL RUNNING THROUGH ONE END.

WHEN THE GERMANS WERE FORCED TO ABANDON THEIR WORK THEY WERE ERECTING A SERIES OF SUPPORTING TRESTLES IN A LINE PARALLEL TO THE RAMP, POSSIBLY TO BEAR ANOTHER PLATFORM.

THE SITE WAS ENCIRCLED BY A NARROW GAUGE RAILROAD TRACK. SCATTERED THROUGHOUT THE AREA WERE ABOUT 50 CONCRETE MIXERS AND PILES OF STEEL REINFORCING RODS, ONE AND A HALF TO TWO AND THREE INCHES IN DIAMETER. ENGINEERS ESTIMATED NEARLY 2,000 MEN HAD BEEN EMPLOYED ON THE PROJECT.

THERE ALSO WAS WHAT APPEARED TO BE SOME SORT OF CONTROL HOUSE WITH WALLS SIX FEET THICK AND A 10-FOOT THICK CEILING TO PROTECT IT FROM BOMBS.

JUN 25 1944

THE SMALLER INSTALLATION CAPTURED APPEARED TO BE A MODIFIED "SKI" TYPE PLATFORM LIKE THOSE WHICH HAVE BEEN ATTACKED REPEATEDLY BY ALLIED AIRCRAFT IN THE PAS DE CALAIS AREA. IT WAS SO CLEVERLY CAMOUFLAGED THAT A PERSON COULD WALK ACROSS IT UNAWARE.

THE RAMP WAS SUNK SLIGHTLY IN THE GROUND AND COVERED WITH SOD. THERE ALSO WAS A SOLID CIRCULAR PLATFORM WITH SQUARE HOLES SUNK IN IT. THE FOUNDATION APPEARED COMPLETE AND AWAITING INSTALLATION OF THE FIRING MECHANISM.

FRENCHMEN I TALKED TO TOLD STORIES OF ADDITIONAL FIRING SITES ALONG THE COAST WHICH ARE IN USE. PARTS OF ONE ROCKET PLANE WERE FOUND ON THE AMERICAN BEACHHEAD WHERE THE PLANE WAS BELIEVED TO HAVE LANDED ACCIDENTALLY THROUGH SOME FAULTY MECHANISM.

MONTREAL, JUNE 24-(AP)-CHARLES VINING, PRESIDENT OF THE NEWSPRINT ASSOCIATION OF CANADA, TONIGHT PRAISED THE REPORT OF A COMMITTEE OF U.S. NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS RECOMMENDING THAT THE UNITED STATES ABANDON USE OF NEW LIGHTWEIGHT NEWSPRINT. HE SAID THE REPORT "REPRESENTS AN INTEGRITY AND SENSE OF DUTY WHICH WILL COMMAND RESPECT IN CANADA AS WELL AS IN THE UNITED STATES."

IN A LETTER TO WILLIAM C.CHANDLER OF THE SCRIPPS-HOWARD NEWSPAPERS, MEMBER OF THE COMMITTEE, VINING SAID "IT IS CLEAR THAT YOUR COMMITTEE HAS MADE A CONSCIENTIOUS AND COMPETENT EFFORT TO SHAPE A PLAN FOR THE GREATEST GOOD OF THE GREATEST NUMBER OF UNITED STATES NEWSPAPERS AND THAT MEMBERS OF THE COMMITTEE, INCLUDING YOURSELF, HAVE PUT ASIDE ADVANTAGES WHICH THEY MIGHT HAVE SOUGHT AS INDIVIDUAL PUBLISHERS."

VINING SAID THAT AMONG CONSIDERATIONS PRESENTED TO THE COMMITTEE DURING A THREE-DAY STUDY IN MONTREAL WERE THESE:

"1--A MIXTURE OF WEIGHTS WOULD BRING SOME REDUCTION IN THE TOTAL TONS AVAILABLE.

"2--EQUITABLE DISTRIBUTION OF SUPPLY WOULD REQUIRE THAT, IF A REDUCTION IN TONS WERE THUS CAUSED, THE REDUCTION WOULD BE APPLIED TO THE TOTAL SUPPLY POOL OF U.S. CONSUMERS, AND NOT ONLY TO CONSUMERS USING CANADIAN NEWSPRINT.

"3--TWO FACTUAL ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE ESTABLISHED PRINCIPLE ARE AS FOLLOWS: FIRST, WHEN SUPPLY FROM UNITED STATES MILLS WAS REDUCED

FROM ABOUT 67,000 TONS A MONTH IN 1943 TO 60,000 TONS A MONTH IN 1944, THE REDUCTION WAS NOT APPLIED ONLY TO CUSTOMERS OF UNITED STATES MILLS; IT WAS APPLIED TO ALL UNITED STATES CONSUMERS; IT WAS PU INTO THE TOTAL POOL OF 273,000 TONS A MONTH; SECOND, WHEN CANADIAN MILLS AT THE BEGINNING OF 1944 FOUND THEY COULD IMPROVE SUPPLY FROM 192,000 OF NORMAL WOOD BASIS TO 200,000 TONS BY WOOD EXTENSION METHODS, THE IMPROVEMENT WAS NOT GIVEN ONLY TO CONSUMERS OF CANADIAN MILLS, IT WAS SHARED BY ALL U.S. CONSUMERS; THE 273,000 TON TOTAL WAS REACHED ON THIS BASIS.

"4--AS A HYPOTHETICAL ILLUSTRATION, LET US IMAGINE THAT CANADIAN GOVERNMENT AUTHORITIES FOUND THEMSELVES FACED WITH A DIMINISHED WOOD SUPPLY FOR NEWSPRINT AND COULD ONLY UNDERTAKE TO SUPPLY SOMETHING LESS THAN THE CURRENT COMMITMENT. IT WOULD BE UNTHINKABLE THAT THE WAR PRODUCTION BOARD WOULD APPLY THE WHOLE REDUCTION TO USERS OF CANADIAN NEWSPRINT. IT SEEMS CLEAR THAT THE WAI PRODUCTION BOARD, FOLLOWING PAST PRACTICE, WOULD APPLY THE REDUCTION TO THE WHOLE SUPPLY POOL AND WOULD REVISE ITS ALLOCATION UNDER ORDER L-240 TO FIT THE NEW SITUATION."

Americans Enter Cherbourg On Three Sides

Reds Close Vitebsk Trap On 45,000 Nazis

TROOPS' GRASP ON PORT IS DECLARED FIRM WITH FEW POINTS HOLDING OUT

German Defenses Wither Under Battering Of Heavy Guns—Slow Job Of Clearing Out City Remains As Prisoners Are Taken By Hundreds

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 25 (AP)—Cherbourg is almost in our possession, Supreme Headquarters announced tonight.

By DON WHITEHEAD

JUN 25 1944

With American Forces Entering Cherbourg, June 25 (AP)—American forces entered Cherbourg late this afternoon.

With artillery battering the enemy's collapsing defenses, American troops clawed into the city from the south, east and west and clamped a firm grasp on the port.

The Germans' stand-or-die defenses slowly withered under the pounding from our big guns and mortars until at 6 P. M. there were only two strong points at Fort du Roule and a few other scattered defense points holding out.

There remains tonight the slow job of cleaning out the main part of the city and the silencing of the enemy guns, which are still firing on Allied troops who battled their way into the city 19 days after opening the Western Front.

Cherbourg lies under a pall of dust and smoke from fires kindled by artillery explosions and from demolitions of the Germans who are unable to withstand the crushing power of the attack thrown at them by the Americans.

Hundreds of prisoners are streaming back to prisoner cages. There is no estimate of the number, but they are being rounded up in groups of 20, 50 and 100 at a time, wherever the doughboys go. There are many others dead around the positions hammered by our big guns.

But Cherbourg proper is untouched by our artillery fire which is concentrated on points of resistance.

Late this afternoon the Germans blew up Fort des Flamands. A mighty explosion ripped out the sides of the fortress and clouded the eastern half of the city in dense smoke. There were explosions of other demolitions as the troops advanced.

Cherbourg's basin was an inferno of artillery explosions, flames, smoke and dust today—one of the most spectacular and awesome sights I have ever seen.

And then, when the troops began the final attack at 2 p.m., a sudden quiet descended over the battlefield — a ghostly sort of silence which was unbroken for minutes by the noises of battle. The only sound I remember was the crunch of shoes on the gravel as the doughboys marched on Cherbourg.

Even though they were told to stand by their guns or be shot as cowards, the Germans broke under the steady hammering of artillery and pressure from the doughboys, and did not put up the house-to-house defense many expected them to do.

I sat on a bluff overlooking the city this morning and watched artillery and navy guns work at the job of "completely crushing" the enemy. Rarely in warfare does one get a ringside seat at close range and see the spectacular pyrotechnics such as we looked at today.

Our seat was on the bluff above the old stone quarry which had been headquarters for an enemy coast artillery outfit. A dozen or more troops and a few newsmen sat in the warm sun in plain view of the enemy and looked at the battle.

"I never have seen anything like this, even in pictures," said Sergeant Richard Nichols of Jackson, Tenn., an artillery observer.

Neither had any of the Shells Land Near Fort

Shells were bursting on a sand spit near Fort Des Flamands, east of the harbor's main inner channel where the Germans had a battery of big guns blasting away at our positions. We could see the flash of these guns and the enemy walking about them.

Observers finally ranged in on the positions and gray bursts from our shelling mushroomed up.

"Lay something on them!" shouted Lt. James Timothy Kennedy of Washington, D. C., "Man, this is something that happens to a mortar man only once in a lifetime—to be able to fire like this at extreme range."

"That's what I'm doing," said the observer.

Shells then were crashing on the sand spit. Soon four or five guns were silenced but the Germans would run from underground shelters at intervals, fire their remaining weapons and run back to their shelter.

"We've got theim running around like wild men," chortled Sgt. Nichols.

Below us troops carried dynamite to a tunnel in a quarry.

"We cleaned out that tunnel yesterday, or thought we had," said Timothy. "But it is a regular rabbit warren of holes and tunnels. This morning Germans came out with a machine-gun and gave us more trouble. We tried to get them all out but they won't come so we are going to blow up the entrance and seal the whole thing."

Patrol Enters City

Through a high powered telescope I watched a doughboy patrol led by Lt. Shirley Landon, Spokane, Wash., working its way toward the city, feeling out defenses and checking each house along a road. It was apparent they were meeting no opposition.

Across a narrow valley on the next ridge there was a movement of men. They were identified as doughboys of another unit. We could see tanks nosing through hedges, getting into position to fire on the beaches.

Then just outside the harbor we saw boats laying a smoke screen,

30. 24 — 16551

shuttling back and forth with streamers of white smoke trailing them. The navy had arrived to help the army batter the enemy's defenses.

"That's the navy ranging in," Lt. Timothy said.

"The Germans literally are between the devil and the deep blue sea," someone said.

The navy began pounding the sand spit from which the Germans were firing and shells threw up water around Fort Des Flamands.

From within the fringe of the city came an awful grinding noise, the screech of shells and bursts of explosives which erupted flame and smoke on our right flank. The Germans were firing their rocket weapon which has a terrifying sound.

In the trees behind the bluff a square-jawed colonel from Alabama called his officers together.

Prepare for Attack

"We attack at 1400 hours (2 p. m.)," he said and pointed to a position on a map. "We're sending a unit in to cut the road here before we make a move toward the main part of Cherbourg and I want each man to keep strict control of his unit."

His men lounged about him—dirty, tired and unshaven. They had had little sleep for the past 60 hours because when they had a chance for rest the enemy usually was shelling them with big guns.

"Cannons?" said the colonel.

"Yes sir." said Capt. John B. Timmons, Baltimore, Md.

"I want you to be ready to give prompt support on the cross roads here and on this main east-west road."

"We're ready, sir."

"If there is any movement of troops toward our flanks I want mortars, cannon and artillery to hit 'em hard."

The colonel looked around. "Tanks!"

Capt. L. A. Hedges, Columbus, Ohio, nodded.

"I want the same formation we had yesterday. If we come under fire from a building I want tanks as the base of fire and I want you to destroy the building. I understand tanks and infantry worked together very well yesterday and I want the same thing today."

"Tanks were right there when they were needed, sir," said Maj. Maynard Miller, Lincoln, Neb.

AMERICANS NEAR FULL CONTROL OF

BATTERED HARBOR

Two Strongpoints Remain to Be Cleared of German Troops.

NAZI RESISTANCE FADES

Fate of Garrison Not Yet Revealed, 30,000 Troops May Be Captured

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Monday, June 26.—(AP) U. S. assault troops battered into smoke-shrouded Cherbourg late Sunday from three sides, clamping a firm grasp on the city, and Supreme Headquarters declared at midnight that France's third largest port city was "almost in our possession."

An Associated Press dispatch from Cherbourg declared that veteran doughboys broke into the city on the 20th day of the invasion under a shell-shocking artillery, sea and aerial bombardment that crumpled Nazi fight-to-the-death resistance.

The power drive swept on against Germans still holding out in the main portion fo the city, and several hours later supreme headquarters termed the city almost in Allied possession. German broadcasts earlier had virtually written off the port as lost.

30,000 Nazis Trapped

Lt.-Gen. Omar N. Bradley's men—trapping possibly up to 30,000 Nazis—smashed into the city from the south, east and west, said Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead, who entered the city with the troops.

The Germans turned the harbor facilities into an inferno of destruction, he said.

A tremendous artillery barrage from American task forces and field guns helped crush stubborn Nazi defenses on the outskirts, and the Americans won the high ground defenses overlooking the port city, supreme headquarters declared in its 40th communique.

Whitehead declared there remained last night only "the slow job of cleaning out the main part of the city." The outpost defenses were virtually all blotted out.

Cherbourg's harbors will provide a huge, efficient funnel to pour men and material into the Normandy peninsula for grand-scale offensives designed to crush Hitler's western front.

"At 6 p.m., there were only two strongpoints at Fort du Roule, and a few other scattered defense points, holding out" on Cherourg's outskirts, Whitehead said.

Many Nazi Dead

The last mile into the city was littered with Nazi dead — and streams of German prisoners marched back past them to prison pens, some in bunches up to 100.

The Germans broke under the final, mighty American assault, unleashed at 2 p.m. without staging as much of a bitter house-to-house defense as many expected them to make, Whitehead reported. The tremendous Allied barrage struck the city's outskirts, with the city proper untouched by the massed destruction of naval and land guns.

Allied air power which had started the grand assault three days and a few hours earlier was virtually withdrawn from the fight in its final crescendo since the Americans were at such close grips with the last German defenses that bombing would have endangered them.

Big naval guns which came in on the last day concentrated on knocking out the last long range batteries on both sides of the port. Troops swarming down from the heights could see the Allied ship operations outside the harbor, laying a smoke screen and firing into Nazi positions.

A senior British staff officer at 21st army group headquarters said some 30,000 Nazi prisoners might be bagged at Cherbourg, and declared the Germans had suffered heavy losses.

Nazi Positions Hammered

A powerful task force of American battleships, cruisers and destroyers, defying Cherbourg's naval guns, hammered Nazi positions from the sea yesterday afternoon, simultaneously with a withering barrage by field artillery and mortars and bombs from Allied planes for the final crusher assault.

The bold task force lending support from the sea was commanded by Rear Admiral Morton L. Deyo aboard the U. S. cruiser Tuscaloosa. It was the first sea bombardment of the Cherbourg area.

Even as the battle for Cherbourg raged to its bloody climax, British forces exploded an offensive before dawn Sunday along the eastern Normandy flank, striking more than a mile south of captured Tilly-Sur-Seulles, 12 miles west of the stronghold of Caen.

This smash rolled more than a mile in four hours, engulfing a village, and then under heavy artillery support drove up into "strongly-defended German positions," a front dispatch from Roger Greene of the Associated Press said. The Germans threw in reinforcements, but were reported losing men "heavily."

(CBS Correspondent Bill Downs said the British had gained two and a half to three miles southeast of Tilly-Sur-Seulles. Downs said the attack began after a barrage from enough artillery to place "one every eight yards." Berlin reported fighting "in full swing" in this sector.

(A Berlin Transocean broadcast said Allied troops and equipment had been landed from "about 350 transport and landing vessels" east of the Orne river, above Caen, in the last two days. Another German broadcast speculated that "the Allies intend to start major operations soon in this sector designed to capture Caen and push in a general easterly direction," from the peninsula into the French mainland toward Paris.)

Enemy Attack Repulsed

Supreme headquarters said German attacks had been repulsed northeast of Caen with "fierce but inconclusive fighting" in that sector.

Earlier Sunday, supreme headquarters said the Germans were putting up a last-ditch fight for Maupertus airfield about five miles east of Cherbourg. Most of the German forces apparently had been pulled back into the city from Cape Barfleur on the northeastern tip of Cherbourg peninsula.

The British officer at 21st army group headquarters—who said Sunday afternoon that Cherbourg's fall probably would not be long—expressed belief the bag of prisoners when the port is taken would run to about 30,000 or less, rather than 50,000 as estimated earlier. He said the 709th division, presumed to be the Germans' original garrison force there, still was at nearly full strength, but other parts of the trapped 77th, 91st, and 243rd divisions had been badly mauled.

The 77th division was chopped in two by the American punch just a week ago that sealed off the top of the peninsula; the 91st suffered heavily in battles with American airborne forces dropped at the start of the invasion June 6, and the 243rd division also had been cut in two by a U. S. thrust.

German Order Captured

German surprise at the rapidity of the German cross-peninsular thrust was illustrated by a captured German order, made public a 21st army group headquarters. It ordered some of the German divisions now at Cherbourg to withdraw to the south. But they were hit by Gen. Bradley's doughboys before they could escape the trap.

Cherbourg, emptied of all but 5,000 of its civilians, shuddered and flamed to German-set demolitions as the American arc closed in earlier in the battle, and one bright fire flared from the arsenal near the Quai de France.

Supreme headquarters' 40th communique issued last night, and trailing the information from front dispatches, said: "Allies now hold high ground overlooking Cherbourg and are gradually pressing forward into the suburbs. The enemy is resisting bitterly but is unable to stem our steady advance."

The bulletin declared "Local attacks have improved our positions in the eastern sector of the bridgehead after fierce fighting," but gave no details. Air bombardment has given "invaluable aid to ground units," it added.

It seemed likely that destruction of the arsenal would be the last act of defiance by Maj. -Gen. Karl Wilhelm von Schlieban, Prussian veteran whom Field Marshal von Rungtedt sent in to take command of Cherbourg less than a month ago.

Nazi Commander Killed

Another German commander, infantry Maj.- Gen. Stegman, who led a division on the Russian Gomel front, has been killed in Normandy, headquarters announced. without giving the place or circumstances.

Headquarters also disclosed that Maj.-Generals Joseph Lawton Collins and Leonard T. Garow were corps commanders of American forces in France. Brig.-Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, commander of French forces in Britain, has been placed in command of all resistance troops in the interior of France under Gen. Eisenhower in a step to solidify patriot resistance with the invasion drive.

Despite the risk of bringing valuable fleet units within range of Cherbourg's big coastal guns, the Allies originally were understood to have planned to support the whole attack on the port by naval bombardment.

But the doughboys fought their way there so swiftly there was no time to bring up the fleet force for the opening assault on the harbor.

USE OF CHERBOURG EXPECTED QUICKLY

Limited Utilization 24 Hours After Capture Seen—Army Repair Units Ready

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 25 (AP)—Cherbourg's multiple harbors and elaborate port installations offered the Germans many chances for demolitions and obstructions, but it was doubtful whether their best efforts could prevent the Allies from swiftly exploiting this prize once it was securely in their hands.

Eyewitness reports have told of many fires and explosions in the dock area and apparently some attempt has been made to block the entrance to the basin where transatlantic liners once docked, but it will be a surprise if limited unloadings are not under way within twenty-four hours after the capture, and if a flood of men and supplies is not pouring in within ten days.

Moving in from the outside, ships come first to the outer roads of the great deep water basin, about nine miles from east to west and two miles north to south. The basin is protected on three sides by land and on the north by some of the world's greatest breakwaters. It is entered by two channels, each nearly 2,000 feet wide. It is regarded as impossible that the Germans can prevent the use of this anchorage, which could take many hundreds of big ships, even at low water.

Next is the inner basin, about four miles long and two miles wide, which is entered through a 1,500-foot gap in the breakwater. If the Germans have three or four big ships in the harbor—as is doubtful—they will probably try to close this channel.

Quai de France Has Best Docks

Sticking out into the inner basin from the shore is a massive 1,800-foot quay, the Quai de France, on the east side of which are the best and deepest slip and docks, where four or five sizable merchant ships could unload simultaneously. The entrance to this basin is about 600 feet wide, between the quay and the jetty, to the east, and there are reports that ships have already been sunk across it.

On the west side of the quay is a narrow channel, about 225 feet wide and 600 feet long, leading to the inner commercial basin and tidal dry dock, which presumably could be blocked quite easily. Similarly the entrance to the triple naval basins about three quarters of a mile to the west is only about 275 to 300 feet across and might be blocked.

25-Foot Tide Big Help

The 25-foot tide offers a great advantage for swift clearing of any blocks, however, since it permits cutting the blasting of obstacles at low tide.

Inshore demolitions probably are centering on the wharves, power stations, rail lines, derricks and cranes concentrated around the Quai de France.

But the Allies had plenty of practice clearing harbors, and certainly have plenty of new machinery ready for swift installation. At Tripoli, for instance, nearly a score of big ships were sunk by the enemy, but the port was operating almost normally in 13 days.

Troops Specially Trained

The job of rehabilitation, the United States Army Corps of Engineers said yesterday, will be greatly facilitated by a new unit, likely to play a prominent part in the war from now on. It is the Port Repair Ship Company, manned and operated entirely by Army engineers.

These men, dubbed "sailjers," have been specially trained in this country for such jobs. Many of the Army divers got their experience working on the salvaging of the Lafayette in New York, in conjunction with Navy divers. Others received their training at the Harbor Clearance School, run by the Corps of Engineers at Fort Screven, Ga. Here structural steel workmen, welders, machinists, mechanics and divers received their training in the use of explosives for demolition purposes and the use of under-water acetylene torches.

Among the first troops entering Cherbourg will be engineer port construction and port repair groups. These units will approach their objective, the harbor installations, by land. At the same time, engineer port repair ship companies, protected by our naval guns, will be using a water route to enter the harbor.

Divers will dynamite wreckage so skillfully that it can be removed by these cranes. When the explosion might endanger other installations, acetylene torches will cut sunken hulls into sections suitable for removal. Passages will be cut through hulls, so that materials can be carried through ships to wharves. In other cases ramps and docks will be built across sunken hulls.

shuttling back and forth with streamers of white smoke trailing them. The navy had arrived to help the army batter the enemy's defenses.

"That's the navy ranging in," Lt. Timothy said.

"The Germans literally are between the devil and the deep blue sea," someone said.

The navy began pounding the sand spit from which the Germans were firing and shells threw up water around Fort Des Flamands.

From within the fringe of the city came an awful grinding noise, the screech of shells and bursts of explosives which erupted flame and smoke on our right flank. The Germans were firing their rocket weapon which has a terrifying sound.

In the trees behind the bluff a square-jawed colonel from Alabama called his officers together.

Prepare for Attack

"We attack at 1400 hours (2 p. m.)," he said and pointed to a position on a map. "We're sending a unit in to cut the road here before we make a move toward the main part of Cherbourg and I want each man to keep strict control of his unit."

His men lounged about him—dirty, tired and unshaven. They had had little sleep for the past 60 hours because when they had a chance for rest the enemy usually was shelling them with big guns.

"Cannons?" said the colonel.

"Yes sir." said Capt. John B. Timmons, Baltimore, Md.

"I want you to be ready to give prompt support on the cross roads here and on this main east-west road."

"We're ready, sir."

"If there is any movement of troops toward our flanks I want mortars, cannon and artillery to hit 'em hard."

The colonel looked around. "Tanks!"

Capt. L. A. Hedges, Columbus, Ohio, nodded.

"I want the same formation we had yesterday. If we come under fire from a building I want tanks as the base of fire and I want you to destroy the building. I understand tanks and infantry worked together very well yesterday and I want the same thing today."

"Tanks were right there when they were needed, sir," said Maj. Maynard Miller, Lincoln, Neb.

NAZI RESISTANCE FADES

Fate of Garrison Not Yet Revealed, 30,000 Troops May Be Captured

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Monday, June 26.—(AP) U. S. assault troops battered into smoke-shrouded Cherbourg late Sunday from three sides, clamping a firm grasp on the city, and Supreme Headquarters declared at midnight that France's third largest port city was "almost in our possession."

An Associated Press dispatch from Cherbourg declared that veteran doughboys broke into the city on the 20th day of the invasion under a shell-shocking artillery, sea and aerial bombardment that crumpled Nazi fight-to-the-death resistance.

The power drive swept on against Germans still holding out in the main portion fo the city, and several hours later supreme headquarters termed the city almost in Allied possession. German broadcasts earlier had virtually written off the port as lost.

30,000 Nazis Trapped

Lt.-Gen. Omar N. Bradley's men—trapping possibly up to 30,000 Nazis—smashed into the city from the south, east and west, said Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead, who entered the city with the troops.

The Germans turned the harbor facilities into an inferno of destruction, he said.

A tremendous artillery barrage from American task forces and field guns helped crush stubborn Nazi defenses on the outskirts, and the Americans won the high ground defenses overlooking the port city, supreme headquarters declared in its 40th communique.

Whitehead declared there remained last night only "the slow job of cleaning out the main part of the city." The outpost defenses were virtually all blotted out.

Cherbourg's harbors will provide a huge, efficient funnel to pour men and material into the Normandy peninsula for grand-scale offensives designed to crush Hitler's western front.

"At 6 p.m., there were only two strongpoints at Fort du Roule, and a few other scattered defense points, holding out" on Cherourg's outskirts, Whitehead said.

Many Nazi Dead

The last mile into the city was littered with Nazi dead — and streams of German prisoners marched back past them to prison pens, some in bunches up to 100.

The Germans broke under the final, mighty American assault, unleashed at 2 p.m. without staging as much of a bitter house-to-house defense as many expected them to make, Whitehead reported. The tremendous Allied barrage struck the city's outskirts, with the city proper untouched by the massed destruction of naval and land guns.

Allied air power which had started the grand assault three days and a few hours earlier was virtually withdrawn from the fight in its final crescendo since the Americans were at such close grips with the last German defenses that bombing would have endangered them.

Big naval guns which came in on the last day concentrated on knocking out the last long range batteries on both sides of the port. Troops swarming down from the heights could see the Allied ship operations outside the harbor, laying a smoke screen and firing into Nazi positions.

A senior British staff officer at 21st army group headquarters said some 30,000 Nazi prisoners might be bagged at Cherbourg, and declared the Germans had suffered heavy losses.

Nazi Positions Hammered

A powerful task force of American battleships, cruisers and destroyers, defying Cherbourg's naval guns, hammered Nazi positions from the sea yesterday afternoon, simultaneously with a withering barrage by field artillery and mortars and bombs from Allied planes for the final crusher assault.

The bold task force lending support from the sea was commanded by Rear Admiral Morton L. Deyo aboard the U. S. cruiser Tuscaloosa. It was the first sea bombardment of the Cherbourg area.

Even as the battle for Cherbourg raged to its bloody climax, British forces exploded an offensive before dawn Sunday along the eastern Normandy flank, striking more than a mile south of captured Tilly-Sur-Seulles, 12 miles west of the stronghold of Caen.

This smash rolled more than a mile in four hours, engulfing a village, and then under heavy artillery support drove up into "strongly-defended German positions," a front dispatch from Roger Greene of the Associated Press said. The Germans threw in reinforcements, but were reported losing men "heavily."

(CBS Correspondent Bill Downs said the British had gained two and a half to three miles southeast of Tilly-Sur-Seulles. Downs said the attack began after a barrage from enough artillery to place "one every eight yards." Berlin reported fighting "in full swing" in this sector.

(A Berlin Transocean broadcast said Allied troops and equipment had been landed from "about 350 transport and landing vessels" east of the Orne river, above Caen, in the last two days. Another German broadcast speculated that "the Allies intend to start major operations soon in this sector designed to capture Caen and push in a general easterly direction," from the peninsula into the French mainland toward Paris.)

Enemy Attack Repulsed

Supreme headquarters said German attacks had been repulsed northeast of Caen with "fierce but inconclusive fighting" in that sector.

Earlier Sunday, supreme headquarters said the Germans were putting up a last-ditch fight for Maupertus airfield about five miles east of Cherbourg. Most of the German forces apparently had been pulled back into the city from Cape Barfleur on the northeastern tip of Cherbourg peninsula.

The British officer at 21st army group headquarters—who said Sunday afternoon that Cherbourg's fall probably would not be long—expressed belief the bag of prisoners when the port is taken would run to about 30,000 or less, rather than 50,000 as estimated earlier. He said the 709th division, presumed to be the Germans' original garrison force there, still was at nearly full strength, but other parts of the trapped 77th, 91st, and 243rd divisions had been badly mauled.

The 77th division was chopped in two by the American punch just a week ago that sealed off the top of the peninsula; the 91st suffered heavily in battles with American airborne forces dropped at the start of the invasion June 6, and the 243rd division also had been cut in two by a U. S. thrust.

German Order Captured

German surprise at the rapidity of the German cross-peninsular thrust was illustrated by a captured German order, made public a 21st army group headquarters. It ordered some of the German divisions now at Cherbourg to withdraw to the south. But they were hit by Gen. Bradley's doughboys before they could escape the trap.

Cherbourg, emptied of all but 5,000 of its civilians, shuddered and flamed to German-set demolitions as the American arc closed in earlier in the battle, and one bright fire flared from the arsenal near the Quai de France.

Supreme headquarters' 40th communique issued last night, and trailing the information from front dispatches, said: "Allies now hold high ground overlooking Cherbourg and are gradually pressing forward into the suburbs. The enemy is resisting bitterly but is unable to stem our steady advance."

The bulletin declared "Local attacks have improved our positions in the eastern sector of the bridgehead after fierce fighting," but gave no details. Air bombardment has given "invaluable aid to ground units," it added.

It seemed likely that destruction of the arsenal would be the last act of defiance by Maj. -Gen. Karl Wilhelm von Schlieban, Prussian veteran whom Field Marshal von Runstedt sent in to take command of Cherbourg less than a month ago.

Nazi Commander Killed

Another German commander, infantry Maj.- Gen. Stegman, who led a division on the Russian Gomel front, has been killed in Normandy, headquarters announced, without giving the place or circumstances.

Headquarters also disclosed that Maj.-Generals Joseph Lawton Collins and Leonard T. Gerow were corps commanders of American forces in France. Brig.-Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, commander of French forces in Britain, has been placed in command of all resistance troops in the interior of France under Gen. Eisenhower in a step to solidify patriot resistance with the invasion drive.

Despite the risk of bringing valuable fleet units within range of Cherbourg's big coastal guns, the Allies originally were understood to have planned to support the whole attack on the port by naval bombardment.

But the doughboys fought their way there so swiftly there was no time to bring up the fleet force for the opening assault on the harbor.

USE OF CHERBOURG EXPECTED QUICKLY

L. MACKENZIE

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 25 (AP)—Cherbourg's multiple harbors and elaborate port installations offered the Germans many chances for demolitions and obstructions, but it was doubtful whether their best efforts could prevent the Allies from swiftly exploiting this prize once it was securely in their hands.

Eyewitness reports have told of many fires and explosions in the dock area and apparently some attempt has been made to block the entrance to the basin where transatlantic liners once docked, but it will be a surprise if limited unloadings are not under way within twenty-four hours after the capture, and if a flood of men and supplies is not pouring in within ten days.

Moving in from the outside, ships come first to the outer roads of the great deep water basin, about nine miles from east to west and two miles north to south. The basin is protected on three sides by land and on the north by some of the world's greatest breakwaters. It is entered by two channels, each nearly 2,000 feet wide. It is regarded as impossible that the Germans can prevent the use of this anchorage, which could take many hundreds of big ships, even at low water.

Next is the inner basin, about four miles long and two miles wide, which is entered through a 1,500-foot gap in the breakwater. If the Germans have three or four big ships in the harbor—as is doubtful—they will probably try to close this channel.

Quai de France Has Best Docks

Sticking out into the inner basin from the shore is a massive 1,800-foot quay, the Quai de France, on the east side of which are the best and deepest slip and docks, where four or five sizable merchant ships could unload simultaneously. The entrance to this basin is about 600 feet wide, between the quay and the jetty, to the east, and there are reports that ships have already been sunk across it.

On the west side of the quay is a narrow channel, about 225 feet wide and 600 feet long, leading to the inner commercial basin and tidal dry dock, which presumably could be blocked quite easily. Similarly the entrance to the triple naval basins about three quarters of a mile to the west is only about 275 to 300 feet across and might be blocked.

25-Foot Tide Big Help

The 25-foot tide offers a great advantage for swift clearing of any blocks, however, since it permits cutting the blasting of obstacles at low tide.

Inshore demolitions probably are centering on the wharves, power stations, rail lines, derricks and cranes concentrated around the Quai de France.

Two Commanders Named For U.S. Troops in France

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, June 25—(AP) Major Generals Leonard Townsend Gerow, who trained U. S. troops in Britain for the invasion, and Joseph Lawton Collins, who drove the last Japanese from Guadalcanal, were disclosed today as corps commanders of American forces in France.

Supreme headquarters also announced that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower had placed Brig. Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, commander of French forces in Britain, in command of all resistance forces in the interior of France.

The brief announcement did not detail the commands nor the sectors of the two veteran generals, both of whom know what fighting is about at first hand—Gerow from the first World war when he fought in France with such distinction that he won the French Legion of Honor, and Collins who directed the final push that shoved the Japanese from Guadalcanal.

Known to his troops as "General Gee," Gerow formerly was chief of the U. S. Army staff's war plans division, a position in which he was succeeded by Gen. Eisenhower in 1942.

Collins is known as "Lightning Joe"—a name he picked up as head of the 25th division in the Solomons. Later he led his division to a brilliant success in the Munda campaign on New Georgia in July of 1943.

The 56-year-old Gerow, with a record of service on the Mexican border, the Philippines and China as well as France, took command of the 29th division—now fighting in France—in February 1942.

Last July he was named commander of United States forces in Britain, and drove his troops with the same thoroughness with which his name had become associated in the Carolina maneuvers of 1942.

But Gerow was willing to drive himself as hard as the men from Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia and Washington, D. C. who made up the bulk of the 29th division. He was up by lantern light to shave, and off by jeep to the field to join his men.

The 48-year-old Collins was with the army of occupation in Germany after the last war, served at a variety of posts in the United States and the Philippines, and in February of 1942 was designated chief of staff of the Hawaiian department.

When his big chance came with the 25th in the Solomons, Collins insisted on sharing the perils of his men, disregarding snipers and exposing himself to the machine-gun fire in directing mortars that wiped out a machine-gun nest holding up the advance.

In taking command of the French underground forces, Gen. Koenig is fulfilling a vow never to stop fighting the Germans until his native Alsace is liberated.

Koenig was with French forces that took part in the capture of Narvik in the Norwegian campaign, fought the German armored columns in Brittany after the Nazi break-through of 1940, and with his men escaped to Britain after the armistice to be among the first to join the Free French.

Later Koenig was sent to French Equatorial Africa and reorganized French forces for the fight in Libya. The 44-year-old general commanded French forces which protected the British left flank at Bir Hacheim in Libya and prevented Marshal Erwin Rommel's attempt to supply his forces over that route.

The appointment of Koenig as "Commander in Chief of French forces of the interior under the authority of the Supreme commander," raised to a formal military status the underground movement in France.

Koenig, who has been Gen. Charles De Gaulle's liaison man with Gen. Eisenhower, thus took formal command of French forces which since D-day have been praised twice in special communiques from Supreme headquarters for their effective slashing of German communication and transportation lines and for waging pitched battles with Nazi occupying forces.

The French general has been credited with directing the French resistance elements for four years from England via the underground.

As a soldier of the fighting French he became known as the "hero of Bir Hacheim" when he and his 3,600 encircled French troops stood off Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's siege of that desert post in 1941 and after losing a quarter of their strength fought their way back to the main Allied North African forces.

Gerow Came Into Army In 1911 From V. M. I.

General Gerow began his military career in 1911 when he received the Virginia Military Institute's honor appointment to the army as second lieutenant at his graduation.

He served in Mexico, France, China and the Philippines and during the last war was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal and the French Legion of Honor for his procurement work as a signal officer.

Graduates In Three Specialties

While stationed in Shanghai in 1932, the infantry battalion he commanded had a brush with Japanese who crossed into an area policed by the Americans. Gerow ordered the intruders back in positive terms and the next day received an apology from the Japanese.

He was graduated from the advanced course in the infantry school at Fort Benning, the chemical warfare school at Edgewood and the Army War College at Washington.

After being graduated with honors from the command general staff school at Fort Leavenworth, he went to the war plans division of the War Department in 1935 and later directed the division.

General Gerow was made acting assistant chief of staff in the fall of 1940 and was assistant at the time of Pearl Harbor.

Commanded 29th Division

In February, 1942, he was assigned to Fort George G. Meade as commander of the Twenty-ninth Division, made up principally of Marylanders and Virginians, which is now in action in Normandy with the invading Allied forces.

General Gerow was made commander of the United States field forces in the European theater in July, 1943.

A native Virginian, General Gee is known to his comrades as a tireless worker who has a way of turning up at unexpected times and places. He speaks forcefully but softly and his orders are short and to the point.

Yank Unit Dines Well On German Provender

With American Forces Entering Cherbourg, June 25 (AP)—Doughboys in one unit feasted well before they began the last attack on Cherbourg, enjoying such treats as liverwurst, bologna, tuna fish, sweet butter, bread, wine and cognac.

They captured a Nazi coast artillery unit headquarters yesterday and found a well-stocked supply depot.

Allied Pilot Encounters Booby Trap For Flyers

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Forces, June 25 (AP). Allied airmen, like frontline troops on the ground, now are having to contend with booby traps.

A fighter pilot stalking a small train behind the German lines in France watched it chug into a wooded area and stop. When he dived to attack, anti-aircraft guns under virtually every tree opened up on him and he barely pulled up in time.

BRITISH KNOCK OUT NAZI TANKS

Attack Southeast Of Tilly Gains More Than Mile

By ROGER GREENE

At the British Front in Normandy, June 25 (AP)—British tanks, in support of Tommies who have been pitching into the Germans since an hour before dawn today, knocked out about a dozen Nazi Panther and Mark IV tanks by nightfall in the area around Fontenay, two miles southeast of Tilly sur Seulles.

Furious close-quarter fighting now is in progress in the woods and apple orchards south of Fontenay and in the village itself there is sniping and sporadic street clashes as the British mop up German remnants, but the main action appears to have carried beyond the village.

Screened By Barrage

A big-scale British artillery barrage screened the advance of the Tommies and the thunder of hundreds of guns shook the Normandy countryside. The Germans are fighting for every inch of ground despite heavy casualties.

The British drive on the eastern sector of the beachhead started south of Tilly sur Seulles in the faint halflight before dawn and in four hours struck forward more than a mile.

The attack jumped off at 4 A. M. By 8 A. M. the Tommies stormed and captured one village in an advance of over 2,000 yards. By noon they had swept back the stubbornly fighting Germans and gained a firm foothold, and now under cover of a tremendous artillery drumfire they are driving up into strongly defended German positions.

Officially Called Success

The advance was officially described as "a definite success."

German corpses are piled up like flailed wheat in the hot afternoon sunshine along the dusty road south of Tilly.

British guns are firing along the front in this blazing sector and as I write steel is flying overhead in sheets and the din is terrific.

From a hilltop, sitting half-hidden in a field of blood-red poppies, I can see our barrage creeping forward 100 yards every few minutes and British Tommies crouching as they advance behind the curtain of fire.

German reinforcements have arrived to counter the British advance, and German mortar fire is heavy, but a British staff officer tells me our losses are light while the enemy is suffering heavily.

Already German prisoners are beginning to filter back.

Gale Handicaps Invaders

Five-Day Blow Sets Back Troop and Supply Timetable

AN ALLIED BEACH IN NORMANDY, June 24 (Delayed) (AP).—A seventy-mile gale which roared across the French coast from last Monday to Friday dealt the Allies' troop and supply timetable a serious setback.

This beach is littered today with the bashed-in hulks of steel landing craft and some vessels of even larger size. Some lives were lost. The work of minesweeping crews had been trebled because dozens of additional mines have been washed ashore.

Sizable convoys were plying across the Channel again Friday as the storm subsided, and supplies are moving in now in orderly fashion.

REPAIR OUTFIT IN NORMANDY

$10,000,000 Unit Plods From Beachhead Toward Front

HOWARD COWAN

On a Beachhead in France, June 24 (AP—Delayed)—The dangdest army outfit you ever saw—a $10,000,000 fix-it company on wheels—plods ruggedly over dusty trails toward the front, ready and willing to repair anything from a misprinting letter on a portable typewriter to a blown-up tank.

Ten million dollars worth of tools, and rolling stock ranging in size from a captain's deluxe, air-cushioned, heavy-armed, two-toned and horned jeep to a monster tank retriever, which looks like something out of this world, make up the roving shop of these fix-it doughboys.

Kansas City Man Commands

Their commander is Capt. B. J. Nichols, of Kansas City, Mo., who once was in the automobile business there, and who handpicked his men during a two-week trip through Kansas in July, 1942. This is practically a Kansas outfit, with the exception of a few who live across the Missouri river in the "Show-Me" State, and a sprinkling of Ohioans.

If anything is scratched or flat or busted or bent, they'll paint it, inflate it, mend it or straighten it. If it looks German, they'll shoot at it.

Only 18 men in this outfit are privates. Most of them are sergeants, and 68 are corporals. There are nine commissioned officers, and the average age is about 30. Everyone is a specialist who left his civilian occupation to do practically the same things with the army.

Ohio Threshing Men

The Ohio boys, for instance, handled threshing machines and tractors back on the farms, and it is a stock remark that when the wheat harvest time rolls around back home, "half of the outfit will have to get furloughs to go help with the threshin.'"

But the boys who fooled with tractors and cultivators at home take to tanks "like ducks to water," says Captain Nichols.

"And we've got a lot of watchmakers, electricians, auto mechanics, typewriter mechanics and radio men, too," he says proudly, and a glance at the roster bears him out.

Tank Retriever Pilot

The driver of that huge tank retriever was the cynosure of all feminine eyes as he drove up majestically on the beach. He is Sergt. Cecil Schneipp, of Bazine, Kan., and he likes his monster which drags tanks along with no trouble at all.

"When we used to get out on the road in England," said Lieut. C. J. Botters, of Eureka, Kan., "two jeeps would go along—one in front to head off traffic, the other behind to get the British to fill out claims for fences, barns and hedges we tore down. You can snap off a telephone pole with these things and never feel it."

Men Have Comforts

The company gadgets and tools are carted in trailer-type vans which accommodate two men for sleeping. Each unit generates its own electric power to run a welding outfit, heavy tooling machines, air compressors and other devices—even electric razors, radios, coffee-makers, fans and other comforts of home that the fast-thinking Kansans brought with them. Their prime purpose, however, is to keep tanks moving and their guns firing. At other times they are in constant demand for any odd job at all. For instance, just the other day they made a bunch of special hypodermic needles for the medical corps, to permit greater accuracy in the use of spinal anesthesia.

New Soviet Drives Against 'Fatherland Line' Revealed by Stalin.

LONDON, Monday, June 26—(AP) The Russians have encircled the White Russian stronghold of Vitebsk and are fighting in the streets with the trapped garrison of perhaps 45,000 men, Moscow announced early today, as battle flamed along a 325-mile front and the Red army shredded the vaunted "Fatherland Line" built to guard the shortest road to Berlin.

30. 24— 16553

Even as a communique recorded this triumph and Premier Stalin wes announcing sweeping Russian drives on the bastions of Mogilev and Bobruisk to the south, the Germans said the Red army had opened yet another push in the Ostrov area, some 165 miles northwest of Vitebsk.

25 Mile Advance

The sweep westward, ranging up to 25 miles and timed as the Allies rained more blows from France and Italy, overran more than 740 populated places, the communique said.

The trap snapped on Vitebsk, last major German fortress in Russia, when troops pushing up from the south met those who had come around from the north and then knifed south to cut the last avenues of escape westward. The Russians estimated that five German infantry divisions were caught.

A supplemental communique said more than 16,000 Germans had been killed, 8,000 of them south of Vitebsk alone, and that the Red army was surging on west along roads and fields strewn with hundreds of dead, wrecked war material and arms in full working order abandoned by the enemy in flight.

So swift was the retreat—the supplement said the Germans were "retreating in panic"—that the enemy did not have time to blow up a bridge across the Dvina river. More than 600 officers and men were captured.

This major success was announced shortly after Stalin had twice stepped to the microphone to proclaim the new drives—the fourth and fifth reported since the Eastern front sprang to life.

These orders told of rapid advances which were closing rings of steel about Mogilev and Bobruisk, about 7 ntinued on m Mogilev on the southern ——— ne front, and the communique indicated that the same fate was quickly being prepared for Orsha, mid-way between Vitebsk and Mogilev, and Zhlobin, southeast of Bobruisk.

Along the center of the White Russian front—the nearest to Berlin—the German lines had been breached over stretches totalling more than 200 miles, from Polotsk, northwest of Vitebsk, to Mozyr, in the Pripyat marshes.

The sweep was all the more spectacular since the Summer offensive is aimed at the most heavily fortified German wall, the boasted "Fatherland Line" and in three days has torn six gaps in these defenses.

These are: north of Vitebsk, 50 miles; south of Vitebsk, 50 miles; north of Orsha, 12 miles; east of Mogilev, 45 miles; north of Rogachev, 20 miles; southwest of Zhlobin, 50 miles.

Moscow said the Germans had thrown in all available reserves in an attempt to stem the drive, but were being pressed back in a storm of shells and bombs in which infantry fought in hand-to-hand combat.

The communique recorded further progress on the two Finnish fronts and said the Red army had driven beyond the Svir river and freed another length on the railroad leading from the Arctic port of Murmansk.

Five Blows Dealt

This is the way the five great blows were dealt, as reconstructed from the communique, Stalin's order of the day, and German admissions:

1. Vitebsk—One claw from the south cut the Vitebsk road east of Beshenkovichi, 28 miles southwest of Vitebsk, seized Syenno, 32 miles southwest, forced the Dvina river west of Vitebsk to a depth of 18 miles, and captured 150 populated places. The Russians also took the large railway station of Bogushevskaya, 24 miles south, and more than 300 other places.

The Vitebsk-Lepel highway was cut in the area of Gnezde Lovichc, 20 miles west and southwest of Vitebsk and the Russians there joined forces with troops swinging down from the north, who already had cut off Nazi escape routes to the west.

2. Orsha — Driving from the northeast, the Russians seized the railway station of Khlustino, the last station before Orsha now only 12 miles away. Orsha is on the main railway from Moscow to Minsk. The Germans admitted a break-through on this sector.

3. Mogilev — The Russians stormed across the Pyonya river, part of the defenses before the city, seized Chausi, a district center of the region, and Khaikhovichi, only 16 miles from the city. More than 200 places were liberated, the order of the day said, and the communique put the number at more than 150.

4. Bobruisk - Zhlobin — Southwest of Zhlobin, the Russians loosed artillery and air blows and broke through heavily-fortified German defenses which are part of those guarding Bobruisk and in two days drove breaches in the lines 50 miles wide.

Due east of Bobruisk is Rogachev and north of that town the Russians fashioned a claw aimed at Bobruisk, forcing the Prut river and marching forward about seven miles through echeloned enemy defenses breached to a width of 18 miles. They seized Retka, 16 miles northwest of Rogachev.

Seize Chervony Brod

Yet another column struck up from the southwest of Bobruisk, seizing Chervony Brod only 10 miles southwest of the city on the Bobruisk-Luninets railway, and Moshni, 25 miles southwest. Thus one good avenue of German withdrawal seemed to be firmly in Russian hands.

Knyshevichi, 25 miles south of Bobruisk, was among the 100 populated places liberated. The Germans admitted the Russians had carved out gaps in their lines around Ozarichi, about 45 miles due south of Bobruisk on the fringe of the Pripyat marshes.

5. Ostrov, 165 miles northwest of Vitebsk—Here the Germans said the Russians for three hours hurled artillery fire, then infantry attacked at three points under a heavy smoke screen, forcing the Germans back less than a mile. Ostrov is 33 miles south of the German-held rail center of Pskov.

The Russian communique said 44 German tanks were destroyed or disabled on all fronts and 48 planes were brought down. The Moscow radio said the German air force, "hopelessly trying to stave off disaster, is being cut to ribbons."

Stalin's order of the day was addressed to Gen. ——— Zakharov as commander on the second White Russia front. He has commanded on the Smolensk front. Moscow's 224 victory guns fired 20 salvos in salute.

80 Soviet Divisions Used

The Berlin radio said at least 80 Soviet infantry divisions and a tank army were attacking all the way from Bobruisk, 70 miles southwest of Mogilev, to Vitebsk, and admitted breaches in the center had been widened. The German commentator Ernst Von Hammer also said the Russians had scored a break-through in the Bobruisk area.

"At a few points where the enemy is supported by tanks and guns and has counterattacked, he is being mercilessly engaged and thrown back with heavy losses," the Moscow radio said.

Fears Of Russ[illegible]re Finns To Fight To Last

Helsinki, June 25 (AP)—With the Red army pressing ever closer the people of Finland waited calmly today, expecting the worst but hopeful that some miracle might rescue them.

The impression seemed to persist among the people that the Soviet onslaught could be stemmed, despite the grave tones of Finnish communiques, and many were prepared to fight to the last man.

This determination seemed to be strengthened by rumors throughout the country. One Finn said he was sure Russia w[illegible] overrun the country; others said they expected to be deported to Siberia if Russia controlled their country.

YANKS 38 MILES FROM PISA LINE

Clark's 5th Army Takes Follonica On Coast

Rome, June 25 (AP)—American Fifth Army forces storming up Italy's west coast have thrown back German tank and artillery units all along the line, occupied the coastal route city of Follonica, and smashed to within 38 miles of the Nazi anchor city of Pisa, headquarters announced today.

Field dispatches said there were indications the Germans already were preparing to abandon bomb-devastated Livorno (Leghorn) about six miles below Pisa and second largest port still in enemy hands in Italy.

The new American gains, which units of the Eighth Army matched on the Adriatic side, were made in the face of German Tiger tank and artillery assaults and bitter infantry resistance. Stiffening enemy opposition apparently had been ordered by the German command in a desperate effort to halt the Allied onrush until the enemy can complete his Pisa-Rimini line fortifications.

Inland Town Also Falls

Sunday's communique said the American coastal forces turning inland from Follonica also had captured Monterotondo, 17 miles above Follonica, and were fighting near Massa, highway stronghold between Follonica and Monterotondo.

Eighth Army forces attacking east and west of Lake Trasimeno, in the central sector, have occupied Sarenteano and the villages of Pescia and Castelvieto. Strong resistance was still being encountered north of Perugia.

Fifteenth Air Force reconnaissance disclosed the Germans had blocked one of the two entrances to Livorno's harbors by sinking ships, some loaded with concrete, across the channel, and that only a very narrow passage has been left in the other entrance. Ships' berths, heavy cranes and other installations were being blown up, and the once great port appeared idle and ghostlike.

Five New Nazi Divisions Used

Disclosure that the stiffening German resistance was ordered to gain time apparently to rush work on the Pisa-Rimini line fortifications came from captured parachute troops. Field dispatches said at least five new Nazi divisions have been thrown into the battle since the liberation of Rome and ordered to "hold at all costs."

The headquarters communique said American forces also encountered stiff opposition in the inland drive which captured the village of Perolia.

It was announced officially that the United States 36th Division is fighting with the Fifth Army.

The Fifth Army has taken 36,000 German prisoners since the Salerno landings, the announcement said.

French Colonials Gain

French Colonials, fighting east of the Americans, also scored new gains by routing the Germans from Civitella Paganico after overcoming concentrations of self-propelled guns. It was announced that Spahis, North Africa cavalrymen, are now fighting with the French.

Fierce fighting was reported still in progress at Chiusi, nine miles southwest of Lake Trasimeno, which has changed hands at least twice in the last 72 hours.

Extensive air operations yesterday included heavy bomber attacks against oil installations in the Ploesti area of Romania. Allied fliers shot down 26 enemy planes at the cost of 15 Allied craft.

Germans Flee Follonica, Escaping American Trap

With American Troops in Follonica, Italy, June 25 (AP)—The Nazis fled this Italian seacoast iron-smelting community before the American drive up Highway 1 from Rome could trap them, but not before they had wrecked most of the equipment in a huge machine shop and foundry which is the principal industry of the town.

Most of the enemy succeeded in escaping from the 225-square-mile pocket between the Rome-Pisa road and the coast, which was shut with the capture of this town, because few of the enemy were found in the neighborhood and the bag for the last 24 hours was 200.

Allied planes did most of the damage to this town, for it was one of the targets in raids on enemy communications.

Engineers Outpace Infantry

Engineers were going so fast they once were more than two miles in front of the advancing infantry before it swung west to enter the town. The main body of infantry swept around the Cornia river valley heading for the hills to the north which would seal off the Piombino peninsula and control all the low ground to the coast.

German resistance of the last few days eased somewhat, but the enemy kept up considerable anti-tank fire and tossed in a few Mark V tanks, using them largely as artillery.

Foe May Quit Livorno

HEADQUARTER, 15TH AMERICAN AIR FORCE, Italy, June 24 (Delayed)) (AP).—With the spearhead of the American 5th Army about forty air-line miles away, the Germans are believed to be abandoning the bomb-devastated port of Livorno, the second largest left to them in Italy. MORTON

Air reconnaissance disclosed today that one of the two entrances to the port's chain of artificial harbors has been deliberately blocked by sunken ships, some loaded with concrete, and that only a very narrow channel has been left at the second entrance.

Ship berths undamaged by bombs are being blown up, as well as heavy cranes and other shore installations. All ships have been moved, leaving the port, formerly the third most important in Italy, idle and ghostlike.

Bombed consistently for fifteen months, the usefulness of Livorno had been curtailed greatly. A big oil refinery was knocked out May 28, 1943, and later shipbuilding yards, the naval base and torpedo factory were made useless by a series of raids.

Southern France Is Blasted

ROME, June 25 (AP).—More than 500 American heavy bombers today attacked oil installations, rail yards, bridges, and military targets in southern France.

The bombers hit targets at Sete, twenty miles southwest of Montpellier, Balaruc, a few miles west of Sete, at Avignon, 125 miles south of Lyon, and Le Pontet, northeast of Avignon.

Three bridges over the Rhone River near Avignon were bombed. Good results were obtained at most of the objectives, headquarters declared.

Russians Decorate Eaker

MEDITERRANEAN ALLIED AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS in Italy, June 25 (AP)—The Order of Kutuzov, second degree, has been conferred upon Lieut. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, commanding general of the Mediterranean Allied Air Forces, by Alexander E. Bogomoloff, Soviet member of tthe Allied Advisory Council for Italy, in recognition of distinguished services in command of American Air Forces in Britain from December, 1942, to January, 1944. The citation said General Eaker made "an invaluable contribution to the success of air operations over Europe."

Italian Liner Roma Hit By American Bombers

Rome, June 25 (AP)—The Italian liner Roma, which had been in the process of conversion into an aircraft carrier, is believed to have suffered considerable damage from a bombing and strafing attack by American Thunderbolts on Genoa harbor June 20, the Mediterranean Allied Air Force announced today.

Conversion of the liner was started by the Italian navy, but since Italy's capitulation little work had been done on the ship. The Thunderbolts scored several hits.

Berlin Reported Being Evacuated

Lisbon, June 25 (AP)—Twenty Hungarian passengers who arrived here tonight on a German airliner said that Nazi authorities had ordered the evacuation of Berlin.

Important Buildings Hit

Hitler's Reichschancellory was among "many important buildings" smashed or damaged "during the most devastating daylight air attack Berlin has ever had, made last Wednesday by American Liberators and Fortresses," the London radio reported today.

"Pictures taken during the most devastating daylight air attack Berlin has ever had, made last Wednesday by American Liberators and Fortresses, show more than 30 concentrations of bombs in the heart of Berlin," the broadcast said.

"They damaged more than 35 separate industrial plants, four railway stations, five marshaling yards, and many important government buildings. These included the Reichschancellory, the Gastapo headquarters, the War Office and propaganda headquarters."

Many Flying Bombs Stopped Over Channel

London, Monday, June 26 (AP)—After a daylight lull, second in a row, the Germans sent more of their flying bombs, some incendiaries, toward England early today, but many were destroyed before they got across the Channel.

fighters and heavy gun fire from ground batteries exploded many of the robots in the air.

The Germans were understood to be trying to open new launching platforms away from the areas now being heavily bombed.

British Road Signs Back; Can't Aid Germans Now

Markers Were Banned When Isles Feared Invasion

LONDON, June 25 (AP).—The British government relaxed today restrictions imposed when invasion threatened the British Isles in 1940 and permitted display of printed signs indicating place names throughout the United Kingdom.

The order—which does not affect blackout regulations—applies to unlighted signs with lettering not exceeding six inches in height and which is not visible from the air. Road signs already are being erected in parts of the country.

Mighty Air Fleets Blast Nazi Targets

Four Great Armadas from Britain Pound Calais Rocket Bases, Smash Bridges and Railways in France—Bombers from Italy Raid Marseille Area.

LONDON, Monday, June 26. — (AP) Five mighty Allied air fleets, numbering 3,500 heavy bombers and fighters, pounded Nazi-held Europe yesterday in one of the war's greatest assaults, smashing German installations from the rocket implacements at Pas-de-Calais to the southern coast of France.

Four of the great air armadas roared out from Britain, the other from Italy. Total sorties probably approached Saturday's 6,000, exclusive of 1,000 by the 15th force operating from Italy into southern France.

Bridges Hit

American Fortresses and Liberators, out twice during the day, returned to the continent during the evening for their sixth raid in two days. About 250 heavies with a like number of escorting fighters attacked several bridges southeast of Paris and numerous airfields, including those at Bretigny and Villacoublay, on the evening run.

Allied losses for the day were placed at 43, including 20 bombers, against 59 Germans out of the skies.

Two of the daylight thrusts — one American and one R.A.F. — were aimed at Pas-de-Calais in one of the heaviest batterings against the launching grounds of Hitler's robot bombs. The third thrust to within 60 miles of the Spanish border, blasting a German fuel dump and nearby airdromes.

The fourth heavy fleet—more than 500 Liberators and Flying Fortresses winging up from bases in Italy—attacked rail lines and bridges both north and west of the French port of Marseille, and oil and other military installations in southern France.

Some 1,000 Flying Fortresses and Liberators escorted by 500 American fighters thundered out toward Spain from Britain, blasting the fuel depot and airdromes near Toulouse and other enemy plane nests in central France including those at Bourges, 125 miles south of Paris, and Avord, 12 miles east of Bourges.

Pas-De-Calais Bombed

Another fleet of some 1,000 heavy bombers—this time R.A.F. Lancasters and Halifaxes—hit Pas-de-Calais for the third time within 18 hours. This was the earliest daylight blow made by the R.A.F. since it returned to day bombings on June 14 after 20 months of night work.

Hardly had that fleet returned when American Liberators, flying the fourth mission by British-based U. S. heavy bombers in less than 36 hours, struck the same area, unloading tons of explosives on at least 12 electric power stations probably supplying the power for launching the rocket bombs.

Other fleets of American medium and light bombers, American and R.A.F. fighter-bombers and Allied fighters kept up the steady support of Allied ground forces by blasting fuel dumps and rail lines behind the lines in Normandy.

By early evening, British-based Allied airmen had blasted at least 49 German planes from the air at the cost of 28 Allied planes including 13 American and two British heavy bombers.

The brunt of the Italy-based assault appeared to have been directed against the main rail lines extending northward and westward from the French Mediterranean port of Marseille.

Targets included those at Sete, coastal city on the Marseille-Bordeaux rail line, and at Avignon on the Marseille-Lyon rail line. Other blows in the raids on bridges, oil and other war installations were struck at Balaruc, a few miles west of Sete, and Le Pontet, northeast of Avignon. Three bridges over the Rhone river in the vicinity of Avignon were bombed also and good results were reported from most targets.

Robot Bombs Active

Flying bombs hurtled across the channel into southern England again Saturday night but were missing from the skies during most of the daylight hours Sunday as they were Saturday for the first time since June 15.

American medium and light bombers struck repeatedly in between the heavy assaults, concentrating on German fuel stores inland from the Cherbourg peninsula where the enemy obviously is expected to renew the pressure after Cherbourg's fall.

Working together, they attacked a fuel dump in the forest of Andaines and other Marauders hit a dump in the forest of Ecouves.

Enemy rail lines also received a going-over in the sustained assault, with one Marauder formation unloading explosives on the oft-battered rail yards at Mezidon, 15 miles southeast of Caen.

Heavy explosions and masses of black smoke arose from the behind-the-lines fuel sites which likely were supply points for the German transport and armored vehicles fighting in Normandy.

Allied fighter bombers joined in the continuous Sunday aerial barrage, spreading over the battle area and far beyond.

Rail Line Hit

American fighter-bombers carried out one of the day's most important attacks when they blasted the rail line between Paris and Orleans in a continuation of the campaign to isolate the northwestern corner of France. They blocked that artery at seven points by ripping up rails at places where they wound through deep cuts.

RAF rocket-firing Typhoons followed the American Marauders over Mezidon and scored hits on rolling stock, tracks and the station.

RAF fighter bombers roared down on other key transport points including the crossings at Conches and Verneuil, while RAF Spitfires covered the beachhead, escorted air transport into Normandy and accompanied the RAF heavy bombers over Pas-De-Calais.

American fighters escorting the Liberators and Fortresses to the air fields and fuel dumps tangled with a number of German planes and shot down 19. Two of the British heavy bombers were lost over Pas-De-Calais, but all American Marauders and Havocs returned from their missions.

Drive On Partisans Announced

London, June 25 (AP)—A German broadcast tonight said the Germans had begun a "major campaign to smash the Partisans out of the mountainous Albanian-Greek frontier area," killing 1,200 Partisans and capturing 800.

REPORTED KILLED IN RAID ON JAPAN

War Correspondent Of Newsweek Named On Radio

London, June 25 (AP)—A Berlin broadcast of a Tokyo dispatch today said a war correspondent of the American magazine Newsweek named "Shenko" was killed on June 16 along with the crew of a B-29 Superfortress shot down over southern Japan.

The broadcast did not name the crew members.

Editors of Newsweek were notified last week by the War Department that William T. Shenkel, of Silver Spring, Md., a war correspondent for the magazine, was missing from the B-29 raid over Japan.

A spokesman today said no further word had been received of the missing correspondent.

The 38-year-old correspondent was a native of Akron, Ohio. Married and the father of two children, he had been with Newsweek since 1938, and previously had been on the staffs of Cleveland and Akron newspapers.

JAPANESE TROOPS PIERCE HENGYANG IN HEAVY ATTACK

CHUNGKING, June 25 — (AP) Japanese troops plunging down the Canton-Hankow railway have pierced the outer defenses of Hengyang, most important city yet attacked by the enemy since the fall of Canton and Hankow in 1938, the Chinese high command announced tonight.

Chinese military men were taking a gloomy view of the developing battle for the city, fall of which might upset Allied plans to use China as a base of attack on Japan.

Less than 200 miles of the railway remained in Chinese hands southward from Hengyang to north of Canton, along with a few small gaps north of Hankow.

The Chinese charged in a later communique that Japanese east of Hengyang Saturday night used poison gas against the defenders, inflicting heavy casualties, and added the charge that on June 16 and 17 poison gas also had been used at Ningsiang and at Changsha before the fall of the latter city. The communique said that American liaison officers had taken photographs of the casualties.

Since early spring the Japanese have taken more than 575 miles of the overland 1,000-mile route from Peiping to Canton. If finally consolidated in Japanese hands the route would split China in two and would free the enemy of worry over southward sea supply lanes now gravely menaced by the American Pacific campaign which has reached to Saipan.

Evacuees already were reported pouring from points on the path of a feared Japanese advance southward in the maritime province of Kwangtung. Several American agencies have transferred from Kwangtung to Kunming in Yunnan, and about 50 British missionaries already have left Kwangtung areas, it was reported.

Apparently bent upon encircling Hengyang, as they did Changsha, one column of Japanese stabbed to within four miles east of Hengyang. Others were about six miles northeast and nine and a half miles east, after taking Leichishih, 20 miles to the north and crossing the Mi river. Heavy fighting raged in all these areas.

To the north of these battlefronts, the broad 100-mile front from Siangsiang in the west beyond Liling in the east underwent little positional change, although Chinese forces reaching a point six miles north of Siangsiang were engaged by the Japanese in bitter fighting, the communique said.

To the east, in Kiangsi province near the Hunan border, the enemy broadened this front by entering Pingsiang, about 28 miles east of Liling.

American 14th air force planes have been thrown into the Hunan fighting during the past few days. In the area of Changsha, north of the battlefronts, troop concentrations, river supply craft and Japanese installations were attacked. Further south P-40's of the Chinese-American composite wing, which flew to the support of beleaguered Hengyang, bombed and strafed enemy troopships and other craft along the Siang river. Troop barges were hit, inflicting numerous casualties, a communique of Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters said.

[The Berlin radio quoted a report from Nanking that the central American air base at Kunming in central Yunnan, 50 miles south-southwest of the present Hunan fighting, and the advanced base at Kwelin in Kwangsi, less than 100 miles south of Hengyang, both were supplied from Hengyang. A DNB report said main contingents of the American Air Force already appeared to have been shifted farther away to the northwest.]

Hengyang lies about 375 miles southeast of the Chinese wartime capital of Chungking.

Allies in Burma Enter Mogaung From 3 Sides

Chinese-British Force Cuts Way Into Japanese Base; Myitkyina Battle Rages

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, June 25. (AP)—Chinese and British troops have stormed into the Japanese North Burma base of Mogaun on three sides, seizing an important stretch of railway between the Mogaung station and the railway bridge over the river, Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's headquarters announced tonight.

Elements of Gurkha and British regiments broke into the town from the east and captured the bridge and rail stretch, while Major General W. D. A. Lentaigne's Chindits assailed the base from the south and Chinese troops pierced the outer defenses both north and south of the city, the bulletin said.

At the same time, American troops continued their slugging advance from the north toward the heart of the besieged North Burma Japanese bastion of Myitkyina, thirty-five miles east of Mogaung.

This advance drove south along the Maingna ferry road, in the face of Japanese machine-gun and mortar fire, and to the north, other Americans astride the Radhapur road have advanced to a point one mile south of the junction of the Sumprabum and Mogaung roads.

Of three important Japanese bases in North Burma, Myitkyina and Mogaung are now under attack from the inside, while the third, Kamaing, twenty miles north of Mogaung, already has fallen.

In India, British troops thrust twenty to thirty miles north of Imphal and east of the Kohima road in swift pursuit of the fleeing Japanese, recently routed completely from the Kohima-Imphal road.

Southwest of Imphal in the Bishenpur area Allied forces attacked a road block on the Silchar track. Here the Royal Air Force gave valuable support to ground forces, scoring numerous direct hits on enemy tanks. The R. A. F. also was active along the Tiddim road, where heavy bombers successfully attacked a target.

American planes attacked military objectives in the Mogaung sector Friday.

Foe Penned In at Sungshan

CHUNGKING, June 25 (AP).—Chinese troops have succeeded in compressing the Japanese further within the restricted and fortified area of Sungshan, an enemy strongpoint which must be cleared before the Chinese can use any part of the Burma Road west of the Salween River, the high command announced tonight.

Sungshan, northeast of Lungling on the Salween River, is a strongpoint, with reinforced concrete pillboxes encircled by wire entanglements.

The Chinese stormed and captured two pillboxes, pressing the enemy further back, the Chinese communique said, and at the same time placed heavy artillery fire on the stronghold.

The Russians also took the large railway station of Bogushevskaya, 24 miles south, and more than 300 other places.

The Vitebsk-Lepel highway was cut in the area of Gnezdeloviche 20 miles west and southwest of Vitebsk, and the Russians there joined forces with troops swinging down from the north, who already had cut off Nazi escape routes to the west.

cing that American ground forces on Saipan were advancing northward against strong enemy opposition, disclosed these additional Japanese setbacks, previously unreported:

A light carrier damaged by seven 500-pound bombs.

A heavy cruiser and a light cruiser damaged.

One hundred and nine planes shot down, not included in earlier claims.

The major engagements in this series of battles for the Marianas were an attack by Japanese carrier planes on an American naval task force off Guam June 18, and a raid by American carrier planes upon retreating units of the enemy fleet, far out toward the Philippines June 19.

In the June 18 battle, 402 Japanese aircraft were destroyed, an all-time record for any theater for numbers of planes downed in one action.

Of the 402 planes, 369 were shot down by American planes, and 18 by ships' gunners. The remaining 15 were destroyed on the ground.

Twenty seven American planes went down also in that engagement, with 18 pilots and six crewmen lost. Most of the enemy fliers perished with their craft.

Sink Carrier

Of the 402 planes, 369 were shot Adm. Marc A. Mitscher's carrier force struck at the enemy fleet, sinking a carrier, a destroyer and two tankers, and damaging a battleship, four carriers, three cruisers, two destroyers and three tankers. An enemy tanker previously reported destroyed was added, in today's revised list, to the damaged group after pilots' reports indicated it may have survived the bombings.

Today's announcement also revised American plane losses for June 19 upward from 49 to 95. All but 22 of the pilots and 27 of the air crewmen were rescued in some of the most brilliant and daring water recoveries in the history of naval aviation.

Headquarters stressed the point that the total of 747 enemy planes and 30 ships destroyed included not merely the two major engagements but all Marianas-area actions from June 10 to 23.

On Saipan island Marines and Army troops advanced 500 to 800 yards yesterday on the western flank and in an attack on entrenched Japanese on Mt. Tapotchau.

Strong enemy opposition continues Nimitz said. The bulk of the original 20,000 or more enemy defenders remain in the sector beginning around Mt. Tapotchau and extending northward.

Well prepared for a suicidal defense, the Japanese continue fighting desperately with artillery and mortars from caves and crevices which are difficult either to locate or knock out.

The enemy threw an unspecified number of aircraft into the battle for Saipan Friday but the communique reported they did only minor damage.

U. S. Casualties Light

Several landing craft suffered minor damage in an attack on transports, Nimitz reported. In the evening a small flight bombed American-occupied areas in southern Saipan but American casualties were very light.

Nimitz's revised figures increase to 402 the total Japanese planes downed in the enemy's futile attack June 18 on Mitscher's Task Force 58 off Guam.

This is an all-time record for any theater for numbers of planes downed in one action.

American carrier pilots were credited with downing 369 of these in the air and 15 on the ground. Ships' gunners were credited with 18.

American losses in that action were 18 pilots, six air crewmen and 27 planes.

Nimitz said that in the June 19 attack on the big Japanese fleet a small enemy light carrier not previously reported damaged now is known to have received seven 500-pound bomb hits.

He also said one heavy cruiser and one light cruiser previously not reported hit now are known to have been damaged.

New information increased to 26 the number of enemy aircraft destroyed in the weak defense of the enemy sea force. The previous estimate was 17 to 22.

U. S. Losses Revised

Revision of American losses to 95 planes with 49 personnel virtually doubled the preliminary figure of 49 aircraft but still was a very low expenditure for the damage inflicted.

Newer figures nearly doubled enemy losses in the American sweep over Iwo island in the Kazan group Friday, raising the destroyed plane total to 116 from 60. In addition 11 Japanese aircraft probably were downed.

The American loss was five fighters instead of four.

In coordinated strikes the Seventh Army air force Liberators bombed Truk June 23 and Army, Navy and Marine aircraft continued their neutralizing attacks on other Japanese bases in the Marshalls and Carolines.

losses by Admiral Marc A. Mitscher's carrier force, which sank or damaged nearly a score of Japanese ships June 19, had been increased to ninety-five, with twenty-two pilots and twenty-seven air crewmen lost. The first report of American planes lost to enemy anti-aircraft fire or in landing in the sea because of fuel shortage was forty-nine.

Task Force Sets Record

The revised figures increase to 402 the total of Japanese planes downed in the enemy's futile attack June 18 on Mitscher's Task Force 58 off Guam. That is an all-time record for any theater of the war for number of planes downed in one action.

American carrier pilots were credited with destroying 369 of the enemy planes in the air and fifteen on the ground. Ships' gunners were credited with eighteen. American losses in that action were eighteen pilots, six air crewmen and twenty-seven planes.

Newer figures nearly doubled enemy losses in the American sweep over Iwo Island, in the Kazan group, Friday, raising the destroyed plane total to 116 from sixty. In addition, eleven Japanese aircraft probably were downed. The American loss was five fighters instead of four, as previously announced.

Not mentioned in the recapitulation, because it did not involve air action, was the topedoing of a 28,000-ton Japanese aircraft carrier by an American submarine June 18. The carrier was hit by three torpedoes and was reported "probably sunk."

Admiral Nimitz previously had disclosed that the Japanese force included six carriers. Thus, assuming that the submarine-damaged carrier was part of the enemy fleet west of the Marianas, all of the carriers in it apparently were either sunk or damaged—five by air action and one by submarine.

On Saipan Island marines and Army troops advanced 500 to 800 yards yesterday on the western flank and in an attack on intrenched Japanese on Mt. Tapotchau.

Strong enemy opposition continues, Nimitz said. The bulk of the original 20,000 or more enemy defenders remain in the sector beginning around Mt. Tapotchau and extending northward.

Prepared for a suicidal defense, the Japanese continue fighting desperately with artillery and mortars from caves and crevices which are difficult either to locate or to knock out.

The enemy used an unspecified number of planes in the battle for Saipan Friday but did only minor damage. Severan American landing craft suffered damage. In the evening a small flight bombed American-occupied areas in southern Saipan, but American casualties were light.

In co-ordinated strikes 7th Army Air Force Liberators bombed Truk June 23, and Army, Navy and marine aircraft continued their neutralizing attacks on other Japanese bases in the Marshalls and Carolines.

Japanese Claim 11 Carriers

In a Domei broadcast from Tokyo the Japanese claimed yesterday that thus far in the Mariana naval-air battle United States losses included eleven aircraft carriers, four battleships and six cruisers sunk or damaged and more than 400 planes destroyed, The Associated Press said.

The broadcast said seventy United States fighters and bombers appeared over the Bonin Islands, north of the Marianas, on Saturday and claimed Japanese fighters shot down thirty-seven.

A Berlin broadcast, quoting a Domei dispatch, said that since Saturday morning the Japanese Air Force had sunk two carriers southeast of the Bonin Island group and a 10,000-ton transport east of Saipan.

MacArthur's Bombers Strike Yap And 14 Other Objectives

JUN 26 1944 SPENCER

Advanced Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, Monday, June 26 (AP). Maintaining their intense pressure against Japanese flank air bases which might menace the Saipan invasion, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's bombers smashed again at Yap Island, 650 miles southwest of the Marianas, and hit 14 other objectives in widespread raids, headquarters announced today.

Forty-five tons of bombs were rained on the Yap airdrome Friday, which blanketed the major Japanese airfields between New Guinea and Saipan. The bombers also lashed at Truk, Woleai and Palau in the Caroline Islands, and airstrips on New Guinea, Timor and New Britain.

Parked Planes Destroyed

Several parked planes were destroyed on Yap. Ten Japanese planes intercepted, and one of the assaulting Liberators was missing. It was the second consecutive strike at Yap by land-based planes. Liberators the previous day destroyed 12 and damaged ten grounded Japanese aircraft.

A spokesman for MacArthur said the operations were designed to pin down planes which the Japanese might attempt to use for interferring with the Saipan battle.

A number of aircraft also were destroyed at Sorong, at the northwestern extremity of Dutch New Guinea, described as the last effective Japanese air base on that land mass. The communique added "there was no interception" when Liberators bombed Jefman Field.

NIMITZ REVEALS NEW JAP LOSSES

JUN 26 1944 MCMURTRY

747 Enemy Planes, 30 Ships, 13 Barges Destroyed in Saipan Battles.

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, June 26—(AP) In some of the greatest sea-and-air battles of this war—one of which saw more enemy planes spin earthward than ever before were destroyed in a single engagement—Japan has lost 747 airplanes, 30 ships and 13 barges, Adm. Chester W. Nimitz announced today.

Two additional enemy ships, probably were sunk and 51 were damaged. The series of battles, fought between the Marianas and the Philippines June 10 to 23 in connection with the invasion of Saipan island, cost the Americans 151 airplanes and superficial damage to four ships, including two carriers and a battleship hit in the June 18 encounter.

Nimitz Puts Enemy Ship Toll at 30 Sunk and 51 Damaged in 10 Days

Task Force 58 Fells 402 Planes in Battle

American Air Losses 95; Troops on Saipan Gain 500 Yards, Foe in Caves

By The Associated Press

PEARL HARBOR, June 25.—Japan's attempted defense of the Marianas and Bonin Islands has cost the Japanese thus far 747 planes destroyed, thirty ships sunk, fifty-one damaged and two probably sunk and thirteen barges destroyed.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Pacific Fleet commander in chief, today issued a communique revising figures of losses inflicted on the enemy in the two weeks June 10 to 23. He added 109 planes shot down, three ships damaged—a light carrier, a heavy cruiser and a light cruiser—and transferred a tanker previously reported sunk to the "damaged" list.

Two Cruisers Damaged

Nimitz said that in the June 19 attack on a Japanese fleet a small enemy light carrier not previously reported damaged now is known to have received seven 500-pound bomb hits. He also said one heavy cruiser and one light cruiser previously not reported hit now are known to have been damaged.

New information increased to twenty-six the number of enemy aircraft destroyed in the weak defense by the enemy sea force. The previous estimate was seventeen to twenty-two.

6 Jap Airfields Found In Mexico

JUN 26 1944

Mexico ity, June 25 (AP)—Leopoldo Toquero Dimarias, military writed for the newspaper Excelsior

SEE AOD ON 16570.

today reported that six camouflaged airfields built by Japanese farmers had been discovered by Mexican military authorities in Lower California.

Toquero, who returned recently from an army sponsored tour of Lower California, did not say when the airfields were discovered, but there were rumors shortly after Mexico entered the war that they existed.

The writer, who did not give the source of his information, said two of the landing fields were near El Carrizal, a few miles from the Mexican naval station on Magdalena Bay. One of these, he said, had a landing strip nearly four miles long. The others, he added, were in the Liral Valley.

Trees and underbrush on the landing strip had been cleared, Toquero said, and salt applied to the tree tops to make sure they did not sprout again. The surface of the field then was planted with fine weeds so the strip would not be to oapparent.

Japanese building the fields ostensibly were engaged in cotton cultivation nearby, Toquero said. After they were discovered, in a manner he did not disclose, the Japanese were sent to the immigration camp at Prote, on the mainland, he reported.

Argentina Seizes Allied Nationals

Montevideo, Uruguay, June 25 (AP)—The English language newspaper Southern Star reported today that Argentine authorities had arrested during the past few days more than 30 citizens of the United Nations, most of whom were released after lengthy questioning.

Associated Press Correspondent Stanley Ross was among those detained, the newspaper said in its dispatch quoting private sources. It added that Argentine authorities failed to give any reason for the arrests.

Most of those arrested, the Southern Star said, were "members of the inter-Allied committee in Argentina, including its president and organizer, Merwin F. Ryan, a British subject and general manager of the Pacific Railway."

Others detained besides Ross and Ryan included David Hamwee, British secretary of the committee, which is a non-profit organization helping the Allied war effort; Isabel Ewing, an Englishwoman and Ryan's secretary; Sam Pekelharing, a Dutchman working for the United Press, and S. S. Smith and Dr. Peter Laqueur, also Dutch subjects.

The newspaper said that Dr. Laqueur, Ryan and Hamwee still were under arrest but the others had been released.

Trading Planes For Air Bases Is Peace Plan

Senate Group Proposes Using Military Surplus in International Swaps

WASHINGTON, June 25 (AP).—Post-war trading of surplus military airplanes for landing rights and whatever else we need from other nations was recommended today by a Senate subcommittee.

The war contracts subcommittee of the Military Committee opposed wholesale extension of airline routes, indiscriminate establishment of feeder lines or widespread tramp air cargo operations without full consideration of need and feasibility. The mere existence of a large number of war-produced planes will create a temptation for such expansion, the report said, but the Civil Aeronautics Board should be the deciding agency.

Trades to Serve Nation's Needs

"It is important . . . that our objectives and plans be determined in advance," the committee said, "so that we may be in a position to offer our surplus aircraft in exchange for those bases, landing rights, strategic minerals or other considerations which may best fit our national needs.

"Gifts should not be made merely for the sake of good neighbors; experience casts doubt upon the creation of lasting good will by such gifts."

Chairman James E. Murray, Democrat, of Montana, estimated in releasing the report that the Army Air Forces at the end of the war will have billions of dollars worth of unneeded equipment.

While the government should get as much as possible for the planes it sells, the report said, this consideration is secondary compared with the "vital need for military preparedness and international accord."

Wholesale Scrapping Opposed

The group frowned on cash sales to small foreign nations, saying such deals would deplete foreign dollar reserves.

Recalling criticism that arose when American planes were burned in France after the last war, the committee opposed wholesale scrapping.

To avoid interference with experiments and new production, the report suggested that distribution of wartime planes and equipment end within three to five years after peace comes.

The subcommittee opposed general sale to civilians of combat models, in the interest of air safety.

The report was prepared by the Harvard University Graduate School of Business Administration.

U. S. Building Secret Fleet Of Transports

New Attack Troop Carriers Can Load 1,000 Men With Full Equipment

WASHINGTON, June 25 (AP).—A big fleet of new and deadly attack-transports, each capable of landing 1,000 men with a full complement of tanks and heavy guns, is under construction in American shipyards, it was disclosed tonight.

Several hundred of the highly secret vessels will be built.

Rear Admiral Howard L. Vickery, Vice-Chairman of the Maritime Commission, declined to answer questions about the craft, but he indicated they are destined to play a major role in the destruction of Japan. Concurrently, he predicted that the Japanese, already hard pressed to defend their stolen empire, will be knocked out of the war in 1945. "I don't see how they can stand up under attack much longer," he said.

The attack-transports are unique in maritime planning. They are a composite type, patterned on experiences of landing craft in past Allied operations, and are designed to overcome shortcomings of types now in use. One reported feature is an exceptionally shallow draft for operations close to shore and around the coral reefs so prevalent in the atolls of the Pacific.

Each vessel is a small army and navy in itself and tough enough to operate on its own if convoy protection is weakened. Each is heavily armed against air or underseas attack.

Work on the vessels has cut deeply into the output of the fast, cargo-carrying Victory ships. Only sixteen Victories were delivered in May and not more than twenty will come off the ways this month. Construction of the slower Liberties has not been interrupted, although that type will be abandoned at the end of the year.

The Victories are expected to serve as the backbone for the nation's post-war Merchant Marine, and Admiral Vickery emphasized they will not be junked as were the hastily built vessels of World War I. He pointed out they will prove very useful in the "tramp" trade where cargo-carrying capacity, rather than speed, is the important factor.

JAPS REPORTED TAKING OPIUM

WASHINGTON, June 25 (AP) Hints come out of Tokyo that portions of the Japanese army may have fallen victim to the opium curse the Japs themselves spread for profit in China and other countries invaded by Nippon.

Frequent broadcasts announce discovery of new drugs said to break the narcotic habit more effectively than any other known medicine. The news agency Domei says opium taking is a "filthy" habit and brazenly describes it as having been introduced "from the west."

American army units in the Pacific have concluded that at least some Japanese troops must have become addicted to the opium Nipponese profiteers introduced in conquered lands. Ordinarily the opium concession is one of the first business ventures undertaken by the civilian puppet governments or military dictatorships set up by the Japs. Some observers have ascribed to the Japanese an intention to weaken the population of overrun areas by spreading drug addiction.

"Competent reports have long indicated," says an army unit's newspaper just received from the Pacific, "that the Jap soldier, weary of the hardships of war, has often fallen prey to the drug in an effort to get the thrill it supposedly gives at first.

"Jap interest in a cure for the habit, strange in view of the fact they have helped to spread it more successfully than any other agency in the modern world, indicates that the dope problem may have grown serious in their army."

Admiral Nimitz' Son Wins Navy Gold Star

Washington, June 25 (AP)—Lieut. Com. Chester W. Nimitz, Jr., 29-year-old son of the commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet, has been awarded the Gold Star in lieu of a second Silver Star Medal for "conspicuous heroism" and navigation skill during patrols in enemy waters, the navy announced today.

Admiral Nimitz's son, whose home is in Vallejo, Cal., was cited for indispensable services in "actions resulting in sinking enemy shipping and in damaging other vessels."

"His skill in navigation enabled his vessel to operate successfully close inshore in the hazardous enemy-controlled waters," his citation stated. "His conduct as executive officer contributed greatly to the high state of morale of the ship."

Whereabouts of the action was not disclosed.

While the navy did not identify the branch of the navy in which young Nimitz was serving at the time he earned the Gold Star, he was a submarine officer when he was awarded the Silver Star medal.

FIRST INVASION INJURED BACK

2 Casualties Arrive In U. S. By Hospital Plane

Washington, June 25 (AP)—The first two wounded soldiers to arrive in this country from the invasion beachhead in France were identified today by the War Department as Lieut. Col. Michael C. Murphy of La Fayette, Ind., and Pfc. James A. Lester, Glio, Mich.

The two arrived last night at Mitchel Field, New York, on an Air Transport Command hospital plane and were taken to a near-by hospital. Their names were withheld until the next of kin could be notified.

Murphy was injured when a glider skidded into a tree and Lester, who is in the Corps of Engineers, was hit by shrapnel, the department reported.

Hurt During First Minutes

Murphy was injured near Ste. Mere Eglise during the first minutes of the invasion on June 6. Lester was wounded while landing on a beach during the first wave of the assault.

In charge of the men on their return to the United States were Capt. Willard Haynes, Des Moines, Iowa, flight surgeon; Betty R. Theobold, Dayton, Ohio, flight nurse, and Capt. James W. Burns, New York city, pilot.

Murphy was married last March 24. Lester's father is listed as Thomas E. Lester, of Clio.

The two men made the Atlantic crossing with 16 other casualties who were wounded in pre-invasion action.

Chinese Again Raise Poison Gas Charge

Washington, June 25 (AP)—A Chinese charge today that the Japanese had used poison gas in three recent instances brought to attention previous warnings by President Roosevelt that retaliation awaited any nation resorting to such "desperate and barbarous" warfare.

In a formal statement a year ago the President promised "full and swift retaliation in kind" for any use of gas and asserted that "I feel obliged now to warn the Axis armies and the Axis peoples in Europe and in Asia that the terrible consequences of any use of these inhumane methods on their part will be brought down swiftly and surely upon their heads."

The British Government has volced a similar warning.

Officials said that as of tonight there had been no official information on the Chinese charges.

Arnold Says Air Power Will Grow Until Victory

Asserts Allies Will Soon Hold Superiority Over Japan

WASHINGTON, June 25 (AP).—"Today we can say to our enemies: the days of wrath have really begun." So said General H. H. Arnold, Army Air Forces chief, today.

Just back from a visit to the European battle front, General Arnold said during the Army Hour broadcast that the aerial superiority we now hold over the German air force will be maintained and increased till the day of final victory.

"Our aerial superiority will soon be secured over Japan. The B-29 bombing of last week was only the beginning."

The general made his comments in accepting from the National Safety Council as "S" pennant as an addition to a safety award the Army Air Forces won last year.

Blow at Reich Oil Plants Cited

WASHINGTON, June 25 (AP)—Photographs show that the American air attack on twelve German synthetic oil plants last Tuesday was "one of the most effective single blows ever struck at the Nazi war machine," the War Department reported today.

Col. Albert L. Warner, chief of the War Intelligence Division of the Department's Bureau of Public Relations, gave the report during his weekly war news summary on an Army Hour broadcast.

"German airplanes, tanks and trucks don't run so well when the oil runs more slowly," Colonel Warner said as to the effect of the Eighth Air Force's attack.

American air headquarters in London previously had reported that Flying Fortresses and Liberators dumped more than 2,500 tons of bombs on the plants around Haonver, Hamburg, Magdeburg and Poelitz, and a tank depot near Magdeburg.

EUROPE EYED BY METHODISTS

Bishop Garber To Reconstruct Geneva Jurisdiction

Atlantic City, June 25 (AP)—The Methodist Church, with plans drawn for a world crusade for peace, religion and tolerance, has assigned one of its newly elected bishops, an outstanding educator, to reconstruct the Geneva (Switzerland) jurisdiction of the church covering eight European countries and North Africa.

Dr. Paul N. Garber, dean of the Duke University School of Theology, was named to Geneva by the Southeastern Jurisdictional Conference meeting here. Other bishops also were assigned to church duties for the next four years.

Under "Crusade For Christ"

Dr. Garber's jurisdiction, which is under the supervision of the Southeastern division of the church, embraces Italy, Switzerland, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Belgium, Bulgaria, Hungary, Poland and North Africa.

He will go abroad as soon as conditions permit, operating under the Methodist Church's five-point "Crusade for Christ" program, which includes raising $25,000,000 in America for restoration of foreign church properties.

Dr. Garber and Dr. Costen J. Harrell, pastor of West End Church at Nashville, Tenn., were elected bishops of the church by the conference to fill two vacancies in the Southeastern jurisdiction created by retirements.

Other Bishopric Assignments

Bishop Harrell was assigned to the Birmingham (Ala.) area. Other assignments were:

Bishop Arthur G. Moore, senior of the jurisdiction, reassigned to Atlanta.

Bishop Paul B. Kern, reassigned to Nashville.

Bishop William W. Peele, reassigned to Richmond.

Bishop Clare Purcell, reassigned to Charlotte.

Bishop J. L. Decell, transferred from Birmingham to Jackson, Mississippi

Bishop W. T. Watkins, transferred from Columbia, S. C., to Louisville, Ky.

A change in areas placed the South Carolina, Upper South Carolina and Western North Carolina conferences under Charlotte, with discontinuance of the Columbia bishopric The North Carolina and Virginia conferences were grouped under Richmond.

200th Anniversary

The conference today observed the 200th anniversary of the first Methodist conference called by John Wesley in England, with thousands attending a general program at Municipal Auditorium at which Dr. Ralph W. Sockman, of Christ Church, New York, spoke.

Business matters and consecration of the two new bishops are scheduled for tomorrow, final day of the conference, which opened June 22.

PATTERSON CALLS INDIVIDUAL TO WAR

JUN 25 1944

Under-Secretary Says on Union Class a Personal Obligation in Fight for Freedom

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., June 25 (AP)—Freedom is "won and saved by individuals who know its true value to the soul of man," Under-Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson told members of the graduating class at the 149th commencement of Union College today.

"Those who go through life attempting to avoid their share in its preservation are bound to lose the very substance of life itself," Mr. Patterson said.

Declaring that the graduates had an obligation which was "no light burden to carry," he continued:

"Because in years of apparent peace, in the Nineteen Twenties and Thirties, too many forgot, or would not accept this obligation, we are locked in a war that, for a time, threatened to lose for us our heritage as free men.

"Because we had fighting allies and because our common danger spurred us to a terrific productive effort, the threat of disaster that stared us in the face in the months following Pearl Harbor was averted.

"There are unfortunately some who are too willing to pass the winning of this war into the hands of the fighting men alone. In the thoughtlessness of these mistaken few can rest the seeds of a discord that may cost us time and lives.

"As long as there is a battle-line it is our duty to be on it, or giving it all the support that lies within our individual powers. Only in this way can our nation emerge fit for the mighty effort that must be made to make this a world of decency."

The college awarded degrees to fourteen members of the third graduating group of this academic year and Capt. Arthur S. Adams of the Navy Bureau of Personnel presented V-12 certificates to sixty-seven apprentice seamen.

Dr. Dixon Ryan Fox, president of Union, conferred honorary degrees as follows:

Doctor of Science—Captain Adams and Chauncey G. Suits of the General Electric Company's research laboratory.

Doctor of Laws—Bartlett Arkell (in absentia), head of the Beechnut Packing Company, and George D. Stoddard, State Commissioner of Education.

Mr. Patterson, an alumnus of 1912, did not receive a degree because he is a trustee, but Dr. Fox cited him as one "commanding the respect and gratitude of an embattled nation."

Terms Many Subs Needed To Go After Jap Navy

Groton, Conn., June 25 (AP)—The submarine Brill slid down the Electric Boat Company's ways into the Thames river today, the 13th to be launched here this year and the second in as many weeks. Mrs. F. S. Low, of Washington, whose husband, Rear Admiral Low, is on the staff of the commander of the United States Fleet, served as sponsor.

During the pre-launching program, Capt. Leon J. Huffman, construction and training officer at the New London submarine base, told workers that judging by the events of the past week in the Pacific, if the enemy "won't come out to fight we're going to have to go in after him."

"And that, my friends," asserted Huffman, 'is going to take a lot of submarines. Let me make a bargain with you. You send them up and we'll send them out."

2 Escaped Nazis Recaptured

MILWAUKEE, June 25 (AP).—Two German prisoners of war who escaped alst night from a branch prison camp at Columbus, Wis., were captured today by Thomas Smith, fifty-nine years old, village marshal at Rio, Wis., about fifteen miles from the camp, it was announced by the Milwaukee office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

DEWEY'S TOTAL CONTINUES CLIMB

JUN 25 1944

Pennsylvania Swings to New Yorker, Kansas Also Backs Him

CHICAGO, June 25.—(AP) Pennsylvania put its mighty bloc of 70 convention votes on the line tonight for Gov. Thomas E. Dewey for the Republican presidential nomination and boosted to 535 the total of delegates claimed for the New Yorker or pledged to him.

That was six more than the 529 needed to nominate, but of the 535 total 276 were in the "claimed" category—leaving a possibility that some of them might go elsewhere.

First Ballot Victory Seen

The action of the Pennsylvania delegation at a brief caucus coincided with growing talk among rank and file delegates that "it's Dewey on the first ballot" at the party's national convention opening tomorrow.

Pennsylvania was one of a half a dozen states holding convention eve caucuses. It voted unanimously to instruct the delegation chairman, Governor Edward Martin, to toss all its strength to the New York governor.

The Kansas delegation, previously uninstructed, also determined to throw all its votes on the mounting heap for Dewey. Missouri voted him 19 of its 30, and gave four to Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio. (Two delegates did not vote and five were absent).

Then when Pennsylvania came through for neighbor Dewey, it lifted his total of pledged and claimed delegates to 538, against 75 for Bricker.

California Delegates Arrive

California's 50-delegate representation had rolled into town in midmorning, apparently in a key position to swing a nomination to Dewey. But as the day wore on, it appeared that California's caucus tomorrow might be too late to do anything but add to a conclusive lead for the New Yorker.

Even in the face of these developments, supporters of Governor Bricker continued to campaign vigorously. They conceded Dewey nothing and challenged computations of delegate line-ups that showed him comfortably ahead.

And the camp of Lt. Com. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota still declared his name would be put in nomination.

Illinois started the jockeying for position on the Dewey bandwagon last night when its 59-vote delegation decided to give 50 to the New Yorker and five to Bricker on the convention's first roll call.

Solid sentiment was building up behind Governor Earl Warren of California for the vice-presidential nomination. But he, too, was insisting he wanted no place anywhere on the national ticket.

Bricker turned up at Stassen headquarters early tonight and talked briefly to an informal gathering of the Minnesota delegation. Stassen forces denied it was any effort to start a coalition "stop Dewey" movement.

The tenor of Bricker's remarks was that the midwest might be ignored on the ticket this year when "the Republican renaissance began in the midwest in 1936" with Stassen's election as governor of Minnesota and his own elevation to the gubernatorial post in Ohio.

Headquarters Opened

Dewey headquarters were opened formally at noon in a ballroom at the Stevens hotel. Center of interest were a dozen attractive Chicago girls dispensing "Draft Dewey" badges and posing for pictures.

At the same time, Bricker held a pep meeting down the corridor in another ballroom and heard Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio urge the state delegation "to go out and sell John Bricker."

Representative Clarence Brown, Bricker's convention floor manager, told the delegation he wasn't "too impressed" by the Illinois swing toward Dewey. He contended that Illinois delegates were not pledged and could vote any way they pleased.

Afterword, the delegation voted to ask the convention to let Bricker and "other candidates" address it before nominating speeches are made. Bricker is the only candidate on the convention scene.

At Stassen headquarters, Senator Joseph H. Ball of Minnesota said plans were unaltered to let the name of the former Minnesota governor go before the convention. But he conceded that the outlook was "pretty tough." Stassen supporters claim 50 to 60 votes on the first roll call.

Delegates still were piling into town throughout the day, whopping it up for favorites, bedecking themselves with ribbons and buttons, and overrunning hotels, restaurants and transportation facilities.

Platform makers in sub-committees were carpentering together foreign policy, farm, labor and post-war business planks. Gov. Walter E. Edge of New Jersey, in an address to his state's 35-vote delegation, described as "weasel-worded and ambiguous, an original draft of the foreign relations plank.

This pledged the use of "peace forces" to put down military aggression. It has since been revised by a resolutions sub-committee but in what manner has not been disclosed.

"We have the power, influence and responsibility to try to maintain peace," Edge said. "We've got to have force to maintain it. There's no use talking about 'peace forces.'"

CONVENTION TALK BY BRICKER URGED

JUN 25 1944

Ohio Delegation Sees Advantage In Address By Governor

Chicago, June 25 (AP)—Girding for a last ditch fight for the Presidential nomination of Gov. John W. Bricker, the Ohio delegation decided today to ask convention managers to permit Ohio's favorite son and other potential candidates or their representatives to address the convention.

Delegation leaders acknowledged they had an uphill battle but urged delegates to disregard claims of overwhelming strength of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York and fight to the finish.

Governor Bricker, addressing an Ohio delegate caucus briefly, said he didn't think "any State represents the sentiment of the nation as strongly as Ohio" in a desire for a change in governmental policy.

Could Sweep Convention

"The New Deal and President Roosevelt are out of touch and out of step with American principles," Bricker declared.

The proposal to seek permission for Governor Bricker to address the convention was made by Representative-at-Large George H. Bender, of Cleveland, who said:

"If Bricker were given the opportunity he would sweep the convention."

Bender did not say so but he possibly had in mind the "Cross of Gold and Crown of Thorns" speech of William Jennings Bryan in 1896 which won him the Democratic Presidential nomination.

Representative Clarence J. Brown, of Blanchester, floor manager of the Ohio delegation, told the caucus that the fight neither has been won or lost as yet but that he still was hopeful that Bricker would be the nominee. He said there still were sufficient unpledged delegates to swing the convention.

In Fight To Finish

Brown criticized reports that 50 members of the Illinois delegation had swung to Governor Dewey. He said many of the 50 had told him they were still free to vote for any candidate they wished to support.

"We're going to back Governor Bricker to the limit," said Brown. "There's no quitting in Governor Bricker and there's no quitting in the Ohio delegation. We're going to slug it out."

Senator Robert A. Taft said he thought a majority of the convention delegates "would rather vote for Bricker than for any other candidate."

Former Gov. Myers Y. Cooper, delegate at large, said: "We are in a real fight and the odds are against us, but the battle still can be won."

JIM FARLEY'S WIFE MAY SUPPORT GOP

Says She Expects To Vote For Party's Nominee

Chicago, June 25 (AP)—Mrs. James A. Farley, wife of the former Democratic national chairman and Postmaster General, is here to watch the Republican National Convention, and she expects to vote for its Presidential nominee, she said today.

"That is," she explained, "if President Roosevelt runs again.

"If the Democrats nominate someone else, I might not vote Republican, but I'm against a fourth term."

Farley In Mexico

Mrs. Farley arrived this morning. She said she did not expect to have any part except as a spectator.

Farley will not join her, she remarked, adding that he is in Mexico on business.

Farley managed President Roosevelt's first two campaigns, but broke with him over the third-term issue and resigned as Democratic national chairman in 1940.

Pressure Of Business Cited

Just a few weeks ago, Farley stepped out as New York State Democratic chairman. He gave as his reason the pressure of business demands on his time.

Friends said, however, that Farley had made up his mind that President Roosevelt would be nominated and did not wish to have any place of leadership in the party organization during a fourth-term campaign.

Later in the day, Mrs. Farley announced she and her husband have hotel reservations here for the Democratic convention. Farley is a delegate-at-large from New York State in a delegation which is not pledged to a unit vote.

Cooperation Of Parties In Foreign Policy Asked

Chicago, June 25 (AP)—Declaring the two-thirds-vote requirement in the United States Senate for adoption of treaties "means there will have to be cooperation between Republicans and Democrats," Senator Joseph H. Ball (R., Minn.) today urged a wider "general area of agreement on foreign policy between the political parties."

He said there should be a "full and free discussion" on foreign policy in the coming election campaign and expressed belief the Republicans would offer a "positive position for the people to decide upon." He spoke on the University of Chicago Round Table broadcast.

He also attacked a policy of high tariffs, declaring "we must move toward freer trade. Obviously, we cannot do it all at once, but we must move as fast as we can."

Gov. Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) agreed that abandonment of tariff barriers "must be done mutually."

Convention Gets Wide Play In British Press

London, Monday, June 26 (AP)—British newspapers, although limited to an average of four pages because of paper rationing, gave wide play this morning to the Republican Presidential convention in Chicago, some devoting up to three columns to it.

London papers had their own correspondents covering the convention.

A typical headline was the Telegraph's "Mr. Dewey's Presidential Nomination Assured." The Daily Express approached it from this angle: "They're Building A Special Rostrum For Dewey."

None carried editorial comment.

Norman Thomas Calls For Peace Offensive

Reading, Pa., June 25 (AP)—Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, demanded today "an immediate peace offensive which will not be a blind commitment to enforce an imperialistic peace, but a promise of American cooperation in a federation of peoples freed from every sort of foreign yoke."

Addressing a rally at Socialist Park, Thomas, who was nominated as Presidential candidate for a fifth time at the party's convention here earlier this month, said:

"Since I last spoke here and urged a political peace offensive the great military offensive has been successfully begun . . . but still there is no political peace offensive.

"Sure To Breed War"

"Instead of any such help, the President has taken occasion to emphasize his proposal for guaranteeing world security by a worse league of nations, an imperialistic alliance of the major victors as impermanent and as sure to breed war as alliances always have been."

Commenting on the virtual Presidential nomination of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, at the Republican convention which opens in Chicago tomorrow, Thomas said:

"It was a pity that the Republicans couldn't pull out of their hat anything better than Dewey.

"It is a serious situation when the Republicans are about to nominate a man who has said night and day that he is not a candidate for the highest office in the land, and even denying there'll be an election. He is nominated largely on the fact he said nothing about vital issues. He will say what they want him to say," Thomas declared.

IMPERIALISM ISSUE RAISED

Thomas, Socialist, Questions Hull On Foreign Policy

New York, June 25 (AP)—Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, asked Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, today to answer three questions on American foreign policy which, Thomas said, were raised by the recent statement of British Production Minister Oliver Lyttelton that the United States provoked Japan to attack.

[Lyttelton said later that he had meant to make the point that the Americans did not wait until they had entered the war before showing where their sympathies lay. He said that American lend-lease to Britain could not be regarded as a provocation by a peace-minded Japan, but Japanese aggressors chose to regard it as such.]

The questions were forwarded in a letter in which the Socialist leader charged that British leaders possessed more facts concerning American foreign policy than the American people.

Questions Outlined

Thomas asked:

"Even if there had been no attack upon the United States, was the Administration planning a military offensive against Japan at a time of its own choice?

"If so, was America planning to go to war with Japan to (a) forestall future Japanese designs upon the United States; (b) to uphold white imperialism in Asia; or (c) to defend China against cruel aggression?

Questions On Imperialism

"Is the Administration now committed to opposition to all imperialism in Asia or only Japanese imperialism? Is it now appeasing Mr. Churchill—and powerful American interests—by silence on this question?"

Thomas said Hull's answers would "vitally affect the nature of a just peace with Japan and the kind of post-war world organization, imperialist or democratic, that may be set up."

French Destroy Rocket Bombs

New York, June 25 (AP)—French patriots armed with hand grenades yesterday blew up five carloads of rocket bombs destined for German launching ramps on the Channel coast, the French Brazzaville radio reported tonight in a broadcast heard by the Blue Network.

Sweden Hears Fascists Have Taken Finland

New York, June 25 (AP)—The Stockholm newspaper Aftontidningen said today in an editorial reported by the Office of War Information that according to "alarming rumors" from Finland there had been mass arrests of Liberals there and deportations of political prisoners to Romania.

"Fascists have taken over," the newspaper said.

Invasion Glider Lands Near Nazi Tank Column

New York, June 25 (AP)—Lieut. Col. Michael C. Murphy, 37, one of the first two invasion casualties to be returned to the United States, said today he landed his glider within 15 feet of a German tank column without being fired on.

Injured during his landing at Ste. Mere Eglise, Murphy said:

"We were caught in a pretty heavy crossfire while still in the air. The pilot of the plane leading us was Colonel Whitaker. I called him and told him that they were making a sieve of us back there. He said 'What in blazes do you think they are doing to me up here'?"

Tells Of Difficulties

Murphy, who asked for a glass of milk and then put in a phone call to his wife upon landing at Mitchel Field, said, "It was rather difficult for glider pilots inasmuch as we were landing in the middle of the enemy, following the paratroopers, and we couldn't use position lights or landing lights. The fields were quite small and surrounded by tall trees.

"I received my injury," he added, "because my glider didn't stop when I applied the brakes. It skilled on the tall grass and coasted into a tree.

"When my glider came to rest, I was within 15 feet of an enemy reconnaissance tank column. I was pinned in and couldn't move. I told the passengers what was in front of us. . . . in about 15 seconds the enemy started up the motors on their tanks and moved off. They moved past the other parked gliders and didn't fire a shot."

Doctor Risks Fire

Because snipers and machine gunners were firing on them, Murphy said the troops took cover in ditches at the edge of the field. He said a Medical Corps doctor risked the fire to reach the gliders and treat the injured.

"I don't think it is possible to elaborate too much on what the airborne divisions did," Murphy commented.

"They secured and blew up big gun positions, effected road blocks and held the Germans off while the other boys came over the beaches."

Three Days To Get Back

Murphy said the trip back to England from Normandy required three days because of snipers and artillery firing on the beach, as well as mines off shore.

"It is interesting that it took twice as long to evacuate us across the channel to England by boat as it took us to fly across the ocean," he said.

Murphy, who formerly operated his own flying service at Findlay, Ohio, trained flight nurses at Bowman Field, Kentucky, before going overseas.

Paris-Spain Trains Reported Not Running

New York, June 25 (AP)—Trains are not running between Spain and Paris and local traffic across the French-Spanish border carries only mail for prisoners of war, Glenn Stadler, CBS correspondent, reported today from Madrid.

He added that travelers arriving in Spain from France said "traffic all over France is in a mess" as the result of activity by French patriots and Allied forces.

Nazis Tell Of Clearing Island Of 'Bandits'

New York, June 25 (AP)—The Berlin radio said today that Levcas Island, west of Greece and north of Cephalonia, had been cleared completely of "bandits" in violent fighting recently.

A commentator for DNB, German news agency, said German troops and "green national formations" had annihilated "Communists" in the southwestern part of Levcas.

Signals Headquarters 100 Feet Underground

New York, June 25 (AP)—The combined signals headquarters which controlled the Allied landings in Normandy is hidden 100 feet under the English countryside, the British radio said tonight.

"It is a joint British, Canadian, American, all-services undertaking, with a senior staff officer who is a signals expert in control," said the broadcast.

"It is from this underground base that the convoys have been directed, the Allied big fleets sent out, and men in the assault areas given their task. Millions of words have gone out since D-day by radio, cable, telephone and teletype."

'43 Nazi Levy on France Put at $5,660,000,000

Besides Cash, Vast Stores of Food Were Demanded

The Stockholm newspaper "Aftontidningen" said in a Bern dispatch reported yesterday to the Office of War Information that German "occupation costs" levied on France in 1943 amounted to 283,000,000,000 francs (nominally $5,660,000,000).

Quoting French Treasury figures, the Swedish paper said that in addition to these cash expenditures, Germany demanded delivery from France of the following agricultural products "in kind": 800,000 tons of bread grain, 600,000 tons of fodder grain, 200,000 tons of meat, 400,000 tons of potatoes, 15,000 tons of cheese, 100,000 tons of fruit, 850,000 tons of hay and straw and 350,000 hectoliters of wine.

Since 1941, the amounts of these deliveries in kind have "steadily increased," "Aftontidningen" said, and the economic exploitation of France today is "worse than ever."

Japan Will Get Food, Drugs to U. S. Prisoners

Ship to Russia for $2,500,000 Cargo From Red Cross

Two and a half million dollars worth of medicine and foods destined for American prisoners of war interned in the Philippines and the Far East are now ready in Vladivostok awaiting transshipment by the Japanese, Maurice Pate, national director of American Red Cross Relief to Prisoners of War Service, said yesterday.

Mr. Pate addressed 1,000 relatives and friends of war prisoners from Manhattan and the Bronx at a meeting held by the New York Chapter of the American Red Cross in City College auditorium, Lexington Avenue and Twenty-third Street.

"Perhaps it is because we have kept offering our ships that the Japanese have been brought to the point of offering to send a ship to Vladivostok, or near Vladivostok, and pick up supplies there," he said.

Supplies have been sent to Japanese-held American prisoners on two occasions only, aboard the Gripsholm, Mr. Pate explained, although more than 170 cables have been sent to Japan through the International Red Cross "proposing time and again the installation of distribution facilities."

Mrs. Herman Kiaer, member of the American Red Cross Relief to Prisoners of War Service, announced the new items which may be included in next-of-kin packages to prisoners of war. They include cooking and eating utensils; flour, meal and flour mixes; fruit cakes; chocolate bars up to two pounds; and flavorings such as onion sauce, garlic, celery.

After July 1 a mixture of pepper and salt may be included in the packages, she said. "Pepper alone has been avoided," Mrs. Kiaer said, "because the Germans consider it escape material."

WITH AMERICAN FORCES OVERLOOKING CHERBOURG, JUNE 24-(DELAYED)-(AP)-AMERICAN TROOPS WAITED OUTSIDE CHERBOURG TONIGHT FOR THE SIGNAL TO ENTER THE BURNING AND SMOKE-HAZED CITY.

JUN 25 1944

I STOOD WITH THE VICTORIOUS DOUGHBOYS IN THE GATHERING DUSK AND LOOKED DOWN ON THE CITY, WHICH IS THE PRIZED PORT OUR TROOPS HAVE REACHED IN TWO AND A HALF DAYS OF BITTER FIGHTING, CLIMAXING THE GREAT DRIVE UP THE PENINSULA.

IT IS SPREAD BEFORE US LESS THAN A MILE AWAY--DARK AND FORBIDDING AT THE EDGE OF THE SEA WITH A GREAT FIRE BURNING IN THE ARSENAL NEAR QUAI DE FRANCE. THERE ARE NO OTHER FIRES VISIBLE, JUST THAT ONE GREAT FLAME MARKING ENEMY DEMOLITIONS INSIDE THE CITY.

ONE PATROL ENTERED THE EDGE OF CHERBOURG LATE THIS AFTERNOON AND MET NO RESISTANCE. THEY WERE LED BY A YOUNG LIEUTENANT NAMED EDWARD MANIFOLD, BUT I WAS UNABLE TO GET HIS ADDRESS IMMEDIATELY.

OUR TROOPS FOUGHT A COURAGEOUS AND HISTORIC BATTLE TO REACH THIS RIDGE FROM WHICH IT ALMOST SEEMED A STONE COULD BE THROWN INTO THE MAIN PART OF TOWN. SO FAR AS I COULD TELL, THE ENEMY HAD QUIT FIGHTING. THERE WAS NO SOUND OF GUNFIRE IN REPLY TO OUR FIRE POURING INTO THE OUTER FRINGE OF THE TOWN'S DEFENSES.

"THE BOYS DID ONE HELLUVA JOB IN FIGHTING THEIR WAY HERE," SAID CAPT.RAYMOND GODWIN OF 334 LANGLEY ST., SAN DIEGO, CALIF., AS HE LOOKED OUT ACROSS CHERBOURG.

EVEN THAT PRAISE WAS AN UNDERSTATEMENT.

DRIVING UP THE MAIN CHERBOURG ROAD TO CATCH UP WITH THIS FAST-MOVING UNIT WHICH IS NEAREST TO CHERBOURG, WE PASSED EIGHT TRUCKS JAMMED WITH GERMAN PRISONERS--AT LEAST 300 IN THE GROUP. EVERYTHING WAS ON THE MOVE FORWARD IN THE LAST GREAT SURGE.

A LONE ENEMY SHELL WHISTLED OVER AND EXPLODED BEHIND US. THAT WAS THE LAST ONE I HEARD. PRISONERS WERE BEING ROUNDED UP ALL ALONG THE ROUTE OF ADVANCE. EVEN WIREMEN LAYING LINES TO ADVANCE UNITS WERE PICKING THEM UP.

"WE GOT 10 IN ONE BUNCH," GRINNED SGT.RUDOLPH HALASY, OF 732 BITTERSWEEP PLACE, CHICAGO. "I ASKED ONE OF THEM WHO SPOKE ENGLISH WHAT THE HELL THEY WERE FIGHTING FOR AND HE SAID HE DIDN'T KNOW."

HALASY SAID THE ADVANCE IN THE PAST 24 HOURS HAD BEEN SO FAST HIS WIREMEN COULD HARDLY KEEP UP WITH IT. ONE DAY HIS CREW LAID 36 MILES OF WIRE TO FORWARD POSITIONS.

CORP.DONALD WADE OF PARKERS LANDING, PA., HELPED TAKE 11 PRISONERS WHO WERE CROUCHED IN ONE FOXHOLE.

"THEY PUT UP THE WHITE FLAG BUT WHEN WE STARTED AFTER THEM ONE OF THEM THREW A GRENADE," WADE SAID, "SO WE JUST POURED IN THE FIRE UNTIL THEY GAVE UP."

WE TURNED THE JEEP OFF THE MAIN ROAD INTO A LANE WINDING ACROSS BRIDGES THAT WERE BURNING FROM SHE

WE TURNED THE JEEP OFF THE MAIN ROAD INTO A LANE WINDING ACROSS BRIDGES THAT WERE BURNING FROM SHELL FIRE AND RIPPED BY MORTAR AND ARTILLERY FIRE. THE ACRID ODOR OF BURNING WEEDS AND [illegible]TUNG OUR NOSTRILS AND FIRES FOGGED THE COUNTRYSIDE WITH BLUE SMOKE.

"JUST FOLLOW US AND WE'LL TAKE YOU RIGHT INTO CHERBOURG," YELLED PFC. LESTER HOGANCAMP OF MARSHALLTOWN, IOWA, FROM [illegible] JEEP. "BOY WE'RE GOING TO TAKE THIS TOWN!"

JUN 25 1944

ON A RIDGETOP BEFORE CHERBOURG I FOUND THE UNIT WHICH HAS BEEN SPEARHEADING THIS DRIVE. THESE TROOPS A FEW HOURS BEFORE HAD CAPTURED THE CHERBOURG SUBURBAN TOWN OF HAK GRINGOR, WHICH LIES AT THE FOOT OF THE RIDGE.

THEY CAPTURED MORE THAN 300 PRISONERS IN ONE GROUP, A COAST ARTILLERY OUTFIT SURPRISED BY THE FAST ADVANCE. THEIR COMMANDING OFFICER SURRENDERED THEM TO THE DOUGHBOYS' LEADER.

"DAMMIT, WE WOULD HAVE COME INTO THE CITY TODAY IF THEY'D LET US,"

HE DECLARED.

HIS OUTFIT HAD TAKEN A SHELLACKING YESTERDAY FROM A BATTERY OF 155 AND 170 MILLIMETE COAST ARTILLERY GUNS EMPLACED ON THE RIDGE WHERE WE STOOD. THE BIG GUNS FIRED ON THE TROOPS AT POINT BLANK RANGE.

BUT TODAY THE DOUGHBOYS SURGED ACROSS THE RIDGE AND CAPTURED 320 GERMANS AROUND THE GUNS AND EVEN TOOK ONE MARK IV TANK INTACT. THERE WERE MANY CASES OF AMMUNITION STACKED IN TRENCHES AND DITCHES ON THE RIDGETOP.

THE TROOPS IN THEIR ADVANCE ENCOUNTERED NO FIRE FROM FORT DU ROUL WHICH WAS ON THEIR LEFT, AND THEY FOUND ONE STRONGPOINT DESERTED.

"WE TOOK ABOUT 500 PRISONERS TODAY AND KILLED ANOTHER 300 TO 400 GERMANS," SAID A COLONEL. "THAT'S NOT A BAD DAY'S WORK. AND I HAVE NEVER SEEN SO MUCH AMMUNITION AS THE GERMANS HAD HERE."

THE TROOPS WERE PREPARING SUPPER, EATING GERMAN FOOD FOUND IN THE COAST ARTILLERY HEADQUARTERS, AND WASHING THEMSELVES WITH GERMAN SOAP.

"THIS SOAP AIN'T SO BAD," SAID ONE DOUGHBOY LATHERING HIS BATTLE-STAINED FACE.

"COME OVER HERE AND TAKEN A LOOK AT THE CITY," SAID CAPTAIN GODWIN. WE WALKED TO THE EDGE OF THE RIDGE AND CHERBOURG SPREAD BEFORE US.

THE BREAKWATERS LOOKED LIKE CRAB CLAWS IN THE QUIET, PROTECTED HARBOR. THE CITY WAS DARK AND DEAD-LOOKING EXCEPT FOR THE GREAT FIRE FLAMING IN THE ARSENAL. BUT OUTSIDE THE CITY OUR SHELLS WERE BURSTING AND SPLATTERING SPARKS LIKE FIREWORKS IN THE GATHERING GLOOM, AND THEN WE HEARD EXPLOSIONS.

WHEN THE DOUGHBOYS CLOSE THEIR HAND, CHERBOURG IS OURS.

WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES BEFORE CHERBOURG, JUNE 24 (AP)--FRENCH CIVILIANS IN CHERBOURG HAVE HIDDEN STORES OF WINE AND CHAMPAGNE WHICH THEY ARE EAGERLY WAITING TO UNCORK WHEN THE AMERICANS ARRIVE.

THIS WAS THE NEWS BROUGHT FROM CHERBOURG TODAY BY A YOUNG CHERBOURG MERCHANT WHO SLIPPED THROUGH THE ENEMY LINES TO OFFER HIS SERVICES TO THE AMERICANS AND TO GIVE THEM ALL THE INFORMATION HE COULD TO AID IN THE CAPTURE OF THE CITY.

"THERE ARE 5,000 CIVILIANS LEFT IN THE CITY," HE SAID. "MOST OF THE TOWNSPEOPLE FLED TO THE COUNTRY TO ESCAPE POSSIBLE BOMBINGS AND SHELLINGS BUT THOSE WERE ARE LEFT ARE WAITING TO GIVE THE AMERICANS A BIG WELCOME.

JUN 25 1944

THE GERMANS HAVE MINED THE APPROACHES TO THE CITY HE SAID AND PREPARED THE BUILDINGS FOR HOUSE TO HOUSE DEFENSE BY KNOCKING HOLES IN THE WALLS FROM WHICH TO SHOOT MACHINEGUNS AND RIFLES. THE MERCHANT ASSERTED HOWEVER THAT HE DOUBTED THE ENEMY HAD THE MANPOWER TO MAN ALL OF THE DEFENSES.

ABOUT THE ONLY BUSINESS OPERATING IN THE CITY NOW UNDER SEIGE ARE A FEW CAFES AND BORDELLOS PATRONIZED BY THE GERMANS, HE SAID.

THE FRENCHMAN DECLARED THAT MANY GERMANS ARE AFRAID TO SURRENDER

TO THE AMERICANS BECAUSE THEY HAVE BEEN TOLD BY PROPAGANDA AGENTS THEY WOULD BE MXXXXXXXXX MUTILATED IF THEY GAVE THEMSELVES UP. AS A RESULT, HE SAID, THE NAZIS WERE FEARFUL OF BEING TAKEN PRISONER.

JUN 25 1944

THE INFORMANT SAID THE GERMANS HAD BEEN CARRYING OUT DEMOLITIONS IN THE CITY FOR SEVERAL DAYS. HE SAID THE CIVILIANS WHO STAYED IN THEIR HOMES WERE NOT SUFFERING YET BUT THAT THEY HAVE VERY LITTLE FOOD LEFT AND THAT THERE HAS BEEN NO WATER OR ELECTRIC LIGHTS SINCE THE INVASION START

THE MERCHANT, WHO OPERATED A COAL, WOOD AND GROCERY BUSINESS IN THE TOWN, SAID BREAD IS RATIONED AT 200 GRAMS A DAY AND THAT THERE IS VIRTUA NO MEAT IN THE CITY BECAUSE SUPPLY ROUTES FROM FARMS NOW ARE IN THE BATT ZONE.

ADVANCED NINTH AIR FORCE FIGHTER WING HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, JUNE 24-(DELAYED)-(AP)-UNDER A CAMOUFLAGED TENT IN A NORMANDY PASTURE AMERICAN AIRMEN CHART THE COURSE OF EVERY PLANE WHICH PASSES OVER THE EMBATTLED CHERBOURG PENINSULA.

BY RADIO AND GROUND OBSERVATION NOT ONLY THE ALLIED SHIPS BUT HOSTILE CRAFT AS WELL ARE TRACED TO THEIR TARGETS. LOST ALLIED PLANES ARE BROUGHT HOME TO NEW FRENCH BASES, AND ENEMY CRAFT ARE INTERCEPTED THROUGH THE WORK OF THIS AMERICAN NINTH AIR FORCE WING CONTROL CENTER.

WITH MAJ. J.J.CODY OF 115 SHADWELL DRIVE, SAN ANTONIO, TEX., WING SENIOR CONTROLLER, I WATCHED THE PENETRATION OF 24 GERMAN AIRCRAFT INTO THE BATTLE ZONE THIS AFTERNOON -- THE LARGEST HOSTILE PENETRATION IN DAYLIGHT SINCE D-DAY. A RED STANDARD, INDICATING ENEMY PLANES, APPEARED ON THE BIG TABLE MAP, AND CODY, WITH INFORMATION THE SHIPS WERE COMING IN AT 12,000 FEET, SPOTTED A NEARBY SQUADRON OF THUNDERBOLTS WHICH HAD JUST FINISHED A MISSION.

THE THUNDERBOLTS WERE SENT AFTER THE ENEMY FLIERS ALONG WITH 21 MUSTANGS. AND THEN AN UNIDENTIFIED GROUP OF PLANES, WHICH CODY GUESSED WERE SPITFIRES CLOSING IN FROM THE CAEN AREA, SHOWED ON THE MAP.

JUN 25 1944

THE ENEMY FORMATION WAS TRACED AS FAR AS ST. LO, STILL BEHIND THE GERMAN LINES, WHEN THEY SUDDENLY SPLIT UP. SOME SCOOTED FOR HOME. OTHERS TURNED BACK AND SWEPT AROUND AGAIN, REACHING A POINT NORTH OF BAYEUX. SOON THERE WERE REPORTS OF DOGFIGHTS THERE, IN WHICH ABOUT 50 PLANES WERE PARTICIPATING. APPARENTLY THE BRITISH HAD CAUGHT UP WITH THEM, SINCE NO AMERICAN PILOTS REPORTED MAKING CONTACT.

CODY AND CAPT. L.C. TIRCY OF QUINTON, OKLA., WHO RELIEVED HIM AT THE CONTROLLER'S DESK, BOTH WERE CHAGRINED THAT THE AMERICANS HAD NOT DRAWN FIRST BLOOD.

THIS WING IS COMMANDED BY BRIG. GEN. JAMES W. MC CAULEY, 135 MERRICK ST., SHREVEPORT, LA., WHOSE PROMOTION CAME THROUGH AFTER HE LANDED IN FRANCE. THE WING ONCE SERVED AS A SEATTLE, WASH., DEFENSE UNIT.

WHILE THE FRONTAL ASSAULT DROVE IN UPON CHERBOURG ITSELF, AMERICAN WINGS ON BOTH SIDES PRESSED THE TRAPPED NAZIS BACK UPON AN EVER-NARROWING STRIP OF COAST TO THE EAST AND WEST OF THE CITY.

AT NO PLACE ON THE IMMEDIATE FLANKS OF CHERBOURG WAS THIS GERMAN TOEHOLD MORE THAN THREE MILES DEEP, AND ON THE EAST THE AMERICANS WERE LESS THAN A MILE FROM THE SEA AT CAPE LEVY. THE SIEGE ARC RAN FROM THERE WESTWARD TO BITTERLY-DEFENDED BOIS DU MONT ROC NEAR BEAUMONT-HAGUE. THE GERMANS APPARENTLY HAD WITHDRAWN FROM ALL THE NORTHEASTERN TIP OF CHERBOURG PENINSULA.

A YANKEE PATROL ENTERED THE EDGE OF CHERBOURG AS EARLY AS SATURDAY AFTERNOON, MEETING NO RESISTANCE, DON WHITEHEAD OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS SAID, AND THE AMERICANS STOOD LAST NIGHT OVERLOOKING THE TRANSATLANTIC PORT, DARK AND FORBIDDING WITH ONLY ONE GREAT FIRE BURNING IN THE ARSENAL AREA.

JUN 25 1944

FORWARD OBSERVERS SAID THEY COULD SEE THE GERMANS WORKING TO BLOW UP SOME OF THE NAVAL GUNS, GUARDIAN FINGERS POINTED TOWARD THE SEA.

LINK BY LINK, THE DOUGHBOYS SMASHED THE NETWORK OF PILLBOXES AND FORTIFICATIONS PROTECTING CHERBOURG, CORRALLING HUNDREDS OF PRISONERS.

(A LONDON RADIO BROADCAST HEARD BY NBC SAID 1,800 PRISONERS HAD BEEN TAKEN IN THE LAST 24 HOURS.)

ALLIED PLANES CONTINUED TO SUPPORT THE LAND SMASHES, AND 1,500 AMERICAN HEAVY BOMBERS AND PROTECTING FIGHTERS BATTERED AIRFIELDS IN SOUTHERN FRANCE. THIS BIG BLOW FOLLOWED AN RAF WHIPPING OF THE ROCKET-BOMB COAST BY 1,000 PLANES, AND A MOSQUITO RAID WITH 4,000-POUND BLOCKBUSTERS UPON BERLIN.

NINETEEN ALLIED PLANES WERE LOST AND 60 GERMAN AIRCRAFT DESTROYED SATURDAY AS IMPROVED WEATHER RELEASED FULL AIR STRENGTH FOR THE FIRST TIME IN MANY DAYS FOR CONCENTRATED BLOWS ON NAZI COMMUNICATIONS.

WAVES OF PLANES HIT RAILWAY BRIDGES, ROADS, RAIL LINES AND SUPPLY DUMPS.

(SPEAKING OF THE ALLIED OFFENSIVE IN THE TILLY-SUR-SEULLES AREA, THE GERMAN SUNDAY COMMUNIQUE SAID NAZI COASTAL BATTERIES JOINED IN THE GROUND FIGHTING DESPITE ALLIED WARSHIP AND ARTILLERY FIRE AND AERIAL BOMBING, AND ALSO SCORED "SEVERAL HITS ON ENEMY CRUISERS AND DESTROYERS."

(COASTAL BATTERIES SET FIRE TO A 5,000-TON TRANSPORT IN THE SEINE RIVER MOUTH, IT ADDED, AN ALLIED DESTROYER WAS SUNK NEARBY BY A MINE, AND LARGE-SIZED TRANSPORT CAUGHT FIRE. GERMAN MOTOR TORPEDO BOATS SCORED HITS ON ALLIED DESTROYERS, AND LONG-RANGE BATTERIES DESTROYED A 7,000-TON FREIGHTER IN THE ENGLISH CHANNEL OFF DOVER, THE BULLETIN ADDED. THERE WAS NO ALLIED CONFIRMATION OF THESE CLAIMS.)

A MEMBER OF THE COLONEL'S STAFF SAID:

"TELL YOUR MEN TO CHECK WHO THEY'RE SHOOTING AT. WE DON'T WANT TO BE TRIGGER HAPPY AND FIRE ON FRIENDLY TROOPS ON OUR RIGHT OR AT EACH OTHER.

JUN 25 1944

"THERE WILL BE NO LOOTING. MEN ARE TO TAKE NO PERSONAL BELONGINGS OFF OF ENEMY SOLDIERS. OFFICER PRISONERS MUST BE GROUPED SEPARATELY FROM ENLISTED MEN AND TREATED AS OFFICERS. NOW YOU'D BETTER GET YOUR MEN TOGETHER."

A BURST OF LAUGHTER GREETED THIS REMARK.

JUN 25 1944

WITH LANDON WAS SGT.ARTHUR UBER, BROOKVILLE, PA.

I WALKED ACROSS THE FIELDS TO A BLUFF. IT WAS 2 P.M., AND THE TROOPS WERE MOVING DOWN THE ROAD FROM HAUTE CRINCOR TOWARD CHERBOURG.

"HOW FAR AWAY IS THIS PLACE CHERBOURG?" ASKED A SOLDIER.

"NOT MORE THAN A MILE BY ROAD," I ANSWERED.

FRENCH CIVILIANS STOOD IN THE DOORWAYS OF HOUSES ALONG THE WAY WAVING TO THE TROOPS.

WRECKED GERMAN VEHICLES CLUTTERED THE ROAD. A DEAD GERMAN WAS SPRAWLED AT THE ROADSIDE. NOBODY SEEMED TO NOTICE HIM.

WE COULD HEAR TANKS ROLLING ALONG NEARBY. THEN WE HEARD THE RASPING GRIND AS THE GERMANS FIRED ROCKET SHELLS. EVERYONE TOOK COVER ON THE ROADSIDE AND THE SHELLS CRASHED JUST AHEAD OF US.

SOON STRETCHER BEARERS CARRIED BACK FOUR WOUNDED MEN--THE FIRST CASUALTIES OF THE FINAL ATTACK ON CHERBOURG.

"THE BASTARDS, THE BASTARDS," EXCLAIMED A YOUNG SOLDIER.

"I'VE GOT MY SHARE," HE SAID PATTING THE STOCK OF HIS WEAPON.

"HOW ARE YOU DOING, PINKY," ANOTHER OFFICER CALLED TO HIM.

"OKAY," REPLIED PINKY. "WE HAVEN'T MUCH FURTHER TO GO."

ROME JUNE 25-(AP)-FIFTH ARMY TANKS AND INFANTRY HAVE WON NEW GROUND ALL ALONG THE ITALIAN WEST COASTAL SECTOR ASTRIDE HIGHWAYS ONE AND 73, OCCUPYING FOLLONICA AND MONTEROTONDO, AND ADVANCE ALLIED ELEMENTS ARE FIGHTING NEAR MASSA, HEADQUARTERS ANNOUNCED TODAY.

WITH THE CAPTURE OF MONTEROTONDO THE FIFTH ARMY WAS WITHIN 40 MILES OF LIVORNO, AIR LINE, AND 46 MILES OF PISA, THE WESTERN TERMINUS OF THE LINE UPON WHICH THE GERMANS ARE EXPECTED TO MAKE A MAJOR DEFENSIVE STAND. FOLLONICA IS ASTRIDE HIGHWAY ONE ALONG THE COASTAL ROUTE TO LIVORNO AND PISA.

IN THE CENTRAL SECTOR, EIGHTH ARMY TROOPS ATTACKING EAST AND WEST OF LAKE TRASIMENO OCCUPIED SARENTEANO AND THE VILLAGES OF PESCIA AND CASTELVIETO, THUS KEEPING ABREAST OF THE FIFTH ARMY ADVANCE. THE ALLIED COMMUNIQUE SAID STRONG RESISTANCE STILL WAS BEING ENCOUNTERED NORTH OF PERUGIA.

DURING EXTENSIVE AIR OPERATIONS YESTERDAY, WHICH INCLUDED HEAVY BOMBER ATTACKS AGAINST OIL INSTALLATIONS IN THE PLOESTI AREA OF ROMANIA, 26 ENEMY PLANES WERE DESTROYED WHILE 15 ALLIED AIRCRAFT WERE MISSING.

IT WAS OFFICIALLY ANNOUNCED THAT THE U.S.36TH DIVISION WAS FIGHTING WITH THE FIFTH ARMY. SINCE THE SALERNO LANDINGS THE FIFTH ARMY HAS CAPTURED 36,000 GERMAN PRISONERS.

THE LATEST ADVANCE BY THE FIFTH ARMY WAS MADE IN THE FACE OF FURIOUS ENEMY RESISTANCE, WITH THE GERMANS USING SELF-PROPELLED GUNS AND TIGER TANKS. THE AMERICAN TROOPS SEIZED THE INITIATIVE EVERYWHERE COMPELLING WITHDRAWAL OF THE ENEMY FROM FAVORABLE TERRAIN ALONG THE WHOLE FRONT.

30.24 — 16567

BITTER FIGHTING BROKE OUT AS THE AMERICANS DROVE INLAND AND TOOK THE VILLAGE OF PEROLIA.

FRENCH COLONIAL ELEMENTS OF THE FIFTH ARMY, FIGHTING TO THE EAST OF THE AMERICANS CONTINUED TO MAKE GAINS, ROUTING THE GERMANS FROM CIVITELLA PAGANICO.

FIERCE FIGHTING STILL WAS IN PROGRESS AT CHIUSI, NINE MILES SOUTHWEST OF LAKE TRASIMENO. THIS TOWN HAD CHANGED HANDS AT LEAST TWICE IN 72 HOURS.

STOCKHOLM, JUNE 25-(AP)-THE SITUATION AT THE HINGE POSITION OF VITEBSK BECAME CRITICAL 24 HOURS AFTER THE START OF THE RUSSIAN OFFENSIVE AND THE GERMANS DECIDED TO RETREAT, AFTONBLADET'S BERLIN CORRESPONDENT SAID TODAY.

MINSK SOON MAY BE IN THE FRONT LINES, HE SAID.

MOSCOW, JUNE 25-(AP)-THE RED ARMY'S SWIFTLY DEVELOPING SUMMER OFFENSIVE HAD SPREAD TODAY TO SECTORS 450 MILES SOUTHWARD FROM THE FINNISH KARELIAN ISTHMUS, ALL THE WAY TO THE GATES OF STRATEGIC MOGILEV ON THE UPPER DNEPR RIVER, THE VERY CORE OF HITLER'S STRONGEST DEFENSE SYSTEM ON THE RUSSIAN FRONT.

NEW AND GREATER SURPRISES WERE BELIEVED TO BE IN STORE FOR THE DAZED GERMAN HIGH COMMAND, ALREADY STAGGERING FROM A SANGUINARY WAR OF ATTRITION.

JUN 25 1944

(THE GERMAN COMMENTATOR, ERNST VON HAMMER, SAID THE RUSSIANS HAD ACHIEVED A BREAK-THROUGH IN THE BOBRUISK AREA--BOBRUISK IS 70 MILES SOUTHWEST OF MOGILEV--AND FORCED THE GERMAN LINES BACK SEVERAL MILES. "MASSES OF TANKS AND FIGHTER-BOMBERS ON A SCALE NEVER SEEN BEFORE DURING THE ENTIRE RUSSIAN CAMPAIGN" WERE THROWN INTO THE ATTACK HE SAID.

(ANOTHER BREAK-THROUGH WAS MADE ON THE SMOLENSK-ORSHA ROAD. THE COMMENTATOR ADDED.

(THE BERLIN RADIO SAID AT LEAST 80 SOVIET INFANTRY DIVISIONS AND A TANK ARMY HAD LAUNCHED A GREAT GENERAL ATTACK FROM BOBRUISK TO VITEBSK, AND THE GERMAN COMMUNIQUE ADMITTED THAT BREACHES IN THE CENTRAL FRONT HAD BEEN WIDENED.)

ENCIRCLEMENT OF VITEBSK VIRTUALLY WAS COMPLETE AS TWO GREAT SOVIET ARMIES CLOSED IN, LEAVING A GAP OF ONLY 22 MILES FOR A GERMAN ESCAPE. ROADS THROUGH THIS GAP, THOUGH HEAVILY PROTECTED BY STRONG FIRE-POINTSO HEAVY TANK AND ARTILLERY STRENGTH AND DEEP MINE FIELDS, ALREADY WERE UNDER RUSSIAN ATTACK.

IN THIS SECTOR THE RUSSIANS NOW ARE ONLY 69 MILES FROM THE SOVIET LATVIAN REPUBLIC, 120 MILES FROM THE LITHUANIAN REPUBLIC, AND 110 MILES FROM DVINSK, BIGGEST COMMUNICATIONS CENTER IN THE BALTIC AREA.

THE CIRCLE BEING CLOSED AROUND THE NAZIS REACHES FROM THE WESTERN DVINA AND DNEPR RIVERS TO POINTS NORTHWEST AND SOUTHEAST OF VITEBSK, AND RUSSIANS NOW PRESSING DOWN ON THE CITY FROM THE NORTHWEST CAN HEAR THE GUNS OF THEIR COMRADES FROM THE SOUTHEAST. THE LAST RAILWAY REMAINING FROM THE GERMAN REAR INTO VITEBSK WAS CUT ON FRIDAY.

THE RUSSIANS SAID THE GERMANS HAD LOST MORE THAN 5,500 KILLED IN THIS AREA UP TO YESTERDAY.

(THE BERLIN CORRESPONDENT FOR THE SWEDISH NEWSPAPER AFTONBLADET SAID TODAY THAT THE GERMANS ADMIT THE SITUATION AT THE HINGE POSITION OF VITEBSK HAD GROWN CRITICAL WITHIN 24 HOURS AFTER THE RUSSIANS OPENED THEIR OFFENSIVE. THE WRITER SAID THE GERMANS APPARENTLY HAD DECIDED TO RETREAT, AND ADDED THAT THE WHITE RUSSIAN CITY OF MINSK SOON WOULD BE IN THE FRONT LINE.)

SOUTH OF VITEBSK, THE NEWEST ATTACKS OF THE RED ARMY APPEARED AIMED AT RELIEVING THE IMPORTANT WHITE RUSSIAN MUNICIPALITIES OF

MOGILEV AND ORSHA ON THE UPPER DNEPR. ONE DRIVE SPED DOWN THE VITEBSK-ORSHA HIGHWAY, WHILE ANOTHER STABBED UP FROM THE SOUTH. THESE DRIVES PLACED THE RUSSIANS 12 MILES NORTHEAST OF ORSHA AND 32 MILES TO THE EAST OF THE SECTOR IN ROADLESS, SWAMPY LAND.

THE STRONGEST RED ARMY THRUST WAS MOVING NORTHWEST AND WEST PAST THE GERMAN-HELD SALIENT AT VITEBSK. ADVANCE UNITS WERE PUSHING THROUGH THE OBOL RIVER VALLEY 25 MILES FROM POLOTSK, THE FIRST COMMUNICATIONS CENTER EAST OF THE MAIN BALTIC HIGHWAY WHICH RUNS FROM CENTRAL EUROPE THROUGH DVINSK TO LENINGRAD.

JUN 25 1944

KEEPING PACE WITH THAT ATTACK WAS THE STRONG BLOW TO THE SOUTH AND SOUTHWEST OF VITEBSK THROUGH SWAMPY, SPARSELY SETTLED COUNTRY. THIS SEEMED TO BE A FLANKING MOVEMENT DESIGNED TO HELP SMASH THE GERMAN GARRISONS AT VITEBSK TO THE NORTH AND ORSHA TO THE SOUTH.

THE CENTRAL FIGHTING FRONT NOW HAS BEEN LENGTHENED TO 150 MILES, AND ALONG THE ENTIRE BROAD FRONT FROM FINLAND TO THE GATES OF MOGILEV THE RUSSIANS HAD LIBERATED MORE THAN 900 POPULATED PLACES BY YESTERDAY. THE NAZIS WERE REPORTED RUSHING REINFORCEMENTS INTO THE BATTLE FOR VITEBSK, IN FORCED MARCHES FROM THE SOUTH.

WEST OF VITEBSK, A LARGE POPULATED PLACE ASTRIDE THE POLOTSK-VITEBSK RAILWAY WAS TAKEN AND THE RUSSIANS BROKE THROUGH A STRONG DEFENSE LINE EIGHT MILES LONG, REMOVING OVER 3,000 MINES. TWO CRACK GERMAN INFANTRY DIVISIONS AT FULL STRENGTH WERE DEFEATED IN THIS AREA.

IN THE FINNISH CAMPAIGN, THE RED ARMY SMASHED AGAINST PETROZAVODSK, CAPITAL OF THE KARELIAN REPUBLIC, AFTER CROSSING THE SVIR RIVER FROM LAKE LADOGA TO LAKE ONEZHSKOE (ONEGA) FALL OF THE CITY SEEMED IMMINENT.

FARTHER TO THE NORTH, ACROSS LAKE ONEZHSKOE, THE RUSSIANS ALSO ADVANCED SWIFTLY, FREEING ADDITIONAL PORTIONS OF THE LENINGRAD-MURMANSK RAILWAY, AND CREWS ALREADY HAVE PITCHED INTO THE JOB OF REPAIRING DAMAGE DONE TO THE RAILROAD BY THE RETREAT FINNS.

ON THE KARELIAN ISTHMUS AND IN THE REGION AROUND VIIPURI, THE RUSSIANS LAST WERE REPORTED FANNING OUT ON RAODS LEADING TOWARD FINLAND'S CAPITAL OF HELSINKI.

A CORRESPONDENT FOR THE GOVERNMENT NEWSPAPER IZVESTIA QUOTED ONE GERMAN CAPTIVE FROM VITEBSK AS SAYING THAT "OUR FORTIFICATIONS LERE SO STRONG WE THOUGHT THAT NOT ONLY COULD NO MAN PASS THROUGH THEM, BUT NO BIRD COULD FLY OVER THEM."

THE CORRESPONDENT SAID THE GERMANS WERE SHOWING SIGNS OF EXHAUSTION IN SEVERAL SECTORS.

A WRITER FOR THE ARMY NEWSPAPER RED STAR SAID THE GERMANS WERE SUFFERING HEAVY LOSSES--IN SOME CASES COMPANIES LOST UP TO 70 PER CENT KILLED AND PRISONERS. HE SAID THE GERMANS WERE TRYING TO BURN VILLAGES AS THEY RETREATED, BUT IN GENERAL THE RED ARMY ADVANCE WAS TO SWIFT TO PERMIT THIS.

AN IZVESTIA WRITER GAVE A VIVID DESCRIPTION OF THE CROSSING OF THE SVIR. ONCE CROSSED BY THE BOATS OF PETER THE GREAT. HE SAID THE FIRST RUSSIANS TO CROSS WERE 12 MEN, THE ELDEST OF THEM ABOUT 20 YEARS OLD, WHO PUT SCARECROWS IN THE BOATS FOR THE FINNS TO SHOOT AT AND SWAM ACROSS THE COLD, SWIFT RIVER.

MOSCOW, JUNE 25-(AP)-THE PRESIDIUM OF THE SUPREME SOVIET TODAY SUSPENDED ELECTIONS TO THE SUPREME SOVIET OF THE U.S.S.R. UNTIL JUNE, 1945, AND EXTENDED THE TERMS OF OFFICE AND POWERS OF THE DEPUTIES UNTIL THAT TIME.

ABOARD JOINT EXPEDITIONARY FLAGSHIP, SAIPAN, JUNE 25-(VIA NAVY RADIO)-THE AMERICAN GRIP ON SAIPAN IN THE SOUTHERN MARIANAS, ENCOMPASSING NEARLY HALF OF THE ISLAND, IS PROVIDING A SPRINGBOARD

FOR AN EXPANDING ATTACK THROUGHOUT THE CENTRAL PACIFIC ALMOST TO THE SHORES OF JAPAN.

SUCCESSES ASHORE PARALLEL THE CONSTANTLY WIDENING RADIUS OF OPERATIONS AGAINST JAPANESE BASES EXTENDING AS FAR NORTH AS THE BONIN AND KAZAN ISLANDS, WHERE A TASK FORCE SWEPT AGAINST TWO ISLAND AND DOWNED MORE THAN 60 JAPANESE PLANES WITH FEW LOSSES.

INTERMEDIATE JAPANESE BASES ALSO WERE BLASTED TO MINIMIZE THE AIR THREAT TO SAIPAN. ALMOST NIGHTLY THE JAPANESE ATTEMPT TO REVIVE THIS AIR POWER. BUT THEIR SORTIES ARE AS INEFFECTUAL AS WAS A SNEAK RAID ON AMERICAN SHIPS OFF SAIPAN LAST NIGHT.

THIS MORNING, AFTER A HEAVY, NIGHT-LONG ARTILLERY BOMBARDMENT, THE AMERICANS RESUMED THEIR GENERAL ATTACK ON THE JUN 20 1944 RECONSTITUTED AND REINFORCED JAPANESE POSITIONS ON NORTHERN SAIPAN. THEY ALREADY HAD ADVANCED TO GARAPAN SUBURBS ON THE WEST, NEARLY TO THE PEAK OF MOUNT PAOTCHAU, AND TO THE NORTH COAST OF MAGICIENNE BAY IN THE EAST.

AMERICAN TROOPS PRACTICALLY SURROUND THE MOUNTAIN. BUT IT IS STILL A FORMIDABLE OBSTACLE. THE JAPANESE STUBBORNLY HOLD OUT, STRONGLY DEFENDING ITS WOODED SLOPES WITH MORTARS, ARTILLERY AND MACHINE GUNS.

ON RUGGED, NORTHERN SAIPAN THE ENEMY IS INCREASING AND CONSOLIDATING DEFENSES ALONG THE EXTENDED HORSESHOE SHAPED LINE WHILE GARRISON TROOPS ARE FIGHTING A DELAYING ACTION TO PERMIT COMPLETION OF THE POSITIONS FOR THE LAST STAND WHICH MIGHT OCCUR AT ANY OF THREE OR FOUR POINTS.

THE PIVOTAL SWEEP OF THE AMERICAN ADVANCE FROM THE GARAPAN SUBURBS THREATENS TO CUT OFF THE TOWN, WHICH IS EXPOSED TO THE SEA AND HAS BEEN BOMBARDED AND BOMBED FOR DAYS, MAKING IT PRACTICALLY UNTENABLE.

THE LAST JAPANESE STAND IS EXPECTED TO BE FARTHER NORTH.

BIAK ISLAND, DUTCH NEW GUINEA, JUNE 16-(DELAYED)-(AP)-THE BUFFALO, AN AMPHIBIOUS TANK, WAS DESIGNED PRIMARILY TO CARRY TROOPS ON SHORT OVER-WATER JUMPS AND DELIVER THEM, DRY-FOOTED AND WHOLE, AT THE ENEMY'S DOORSTEP.

IN THE BATTLE OF BIAK IT WAS USED TO SUPPORT THE FLANK OF PURELY LAND OPERATIONS WITH ITS MACHINEGUNS, TO LAY TELEPHONE WIRE, TO RUN ERRANDS BETWEEN FRONT LINES AND HEADQUARTERS, TO EVACUATE WOUNDED, TO RECONNOITER ENEMY TERRITORY AND TO SPOT ARTILLERY FIRE.

RECONNOITERING AND SPOTTING WERE DONE SIMULTANEOUSLY BY A SINGLE BUFFALO ON THE DAY PRECEDING THE CAPTURE OF MOKMER AIRDROME AND VILLAGE. UNDER COMMAND OF FIRST LT.RAYMOND W.GOERKE, (68 PARKRIDGE) BUFFALO, N.Y., AND SECOND LT.DOUGLAS B.BARNES, PORTLAND, ORE., THE WATER-GOING TRACTOR PROWLED THE COASTLINE FOR MILES, SURVEYING JAPANESE POSITIONS AND DISPOSITIONS BEYOND THE VIEW OF THE AMERICAN GROUND FORCES.

Montgomery Bursts Fetters for Best Gain Since Invasion.

LARGE NUMBER OF GUNS MASSED

Resistance in Great Part Of City About Spent—Has Cost Germans 100,000 Men.

BULLETIN

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, 7:16 a. m. (1:16 EWT) Tuesday, June 27—(AP)—Capture of Cherbourg by American Doughboys was officially announced early today—a victory that gave the Allies their first great port to funnel troops and supplies into France

With bayonet and grenade U. S. troops tackled the last few pillboxes and Germans fighting in the city' arsenal area last night.

Fall of the port, third largest in France, came just three weeks after the Allies landed in Normandy in the early hours of June 6.

Germans Still Firing

Associated Press Correspondent, Don Whitehead, in a dispatch from Cherbourg at 9:12 p. m. (3:12 p. m. Eastern War Time) said that as the mop-up squads moved through the smoke-filled streets shells whistled into the city from German positions farther west on Cap De La Hague.

8To rout Germans from cliff positions overlooking the city, he declared, might be a job of several days.

(NBC Reporter W. W. Chaplin broadcast from the beachhead that "all organized resistance has ceased in Cherbourg," and CBS Correspondent Larry Le Sueur broadcast the same report, although he said Germans in forts and the arsenal were putting up "death struggles.")

Supreme headquarters, which a few hours earlier had reported street fighting raging in the city, was awaiting word of the final cleanup momentarily, but official word of the capture is unlikely to come until the last enemy gun is silenced.

Montgomery Bursts Fetters

In this imminent hour of the greatest victory of the invasion, Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery burst open the Caen front with the biggest British gain since D-day.

Starting under a barrage of guns massed one every eight yards, the British pushed five miles through the German lines on a three and one-half mile front between Tilly-Sur-Seulles and Caen, using flame throwers to overcome some enemy pockets. Fighting swirled about the villages of Cheux, St. Mauvieu and La Gaule, five miles east of Tilly and less than six miles from Caen.

Cherbourg Resistance About Spent

Dispatches from the front said German resistance in Cherbourg virtually was spent except for scattered strong points still defying the doughboys streaming into the city.

U. S. troops advanced street by street and house by house, leaving hundreds of fantastically-resisting Germans dead in the rubble of their posts, and took firm possession of the docks, which can handle the flood of men and weapons waiting to pour in from Britain and direct from the United States.

Communique No. 42 said there still was some resistance to the west of Cap De La Hague, where in last stand positions the Germans threw shells into thet heart of the city, but there was little opposition along the northeastern tip of the peninsula.

Thus the prize for which the Allies have fought in the 21 days of the invasion—21 days which have cost the Germans 100,000 men killed, wounded and captured by unofficial estimates—seemed about to fall.

Cost Germans 100,000 Men

But without waiting for Cherbourg's capitulation, Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery cut loose the biggest barrage ever laid down on the eastern end of the Normandy front and with warship guns firing in support off shore drove four miles south of Tilly-Sur-Seulles to within a mile of the main road running southwest from Caen across the base of the Normandy peninsula.

The communique said progress had been made in this sector after heavy fighting and Allied forces improved their positions.

This local action was tying down German reserves and armor while the main event roared to a climax in the smoking streets of Cherbourg and to the northwest—last islands of resistance in the peninsula—where remnants of a garrison of from 25,000 to 50,000 fought with their backs to the sea.

Gen. von Schlieben ignored a second U. S. ultimatum to surrender—Berlin said his command post was under rifle fire—and doughboys fought house by house and street by street to clean out the fanatical defenders, who were dying by the hundreds in the rubble of their positions.

20,000 Prisoners in All

Despite the fury of the defense, the U. S. troops had seized 3,400 prisoners in the last 24 hours, bringing to more than 20,000 the number of the enemy they have rounded up since D-Day, headquarters announced.

It was a race against time, and Allied engineers were ready to get the port into working order, for a truly big-scale offensive cannot well be launched from the helter-skelter method of unloading on the beaches.

The Germans, on the other hand, played for time to permit their comrades farther south to bring up reserves for a counter-drive before U. S. divisions tied up around Cherbourg can be released for other tasks.

Montogmery massed field guns, one for every eight yards, and with support of naval guns offshore, loosed a two and a half hour barrage. British infantry and tanks then drove a wedge into the enemy lines southeast of Tilly-sur-Seulles.

Enemy Stopped Cold

The Germans immediately counter-attacked against the British Tommies' new-won poistions at Tessel-Bretteville, two and a half miles southeast, and Brettevillette, four miles southeast of Tilly-sur-Seulles, but were stopped cold. The Allies also won Fontenay Lepresnel, two miles east of Tilly.

Meanwhile, the American mop-up onslaught surged on past German strong-points around Cherbourg like a flood tide, and armored forces helped to batter through to the waterfront and split up the defenses.

Battle front dispatches said the powerful Fort De Roule collapsed last night but the Germans clung with cornered desperation to Maupertus airfield, east of Cherbourg; Carneville, in the area; parts of Coteville, southwest of Cherbourg; and Harcinvast, a pocket four miles south of the port.

The Americans held a five-mile front along the coast east of Cherbourg near Bretteville, and one of about the same length on the coast west of the city to near Querqueville.

Slight remaining resistance on Cap Barfleur to the east was reported collapsing.

Navy Shells Forts

Daring Allied naval units—some moving in as close as 8,000 yards from shore — on Sunday sped the doughboy entry into Cherbourg, hammering away for three and a half hours yesterday as shells from shore batteries fell around them.

A force of 14 warships, embracing three U. S. battleships, four cruisers and seven destroyers under the command of Rear Admiral Morton L. Deyo, bombarded and silenced the mighty, concrete-protected coastal batteries. They were led by the battleship Nevada, badly damaged at Pearl Harbor.

The Navy bombardment was described in fiield dispatches as the most concentrated of the invasion.

It will be some time after the Cherbourg cleanup before American troops can be reorganized for a new assignment, but the fact that two United States Army Corps commanders have been identified in Normandy shows clearly there is plenty of fresh manpower ready for action.

They are Maj. Gen. Joseph Lawton Collins, commander of the Seventh Army Corps, and Maj. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, commander of the Fifth Corps.

Command Airborne Units

It also was disclosed for the first time that Brig. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, who was sent secretly to Rome for a pre-surrender discussion with Marshal Pietro Badoglio, commands the 101st Airborne Division which landed on D-day, and Maj. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgeway, who comanded the 82nd Airborne Division in Sicily and Italy, led it into Normandy.

Rain and low clouds and fog over the continent restricted air operations during the day, but a quiet sea permitted a speedy build-up of supplies on the beaches to make up for an enforced holiday during last week's gale.

The Germans used the respite to rush up troops and armor along routes which have been pasted steadily by Allied air power, but they still seemed uncertain as to how much reserve strength they dare throw in.

Underground Cuts Phones

The French announced that the underground had cut most of the long-distance telephones out of Paris o D-day, and said there was heavy fighting in Ardennes, where 3,000 Germans were trying to round up armed patriots.

Resistance was reported increasing in Lorraine.

It was reported here that last week's gale which probably did more damage to Allied convoys than all enemy action thus far, probably encouraged the Germans to make a last-ditch fight at Cherbourg.

JUN 27 1944

A high British officer said the German army was suffering from a lack of equipment, but that there was no shortage of experienced officers.

the land crash into Cherbourg; three American battleships supported by 11 Allied cruisers and destroyers shelled Nazi positions after silencing German shore batteries in fierce duels. The sea barrage lasted three hours yesterday, with some ships coming within 8,000 yards of shore.

squads of ... the end of a fierce five-day battle to free the great supply port.

Field dispatches said the port's Nazi garrison had been sent a second ultimatum demanding "immediate unconditional surrender."

Nazis Out Of Touch

The Americans had been fighting in the city since yesterday afternoon, when they entered it with a crushing three-way assault.

The German radio gave conflicting reports on the battle. One broadcast said Cherbourg fell at 9 o'clock last night, but shortly thereafter another said fighting was still going on in the city. The premature report of the fall was taken here to indicate that the German high command was out of touch with its Cherbourg garrison; it was held probable that the port's defense was no longer centrally controlled.

The drive on the peninsula closed up American lines east of the port to the sea, leaving St. Vaast la Hogue, Quettehou and Barfleur behind American lines.

The heavy fighting in Cherbourg was fast destroying the famous port, although Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley tried to spare the town itself by directing artillery and naval fire only against forts and German strongpoints.

Doughboys were using bazookas, anti-tank guns and mortars to destroy the Germans one by one in house-to-house fighting.

Some Nazis Far Underground

There still were isolated pockets of resistance in the northeastern tip of the peninsula but the American advance had overflowed the entire sector and it was just a question of mopping up. Some Germans were intrenched deeply underground in strong fortifications and had to be blown out.

Remnants of about four Nazi divisions were making a stand also in Cap de la Hague on the farthest northwest point of the peninsula. In this area the American advance line ran from Vauville on the west coast to Equer-Dreville near Cherbourg itself.

The supreme command said the American advances have been made by "infiltrating" Cherbourg's strong points. Some forts and pillbox nests have been by-passed as much as a mile and then surrounded and attacked from the rear.

British Pass Fontenay

Fighting was heavy in the British sector on the east of the beachhead, where German armored and mobile strength was being held up by Montgomery's local attacks and threats to break through. The struggle was particularly bitter in the Tilly area, where the British made a strong infantry attack, knocking out at least half a dozen German tanks and advancing two miles south of Fontenay.

Field Marshal Erwin Rommel tried to retake Ste. Honorine-la-Chardonnerette by a series of strong armored attacks, but was beaten off.

Rain held up air activity somewhat.

U. S. Battleships Aid

American battleships moved in and pounded Cherbourg's coastal defenses as an aid to the land advance on the port. Some of this ship-to-shore dueling was the heaviest of the war.

Field dispatches revealed that the most powerful American bombardment force of the invasion was concentrating on the Cherbourg forts. In this force were the battleship Nevada and the cruisers Tuscaloosa and Quincy, with the British cruisers Glasgow and Enterprise. In support were the battleships Arkansas and Texas under Rear Admiral Carlton F. Bryant.

U. S. Armor And Infantry At Docks; British Gain

JUN 27 1944

By J. W. Gallagher

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 26 (AP)—American troops have reached Cherbourgh's docks and hold one third of the city completely, supreme headquarters announced tonight, but the Germans are shelling the city from their final refuge on the cape to the northwest.

While doughboys mopped up the last bitter Nazi resistance in street fighting, British forces on the eastern flank in Normandy slashed more than four miles southeast of Tilly-sur-Seulles in a sharp offensive engulfing at least three towns. American tanks and troops alike—representing all the United States divisions that cracked Cherbourg's siege lines—pushed to the waterfront of France's third largest port, and headquarters announced that more than 20,000 prisoners have been taken since D-day, 3,400 at Cherbourg alone in the 24 hours ending at 6 A. M. today.

Nazis Shelling Cherbourg

German Remnants were falling back to Cap de la Hague to the northwest, and Nazi artillery there fired on Cherbourg to delay Allied use of the great harbor.

German lines on the eastern flank sagged under the weight of General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's offensive—supported by artillery and warship fire—that seized Brettevillette, four miles southeast of Tilly-sur-Seulles, Tessel-Bretville, two and a half miles southeast of Tilly, and Fontenay Lepresnel, two miles east of Tilly. Tilly is 12 miles west of the Nazis' main eastern bastion of Caen.

Doughboys battled to clean out the last Nazis still fighting from houses in the main sections of Cherbourg and other troops closed in on several pockets and villages behind the lines by-passed in the powerful advance. The Germans still held Haupertus airfield, east of Cherbourg.

DAY

14 Warships Shell Germans

Powerful aid from the sea helped

A dispatch from Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead in Churbourg said "at 11.30 A. M. today we cannot say Cherbourg is entirely ours," although the backbone of enemy opposition had been broken.

Patrols Encounter Snipers

"Patrols pushing into the central part of the city met fire from a few snipers, and small knots of resistance," Whitehead reported.

Meanwhile the British on the eastern Normandy front smashed into Nazi defenses between Caen and Tilly-sur-Seulles.

Warships have joined in bombarding the Germans east of Tilly, said a dispatch from the front.

An official German statement quoted by the German Transocean News Agency today and picked up by Reuters said, "the town of Tilly has been abandoned. A breakthrough near Tilly has been contained."

Nazi E-Boats Fought Off

German E-boats were beaten off by Allied destroyers in attempted attacks last night against invasion convoys off the eastern end of Cherbourg peninsula, and mine sweepers in the Barfleur area cleared the area around the cape, escorted by the United States destroyers Walke and Forrest.

Supreme headquarters in this morning's communique said that "fighting everywhere" in the port of Cherbourg was "extremely severe," but that the full liberation "cannot be long delayed." The doughboys were rooting out suicide squads of Germans as they neared

Many Nazis Give Up.

The Americans flung themselves into the city yesterday in an assault that blotted out one strong point after another and nullified the last-ditch defense of Nazi soldiery under orders to die rather than yield. Many did die. But many more yielded in the face of the Americans' withering fire and trooped by the hundreds into prisoner of war pens.

Isolated pockets of resistance still were holding out in the northeastern tip of the peninsula, but the American advance had overflowed the entire sector, and it was just a question of mopping up. Some Germans were entrenched deeply underground in strong fortifications and had to be blown out.

Remnants of four Nazi divisions were making the stand in Cap de la Hague on the farthest northwest point of the peninsula.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, June 27 (Tuesday).—Cherbourg has fallen, it was announced officially early today, and the Allies have their first great port in France.

NIGHT

The city finally was cleared of the enemy after a long and bitter struggle in which the Germans resisted house by house and strong points had to be cleared out one by one. (The dispatch was sent at 7:16 a. m.—1:16 a. m., Eastern war time).

loss of contact with the city's German garrison; this account said:

"The last wireless sent by the garrison of Cherbourg before communications with the outer world were cut off was sent by evening and was as follows: 'Final struggle for Cherbourg raging. General fighting with troops. Long live Führer and Germany.'"

DNB said it was only a "question of a few hours" until the Germans would have used up their ammunition.

Confusion Continuous

Then a German International Information Bureau dispatch shortly before noon today said the assault upon the port started at 8 o'clock last night and that "the town of Cherbourg is in Allied hands."

German confusion was evident in broadcasts antedating these accounts.

One DNB version said: "The

Cherbourg was a terminal point then for trans-Atlantic luxury liners.

Nazis Show Confusion Over Cherbourg Fight

London, June 26 (AP)—A DNB broadcast from Berlin today said American tanks had penetrated the Cherbourg arsenal, one of the two main strongpoints still holding out in the port city.

The tanks were blown up, the broadcast declared, while American thrusts at the "observation post of command," the other strong point, were turned back by the German commander and his troops with hand grenades and "other close-contact arms."

"The Americans took possession of the major part of the town of Cherbourg, but so far they did not capture the harbor and remaining coastal installations," DNB said. "In some of the outskirts of the town there are still German centers of resistance."

"Final Struggle Raging"

DNB said this information had just been received. Earlier a French language broadcast by the German radio informed the people of occupied Europe that Cherbourg fell at 9 o'clock last night "after resistance of unheard of violence." Shortly thereafter, however, a German Transocean news agency broadcast indicated the reports of Cherbourg's fall were the result of German commander of Cherbourg refused repeated American demands to surrender. German occupation forces of Cherbourg, in fact, defended themselves up to the last grenade and the last shell."

CHERBOURG DOCKS TO BE FIXED SOON

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 26 (A. P.).—Regardless of such demolitions as the Germans may have accomplished, it is expected that Cherbourg's fine harbors and extensive port facilities will be engaged in limited unloadings within twenty-four hours after the city is firmly in Allied hands.

In ten days the port should be funnelling in armies of men and supplies to feed full-scale military operations.

DAY

The Germans have been reported blowing up and firing port facilities and seeking to block the harbors, but the Allies have had plenty of experience in clearing harbors in North Africa and Italy and undoubtedly have much new machinery ready for quick installation. The 25-foot tide will per-

Reporter Walks to Center of City Deserted Even by Its Cats.

JUN 27 1944

(Distributed by the Associated Press.)

Outside Cherbourg, June 26.—American troops are fighting street battles in the city of Cherbourg today. Last night, troops moved into the city from both flanks, occupying the streets leading to the military fort on the left and around the Commercial Basin on the right.

At dawn today, troops at the center moved directly forward into the city, and when I left Cherbourg an hour ago they were fighting around a post office in the center of town.

I drove by jeep up the main road to Cherbourg until we came to a road-block. A huge crate had made the central road impassable to vehicles. We started forward on foot and entered the city between two still-smoking French forts which had been put out of action at dawn. With a radio reporter colleague and Lieut. Jack Hampton of Davenport, Iowa, I entered Cherbourg, walking slowly down the Avenue Carnot, leading to the railroad station.

DAY

It was an eerie sight. Houses were in flames and there was not a thing alive on the streets, not even a cat. Deep inside the city we could hear the rumming of machine guns; mortar shells lobbed here and there, exploding with plumes of white smoke. Obviously the city had been avacuated of its civilian population. I read the German order pasted on the wall, ordering every inhabitant not connected with public works to leave, including all women, even the wives of those who remained behind. The evacuation was ordered at nightfall, June 17.

When machine-gun bullets

30. 24 — 16573

whistled down the smoky, deserted streets I took shelter in a still burning building near a huge pre-war sign of the British Royal Mail Line, inviting all to take trips to Brazil and the Argentine. A drenching rain was falling, but still the sound of street-battle exploded from the center of the city.

Millet's Statue Scarred.

I could not see very much of the city, but it appeared that most of the damage is on the outskirts. The statue of the great Norman painter Millet is scarred by shrapnel. From the direction of the enemy fire, I gather that the Germans are holding out in a Cherbourg arsenal, in the seaplane base and in the military port.

On the way back we passed a large prison camp that American engineers have been constructing for days, in anticipation of the incoming prisoners, and some of them were already behind barbed-wire. A group of about a thousand were smoking cigarettes and sheltered from the rain under blankets. They looked cold and wet, but not unhappy. It was the largest collection of prisoners I have yet seen since the second front started. We have taken 3,400 in the last twenty-four hours.

Cherbourg is the first great military prize of the second front and it will probably be entirely ours by tonight or tomorrow at the latest.

dered. They are holed up in houses and in concrete pillboxes on the beach, fighting to the last, while from Cap de la Hague the enemy's artillery is now throwing heavy shells into the city. Their concussion is shaking the wooden box on which I am writing this dispatch a few yards from the English Channel.

Across the street is the Amiot aircraft plant, or what once was a plant, now it is a charred and burning ruins, sobotaged by the Germans in the last hours in Cherbourg.

Down the road less than 100 yards our tanks are sitting on the beach near knocked - out enemy strong points, blasting at machine-gun nests that still are holding out. The rattle of machine-gun fire breaks out intermittently.

DAY

Resistance is Disorganized.

The tanks helped the doughboys fight their way through tough, scattered knots of resistance to enter the city late yesterday. When the Germans began firing from houses along the route of advance, the tanks rolled up and blasted the positions. In one house a German officer and three enlisted men lay dead with bullet holes through their foreheads, neat round holes put there by an American expert rifleman. The officer lay with a champagne bottle in one hand, a rifle in the other. He had decided to fight to the last.

and Sicily and Italy, but none thrilled me so much as the entry of the American troops into this city. Of all the places stormed by skill and courage, this ranks at the top of the list.

Last Spasm of Resistance.

Now the defenders are in their last dying spasm of resistance. Their only hope is to deny the Allies the use of the port for a little while longer.

The Americans won control of Fort du Roule late last night, thus wiping out one of the enemy's strongest positions in the perimeter of defenses. Within this great concrete and steel pile the Germans had been able to hold out even whi le those behind them were being overrun.

But even yet all the Germans have not been dug out of the maze of tunnels and interconnected chambers of the deep fortress. There were reports that the Germans and recaptured Fort du Roule last night, but this proved to be untrue.

Still Fighting in Fortress.

"Any talk of the Germans recapturing Fort du Roule is nonsense," declared the officer commanding the troops who had fought their way into the upper part of the fortress whose naval guns pointed out of thick concrete walls just south of the city toward the sea. Even while the Americans were in control of the upper part the Germans were still firing from the lower levels.

"We put a charge of TNT on the end of a pole and dropped it down to the gun opening," the officer said. "Then we pulled a string. It damn near deafened me, but that gun never fired again."

A German prisoner declared the lower chambers of the fortress could not be reached from the top and that supplies were brought down into it from a tunnel leading from the railroad station thousands of yards away.

Apparently the fortress was neutralized now, but there were still enemy troops within it who will have to be dug out when the secret entrance to the interlocking rooms and levels is found.

White Flags Unfurled.

With two other correspondents I tried to reach Cherbourg on the main highway from the south. But from the west an enemy anti-aircraft gun was raking the approach with bursts of fire. Artillery observers were searching for this by-passed position which was endangering columns coming up behind the advanced units.

By a circuitous route we drove to the very beach which yesterday was being pounded by Allied warships knocking out a battery of guns. Around the gun positions were concrete pillbox domes which had been manned until this morning, when tanks came up and blasted out the defenders. Dynamite charges then had destroyed the pillboxes.

Private Noah Stonum, a tank gunner from Elgin, Ill., helped put one of them out of commission.

Across the water we could see the old French forts on the breakwater. White flags of surrender fluttered from them. Fort des Flamands looked like a pile of debris. The Germans blew it up yesterday as the doughboys closed in.

The first unit into this section of the city was led by Lieut. George Myers of Cincinnati. This was the spearhead that sliced off the eastern part of the city.

"Damn it, I wanted to wade in the English Channel today, but machine guns from the pillboxes were still firing this morning," one officer growled.

Brooklyn Officer Clears Position.

There were surprisingly few mines and booby traps left by the Germans to hamper the American entry into the city. Most of the opposition was from machine gun nests and guns in the forts.

The unit here has found only two boobytraps so far and the only mines were those in front of the smashed beach defenses.

Coming into the city the doughboys hit one tough knot of resistance with a German colonel and 300 troops holed up in a building and armed with machine guns and rifles.

"We just brought up tanks and boys with automatic Browning rifles," said Lieut. Benjamin Westervelt of 418 Stockholm street, Brooklyn, "and poured fire through the windows and doors. That got 'em. The Colonel came out to surrender his men. They poured out of there through the windows and doors in streams."

The unit kept one of the prisoners and when a pillbox strongpoint was encountered he was sent forward to tell the defenders that unless they surrendered tanks would be brought up and all of them wiped out.

"We got fifty-six of that bag," Lieut. Westervelt said. "We did the same thing at other places, too, and this man convinced more than 100 Germans to surrender."

There were few civilians in the section of the city we visited, but those on the streets were giving a warm welcome to the Yanks.

Nazi Fanatics Trapped Like Rats Continue Disorganized Resistance—Still Fire From Lower Levels of Captured Fortress.

JUN 27 194

By DON WHITEHEAD.

Cherbourg, 11:31 A. M., June 26 (A. P.).—Cherbourg is a rubble-filled, smoking battleground over which rolls the thunder of crashing enemy artillery shells and the sharp rattle of machine guns as the Americans move from house to house cleaning up the last fanatical Nazi resistance in this port city.

At 11:30 A. M. today we cannot say that Cherbourg is entirely ours. The American forces who stormed up the peninsula and fought their way into the city late yesterday afternoon have virtual control, but there still remain stubborn groups of Germans who have not yet surrendered. The resistance is disorganized. The defenders, still manning their guns, are German fanatics, trapped like rats. There is no escape for them. They are the last doomed defenders of Cherbourg.

No one should ever forget the battle for Cherbourg. It is a classic example of American courage and initiative. I have seen a lot of towns fall in Africa

British Medical Orderly Asked German For Blankets

By LEONARD MOSLEY

With the Sixth Air-Borne Division, Normandy, June 26 (A)—Ever since I went to Berlin, eight years ago. I have been meeting bewildered Germans who "just don't understand the crazy British."

But I think the most puzzled of all was a young Nazi officer I met in Normandy recently. He was sitting disconsolately in the back room of a British medical dressing station near Caen.

Calls It Glorious Madness

When I went up to him and spoke in German, he said:

"I have read in our party newspapers that you English are mad, but I have a broad mind. I've traveled in foreign countries and I believed it was just propaganda, but in the past 24 hours I have found that it's all true. The English truly are mad, stark staring mad."

And then rather gloomily he added: "But it's a glorious kind of madness just the same."

I naturally began probing him. This is what had happened to him.

Met Air-Borne Attack

He was out on anti-air-borne invasion maneuvers with his company in the woods and apple orchards of the Orne Valley in the early hours of D-day when the thunder of British planes filled the air and down on French soil tumbled hundreds of British paratroops.

"So I scattered my men where the paratroops had landed and warned them they must be swift and ruthless, then set off to kill my own personal Englishman," he said.

The young Nazi's face puckered, and he continued:

"What happened when I found the first Englishman is the reason I say your people are mad. I lifted my revolver and fired at him twice."

Asked Him For Blankets

The two shots missed and the British paratrooper dodged behind a tree, and instead of firing back, to the Nazi's amazement, he cried out in German: "Tell me, Herr Officer, have you fellows any blankets we can borrow?"

"Who are you? What's this nonsense?" asked the German lieutenant.

"I am a conscientious objector," said the paratrooper calmly.

"Then what are you doing here?" asked the Nazi.

Dropped In Marsh

"Oh," answered the paratrooper, "our blankets dropped into a marsh and we've got wounded, including a couple of Germans, in a cottage up the road, and I'm looking around for something to keep them warm. Can you help me?"

It was no use trying to explain the situation to the German. How can you explain to a German the remarkable story of the Sixth Airborne Division's paratrooping conscientious objectors?

The British Air-borne Army dropped upon Normandy June 6. Down by parachute with the first troops went scores of them as orderlies and assistants attached to our air-borne ambulance units, and in the first few hours their casualties were as heavy in killed and wounded as the rest of the troops.

One Of Finest Stories

The work of the air-borne medical services in the first week of the invasion, to which these conscientious objectors contributed, is one of the war's finest stories.

Doctors and staffs dropped by parachute in the first wave of planes, together with all the material a medical dressing station usually carries. Each unit parachuted 72 pints of plasma for blood transfusions and stocks of penicillin.

By 11 A. M. that day one brigade surgical unit had performed five major operations while under enemy fire from a wood only 100 yards away.

Don't Think Of Gunfire

One orderly said: "They don't even think about it. Ordinary wound cases and men whose operations can wait are evacuated to the beaches, so what you see here are all serious cases where minutes are precious."

They were men who would die if help from the knife didn't reach them soon. So, though the young paratroop doctors work calmly,

Tommies Call It 'Battle of Pub Crawl'—Name Enemy Forts After Saloons.

JUN 27 1944

By ROGER GREENE.

The British Front in France, June 26 (A. P.).—Advancing under a terrific barrage—with a big gun to every eight yards of front—Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's tanks and infantry cracked into German defenses between Caen and Tilly-sur-Seulles today.

Some towns fell to the sweeping assault of British Tommies who charged into battle under drizzling black skies and advanced about 1,000 yards in two and a half hours.

DAY

The offensive was officially described as "going satisfactorily."

Fontenay Lepresnel, two miles east of Tilly, is now firmly in British hands, and the infantry is clearing the last enemy remnants from the strongly defended wooded ridge overlooking Tessel and Bretteville, two and one-half and three miles respectively southaest of Tilly.

At Advance Field Headquarters dramatic reports came in of the British progress.

The distance gained by one British unit had just been marked up on the battle charts when a staff officer said, "You'll have to add another 1,000 yards to that figure. Things are happening fast."

In the line this was called the "Battle of the Pub Crawl."

Every German stronghold was nicknamed by the Tommies after West London restaurants.

"We've just had lunch at Claridge's and now we are going on to the Ritz," an officer said.

NAZI PUZZLED

they cut swift and clean. In three days that surgical unit had treated over 300 men and performed 60 operations.

Once a farmhouse was overrun by Nazis and fire was pouring in from all sides. Over one operating table an orderly was putting a swab on a soldier's stomach wound when a shell hit him in the back.

Before he could fall forward over the patient, which might have resulted in the man's death, another orderly took a flying tackle at him, thrust him away, then scrambled up and took his place. The operation continued and was successful.

RUSS TROOPS OPPOSE ALLIES

Nazis Draft Them To Man Norman Coast Positions

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expedition Forces, June 26 (AP)—Several battalions of Russians, pressed into German military service, have been met by Allied invasion armies on the Normandy front, is was disclosed today, and some still are fighting there.

They are among the considerable numbers of foreign troops in the German service encountered by the invading forces. Apparently they have been used largely to round out coastal garrisons and local reserve forces.

No Word On How They Fought

There was no indication how well the Russians might have fought, but one officer pointed out that with German guns at their backs, most foreign troops do fight.

Captured Russians are treated the same as any other prisoners of war, at least until further clarification of their status.

Unlike some of the other foreign recruits who are sprinkled through the German ranks, the Russians apparently are formed into solid battalions of their own.

No Record Of Desertions

In most cases they are led by Russian officers, although generally they are under the supervision of a German chief officer.

It was not disclosed whether any such Russians quit and came over to the Allies en masse.

Neither was there any information given out thus far to show from what part of Russia they came or how they were pressed into service.

Cherbourg Like Tunisia

Nazi Flight to Cap de la Hague Similar to Cap Bon Debacle

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 26 (AP).—The German debacle at Cherbourg and the flight of Nazi remnants to Cap de la Hague to the northwest recall the Germans' Tunisian finale at Cap Bon a year ago last month.

The Germans pulled back to Cap Bon after the Allies captured Tunis and Bizerte, and Cap Bon fell in four days. It is doubtful if the Germans can hold out so long at Cap de la Hague once the Americans turn their full attention there.

The main difference between the two situations is that apparently comparatively large formations of Germans were trapped in Cherbourg, including the commander, Lieutenant General Dietrich von Schlieben.

Cherbourg Hotel Says English Major's Scotch

Frenchman Weeps as He Offers Drink to Americans

WITH AMERICAN FORCES AT CHERBOURG, France, June 26 (AP).—Three American correspondents were in the Hotel Atlantique here today when a door opened and a little Frenchman with a white mustache beckoned to them. They entered his living quarters and he almost burst into tears. His eyes were wet from emotion. He scarcely could speak.

"I been waiting for you for four years," he said, wiping his eyes. "You are the first Americans I have seen."

"Please take a drink," he said, and started to pour liquor into glasses. Suddenly he stopped and said: "Wait, I have something I have been saving for you. I had forgotten.

Then he came back with a bottle of Scotch.

"Four years ago," he said, "the English were evacuating France through this port. n town a major gave me this bottle and said: 'We'll be back in ve years,' but I never thought I'd live to see this day."

Germans Admit Black Sunday

Stockholm, June 26 (A. P.).—Germans are calling yesterday their black Sunday because of the defeat at Cherbourg and the Russian break-through, Aftonbladet's Berlin correspondent reported today.

More American Commanders Revealed

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 26 (AP)—Brig. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, who secretaly went to Rome for pre-surrender discussions with the then Premier, Marshal Pietro Badoglio, commands the United States 101st Air-borne Division in France, supreme headquarters disclosed today.

Maj. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgeway, who commanded the 82nd Air-borne Division in Sicily and Italy, led the division into Normandy.

The United States battleship Nevada, which participated in yesterday's bombardment of Cherbourg's defenses, was under the command of Capt. P. M. Rhea, of Washington.

The commanders of other American naval units were:

The battleship Arkansas, Capt. F. G. Richards, of Newcastle, Maine.

The battleship Texas, Capt. C. A. Baker, of Washington.

The cruiser Tuscaloosa, Capt. J. W. B. Waller, of Manchester by the Sea, Mass.

Allied Headquarters Say French Did No Sniping

Denies Civilians Fired at Troops; Praises Resistance to Foe

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 26 (AP).—Investigation has shown that there have been no authenticated instances of French civilian snipers firing on Allied troops, a special Supreme Headquarters announcement said today. To the contrary, French resistance to the Germans has been a great contribution to Allied operations, it added.

The statement read: "It is announced by Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, today that investigations have been made of allegations of French civilian snipers firing on Allied troops. No authenticated use of French civilian snipers has been found.

"On the other hand, Supreme Headquarters emphasized that French resistance to the Germans has been a great contribution in support of Allied operations."

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 26 (A. P.).—Col. Herbert B. Thatcher, commander of a wing in the Ninth United States Air Force Bomber Command, has been promoted to brigadier-general, it was announced today.

Gen. Thatcher is 34 years old and lives in Chevy Chase, Md. He led the first medium level attack by Marauders against the Abbeville railroad yards on July 16, 1943.

Cherbourg French Hid Four American Airmen

New York, June 26 (AP)—Advance American patrols penetrating into Cherbourg, discovered four United States airmen who had landed near the city on D-day an dhad since been hidden by French patriots. The story was told tonight by Colin Wills, BBC reporter, in a London boradcast recorded by CBS.

The names of the four men were not revealed.

"When an American patrol fought its way into Cherbourg yesterday," Wills related, "'a Frenchman suddenly ran out from a gate toward them. He shouted: 'Friend.' And then he said: 'I have four Americans here.' Four more figures approached. It was true. These four Americans had been in Cherbourg right through the atteck by their countrymen."

Nazi Shell Fragment Wounds Correspondent

New York, June 26 (AP)—Richard D. McMillan, United Press correspondent, yesterday was wounded in the back by a shell fragment when a German naval battery laid down a barrage on United States positions in the battle for Cherbourg. A sergeant was killed and several officers were wounded.

The United Press said today the fragment, which cut close to McMillan's spine, had not been removed. The corespondent continued to work, however, and went on into Cherbourg.

A veteran overseas correspondent for UP, McMillan covered the North African, Sicilian and Italian campaigns.

Naming Of Koenig Pleases De Gaulle

New York, June 26 (AP)—Radio France at Algiers said that Gen. Charles de Gaulle, addressing the French Consulative Assembly today, expressed deep satisfaction with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's naming of French General Joseph Pierre Koenig as commander of all resistance forces in France, and that he regarded it as a "favorable augury" for agreements still to be concluded.

Under the Eisenhower agreement, de Gaulle said, "General Koenig, in relation to this Government, stands on a level with any commander of a national force within an inter-Allied system."

De Gaulle said that "if France is not as yet officially considered by certain of the Allied governments as one of the belligerents among the United Nations, the army of France at least is now recognized."

De Gaulle told the meeting of the "immense national enthusiasm shown recently by the liberated populations of the liberated part of Normandy," which, he said, "will make us redouble our efforts for hastening the rout of the hated enemy, alongside our dear and gallant Allies."

100 Frenchmen Hanged In Ussel Square, Report

Port Bou, Spain, June 26 (AP)—German troops who blasted their way back into the guerrilla-held French village of Ussel Tuesday night climaxed their victory by hanging 100 Frenchmen in the town square, a Paris dispatch reported today.

A Spanish correspondent of the the Barcelona newspaper Vanguardia, writing under German censorship, said that after "liquidation of 100 responsible Partisans" calm was "again imposed" in the town, located in the Correze department at the foot of the Plateau de Millevaches, a stronghold of the French Maquis.

Lacked Supplies

Frenchmen reaching the Spanish frontier previously had reported the hangings. They said Ussel first was taken by the Maquis without much resistance. The Maquis then withdrew, the border reports said, but returned when Vichy authorities and the Germans failed to brings civilian supplies to Ussel.

Along with them the Maquis brought flour and other food and distributed it in the town, the frontier reports said, and about this time Vichy authorities ordered collaboratonist militia to consider Frenchmen who accepted food from "terrorists" as "terrorists themselves."

Retired To Plateau

The fugitive Frenchmen said the Maquis had blasted bridges and highways leading to Ussel but did not resist once the Germans had reached the outskirts of the town, choosing rather to retire into the Plateau de Millevaches, where guerrillas are said to number in the thousands.

Frenchmen expressed belief those hanged probably were chosen at random from Ussel's civilian population.

Some Frenchmen said the Germans might be trying to provoke premature attack by the Maquis, who are reported building a strong force in the adjoining hills for use at a time and place to be chosen by the Allied supreme command.

RUSS ARMIES

Mile-An-Hour Drive Traps 5 Nazi Divisions In Vitebsk Area

London, Tuesday, June 27 (AP)—Massive Red armies yesterday captured Vitebsk and Zhlobin, northern and southern anchors of the haunted German Fatherland Line in White Russia, and plunging forward at a mile-an-hour clip were well on the way toward encirclement of three remaining bastions of the German defenses along a 250-mile front, a Soviet communique announced last night.

An unprecedented number of populated places—more than 1,700—were liberated in the path of the gigantic offensive as four Red armies left Vitebsk and Zhlobin to be mopped up and plunged westward toward Germany itself.

A supplementary communique said 6,000 Germans were killed and 1,000 captured in Vitebsk of the estimated 45,000 to 60,000 encircled in that area, and said Soviet troops were drawing a noose tighter around two other pockets west of the city—possibly the remnants of the garrison.

Great Stores Found

Another 1,000 were declared wiped out in a battle for captured Beshenkovichi, district center southwest of Vitebsk and the announcement told of Germans "retreating in disorder" and abandoning trucks, ammunition and heavy guns in a number of sectors.

Great stores of ammunition and equipment, including 1,100 trucks, were found in Vitebsk.

In the fighting at Zhlobin, the Russians declared about 2,000 Germans were killed, while another 900 were slain west of Rogachev to the north, bringing the total German casualties announced in the last 24 hours to approximately 10,000 killed and 1,500 captured.

Swedes Hint Of Withdrawal

Swedish dispatches from Berlin, picturing the Germans as considering a withdrawal from White Russia, said "not even official spokesmen are trying to minimize the sharpening situation," and expressed fear a Russian drive in the south might be coupled with an Allied a dvance from Italy to pinch off the Balkans.

The Soviets captured Obol, 40 miles northwest of Vitebsk and only 20 miles from Polotsk, German base 15 miles from the old Polish border. The line of this new front alone extended 53 miles southward to captured Chereya, 58 miles southwest of Vitebsk.

Red troops storming toward the Nazi's White Russian bastion of Orsha, 47 miles south of Vitebsk, took the town of Pishchalovo, less than two miles north of the Orsha, and the process of encirclement was under way.

Nazi Escape Route Cut

Other troops were 23 miles northwest of Orsha, and other columns cut the Orsha-Borisov and the Orsha-Lepel highway and railway lines, Nazi escape routes to the west of the city.

Mogilev, another German stronghold, also was being encircled. The Russians took Mostok, six miles northeast of the city, and also were astride the railway 18 miles east of the base. Still other units were converging on it from the north, and preparing to leap the Dnepr river in their westward surge.

Soviet forces also plunged more

Reds Win Vitebsk and Zhlobin; 45,000 Nazis Believed Caught

London, June 26 (A. P.).—Russian troops today stormed and captured Vitebsk, one of the most formidable Nazi bastions on the eastern front, Premier Stalin announced, and Soviet armies were menacing three other fortress cities in battle-flamed White Russia.

This had hardly been announced when a second order of the day revealed that the Russians had also captured Zhlobin.

In his sixth order of the day since the launching of the great central front offensives, Stalin declared that Vitebsk fell to troops of the First Baltic and Third White Russian fronts, toppled by the swiftly encircling Russians in less than three days of fighting.

He did not disclose the fate of the survivors of five enemy infantry divisions—estimated to number some 45,000 men—trapped in the Vitebsk area. But it was unlikely that any considerable number escaped, for their railroad and highway routes had been cut, and it was believed that all had been caught in the Russian net.

The Moscow radio earlier said today that these German remnants had been forced back into the center of the city where they were fighting fiercely.

Stalin commanded a twenty salvo salute from 224 guns to mark the capture of Vitebsk, which lies seventy miles east of the former Polish border and 130 miles northeast of Minsk.

The great stronghold of Zhlobin lies at the opposite end of the White Russian front, 150 miles south of Vitebsk. Its capture exposes Bobruisk, about thirty-five miles to the northwest on the road to the White Russian capital of Minsk. The order of the day described Zhlobin as "an important strong point in the German defenses in the Bobruisk direction."

Germans Show Alarm.

Other Russian forces stormed the outer defenses of three other Bastion cities in great blows which the Germans declared might be only the forerunners to even heavier assaults further south.

As Russia's vital role in the Allied Tehran master plan to crush Germany this year unfolded front by front, German broadcasts noted with alarm that a Fifth Red Army had struck in the Ostrov sector, 165 miles northwest of doomed Vitebsk. That would make a 325-mile front in the east, exclusive of the two Russian armies now battering Finland.

JUN 27 1944

And at least four other great Soviet armies, equipped in part with American weapons, are poised on the Polish and Romanian fronts—waiting for the signal for a concerted push toward Berlin in conjunction with Allied Armies in the west and south.

Rolling over roads strewn with dead Germans and wrecked equipment, the Russians had thrown a broad belt of men and machines around the fortress city of Vitebsk, and were threatening the strongholds of Orsha, Mogilev and Bobruisk to the south.

Moscow said that more than 16,000 Germans had been killed—8,000 of them in the area south of Vitebsk alone. Hundreds of big guns, trucks and other equipment also had been seized. Machines in full working order were abandoned by the Germans, whose flight was called a retreat in panic. One entire company of the Fifty-sixth Nazi Infantry Division came over to the Red Army side, said the Soviet bulletin.

[In a broadcast picked up at New York today by CBS, a political commentator on the Berlin radio's home service, Dr. Scharping, predicted the loss of the entire German line stretching from Vitebsk to Bobruisk, when he stressed that the Russians are superior numerically as well as materially along front bulge from Vitebsk to Bobruisk.]

Orsha—Russian troops of Col.-Gen. Ivan Cherniakhovsky's Third White Russian Army broke through German positions northeast of Orsha. They captured 150 villages, including the rail station of Khlustino, ten miles from Orsha, which is forty-eight miles south of Vitebsk.

Zakharov on March.

Mogilev—Col.-Gen. Matvei Zakharov's Second White Russian Army forced the Pronya River, one of the main defenses of Mogilev, and seized Chausi, a district center. Khaikhovichi, only sixteen miles from Mogilev, also was among more than 200 liberated villages. Mogilev is ninety miles south of Vitebsk.

Bobruisk—Gen. K. K. Rokossovsky's First White Russian Army again was on the move in this sector, just above the Pripet Marshes. The troops under this Stalingrad hero hammered out a fifty-mile breach in German defenses on both sides of Bobruisk, seventy miles southwest of Mogilev. The German stronghold of Zhlobin, thirty-five miles southeast of Bobruisk, appeared to be on the verge of encirclement.

Gen. Rokossovsky's men forced the Drut River above Rogachev, which is thirty-three miles due east of Bobruisk, widened a hole in German lines to eighteen miles and swept forward seven miles. Retka, twenty miles northeast of Bobruisk was among 100 villages captured.

Another Soviet column striking up from the area southwest of Bobruisk cut the Bobruisk-Luninets railway—one possible German escape channel—and seized points only ten miles from Bobruisk.

The German account of a new front opening near Ostrov said the Russians attacked Sunday for three hours with artillery fire, after which infantrymen swept forward. Berlin admitted a German withdrawal a mile westward.

Ostrov is thirty-three miles south of German-held Pskov, gateway to Latvia and southern Estonia.

Marshal Leonid A. Govorov's Leningrad army is battering its way toward Helsinki, while Gen. K. A. Meretskov's Karelian front forces are making headway further north in a companion drive between Lakes Ladoga and Onezhskoe (Onega). Pertozavodsk, capital of the Soviet Karelian republic, appeared to be on the verge of falling to Meretskov's troops.

Ribbentrop Visits Helsinki, Report

Stockholm, June 26 (AP)—Reports were circulated here today that German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop has visited Helsinki to exert pressure on the Finns to continue the fight on the side of the Nazis.

The reports were regarded as reliable, but could not be confirmed directly from Helsinki. It was said Ribbentrop spent two days in the Finnish capital. There was no indication immediately what success he had, but the chances that Finland was building a "peace cabinet" appeared diminishing as a result of German pressure and promises of military help.

Secret Finnish Session

NEW YORK, June 26. (AP)—The British Broadcasting Company, quoting German sources, said the Finnish parliament was sitting tonight in secret session. The broadcast was recorded by NBC.

HEAVY BOMBERS HIT VIENNA AREA

Refineries And Aircraft Plant Near Vienna Targets

London, Tuesday, June 27 (AP). The Germans sent rocket bombs over southern England during yesterday and through the night in one of the heaviest barrages yet, taking advantage of cloud cover which hid their launching grounds.

Casualties and damage were reported from a number of places while there was a new revival of talk here of lifting the blackout in the face of attacks by these blind raiders.

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 26 (AP)—United States Flying Fortresses and Liberators 500 to 750 strong flew from Italian bases to the Vienna area today through the heaviest opposition in recent weeks, atttacking oil refineries, rail yards and an aircraft plant.

Poor weather meanwhile halted temporarily the pounding from the west of German supply and communication lines behind the French front.

Shoot Down Nazi Planes

The Fortresses and Liberators and their escorting Mustangs, Lightnings and Thunderbolts shot down large numbers of enemy planes on the route to the Vienna area, headquarters announced.

They struck refineries at Schwacht, 10 miles southeast of Vienna; Winterhafen, five miles southeast; Loubou, seven miles southeast; Floridsdorfer, northeast of the city; Kornenberg, seven miles north, and Moosbierhaum, 22 miles northwest. A Heinkel assembly plant at Schwacht and rail yards at Floridsdorfer also were hit, and "good results" were observed at all targets.

Four German fighters fell before the guns of one Mustang pilot alone, Capt. Samuel G. Brown, 27, of Tulsa, Okla., bringing his total to 13½ and making him runner-up for leading American score in the Mediterranean theater. He now has surpassed his group commander, Col. Charles M. McCorkle, of Newton, N. C., whose bag totals 11.

Little Effect On Battle

The letup over northwestern Europe had little effect on the battle of Cherbourg, but it meant a respite for German highway, rail and airfield facilities throughout France, which had been kept under constant harassment throughout the night by RAF planes.

Heavy and medium bombers from Italy also were busy overnight, blasting the Hungarian capital of Budapest. The Budapest radio went off the air again at 10 o'clock tonight, indicating another attack.

British-based Mosquito bombers last night attacked German troop concentrations, rail and supply targets near the battle lines, and stabbed deep into Germany, blasting industrial objectives at Homberg, northwest of Duisberg.

Beyond the Normandy lines, enemy supply dumps hidden in the Bretonne Forest on the Seine were left a mass of flames. German troops at Evrecy, southwest of Caen, and railways north of L'Aigle and at Argentan also were among the targets.

The Germans also took advantage of the bad weather to keep part of southern England under intermittent rocket-bomb attack by day and night.

Report Fighter Raid

The German news agency DNB

han 40 miles beyond captured Zhlobin, whose fall was hailed in an order of the day from Marshal Stalin last night.

Brozha Captured

The town of Brozha was captured by Red troops 12 miles southwest of the German stronghold of Bobruisk, as the Russians began another encircling movement. One unit captured Ratmirovichi, 35 miles southwest of the town, and Parichi, 23 miles southeast of Bobruisk.

On the Finnish front, a fifth Red army captured 40 localities east of Lake Onega, including the district center of Olonets, ten miles beyond the lake and 115 miles northeast of Leningrad. Another section of the Leningrad-Murmansk railway was freed above Lake Onezhskoe.

In the Gulf of Finland, the bulletin said, the Finns had been cleared from the fortified islands of Koivisto and Tuirinsaari, south of captured Viipuri and 125 miles across the gulf from Helsinki.

Baltic-White Sea Canal Open

The Russians also announced last night that the entire length of the Baltic-White Sea canal now was in Russian hands, and that for the first time since early in the Russo-German war, Soviet or other Allied warships up to light cruisers and merchant vessels would be able to sail from the northern shores to Leningrad. The Finns had severed this canal between Lakes Ladoga and Onega, north of the latter.

Moscow had not yet confirmed German reports that still another Red army was attacking in the Ostrov sector, 165 miles northwest of fallen Vitebsk.

Vitebsk Taken By Storm

Vitebsk was taken by storm on the fourth day of the great offensive by troops of Gen. Ivan Bagramian's First Baltic Army, whose northern and southern wings united to trap the defending Nazi forces.

Shortly after the announcement of the fall of the great Nazi bastion, Marshal Stalin issued another ordre of the day, his seventh since the start of the offensive, announcing that troops of the First White Russian army under Gen. K. K. Rokossovsky, hero of Stalingrad, had taken Zhlobin, 150 miles south of Vitebsk, exposing Bobruisk, 35 miles to the northwest.

The value of these two bastions scarcely can be overrated. Through Vitebsk run roads to the Baltic and East Prussia, and through Zhlobin are those leading to Minsk, capital of White Russia.

In his sixth order of the day, the premier told of the fall of Vitebsk, held by the Germans since its capture July 13, 1941. The Russians swarmed into the city Sunday on the third day of their offensive.

Stalin Orders Salvoes

Stalin commanded 12 salvoes from 124 Moscow guns to mark the Zhlobin victory, and ordered 20 salvoes from 224 guns to mark the capture of Vitebsk, 70 miles east of the former Polish border and 130 miles northeast of Minsk.

(A Moscow broadcast recorded by the federal communications commission said Col. Gen. Ivan Chernyakhovsky, commanding the third White Russian Army, had been promoted to the rank of Army general. His troops joined the first Baltic Army of Gen. Ivan Bagramian in seizing Vitebsk.)

Other Soviet forces stormed the outer defenses of three other bastion cities in great blows which the Germans declared might be only the forerunners to even heavier assaults farther south.

Driving along the shortest road to Berlin, the Russians were throwing out the familiar pincers around the "Fatherland line" Fortresses of Orsha, Mogilev and Bobruisk below Vitebsk—tactics with which they have hammered the enemy back all the way from Stalingrad.

Two Miles of Orsha

The British broadcasting company said the Red Avalanche of tanks and infantry had rumbled to within two miles of Orsha, half-way between Vitebsk and Mogilev, while outflanking columns were circling above and below Mogilev and Bobruisk.

The Moscow radio said that the remnants of five German divisions trapped at Vitebsk had been pressed into the central part of the city where they were fighting back fiercely.

The German radio reported the Nazi "bridgehead" at Vitebsk had been cut off from the rear.

Faced with a break-through which might lance through Lithuania and East Prussia and cut off German divisions in the Baltic states, the enemy was hurrying every available reserve to the front but was being driven steadily back, Moscow said.

The central front arc of more than 200 miles, curving from Vitebsk southward to below Bobruisk, raised a potential threat of a flanking drive on the White Russian capital of Minsk, which is 120 miles west and south of Orsha.

The Germans said these White Russian drives might themselves be only something in the nature of holding actions preparatory to a massive offensive farther south, below the Pripyat marshes where both sides have been making intensive preparations for Summer battles.

German military men were quoted in dispatches by way of Stockholm as saying the fighting in the north was of secondary importance designed to nail down German troops that might be needed elsewhere.

said Zagreb in Yugoslavia was raided Monday afternoon by RAF fighters, while the Paris radio reported German positions south of Coutances were heavily bombed for several hours during the day.

The Air Ministry reported Sunday night's fighter patrol against "buzz-bombs" was one of the most successful yet.

Although the ministry did not go beyond the statement that "a number were destroyed," one pilot got two on one patrol.

The latest bomb rumor unconfirmed from any official source—was that the Germans, instead of sending flyers to observe bomb hits, were equipping "pathfinder" bombers with automatic transmitters by which their course could be traced in order to adjust subsequent bombs for wind effect and other variables.

Battle Through Heaviest Opposition in Weeks to Strike Blow

JUN 27 1944

OIL AND PLANE PLANTS HIT

Weather Curtails Britain-based Operations After Five-prong Assault on France.

London, June 26 (A. P.).—Between 500 and 750 American heavy bombers battled their way from Italian bases through the heaviest opposition in recent weeks today and slammed explosives on six oil refineries, an aircraft factory and a railyard in the Vienna area.

Bad weather greatly curtailed operations from Britain and brought a letup in the steady pounding of German rail, highway and airfield facilities after a night in which R. A. F. Mosquitos flying from Britain had maintained this pressure both in Normandy and the German homeland, and in which medium and heavy bombers from Italy struck at the Hungarian capital of Budapest.

Continuing the Allied air operations that on Sunday kept five air armadas—four from Britain and one from Italy—drumming German installations in France virtually all day, the Mosquitoes last night attacked German troop concentrations, railroad and supply dumps near the French battlefront and industrial objectives in the German city of Homberg, northwest of Duisberg.

Unfavorable weather this morning threatened to limit today's operations over the beachhead sectors.

DAY

Battlefront Hit Hard.

Beyond the Normandy front lines, the Mosquitoes blasted German supply dumps in the forest of Bretonne on the Seine. Crewmen said the fires stretched two miles and were advancing in a series of semi-circles when they left.

The Mosquitoes bombed German troops in the village of Evrecy, southwest of Caen. Railroads north of Laigle and at Argentan were among other targets.

Supreme Headquarters announced that although most of yesterday's tactical assaults were directed against enemy fuel dumps and railroads, some American Thunderbolt dive-bombers struck German gun emplacements in Cherburg.

Some 3,500 warplanes participated in Sunday's attacks, ranging from Pas de Calais to the southern coast of France.

Allied losses for the day were placed at forty-three planes, including twenty heavy bombers. Fifty-nine Germans were downed.

Rocket Coast Battered Twice.

Two of the mighty fleets, one American and one British, battered the Nazi rocket bomb emplacements at Pas de Calais. Absent from English skies during daylight yesterday, the robots began coming over again during the night, but many were blasted before they got across the Channel.

American Flying Fortresses and Liberators struck three times from Britain during the day. Another force of the United States four-engined bombers struck into France from Italy.

Some 1,000 Flying Fortresses and Liberators, escorted by 500 fighters, thrust to within sixty miles of the Spanish coast in the day's first bomber strike from Britain. They blasted a fuel depot and airdromes near Toulouse and other airfields in the Boruges area, 125 miles south of Paris.

Southern France Raided.

British four-engined Lancasters and Halifaxes, also flying in 1,000-plane strength, got in their day's first blows at the Pas de Calais rocket nests. This was the earliest daylight blow by the R. A. F. since it resumed day bombings June 14 after twenty months of night work.

Hard on the heels of the British armada, American Liberators attacked the same area, concentrating their explosives on at least twelve power stations which supplied electricity for launching the flying bombs.

During the evening about 250 American heavy bombers and a similar number of escorting fighters attacked southeast of Paris, striking numerous airfields, including those at Bretigny and Villacoublay.

The day's fifth heavy bomber fleet, some 500 Flying Fortresses and Liberators coming from Italy, attacked rail lines and bridges both north and west of the French port of Marseille and oil and other military installations in southern France—chiefly at Sete, Balaruc, Avignon and Le Pontet.

German Rocket Bomb Kills Author's Sister

New York, June 26 (AP)—Mrs. Gwladys Moorewood, sister of Richard Llewllyn, author of "How Green Was My Valley," has been killed by a German rocket bomb which struck her home in southern England, the New York office of the British Information Services said tonight, releasing a dispatch from London.

Her brother is a captain in the British army and now is stationed in Italy.

The dispatch said Mrs. Moorewood, her stepmother and two nieces were killed by the projectile.

Berlin Says King's Nephew Is Captive

London, June 26 (AP)—The Berlin radio said tonight that Viscount Lascelles, 21, a nephew of King George VI, had been captured on the Italian front.

Shortly before the German announcement, an official statement was issued from Harewood House which said "Lord Harewood has had official intimation that Lieutenant Viscount Lascelles is reported wounded and missing and believed to be a prisoner of war."

Viscount Lascelles is the eldest son and heir to Lord Harewood, the sixth Earl of Harewood. He joined the Grenadier Guards two years ago as a private.

NIGHT

A Toronto dispatch quoting a correspondent of the Canadian Broadcasting Company in Italy said Lord Lascelles was wounded near a town which later was captured by the British Eighth Army. Lascelles' condition was such, the account said, that he could not be moved except by a jeep, and a comrade volunteered to get one. When he returned Lord Lascelles and his men were missing.

COL. RAY STECKER GETS AIR COMMAND

JUN 27 1944

London, June 26 (A. P.).—Col. Ray J. Stecker, football star at West Point in 1929-31, has been made commander of the Ninth United States Air Force Thunderbolt Group, Lieut. Gen. Lewis H. Brereton announced today.

DAY

Col. Stecker was in business at Salem, Mass., before re-entering the Army in 1941. He succeeds Col. Lance Call of Chillicothe, Tex., who received another Ninth Air Force assignment.

Flyers Destroy Nazi Planes.

London, June 26 (A. P.).—Two New Jersey Army fighter pilots, Phillip McHugh of Trenton, and Edward T. Meness of Runnemede, each destroyed an enemy plane on the ground in France Saturday.

$4,000,000 Fire

London, June 26 (AP)—A Reuters dispatch from Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, tonight said damage estimated at $4,000,000 had been caused by fire in the business area of the Antiqua naval base in the Leeward Islands.

NIGHT

Stalin Receives Johnston

London, June 26 (AP)—Premier Stalin today received Eric A. Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, the Moscow radio said in a broadcast by the Soviet monitor. W. Averell Harriman, United States Ambassador to Russia, and Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov were present, the broadcast said.

Goering Named To Defend Reich

London, June 26 (A. P.).—Radio France at Algiers said today Reichsmarshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering had been charged with the defense of Germany proper by Adolf Hitler and that he already had set up headquarters in Berlin.

DAY

Goering will direct the Todt organization—which built Germany's West and Atlantic walls—in the building of a new inner line of fortifications, the broadcast added.

Allies Now Within 15 Miles of Siena

American and French Troops Slug Their Way Toward Italian City Amid Spotty German Resistance.

By Noland Norgaard

JUN 27 1944

ROME, June 26—(AP)—American and foreign troops have slugged their way within less than 15 miles of the inland city of Siena and within 45 miles of Florence after Yank forces rolling up the west coast captured the port of Piombino without a fight, Allied headquarters announced today.

NIGHT

Resistance Spotty

German resistance continued spotty in the coastal sector, despite fresh reinforcements of 60-ton Tiger tanks brought from France within the past three weeks, but the Eighth Army was meeting stubborn opposition on both sides of Lake Trasimeno near the center of the long fighting front.

Capture of Piombino gave the Allies another valuable forward supply base on the west coast. The Nazis were forced to abandon the port to avoid encirclement. American infantry and armor charged on northward along the Rome-Pisa highway to within 35 road miles of Livorno (Leghorn), Italy's third largest port, whose harbor installations virtually ly been destroyed d bombing and German ns.

Fierce O

Siena, 31 miles south of Florence, was in the path of three Allied columns converging from the southwest, south and southeast. French troops, fighting through mountainous terrain about 25 miles southeast of Siena, were meeting the fiercest opposition in the neighborhood of Rocca D'Orcia, which they occupied yesterday.

American troops stabbing toward Siena from the southwest were reported locked in a hot tank and infantry fight south of Montieri and about eight miles northeast of Massa Maritima, which they had by-passed. All along the Fifth Army front the Nazis were using their big tiger tanks as mobile artillery.

The bitterly-contested town of Chiusi, nine miles southwest of Lake Trasimeno, remained in German hands, but the enemy's grip was threatened by Eighth Army units which had driven up the western shore of the lake to within two miles of Castiglione.

Strategy Obvious.

German strategy now obviously is to fight such a stubborn delaying action in the next few months that the Allies will not be able to make a Summer assault on the "Gothic" line between Pisa and Rimini—last defenses guarding the broad Po valley. In recent days the enemy had a powerful ally in heavy rains, particularly on the Eighth Army front, but the weather improved yesterday and today.

An Allied spokesman said there was evidence that the Nazis were attempting to "bring reinforcements to the front ot relieve badly battered units." The Fifth Army captured another 1,000 prisoners in recent days, bringing its total bag since the start of the present offensive to 24,000.

A field dispatch from Sid Feder of the Associated Press said that Piombino's port facilities had been damaged both by Allied and enemy action but they apparently were useable.

JUN 27 1944

5th Army Takes Italian Port

NORGAARD

Rome, June 26 (AP)—American troops of the Fifth Army seized the port of Piombino without opposition yesterday, thereby gaining a valuable advanced supply base for continued thrust up Italy's west coast, while both American and French troops converged on the inland town of Siena, Allied headquarters announced today.

Pressing after the enemy, who was compelled to evacuate Piombino to avoid encirclement, American infantry and tanks stabbed within five miles of Suvereto and within 38 miles of the important port of Livorno (Leghorn). Piombino is almost directly opposite the captured island of Elba.

More Towns Taken

Farther inland the Germans were rolled back upon the approaches to Siena from three directions. One Fifth Army force cracked through the villages of Torniella and Scalvala and threatened the town of Monticiano, five miles farther north and less than [illegible] miles southwest of Siena.

DAY

French troops, meanwhile, advanced on the west side of the river Ombrone, 20 miles due south of Siena. At the same time other French forces approaching from the southwest took the town of Castigliona Dorcia and village of Rocca Dorcia, 25 miles from Siena.

Tiger Tanks Defeated

Between these points and the Tyrrhenian coast the reinforced enemy was employing considerable numbers of big Mark VI Tiger tanks, which were defeated in a midnight battle in the area of Massa Maritima. The enemy delaying position in that sector was by-passed or wiped out.

A Fifth Army force stabbing toward Montieri still was locked in a bitter tank and infantry battle with desperate Nazi defenders south of Montieri and eight miles north of Massa. The village of Boccheggiano was taken in this area.

Across the entire Fifth Army front Field Marshal Kesselring was employing the 88-mm. guns of his Tiger tanks as mobile artillery. Most of these weapons were from the Nazi 504th Tank Battalion, which was rushed from Poitiers, France, three weeks ago.

More Taken Prisoner

An official spokesman said there was other evidence that the Germans were attempting to "bring reinforcements to the front to relieve badly battered units."

It also was disclosed that Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark's troops had taken an additional 1,000 prisoners in the past few days, bringing the total captured since the start of the present offensive to 24,000, exclusive of many thousands seized by the Eighth Army.

The Eighth Army continued its slugging progress against stubborn enemy forces in the vicinity of both Perugia and Lake Trasimeno. Monte Croce and the village of Pianello were taken in the vicinity of Perugia, and the town of Valfabrica was occupied in the foothills east of the Tiber.

Chiusi Threatened

The ancient town of Chiusi—scene of recent bloody fighting when an attacking South African force was overrun by Nazi tanks—remained in enemy hands, but the Nazis' grip there was threatened when other Eighth Army units drove up the west shores of Lake Trasimeno to within two miles of Castiglione, nine miles northwest of Chiusi.

An Allied spokesman said the German prisoners taken recently included 17-year-old youths who "nevertheless have been in the German Army long enough to become disillusioned about Nazi doctrines."

Cited as evidence of the deteriorating quality of German junior officers was a captured order by Kesselring declaring that "in the case of reformed units they must never go into battle with a company strength of more than 80 or 90 men. Our present-day company commanders cannot command more men than this."

The Hungarian capital of Budapest was hammered by RAF bombers last night after 500 to 750 American Flying Fortresses and Liberators had blasted rail and oil installations in southern France yesterday. Thirty-five fighters were encountered over France and three were destroyed. The Allies lost six planes.

Piombino Fell Because Engineers Wanted Beds

With American Troops in Piombino, Italy, June 26 (AP)—The official schedule called for the capture of this vitally important seaport today, but a party of just four engineers took possession 24 hours in advance.

They and their outfit were tired of sleeping under canvas for 11 straight months and wanted first pick at an indoor bivouac in the town.

They got it, too. This quartet—Lieut. Col. John C. Monning, of Los Angeles; Lieut. William Mearns, of Philadelphia, and Privates Noah Rhodes, Dayton, Ohio, and Albert McCray, of Baxter, Pa.—just drove into town like they were driving up to a hot-foot stand.

Place Empty Of Germans

They found the place empty of Germans but drew a couple of shots from friendly Italians before they were recognized as Americans.

And today, after their first night's sleep under a roof since last July, this outfit already is fixing up the water-front area, which was badly battered from a series of Allied air raids while the port was in enemy hands. The docks and a huge foundry and iron works suffered many direct hits and mostly are just twisted framework now.

The seawall is cratered in a number of places and there are bomb holes and rubble virtually all along the water front, but the residential section was little damaged.

This community of 30,000 population was considered vital to bring supplies to our onrushing troops.

60 Hidden In Woods

Although the advance party found no Germans in the port itself, the Jerries had not left the neighborhood. When the rest of the engineers' outfit arrived, one soldier who went to look for a bed was fired on from a hill outside the town.

He reported the incident and a party of five took an armored half-track to look for the enemy.

Killed Many, Captured Five

"We found 'em — about 60 of them, I guess," related Sergt. Ernest A. Bingham, of Raymondville, Texas, "on a hill in a woods, most of them in a big concrete pillbox.

"As we drove up they fired machine guns, pistols and rifles. We leveled machine guns from the car and got several shots right inside the front niche of the pillbox. They started to run through the woods, so Danny picked up his rifle and got one deadcenter."

Danny is Staff Sergeant Daniel Johnston, of Everett, Mass., who commanded the patrol.

They chased the surviving Germans, but demolitions delayed them, and the woods barred their vision, so some escaped.

"But we got plenty," Bingham added. "We found a bunch dead, and captured five prisoners."

Then they came home and everybody found a place to sleep—and liked it.

The Engineers Took Piombino.

Piombino, Italy, June 25 (Delayed) (A. P.).—A small group of Fifth Army Engineers who moved so fast they left the infantry behind, captured this Tyrrhenian seaport forty-five miles south of Livorno today and found the harbor apparently usable.

Jumping off this morning engineers headed up the road toward this peninsular port as fast as they could, fixing the highway where it was damaged as they went, but aiming particularly at Piombino, from which on a clear day the Island of Elba, eight miles off shore, is easily visible.

The advance element finally entered the town an hour after midday. Immediately they headed for the water front to see what was necessary to put the port in working order.

Shuttle-Bombing Group Pioneer Made Brigadier

Rome, June 26 (AP)—Charles W. Lawrence, commander of the American Flying Fortress wing which inaugurated shuttling bombing between Italian and Russian bases, has been appointed to the rank of brigadier general, it was announced today.

Lawrence, 43, who was graduated from West Point in 1923 and hails from Orlando, Fla., took over the wing from Brig. Gen. Joseph H. Atkinson, of Dalhart, Texas, now deputy commander of the 15th Air Force.

Poletti Confers With 'Purge' Leaders

Rome, June 26 (AP)—Lieut. Col. Charles Poletti, Allied Military Government Commissioner for Rome, conferred today with the Italian Committee of National Liberation and said later that the group will announce a list of heads of Rome government agencies to be purged for Fascist activities.

Poletti announced he would appoint a committee of 12 Italians—two from each political party—to act as a purge commission for the Rome region.

Smuts Toured Italian Front

ROME, June 26 (AP).—South African Premier Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts has visited various sectors of the Italian front, it was disclosed today.

Grandi Asked To Appear For Rome urge Trial

New York, June 26 (AP)—Count Dino Grandi, former Italian Ambassador to London and a member of the Fascist Grand Council under Mussolini, "has been invited by the newly-formed Italian Government in Rome to appear before the national purge commission that has been set up," the London radio said tonight.

"Count Grandi is charged with leading the armed insurrection in 1922, the notorious Fascist march on Rome, and taking part in the coup d'etat of 1925," the broadcast said.

It added that Grandi was living in a "foreign country from which he can easily return to defend himself if he chooses."

Grandi, sentenced in absentia by the Fascist puppet regime to death for treason to Mussolini, last was reported in Lisbon.

De Gaulle Experts Important Moves

Algiers, June 26 (A. P.).—Gen. Charles de Gaulle today asked and obtained a postponement of the French Provisional Assembly's scheduled debate on liberation, pending important negotiations now successfully taking place.

Gen. de Gaulle, apparently referring to his forthcoming trip to Washington, said other equally important negotiations might follow shortly.

900 Allied Captives To Cross Spain

Irun, Spain, June 26 (A. P.).—Spanish border officials said today that arrangements had been made for some 900 American and Allied war prisoners to cross the border at Irun July 20, en route to Portugal, where they will be exchanged for a similar number of Germans.

The Allied prisoners will travel to Portugal on seven trains, the officials said.

Savage Allied Attacks Shaking Mogaung

Chinese Troops Sweep Through Southern Half of Japanese Bastion Town—Fighting Rages in Myitkyina.

By John Grover

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, KANDY, CEYLON, June 26—(AP)—Mogaung, one of three main Japanese bases in North Burma, appeared tottering tonight under weight of savage Allied blows from three sides.

Attack Strongpoints

Chinese troops swept through the southern half of the town and attacked its northern strongpoints, while Maj. Gen. W. D. A. Lentaigne's Chindit forces stabbed another 400 yards from the east, a communique from Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's headquarters said.

The principal Japanese Burma bastion of Myitkyina, where fighting already raged within the city on the southern side, was under strong American attack from the north. This force was near a junction with Chinese attacking the western outskirts, the communique announced.

South of Kaiaing, third enemy stronghold which already has fallen, Chinese troops pressed a new advance.

In India, the Japanese 58th regiment and a battalion of the 124th virtually have been wiped out and the sixth regiment has lost all its guns. The British drove west of the cleared Kohima-Imphal road into the Manipur hills, where enemy parties were reported disorganized and in bad physical condition.

Attacks Repulsed

Twenty miles north of Imphal, a Sikh battalion inflicted severe casualties on the enemy and took much equipment, the communique said, and on the Ukhrul road, where the enemy held positions north of Milestone 17, Allied forces repulsed four night attacks, killing at least 100 enemy troops.

Three miles west of Bishenpur the Japanese assailed an Allied position on the Silchar track, but were thrown back with heavy losses.

(Driving toward Burma from the east, Chinese troops have reached a point five miles from the major Japanese Yunnan province base of Tengchung in their Salween river offensive. Chungking announced. Severe fighting was reported in progress around the enemy's secondary base of Lungling.

(Ten miles south of Lungling, the Japanese were thrown out of Hsiangta, and the Chinese advanced three miles west toward Mangshih, seven more miles away on the Burma road).

Chinese Storm Mogaung, Win Half of Town

Bitter Street Fighting On for Rest of Burma Base; Chindits Join Struggle

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, June 26 (AP).—Chinese troops have taken the southern half of Mogaung, one of the three most important bases in northern Burma formerly held by the Japanese, and bitter street fighting is taking place, with the Allies pressing in from three sides, a communique issued here announced today.

British Chindits drove another 400 yards into the town from the east after capturing a section of railroad between the station and the river. Chinese troops also were in the north of the town.

Chinese forces moved closer in an advance south of captured Kamaing, another of the three Japanese bases, and American troops advancing from the north down the Radhapur road on Myitkyina, the third enemy north Burma base, had almost effected a junction with Chinese attacking that town.

In Manipur State, in eastern India, the British were pushing out in all directions from Imphal, inflicting heavy casualties twenty miles north of the town and repulsing an attack on a position which the British call the "sausage" feature. Lone Tree Hill was captured east of Palel, which is twenty-four miles southeast of Imphal.

The British drove west of the cleared Kohima-Imphal road into the Manipur hills, where enemy parties were reported disorganized and in bad physical condition. The Japanese 58th Regiment and a battalion of the 124th have been almost destroyed and the 6th Regiment has lost all its guns.

Chinese Hold Their Own in Hengyang Fight

Confirm Hengshan Loss; U.S. Planes Attack Village and Kill 100 Japanese

CHUNGKING, June 26 (AP).—Chinese troops have held their ground in a severe battle around Hengyang, and American planes have been thrown into the fighting near that vital rail junction and elsewhere in Hunan Province, it was announced tonight. Little change in positions was reported around Hengyang, where the Japanese last were placed about four miles east and six miles northeast of the city.

The Chinese high command, concerned over the enemy attacks along the Canton-Hankow railway aimed at splitting China in two, confirmed tonight the loss Saturday of Hengshan, which had been the last major barrier before Hengyang. Loss of Hengyang would open the way for a Japanese drive of less than 200 miles along the railway into the maritime province of Kwangtung and the Canton area.

A Chinese communique also admitted the fall of Yuhsien, forty-five miles northeast of Hengyang. The Japanese, using a large number of troops throughout Hunan Province, were attacking in a wide area.

American planes of the 14th Air Force attacked an enemy-held village east of Hengyang, and north of the city the same planes killed more than 100 enemy troops. Throughout yesterday, American planes struck in the Changsha area and south of it "with good effect."

CHINESE STILL HOLD HENGYANG

Chungking Says Japs Failed to Take City by Storm.

Chungking, June 25 (A. P.).—Severe fighting in the northeastern outskirts on Hengyang, where the Japanese are threatening seizure of the Hankow-Canton Railway in their most serious attack in China since 1938, continued all day yesterday without a change in positions, the Chinese High Command announced today.

Yuhsien, forty-five miles northeast of Hengyang, and Hengshan, twenty-five miles to the northeast, fell to the Japanese east wing columns, however. A column on the west wing advancing on Siangsiang, sixty miles north of Hengyang, was driven back, the communique said.

The Japanese drive down the Canton-Hankow Railway is clearly aimed at cutting China in two, to frustrate the Allied plans to use China as a base.

Chinese militarists took a pessimistic view of the approaching battle for the Hunan province city.

[The Berlin radio, quoting a report from Nanking, said the American air base at Kunming, in central Yunnan, and the advanced base at Kweilin in Kwangsi province both were supplied through Hengyang. Kunming is 560 miles southwest of the present battle scene and Kweilin less than 100 miles south.]

Chinese Hold Little.

Since early spring the Japanese drive southward aimed at splitting China in two has captured more than 575 miles of the rail line from Peiping to Canton. Less than 200 miles of the railway now remains in Chinese hands, except for a few small gaps north of Hankow.

If the Japanese can gain control of the entire line they would have a north-south supply line to supplement their southward sea supply lanes, now menaced by the American Pacific campaign.

The Chinese reported heavy fighting was raging in the Hengyang vicinity. American Fourteenth Air Force planes have been thrown into the struggle, bombing and strafing Japanese troops, river supply craft and troop ships, and other installations.

To the north of this area little change was reported Sunday on the broad 100-mile front from Siangsiang in the west and beyond Liling in the east, although Chinese reached a point six miles north of Siangsiang and were engaged by the invaders in bitter fighting.

Japs Enter Pingsiang.

To the east, in Kiangsi province near the Hunan border, the Japanese entered Pingsiang, about twenty-eight miles east of Liling.

Hengyang is about 375 miles southeast of Chungking, wartime capital of China.

A Chinese communique asserted that the Japanese had used a poison gas east of Hengyang Saturday night and that they also had used gas June 16 and 17 at Ningsiang and at Changsha before the fall of the latter city.

Chinese Near Tengchung

Chungking, June 26 (AP)—Chinese troops moving down the Shweli Valley west of the Salween have reached a point within five miles of Tengchung, important base north of the Burma road, the Chinese announced today.

Severe fighting was reported farther south at a point six miles northeast of the Burma road town of Lungling, once captured and then lost by the Chinese. Heavy casualties were suffered on both sides, the communique said.

Pillbox Smashed

Artillery fire smashed another pillbox of the Sungshan tunnel fortress and killed the garrison commander. The fortress, being slowly reduced by the Chinese, is on the Burma road northeast of Lungling, near the Salween, and had been by-passed by the Chinese.

Hsiangta, ten miles south of Lungling, was captured in a night attack, and Chinese troops advanced three miles to the west toward Mangshih, on the Burma road below Lungling. Mangshih is ten miles west of Hsiangta.

475 JAP DEAD AT MAFFIN BAY

Foe's Losses In Recent Fighting On New Guinea Counted

Advanced Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, Tuesday, June 27 (AP). Four hundred and seventy-five Japanese dead have been counted in recent fighting in the Maffin Bay area of Dutch New Guinea, headquarters announced today.

Maffin Bay is midway between the two other Dutch New Guinea bases of Hollandia and Biak, and is near the major Allied airbase of Wakde Island.

Pockets Of Japs Left

Between the three Allied Dutch New Guinea beachheads of Hollandia, Sarmi and Biak are large pockets of trapped Japanese troops which are graually being cleared out.

Total enemy dead in the Sarmi-Maffin Bay area now are 2,386, headquarters announced.

Allied bombers raided Noemfoor Island, west of Biak, Sunday, dropping 80 tons of bombs on personnel areas and setting enemy stores on fire.

Manokwari Neutharized

Noemfoor is midway between Biak Island, where threee enemy airdromes have been captured, and Manokwari, Japanese airbase in northern Dutch New Guinea which Allied bombers this week succeeded in putting out of commission.

Allied warplanes also swept over enemy bases in New Guinea, New Britain, New Ireland and the Solomons almost without opposition. A small force of Liberators even attacked Truk, in the Carolines, Saturday night, without interception.

May Have Withdrawn

The sharp contrast to the former Japanese practice of reinforcing air bases immediately after Allied planes made their attacks prompted observers to suggest that the nemy may have withdrawn most of their planes to remote bases with a few to strengthening East Indies and Philippines defenses, particularly in view of the increasing threat of Allied occupatio nof the Marianas. Major air attack reported in today's communique, aside from the Truk bombing, was a sweep by a strong force of Liberators at Noemfoor island off Dutch New Guinea in daylight. There were concentrated attacks upon the Japanese in the Aitape-Wewak sector.

Light naval units destroyed several enemy barges off New Guinea Saturday night. One patrol boat was lost, but the crew was saved.

New Air Force For Far East Is Created by U.S.

MacArthur Announces Arm To Be Headed by Kenney; Headquarters in Australia

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Australia, June 27 (Tuesday) (AP).—General Douglas McArthur announced today the creation of a new air arm to be known as the Far Eastern Air Force, with headquarters in Australia.

The new organization combines the 5th Army Air Force, which has operated in Australia and New Guinea, and the 13th Army Air Force, which battled through the Solomons campaign and into the Rabaul and Kavieng campaigns.

The new force will be headed by Lieutenant General George C. Kenney, commander of Allied Air Forces in this theater since 1942.

The 5th Air Force will be commanded by Major General Ennis C. Whitehead, of St. Louis, Mo., who has been in charge of the 5th's vomber command since 1942. The 13th will be headed by Major General St. Clair Street, of Washington, formerly commander of the 2d Air Force in the United States.

The Royal Australian Air Force and the Dutch Air Forces in Australia and New Guine awill remain under the Southwest Pacific Allied Air Force, a headquarters spokesman said.

The title of the new air arm—"Far Eastern"—plainly indicates that its field of operations will be the Philippines, the East Indies and such adjoining enemy-held lands as British Borneo.

Its establishment, too, demonstrates that New Guinea, New Britain, New Ireland and the Solomons no longer provide bombing targets sufficient to require the attention of a separate air force. Such targets henceforth may be the assignment of individual squadrons of fighters, attack planes and light and medium bombers.

From 5th Air Force headquarters in New Guinea Associated Press correspondent Asahel Bush reported that General Whitehead planned to augment the sharp, devastating blows which the 5th has inflicted within the last year to crack Japan's outer ring of defenses in New Guinea and surrounding territory.

Virginia Flyer Wins 2d Award In Pacific

Somewhere in New Guinea (AP—Undated)—Lieut. Gen. George C. Kenney, commander of the Allied forces in the Southwest Pacific, has awarded a second oak-leaf cluster to the Air Medal to First Lieutenant John D. Sizemore, of Virgilina, Va., for participation "in sustained operational flight missions in the Southwest Pacific area from January 19, 1944, to March 2, 1944, during which hostile contact was probable and expected.

The citation said "these operations consisted of bombing missions against enemy airdromes and installations and attacks on enemy naval vessels and shippings."

Conn. Officer Wins Second Citation

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA—(Undated)—(AP)—Lt. Gen. George C. Kenney, commander of the Allied Air Forces in the southwest Pacific, has awarded a second distinguished flying cross to First Lieutenant Edwin G. Reade, Jr., 429 Main street, Watertown, Conn.

The award was for extraordinary achievement while participating in sustained operational flights in the southwest Pacific arear. During this period, this officer participated in sustained operation activity against the enemy during which hostile contact was probabl and expected. Supplies were dropped and troops transported to advanced positions.

These flights involved flying at low altitudes over mountainous terrain under adverse weather conditions in an unarmed transport airplane and otfen necessitated landing within a few miles of enemy bases. Throughout these operations, outstanding courage and devotion to duty were displayed.

An ugly gangrenous gash had been torn in his leg and there were some who thought he had few hours to live. There was one, however, who believed he had a chance, that an immediate amputation would save his life.

On Way Back To U. S.

That flyer is on his way back to the United States now, but the doctor remained behind to perform other surgical miracles in this jungle hospital.

The hospital's record since it started operations some months ago is wholly in keeping with the reputation of the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn. The head of its surgical staff, Lieut. Col. C. W. Mayo, is the only surviving son of one of Mayo's cofounders.

Colonel Mayo has seen many wounded and injured come into his hospital. But he was reticent to talk about life-saving operations he had performed. He had other things on his mind.

Lauds Voluntary Service

One was his expressed belief that there has not been sufficient appreciation of the voluntary service performed by blood donors of America, nor of the indefatigable labors of countless thousands of women who have devoted long hours to preparation of bandages and dressings.

Their contributions, he said, have been tremendous.

He hesitated long before answering a question as to what field of medical research might have shown the greatest advancement as a result of this war's lessons.

"I imagine there has been a vastly better understanding of shock," he said. He expressed his appreciation of the blood donors who have made it possible for plasma to be on hand when it is needed.

Another important factor in medicine of this war, he said, has been the reduction in the time lag between the wound itself and care of the wound. There has been a tremendous improvement in this point as compared with the last war when the time lag often proved fatal.

Dr. Mayo's hospital is one of the most remarkably equipped to be found in any battle theater.

largest cities of the United States."

Colonel Mayo is the father of six boys and two girls.

Australia War Aid Recognized: Curtin

Brisbane, Australia, June 26 (AP)—It is clearly realized in both the United States and the United Kingdom, Prime Minister John Curtin told a press conference here today, that the heaviest contribution for the defense of Australia against the Japanese was made by Australia.

"During the greater part of the Japanese offensive against Australia the bulk of the fighting forces came from Australia," he said after arriving from a three-month visit to America and Britain.

More Fighting Ahead

Curtin said men from his country have much fighting left to do.

He declined to discuss whether Australian troops would be used in a possible attack on the Philippines by General MacArthur's forces. Such a discussion, he said, was a matter for the commanders.

Discussing the Pacific war, Curtin said:

"We have passed through the twilight and have reached the dawn." He told reporters that victory was only a matter of time.

He was greeted by Acting Prime Minister Francis M. Forde and General MacArthur.

Saipan Peak Is Taken.

Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, June 26 (A. P.).—Admiral C. W. Nimitz announced today that American troops had reached the summit of 1,554-foot-high Mount Tapotchau—a key objective in the campaign to conquer Saipan—and also have captured Kagman Peninsula to win complete control of Magicienne Bay on the eastern shore.

At the same time, the communique said, American troops won more of the southern portion of shattered Garapan, Saipan's major city of 10,000 population

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific, June 20 (AP—Delayed)—The little hospital standing at the foot of the jungle-covered mountains in New Guinea had seen few cases as serious as the American pilot carried into the operating ward.

Cites Facilities On Hand

"I have nothing to ask for," he said in referring to his equipment. "The only thing exceptional about it all is that under these conditions it is possible to provide all the facilities that are available in the stretcher along the western shore.

While the United States Marines spearheaded the scaling of cave-and-cliff defended Mount Tapotchau, a hard-hitting carrier task force heavily bombed Guam and Rota Island, south of Saipan. Nine Japanese planes were destroyed in these attacks. That brought to 756 the total number of Japanese aircraft destroyed since the start of the Marianas campaign on June 10.

In the sweep overrunning Haguman Peninsula, the northeastern arm of Magicienne Bay, three coastal guns were captured. Japanese attempts to employ tanks have been overwhelmed, Admiral Nimitz said. The American troops have destroyed thirty-six Japanese tanks and captured forty-four since the initial landing assaults on June 14.

Air Strips Hit.

Two Guam air strips were in the main targets in carrier plane attacks on Saturday on that former United States naval outpost 116 miles south of Saipan. Runways and revetment on the Orope peninsula airfield were attacked. Six Japanese planes were destroyed and two more probably destroyed. A large cargo vessel in Apra harbor, damage din previous attacks, again was hit.

Several tons of bombs were dropped on the airstrip near Agana town, on the westehrn side of the island.

One enemy plane was destroyed in this attack and eight to ten others damaged.

Two enemy planes were destroyed on the ground in the slash at Rota Island. Revetments and buiudingshrdlutaomfwyp—W—N buildings were bombed and fires started.

In the north Pacific Army and Navy bombers raided Paramushiro and Shumushu in the Kuriles. Fires were started at both objectives. All planes returned.

Isolated Japanese Marshall Islands bases were bombed and straffed in neutralization raids.

The Japanese Navy has now expended 756 planes and many warships in its fruitless defense of the Marianas.

These, however, are strictly Navy figures. Supporting attacks by land-based planes have brought the enemy losses for the period to at least 841 planes.

Admiral Nimitz also announced that Allied carrier-borne fighter planes swept two islands in the Kazan group, 727 miles north of Saipan, last Friday, sinking five enemy ships, shooting down 116 planes and probably destroying eleven more.

On the other hand, the admiral noted that five Allied planes were lost on Friday, and conceded that one Japanese tanker previously reported sunk did not in fact founder, though she was severely damaged.

The American losses were 151 planes. In addition four American ships were damaged superficially including a battleship and two carriers.

Six planes were destroyed and probably two more on the Orote peninsula on Guam. A large cargo ship in Apra harbor, on the western side of the island just north of Orote peninsula, was damaged.

At Agana, on the western side of Guam and northeast of Apra, an enemy airfield was bombed. One plane was destroyed there and eight to ten others damaged.

Two Nipponese planes were destroyed in the aerial slash at Rota, the first island north of Guam. Fires were started among buildings at the airfield .

There was no mention in the communique of American losses.

High ranking officers on Saipan were reported by Handleman to have expressed confidence that the invasion progress assured capture of all the Marianas.

Stunning defeats had virtually eliminated the Japanese fleet as a factor in the invasion. In addition to the heavy aircraft losses, one Nipponese aircraft carrier had been sunk, one probably sunk and four others damaged.

In the hazardous ascent of Tapotchau, the Marines fought up the southern slope. They were slowed not only by steep terrain but by enemy groups dug into higher, commanding positions. Apparently the enemy still clung to the northern side of peak.

Attempts by the defenders to use tanks in the operation steadily squeezing them into the northern end of the island proved fruitless. Nimitz said 36 of these machines had been destroyed and 44 captured since American assault forces stormed onto Saipan June 14.

Three coast defense guns were seized in the advance that placed Magicienne Bay in American hands. This forward sweep overran Cape Haguman, jutting eastward and forming the northern shore of the bay.

In other categories, the powerful enemy force that was smashed in its stab at Saipan's invaders lost a destroyer and two tankers. Damaged were a battleship, three cruisers, two destroyers and three tankers.

Losses of cargo and other vessels in the June 10-23 period brought the enemy's total shipping toll to 30 sunk, two probably sunk, 54 damaged and 13 barges destroyed.

American losses in the same period were announced as 151 planes and four combat ships damaged superficially. They included a battleship and two carriers.

U. S. Losses

American aircraft losses were heaviest on June 19, when carrier planes struck in gathering dusk at the fleeing enemy fleet between the Philippines and the Marianas. Nimitz raised the total from 49 to 95 Sunday. The loss was softened by the disclosure that all but 22 pilots and 27 air crewmen were rescued in thrilling actions at night.

Allied forces in the southwest Pacific meanwhile continued operations in support of the Saipan invasion. Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Monday communique reported aerial strikes at important enemy bases in the Carolines, southwest of the Marianas. His bombers bunched at Yap, Palau and other islands at the western end of the Carolines as well as at Truk in the eastern Carolines.

tive enemy attack by air or by sea. Already the Americans who waded ashore at Saipan's southwestern end June 14 hold half of the island and have backed the 20,000 or more defenders into the mountains of the north.

Losses Revised

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, compiling a revised list of enemy and American losses thus far in the Marianas campaign—from June 10 to 23—disclosed for the first time damage to an enemy carrier and two cruisers and conceded that a tanker previously reported sunk had been only severely damaged.

This brought the total of Japanese aircraft carriers sunk or damaged west of the Marianas during the past week to six.

The list also disclosed that 402 enemy airplanes were destroyed when Japanese carrier planes attacked American fleet units west of Guam June 18.

Five Planes Lost

Nimitz announced that carrier-borne fighter planes swept Iwo island in the Kazan group, 727 miles north of Saipan, June 23, sinking five enemy ships, shooting down 116 planes and probably destroying 11 more. Five Allied fighters were lost.

On Biak island, off Dutch New Guinea, Allied troops killed 345 more Japanese June 22 and 23 to bring the total enemy dead since the island's invasion May 27 to 2,333.

Liberators destroyed a number of enemy planes on the ground at Sorong, on the northwestern tip of New Guinea. Other bombers put the Japanese airfield at Manokwari, 120 miles west of Biak, out of commission.

Thirty Ships Sunk

The official revised list also showed 30 ships sunk, 51 damaged and two probably sunk, and 13 barges destroyed.

These are navy figures. Supporting strikes by land-based planes brought enemy losses for the period to at least 832 planes.

Yanks Scale Biggest Mountain on Saipan

JUN 27 1944

Mt. Tapotchau, Dominating Height of Island, Climbed By Fiercely Fighting Ground Forces —Batter Into Marianas Capital.

By Leif Erickson

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, June 26—(AP)—American ground forces have scaled Mt. Tapotchau, dominating height on Saipan Island, battered their way deeper into the Marianas capital of Garapan and won complete control of Magicienne Bay, major anchorage on the eastern side of the island cross-roads to Japan, the Philippines and China.

Task Forces Support

A hard-hitting carrier task force, supporting these advances announced today by Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, pounded the Japanese on Guam and Rota Islands, to the south.

Nine more enemy planes were destroyed in the various actions. That raised to 756 the number of aircraft sacrificed in Japan's desperate but futile efforts to stem the Saipan invasion.

The 1,554-foot Tapotchau was mounted by United States Marines. They had to rout the enemy from caves and cliffs. When the going got too tough they called up artillery which shelled surrounded and isolated nests of resistance. Often the heavier guns fired at close range, sometimes point-blank.

No Direct Claim

Admiral Nimitz made no direct claim of capture of Tapotchau, a key position on Saipan. From its summit American observers can spy on the enemy's every move, direct artillery fire and bombing and emplace big guns to fire down the enemy's throat.

A dispatch earlier from Howard Handleman, representing the combined American press, said the height had been captured and held against an enemy counter-attack. Handleman ,aboard a flagship of the joint expeditionary force at Saipan, reported the ground forces had extended their positions about the base of the peak. It is situated at the center of the island.

Runways revetments, aircraft and shipping were bombed by carrier planes which struck Saturday at Rota and Guam ,the former American base.

By HOWARD HANDLEMAN.

Aboard the Joint Expeditionary Force Flagship, Saipan, June 26 (June 25, United States Time) (Via Navy Radio). —American troops have captured towering Mount Tapotchau, and today they held it against a pre-dawn counter-attack as the fast-developing victory of Saipan gave high-ranking officers here every confidence that the capture of the whole Marianas chain was assured.

Tapotchau, 1,554-foot peak, has been the goal of the American forces since the landing eleven days ago, and its capture along with the capture of some of its forward slopes eliminated much Jap mortar and artillery fire, which had taken a heavvy toll.

The counter-attack came from one of many apparently isolated Jap units dug in in mountain caves and sometimes operating at night. One of these units delayed the Tapotchau advance. An Army group, flanking Marines in the joint attack, ran into a ravine filled with rock caves from which the Japanese fire machine-guns and rifles. The Americans surrounded the ravine to contain the Japs and brought light artillery into play, firing point-blank into the caves. Flame-throwers followed the artillery to finish the mass mop-up operation.

Advancing troops were running into tougher small-arms opposition as they hit more and more Japs fighting with nothing but death ahead.

Most Important So Far.

The nature of the Saipan fighting created a general impression that Japan could no longer maintain her grip on the Marianas and military leaders here said they believed the capture of the chain of islands was the most important step yet for operations westward—and particularly northwestward toward Japan itself.

Successful naval air action against the enemy fleet has virtually eliminated the Japanese fleet as a factor in the Marianas campaign, military men declared, and aground the American fighting men who had proved their mastery in the atolls and jungles showed themselves Japanese-beaters in the mountains.

Simultaneously with Tapotchau's capture the Marines swept Kagman Peninsula on the other side of the island without much opposition. On the southern tip a small detachment continued to slow the advance against the Japs trapped on Nafutan Point.

The possibility remained for a last-ditch battle on the island's north end near Tanapag Harbor or the Marpi Point airfield, and the American commanders were keeping their lines as straight as possible while advancing up the island. The forwardmost line runs from the beach through the southern outskirts of Garapan and bends back through the foothills into Tapotchau. The line presently is pivoting on the Garapan part of the front but patrols working far into the town find little resistance.

Marines Anxious for Fight.

Marines moved ten blocks into Garapan against light opposition from infantry, heavy opposition from mortars and artillery.

From a hilltop I watched them pick their way into the town's outskirts and saw five Japanese tanks, attempting to counter-attack, knocked out by two American medium tanks which surprised them.

Yesterday from a frontline ridge I saw Japs moving in little groups, apparently fortifying the line, but this morning patrols found no Japs there.

Except for a single 300-man counter-attack on the second night of the Tapotchau fight, there has been little infantry fighting. Jap mortar and artillery fire has dwindled ever since the Americans gained the higher ground of Tapotchau and the foothills toward Garapan.

Forward observers, looking down the Japs' throats for the first time on Saipan, are able to direct the fire against the enemy guns. Enemy air attacks almost nightly are ineffective. Night before last from a front-line company command post in the Garapan Hills I watched a Jap bomber hit his own lines.

American supply lines are working superbly, so well, in fact, that all movements inland were halted an entire day because forward dumps had enough. Front-line troops are amply supplied with water and best of rations.

The troops are still itching for contact with the enemy, though, irked by the long-range battle in which they are unable to reach their antagonists. One Marine gave expression to this frustration yesterday by shooting at a tin can in the ocean.

THE ADMIRAL HAD A PLEASANT DAY

By WILLIAM L. WORDEN.

Representing the Combined American Press. Distributed by the Associated Press.

Aboard the Flagship, United States Fifth Fleet, June 19, (Delayed).—Did you ever wonder how an admiral works?

Well, on this day when his planes and ships have shot down more Japanese planes than any modern Power ever lost before in a single day's sea battle, consider Raymond Ames Spruance.

The Admiral began his day by making his own coffee. There are many cooks and numerous coffee pots aboard. Nevertheless the Admiral made his own coffee. Then he read the morning news in the ship's mimeographed newspaper. The first reports that Jap planes were in the air were coming in. Nevertheless he read the news slowly

Presently he went on the bridge, slowly, deliberately. Anti-aircraft fire was pretty thick. By noon Jap planes in this area had been shot down or driven away and anti-aircraft bursts were now confined to the horizon.

The Admiral said, "I feel a little hungry." And with his staff he proceeded to have a leisurely lunch. After lunch the Admiral still had nothing much to do. Once one enemy came within range. The Admiral looked up momentarily, then went back to reading his detective story. Now and then he looked up to order ships one way or another or to direct new aerial strategy, but he always went back to reading.

In mid-afternoon things were much quieter. The Admiral appeared in bathing shorts and commenced a rapid promenade. Flag officers whispered a word of warning:

"Look out if he asks you to go for a little walk. That means about two hours." It did.

After two hours—by now the Jap fleet was running away—the Admiral, again fully clothed, stared out across the sea.

"This is a very interesting business, he remarked. Then he went to dinner.

Volcano Forces Army Unit To Move

Eleventh Army Air Force Headquarters, Alaska, June 26 (AP)—The eruption of Mount Cleveland, which began June 10 and is still continuing, has prompted the evacuation of an army installation on Chuginadak Island and possibly has taken one life, the 11th Army Air Force announced.

Mount Cleveland is a volcano on Chuginadak Island in the Four Mountains group in the eastern Aleutian area.

Eruptions accompanied by severe earthquakes began in full force during the afternoon of June 10. Army personnel stationed there reported rocks "as huge as automobiles" belched from the crater over the entire island.

Mountain Top Blows Off

A rescue party headed by Capt. Donald Drewes, of Minneapolis, Minn., arrived that night, but while evacuation and recovery of material was going on the following morning "the entire mountain top blew off," army witnesses reported. Lava and rock were scattered over the island and the Bering Sea for miles around.

Captain Drewes said the missing soldier was probably lost in the first hour of the eruption. His companions said he apparently had advanced too close to the volcano in an attempt to evaluate the danger and was knocked unconscious or killed by falling rock and his body later covered by lava which had poured down the mountain for three miles when the rescue party left.

A second rescue detachment headed by Lieut. Lynn Cunningham, of Joliet, Ill., recovered all special equipment on the island.

The volcano is on the direct line of flight of army and navy bases in the Aleutians.

Bolivia Decorates American Officers

Balboa, C. Z., June 26 (AP)—The Bolivian Order of the Condor was presented last night to ranking American officers of the Panama Canal Zone and the Sixth Air Force who arranged for military training for Bolivian officers and aided in the recent evacuation of Axis subjects from Bolivia.

The presentations, made by Lieut. Col. Marion Hardesty, chief of the United States Military Mission to Bolivia, on behalf of President Gualberto Villarroel, came two days after American recognition of the Villarroel regime.

Death Asked for Price 'Traitors'

Canada Gets New Budget

Ottawa, June 26 (AP)—Finance Minister Ilsley tonight brought down his 1944-45 budget, with no increases in taxation and elimination of the compulsory savings feature of the individual income tax.

All tariffs from farm machinery as well as the 10 per cent. war exchange tax will be removed.

Ilsley said the Government's cash requirements for 1944-45 were estimated at $6,000,000,000, or $200,000,000 more than last year.

Borrowings In 44-45

Borrowings in 1944-45 will be $3,200,000,000—$320,000,000 more than last year.

Ilsley said revenues for the present year are estimated at $2,617,000,000 compared with $2,701,000,000 last year, not including refundable taxes. The estimates of expenditures already before Parliament total $5,152,000,000, or $208,000,000 less than actual expenditures last year, the Minister said. The accounts set forth indicated an estimated budgetary deficit of $2,535,000,000 about $100,000,000 less than last year.

He said the suspension of the compulsory savings feature of the individual income tax did not mean there was a reduced need of saving. Actually the need was greater.

Suspension Effective July 1

But it had been suggested that the compulsory savings were looked upon as a tax rather than amounts to be returned with interest after the war. This was represented as having the effect of reducing production at a time when it was sorely needed.

The suspension of compulsory savings means the dominion will lose a revenue source which yielded about $110,000,000 a year, following establishment of the plan in 1942.

The suspension of the savings plan is effective on July 1.

In all, about $200,000,000 will have been collected by the Government during operation of the plan. This sum will be repaid after the war.

Foreign Plank Is Faulty

JUN 27 1944

1940 Leader Declares Suppression of Aggression Is Ignored.

KEYNOTER SEES VICTORY IN FALL

Party Just as Able as Democrats to Win War—Attacks Bureaucrats And New Deal.

By Douglas B. Cornell

CHICAGO STADIUM, June 26—(AP)—The Republican wartime convention, in harmony to rare degree on Thomas E. Dewey as its prospective presidential nominee, whooped it up tonight for promises of lasting peace—but found Wendell Willkie combatting its tentative plan for achieving it.

Assurances that the party is just as able as the Democrats to win the war and bring about enduring world security came from Governor Earl Warren of California. He delivered the traditional keynote speech to thousands steaming under the glare of floodlights.

Willkie Cuts Loose

But while delegates and spectators pushed int othis big indoor bowl to hear Warren. Willkie cut loose in New York with a statement assailing the tentative foreign policy plank on which the convention's platform committee has been laboring day and night.

As now drafted, the plank calls for American participation in some international organization employing "peace forces" to guarantee the future security of the world.

The man who carried the Republican standard four years ago said it provided for "no effective international force for the supression of aggression." In its place, he recommended creation of a United Nations council as the initial move toward a general international organization. Three or four great powers alone, Willkie said, should not make all the decisions about the world's future.

Question As To Willkie

The statement underscored a big question mark about Willkie's own future. His political intentions have not been announced since he quit the race for a Republican renomination last April when Dewey strength began snowballing.

Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, chairman of the drafters, promptly challenged any of Willkie's persuasion to bring their battle before the committee—"if Mr. Willkie has any adherents who desire to start it."

Senator Warren Austin of Vermont said Willkie's position would have no effect whatever on the foreign policy plank.

Nevertheless, word of the former party leader's blast at the plank swept through the convention delegates and created a flurry of excitement.

Supporters of Dewey, who is all set to attain a first ballot nomination Wednesday, had nothing to say about Willkie's foreign policy ideas. But one remarked significantly:

"Of course we want Mr. Willkie's support in this campaign. We are not going to do or fail to do anything justificable that would cause him to take a passive or negative attitude."

Warren Sounds Keynote

Warren's keynote address, sounded the party rallying call for 1944. This address was delivered at a time when votes pledged to Dewey had mounted far beyond the 529 needed to nominate on Wednesday's first roll call.

Warren himself apparently is in the van of vice presidential possibilities, but he gave no hint in his speech that he had changed in the slightest his declaration that he is not a candidate.

The keynoter forecast that "we shall march forward under God toward victory, toward opportunity, toward peace."

"It is the purpose of this convention," he said, "to put the public welfare above private self-interest; to put the nation above party; to put the progress of the whole American community above special privilege for any part of it; to put indispensable principles—once and for all—above indispensable men."

Warren Dewey's Choice

There were indications that Warren was Dewey's preference for the vice presidential spot on the 1944 ticket. That would present an east-west line-up—with a bid for corn belt support in the selection of Governor Griswold of Nebraska to put Dewey's name in nomination Wednesday.

Sweltering, sweating, shirt-sleeved delegates started off their wartime conclave undramatically this morning and went through a routine of organization formalities. Warren was elected somewhat automatically to be temporary convention chairman.

After an afternoon of milling around hotel corridors, the crowd pressed back to the auditorium by taxi, bus and the "El."

Streaming into the stadium, they filled most of the floor and lower balcony seats, but again it was not a sellout crowd.

The perspiring throng arose as the song leader called for a verse of "America."

Pledge Allegiance To Flag

The assembly led by National Chairman Harrison E. Spangler, pledged their allegiance to the flag, and bowed their heads in prayer with the Rt. Rev. Monsgr. George E. Casey, of the archdiocese of Chicago.

Shirt-sleeved and dripping under the hot floodlights, the delegates heard Gov. Edward Martin of Pennsylvania, call for the purchase of more and more war bonds.

"The foot soldier is the hard core of our army. The rifle and the bayonet are his weapons," Martin said. "He must have everything he needs. We will fail in our duty if we fail to buy bonds to the full limit of our resources."

In silent prayer, the crowd stood with Gov. Martin while a faraway bugler intoned "Taps."

The big convention organ burst into "California Here I Come" as Gov. Earl Warren mounted the platform for his keynote speech.

Warren was escorted by Joseph R. Knowland, Oakland, Calif., publisher; Gov. Raymond E. Baldwin of Connecticut; Mrs. M. L. Spencer of Minnesota, and Mrs. Gladys B. Stewart of Missouri.

They roared with approbation when Warren called for them to put "indispensable principles above dispensable men."

Warren Pleases Boys and Girls

The boys and girls ate it up when Warren told them:

"Down in Washington where the bureaucrats live there is a Democrat in the White House, but out in the country where the people live there is overwhelming Republican sentiment."

No Word From Dewey On GOP Platform Draft

JUN 27 1944

N. Y. Governor Has Had No Official Voice in Republican Stand.

ALBANY, N. Y., June 26, (AP)—Despite mounting certainty Governor Dewey would be nominated for president Wednesday on the first Republican ballot, he has had to date no official voice in drafting of the party platform, the executive office said today.

Dewey conducted "business as usual" today, while in Chicago the Republican national convention resolutions committee wrangled over a foreign policy plank and delegate pledges to New York's governor piled up.

Williams Views

Last Thursday, Dewey, who repeatedly has professed he is not a candidate, said he would be glad to discuss his views by telephone with Senator Robert A. Taft, head of the resolutions committee. The statement came after Herbert Brownell, Jr., delegate from the 16th New York Congressional district and Dewey's gubernatorial campaign manager in 1940, said he believed the governor would confer with the committee.

30.24— 16581

He has not been consulted directly, however, his office said, adding that his views "undoubtedly" are known by New York leaders including Mary H. Donlon of New York City, vice chairman of the committee.

Stand Expressed

Dewey most completely expressed his stand last April at the annual meeting of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association in New York City where he listed these three major objectives.

"1. To carry on the war to total crushing victory, and in so doing to drive home to the aggressor nations a lesson that never will be forgotten.

"2. To organize in cooperation with other nations a structure of peace backed by adequate force to prevent future wars.

"3. To establish and maintain in our relations with other nations conditions calculated to promote world-wide economic stability not only for the sake of the world but also to the end that our own people may enjoy a high level of employment in an increasingly prosperous world."

Dewey was photographed today by newsreel cameramen, but declined to comment on events in Chicago. His staff was making preparations for his trip to Chicago Wednesday night in event he is nominated, and his office said that Benjamin Feinberg, Senate majority leader, almost certainly would be acting governor in his absence.

Feinberg is in Chicago but would travel to Albany in the event Dewey left.

Keynote Speech

In a keynote speech for the party's national convention, Warren presented as "our job":

"To get our boys back home again—victorious and with all speed.

"To open the door for all Americans—to open it, not just to jobs, but to opportunity!

"To make and guard the peace so wisely and so well that this time will be the last time that American homes are called to give their sons and daughters to the agony and tragedy of war."

Warren denounced what he called the Roosevelt administration's "arrogant, power-intoxicated bureaucracy" but his 4,000-word speech was chiefly one of praise for his own party and assurances that the Republicans know how to, and will, bring about a lasting peace with victory, and good post-war conditions for business, labor, farmer and city dweller alike.

"We are here to make the road on which America can march toward victory, toward opportunity, toward peace," he told the convention delegates gathered in the vast Chicago stadium.

"Certainly we are not here to look for a road back to some status quo," he continued. "There is no status to which we could or should return. x x x We believe that America wants to get going and keep going.

Can Be Confident

"In that spirit we can be confident for the future. It will not be easy. We have nothing easy to offer. Dark days lie ahead. We have no tricks to escape them. We expect tough going and we are ready for it. There is no pessimism, no defeatism, no bitterness, no jauntiness among us."

Predicting that the Democrats will seek to reelect President Roosevelt with the theme song of "Don't change horses in the middle of the stream," Warren said that "for eleven long years we have been in the middle of the stream."

Further, he declared that all over the country the voters are changing from Democratic horses to Republican steeds for their states governments and their representatives in Congress.

"Three out of every four Americans now live under Republican state administrations," Warren said. "In Washington, where the bureaucrats live, there is still a Democrat in the White House. But out where the people live, the country is predominantly Republican."

The states with Republican administrations, he declared, have been called on to produce "more than 81 per cent of all our airplanes x x x more than 76 per cent of all our ships x x x more than 87 per cent of our ordnance."

Recalls FDR Statement

Recalling that President Roosevelt said some months ago that "Dr. New Deal" had been replaced by "Dr. Win-the-War," Warren declared "from the record of these states it is clear that Dr. Win-the-War is a Republican."

Warren gave as "our first objective":

"To keep the war out of politics and politics out of the war: to strengthen, among us, that spirit of single-mindedness, of unity, of self-forgetfulness that will hearten our military leaders, strengthen their hands and speed the day when, having bivouacked along the main streets of Germany and Japan, they will lead our boys victoriously home again."

Returning servicemen, Warren emphasized, will want "money making jobs in private industry" and not "government made jobs."

And the Republicans, he declared, "know what it is that makes jobs and opportunity. We know that private production makes them."

On the subject of peace Warren made these main points:

"We want a peace that is based upon realities and not upon the insecure foundation of mere words or promises. That means a peace which, being mindful of the interest of other nations, does not neglect or sacrifice the interests of our own nation.

Not for 'Power Politics'

"None of these aspirations can be realized under a leadership that plays power politics on a world wide stage."

Turning to the Roosevelt administration, Warren said:

"We believe the New Deal is leading us away from representative government. x x x We believe the New Deal is destroying the two-party system. x x x It retains its power by patronizing and holding together incompatible groups.

"The leaders of its inner circle are not representatives of the people. They are the personal agents of one man.

"The cabinet has ceased to be a voice and has become an echo. Congress, wherever possible, has been circumvented by executive decree.

"Both Congress and the judiciary have been intimidated and bludgeoned to make them servile.

"Over all of us is the ominous, gargantuan figure of an arrogant power-intoxicated bureaucracy."

Warren Sees GOP Coming Into Power

Pledges Party to Lead Nation Back to Peace And Prosperity—Denounces Administration's 'Power Intoxicated Bureaucracy.'

CHICAGO, June 26—(AP)—Governor Earl Warren of California pictured the Republican party tonight as triumphantly on its way back to power and pledged that it will guide the country to an enduring peace and prosperity.

Willkie Assails GOP Foreign Plank Plan

JUN 27 1944

Declares Net Result of Proposal Would Be No International Organization at All And Another War Fought in Vain.

NEW YORK, June 26—(AP)—Wendell L. Willkie declared tonight that the Republican party in National Convention in Chicago had under consideration a platform plank proposing a postwar cooperative organization among sovereign nations and expressing opposition to joining a world state.

Assails Proposals

The 1940 Republican presidential nominee in a statement assailed the proposals he said were under consideration, declaring:

"The net result would be no international organization. No effective force for the suppression of aggression. No peaceful world. Another world war fought in vain. And the youth of America once more betrayed."

Willkie demanded the immediate creation of a council of the United Nations as a first step toward the formation of a general international organization in order that all the peoples of the United Nations would have a voice in the decision which will shape the future world.

"These decisions should not and must not be made by three or four great powers alone," Willkie said.

He also asserted, "we cannot afford in 1944 to be ambiguous" and added:

"The consequences as we may have seen can be too grave. There must be no playing with phoney phrases such as 'world state' or use of gentle language such as 'peace forces' or repeated emphasis on 'sovereign nations' with nationalistic implications. There must be no self-defeating requirements about submitting each and every individual step in international cooperation to the advice and consent of two third of the United Sates Senators."

It was the first statement on politics that Willkie had made since he quit the race for the Republican presidential nomination last April.

Prior to issuing the statement, Willkie told newsmen that "as a Republican I am desperately anxious for my party to pursue a course which will entitle it to win the November election.

"As I am not a delegate to the convention, I take this method of presenting my views on the proposed foreign relations plank of the platform which, I understand, will be presented to the convention tomorrow."

He said he did not know whether he would attend the convention.

Willkie said the proposed plank was read to him by telephone from Chicago this afternoon.

He quoted the foreign relations plank adopted by the Republican party in 1920, setting forth the party's views for the preservation of peace throughout the world.

"The Republicans won the election of 1920," Willki said in the statement. "A Republican President caliming that he in no way repudiated the party's platform, immediately after the election, andnounced that the League of Nations was dead.

'A Republican president elected under the proposed platform of 1944 could, with equal integrity, announce that the United States would not enter any world organization in 'which the nations agree jointly to use their 'sovereign' power for the suppression of aggression. And every effective world organization proposed could be rejected as a 'world's state.' And, all proposed joint forces for the suppression of aggression could be called armed forces and not 'peace forces.'"

"And each proposed step taken by any world organization in which we might participate could be called a treaty and as such would be subject to ratification by two thirds of the United States senators," Willkie continued.

Willkie described the person with whom he talked in Chicago as "a friend" but otherwise declined to identify him.

Willkie, who withdrew last April as a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination made public five paragraphs of the foreign relations plan he said was under consideration in Chicago. With parenthetical statements by Willkie, they follow:

"We shall seek to achieve such aims (aims to keep America secure, to keep the Axis powers impotent, to renew tyranny and attack, and to attain peace and freedom based on justice and security) through organized international cooperation and not by joining a world state.

"We favor responsible participation by the United States in post war co-operative organization among sovereign nations to prevent military aggression and to attain permanent peace with organized justice in a free world.

"Such organization should develop effective cooperative aims to direct peace forces to prevent or repel military aggression. Pending this we pledge continuing collaboration with the principal United Nations to assure their ultimate objectives.

"It (such organized cooperation) should promote a world opinion to influence the nations to right conduct, develop international law and maintain an international tribunal to deal with adjustable disputes. x x x

"x x x x Pursuant to the constitution of the United Stte any treaty made on behalf of the United States with any other nation or any association of nations shall be made only by and with the advice and consent of the Senate of the United States provided two-thirds of the senators present concur."

In Washington, where the bureaucrats live, there is still a Democrat in the White House. But out where the people live, the country is predominantly Republican.

They (generals and admirals) know how to run the war and we will see to it that they have the opportunity to run it without political interference.

Government-made jobs x x x are not good for the long pull. For the long pull, the American people want a highway, not a dead-end street.

We know what it is that makes jobs and opportunity. We know that private production makes them.

Full-blast production x x x can only come in a climate that is friendly to production.

The friendly cooperation of the United States, Great Britain, Russia and China is as essential as the keystone of an arch.

The New Deal retains its power by patronizing and holding together incompatible groups.

Both Congress and the Judiciary have been intimidated and bludgeoned to make them servile.

These bureaucrats have threatened our free press. They have intimidated our free radio.

Faith is what we Americans need at home today; faith in our free institutions; faith in the goodness and the wisdom of our people; faith that God will always be on our side when we are on his.

Yesterday:

A heavy swing of votes to the Dewey camp apparently assured the New York governor a first ballot presidential nomination on Wednesday.

In opening session, convention formed temporary organization and then met again to hear Gov. Earl Warren, in keynote address.

Platform framers struggled with scores of proposed planks, among them a suggestion from a farm subcommittee for an endorsement of crop control.

Today:

Platform, other committees to report.

Convention hears addresses from former President Herbert Hoover and Representative Clare Boothe Luce in night session.

Editors Plan To Seek Plank For Free Press

Chicago, June 27 (AP)—The nation's newspaper editors resolved tonight to work for a proviso in the peace treaty calling for a free press and unrestricted world news transmission facilities.

Directors of the American Society of Newspaper Editors decided to take up the question with the State Department and other Government agencies with a view to its incorporation in any general international organization or peace settlement.

The group decided also to urge both major political parties to take a stand on the question by writing a plank into their 1944 campaign platforms.

Free Hand Pledged Military By Green

Chicago, June 26 (AP)—Gov. Dwight H. Green of Illinois today accused the Roosevelt Administration of "political meddling" with army and navy heads in the conduct of the war and pledged that the Republicans, if victorious in November, will give the professional fighting men a free hand.

Welcoming the delegates to the Republican National convention, Governor Green denounced "New Dealers" as seeking to remain in power on a "win the war" slogan.

He said a Republican triumph this year would "strike dread into the hearts of the enemy."

"They will know," Green said, "That the Government of this nation has passed into the hands of men determined to cut all the red tape and bureaucratic interference with the trained leaders of the United States Army and Navy. Those officers will have in the conduct of the war to unstinted support of the Republican administration, free from the political meddling of second-string bureaucrats."

He praised the delegates as "unswayed by the wierd pretense that an 'indispensable man' exists" and said they were dedicated to work not only for "the heralded objectives of the 'four freedoms' but resolved to reestablish here in America the 33 freedoms guaranteed to all citizens under the Constitution."

Aid To Russia Studied

Washington, June 26 (AP)—American lend-lease officials are already tackling the problem of how to help Russia rebuild and expand billions of dollars' worth of shattered industrial plants with the result that lend-lease to that country is undergoing a profound change.

The change reportedly is part of a broad plan for assisting Russian reconstruction and simultaneously helping maintain a high level of employment in this country during the transition from war to peace production here. Soviet officials are understood to have the plan under consideration.

Credit Plan Mapped

Its central provisions is that lend-lease shipments must stop promptly with the end of the war, but that materials useful in peacetime pursuits—electric generators, for instance—will be shipped just as if lend-lease were continuing, except they will go on credit.

Meanwhile the principle is being applied to lend-lease shipments in advance of any general agreement and before the war ends.

Held Bar To Slump

Economic authorities here contend that one result of this system would be to prevent a war-end production slump.

One estimate here is that in the early post-war years the Russians will be able to take in three to four billion dollars worth of imports for reconstruction of their plants, powerhouses, transportation services and the like. Most of this would come from the United States.

Reverse Process Studied

Diplomats here are also concerned with the reverse process in international trade, what can the United States buy from Russia to enable her to pay for what she gets from this country.

One solution suggested for this problem is to have the United States acquire from Russia through normal trade channels supplies of strategic materials.

Russia's lend-lease relations with the United States vary considerably from those of Britain and China. Britain expects to supply most of its own equipment for factory reconstruction. So for months shipments of machine tools and other capital goods have been steadily reduced to Britain. The rule is that none should be sent except to meet urgent war needs with little chance of usefulness in the post-war period.

China's ultimate lend-lease problems are dependent on developments in the Pacific war. When the end of the Japanese war nears, however, the same formula as in the case of Russia may be applied.

DESTROYER ESCORT IS SUNK IN COMBAT

Washington, June 26 (A. P.).—The destroyer escort Fechteler was lost in combat in the Mediterranean last month, the Navy announced today. Indicating that casualties had occurred, the Navy said that the next of kin had been notified.

The skipper, Lieut. Calvert Burke Gill of Baltimore, is among the survivors, it was learned.

The Fechteler, a 1,300-ton ship of the type designed especially for convoy protection against submarines, is the second vessel of that class to be lost. The Leopold was sunk last March in the North Atlantic. Destroyer escorts normally carry a crew of about 150. The ship, built at the Norfolk Navy Yard, was commissioned on July 1, 1943.

Lieut. Gill's wife is living at 8701 Shore Road, Brooklyn.

Loss of the Fechteler brought the total of all ships lost by the Navy in this war to 161, of which 122 were sunk, thirty are overdue and presumed lost and the remainder were destroyed to prevent enemy capture.

Butylenes Will Be Used For Plane Fuel

Synthetic Rubber Raw Material to Be Used In High Octane Gas.

WASHINGTON, June 26 (AP)—Heeding an urgent plea from military leaders for more high octane gasoline, Rubber Director Bradley Dewey today ordered diversion of 400,000 barrels of butylenes from the synthetic rubber program to the production of an extra 1,000,000 barrels of aviation fuel.

Appeal For Shift

The undersecretaries of War and Navy, Robert P. Patterson and Ralph A. Bard, appealed for the shift, declaring the Allied air attacks on Axis targets have attained an unprecedented scale.

"We are under the urgent necessity of stepping up shipments (of high octane gasoline) to the fighting forces overseas," they told Dewey in a letter.

Dewey added the explanation at a press conference that favorable weather and light resistance from the Nazi Luftwaffe had helped in stepping up the bombing raids, some of them long range shuttle operations from western Europe to Russia.

The butylenes will be channeled to high-octane gasoline during July and August, Dewey said.

He gave assurance, however, that the diversion "will not result in the building of one less tire nor the use of one less pound of synthetics."

Manpower Shortage

He explained that current restrictions on the output of tires and other rubber products stem from a manpower shortage rather than a scarcity of materials.

As a consequence of the diversion, peak production of synthetic rubber from alcohol will be maintained the next two months, rather than cut back as had been planned.

At present alcohol is providing 60 per cent of the country's butadiene and petroleum 40 per cent. During July and August the ratio will be 70 per cent alcohol and 30 per cent from petroleum. Thereafter, in line with previous plans the ratio will be 45 per cent from alcohol and 55 per cent from petroleum.

Hull Sees Ambassadors From Central America

Washington, June 26 (AP)—Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, held an unusual hour-long mass conference today with the Ambassadors of six Central American republics.

Ambassador Hector David Castro, of El Salvador, spokesman for the diplomats, described the subject of the meeting as "of a confidential nature." The State Department said the discussion centered chiefly on economic relations and the work of Inter-American agencies.

Those called to the conference were the Ambassadors of Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua and Panama.

Ruling On Bringing In Refugees Is Given

Washington, June 26 (AP)—Senator Reynolds (D., N. C.), chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, today said Francis Biddle, Attorney General, has advised him the proposal to bring 1,000 refugees to the United States did not involve setting aside immigration laws.

Reynolds added President Roosevelt had suggested placing the refugees in an abandoned military camp in New York State. He wrote Biddle asking on what ground the President and War Refugee Board "could set aside the immigration laws."

Biddle replied the refugees were not being permitted to enter the United States under the immigration law and would have no right to remain in this country after the war.

"While this 1,000 is just a drop in the bucket," Reynolds said, "it means the eventual influx of hundreds of thousands, and once they get here they will never be returned."

2 Robot Bombs Devised In U.S. During World War

Kettering and Sperry Hold Aerial Torpedo Patents

WASHINGTON, June 26 (AP).—For a dime each, you can buy at the United States Patent Office two sets of plans drawn by Americans back in World War days for self-propelled aerial torpedoes akin to the Nazi robot plane.

"Far from being new or secret weapons," the National Inventors' Council told the Office of War Information today, "robot planes have been known in the United States since the last war, and consequently are neither new nor secret."

One of the American inventors was Charles F. Kettering, of General Motors Research Corporation, Detroit, now chairman of the Inventors' Council. The other was Lawrence Burt Sperry, of the Sperry Gyroscope Company, New York.

Mr. Kettering filed his application in 1919, describing his torpedo as "a self-propelled airplane carrying a large charge of explosive and having control mechanism adapted so as to direct its movement that it may be caused to travel over a desired path and land upon a predetermined objective." The patent was granted in 1927. The projectile was driven by a two-cycle gasoline engine operating a propeller.

The Sperry torpedo, for which a patent was sought in 1918 and granted ten years later, was a gyroscopically stabilized plane propelled by an electric motor. Its course could be changed in flight by automatic controls.

F. D .R. Invites Bolivians To Monetary Conference

WASHINGTON, June 26—(AP)—President Roosevelt has invited the newly recognized government of Bolivia to the United Nations monetary conference at Bretton Woods, N. H., next week.

The Bolivian government was recognized by the United States and 18 other American republics last Friday.

Sen. Byrd's Son Listed Wounded

Young Byrd is a paratrooper in the 82nd Airborne Division. There was no information as to the extent of his injuries.

WASP Training To Be Discontinued

WASHINGTON, June 26 (AP)—The discontinuance of all "WASP" training by the Army Air Forces as soon as the student pilots now in schools have completed their courses was announced today by Gen. H. H. Arnold, commanding the Army Air Forces.

The WASP—Women's Air Service Pilots—now has 721 women pilots on active duty, and those now in training will increase the number to 1,019 by December, Arnold said.

The general said the decision not to admit any additional candidates for the organization was based on the rejection by the House last week of the Costello bill to give members of the WASP the status of commissioned officers in the Army.

SEAMAN-BONUS CHANGES STAND

JUN 27 1944

MWEB Reaffirms Power To Adjust War-Risk Rates

Washington, June 26 (AP)—Rejecting an AFL challenge of its authority, the Maritime War Emergency Board today reaffirmed its power to adjust war-risk bonuses for merchant seamen.

The board announced that its April 1 revision of bonuses would "remain in full force and effect until the board is convinced by proper evidence that the decision should be modified."

The April action ordered a decrease for voyages along the Pacific Coast and between the Pacific Coast and Hawaii, although some upward changes were made in more active war zones.

Ruling Challenged By AFL

The AFL challenged the ruling in behalf of the Sailors' Union of the Pacific and the Seafarers International Union, both headed by Harry Lundegerg, San Francisco AFL leader.

The AFL representatives, along with those of ship operators and of other unions, presented their case at a hearing here June 6. The board's present announcement observed that all the operators and the majority of maritime unions supported the board's authority to lower bonuses where sailing hazards had decreased and increase bonuses where the hazard had increased.

The board announced, however, that an open hearing would be held on June 30, at which all parties would have opportunity to make recommendation on matters involving war risk and bonuses.

SEDITION JURY HEARS SOLDIER

JUN 27 1944

Latter Identifies Papers He Says He Received

Washington, June 26 (AP)—An army private identified from the witness stand at the mass sedition trial today copies of clip-sheets he said he received through the mail in July, 1941, while he was a Washington correspondent for the Providence (R. I.) Journal.

The witness, Private Sevellon Brown 3d, assigned to the Office of Strategic Services here, said the documents came to him unsolicited. Titled "Publicity" and "The X-Ray," the clip-sheets were offered in evidence by the Government.

Government's Charge

To a question from O. John Rogge, prosecutor, as to what he had done after receiving them, Brown said he read the documents, called a friend at the Postoffice Department and then mailed them to the department's chief inspector.

The Government charges the 29 defendants conspired to disaffect the United States armed forces and to set up a Nazi form of government in this country through propaganda activities.

Joseph H. Bilbrey, defense attorney, asked Brown if the Providence Journal was owned by the British Government or by individuals who were members of the British Government.

Questioned On Policy

"It was not," the witness replied.

"Wasn't its foreign policy favorable to intervention in the war?" Bilbrey asked.

"It favored aid to Great Britain," Brown said.

William J. Powers, another defense attorney, asked the soldier-witness why he sent the papers to the Postoffice Department, and Brown read several excerpts which he said he regarded as inflammatory.

One referred to a "world conquest" in compliance with a "colossal Jewish conspiracy of which mankind is the victim." Another urged a march on Washington and predicted "bullets rather than ballots in the near future."

"I dont' think the mails should be used for such a purpose," Brown said.

Explains Viewpoint

Powers pressed for a further explanation, and the witness said he didn't think individuals should be allowed to preach racial hatred.

"Your paper criticized, assailed the Germans," the attorney said.

"Certainly," was the reply, "but not because they were Germans."

James J. Laughlin, another defense counsel, asked Brown if he favored America entering the war.

"I felt that it was inevitable," Brown said.

"You were pro-British?"

"After Britain entered the war, yes."

"You hated the Germans?"

"Not all Germans and not merely because they were Germans."

Democrats Find Address Of Warren Nothing New

Congressmen Say Points All Have Been Made Before

WASHINGTON, June 26 (AP).—Governor Earl Warren's keynote address to the Republican National Convention was described tonight by Representative Jed Johnson, Democrat, of Oklahoma, as a "typical Republican speech, saying nothing that hasn't already been said 100 times."

Representative Johnson's comment was representative of the views expressed by Democratic Congressmen still in the capital during the Congressional recess. Most Republican Congressmen were in Chicago attending their party's convention.

Senator Scott W. Lucas, Democrat, Illinois, termed the address the "same old theme song the Republicans have been singing," and Representative Clarence Cannon, Democrat, Missouri, predicted that it will not impress the American people who, he said, "have had a practical demonstration of ten years of Democratic progress and achievement after ten years of Republican mismanagement and disaster."

Senator Carl A. Hatch, Democrat, of New Mexico, said, "Regardless of Governor Warren's statement concerning leadership, as a matter of reality his speech constitutes a complete indorsement of what this administration has been doing."

Representative Clinton P. Anderson, Democrat, of New Mexico, said, "I agree with him (Warren) that veterans will want places in private industry, but if private industry is not ready, I wonder if he wants the veterans to go hungry. All of the country's resources will need to be utilized, and should be."

Senator Charles O. Andrews, Democrat, of Florida, said, "It is true that probably a lot of us are not in favor of a third term or a fourth term, but that is not the question. To change the President when we have been successful thus far in the war would seriously impair the hopes of mothers and fathers who have sons on the front."

Senator Dennis Chavez, Democrat, of New Mexico, said he thought Governor Warren was right in advocating "the opening of the door for all Americans not just for jobs but for opportunity, keeping war out of politics, politics out of war, opposition to arrogant power, intoxicated bureaucracy and, if at all possible, jobs for returning veterans in private industry and not government-made jobs."

Senator Chavez said he was not willing, without further study, to comment on the remainder of the address.

2 Appropriations Bills Signed By President

JUN 27 1944

Washington, June 26 (AP)—The President today signed two 1945 appropriations bills making available $152,156,458.66 for legislative-Judiciary and War Department civil functions expenditure.

Approximately $51,000,000 for rivers and harbors and $26,000,000 for flood control of the Mississippi river and tributaries are included in the civil functions bill, which totals $92,455,440.

The legislative-judiciary bill of $59,701,013.66, carries $46,245,994.66 for the legislative and $13,455,024 for the judiciary.

The judiciary breakdown shows principal items of approximately $3,000,000 for judges, $2,975,000 for court clerks, $1,600,000 for jurors' fees and $1,027,885 for miscellaneous salaries. The legislative bill includes $4,090,000 for the Senate and $9,600,000 for the House and $24,000,000 for the public printer.

LL. D. DEGREE

FOR PERSHING

"General Of The Armies" Honored By Wyoming U.

Washington, June 26 (AP)—John J. Pershing, 83-year-old general of the armies, retired, received an honorary doctor of laws degree today from Wyoming University for leading the American Expeditionary Force to victory in the first World War.

"His fame is secure; with Washington, Grant, Sherman and Sheridan, his name is forever enshrined on the roll of American military heroes," said the citation read by Vice-Admiral Emory S. Land at ceremonies in Pershing's quarters at Walter Reed Army Hospital.

Acted For University

Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission and a Wyoming U. alumnus, acted for the president and board of trustees of the university.

The text of the citation:

"John Joseph Pershing, general of the armies of the United States, retired, in a long career devoted to the public service has lived and made fully effective the ideals of the United States Military Academy: Duty—honor—country.

"From his cadet days when he stood out among his fellows as first captain of the corps, through the Apache and the Sioux Indian campaigns, the Spanish-American War, the Philippine Insurrection, the Moro wars, and the Mexican punitive expedition, his qualities of decision, inflexible firmness and unswerving loyalty developed and prepared him for the stupendous task of organizing and training the American Expeditionary Forces, which he led to final decisive victory in the first World War. His fame is secure; with Washington, Grant, Sherman and Sheridan his name is forever enshrined on the roll of American military heroes.

"Since his retirement from active military duty he has continued his service to the nation in other capacities, notably as chairman of the American Battle Monuments Commission, and as head of the United States delegation and chairman of the International Tacna-Arica Commission.

"To General Pershing, closely linked by family relationship and friendly interest to the State of Wyoming, under whose command hundreds of Wyoming men were privileged to serve in war, the university presents its highest academic award."

Churchill-Roosevelt Wives To Broadcast

Washington, June 26 (AP)—Women's part in the war effort will be portrayed tomorrow in a transatlantic broadcast by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Mrs. Winston Churchill through the medium of interviews with American and British women workers.

Bond Drive Reaches 29 Per Cent of Quota

WASHINGTON, June 26, (AP)—War bond sales in the Fifth War Loan Drive totalled $4,591,000,000 or 29 per cent of the drive quota the Treasury Department announced tonight.

Sales to individuals at the end of the 12th day, June 24, totalled $1,716,000,000 or 29 per cent of the individual quota.

The first day's report of corporations and other non-bank investors show sales to date of $2,875,000,000.

Ted R. Gamble, national war finance director, making the first announcement of these new figures said, "we are slightly above where we were at the same period in the Fourth War Loan Drive in relation to the respective quotas, but not far enough ahead for comfort in this gigantic financing task."

The campaign is scheduled to end July 8.

SMALL FIRMS GET NEW PLAN

Will Be Given Greater Share In Civilian Goods Work

Washington, June 26 (AP)—A plan to increase the use of small manufacturing plants in the production of civilian goods in the next few months was announced today by Maury Maverick, chairman of the Smaller War Plants Corporation.

Maverick said the program, approved by the War Production Board, would permit small companies to step up their operations to a rate equal to the over-all industry rate of production for any essential civilian article. The over-all rate for a specific item is based on production for both civilian use and use by the armed forces.

Large Companies Favored

Under present conditions, large companies get most of their orders for civilian goods which are placed by the armed forces. This has given the bigger companies a disproportionate share of consumer goods production, Maverick said, because army and navy orders for civilian items are not counted in the quota limitations which WPB imposes on each firm's production of an article for civilian use.

"Under the new program, small plants will be permitted a rate of production on civilian items by the relaxation of quotas, so that no small plant in the industry will be operating below the over-all average production level of the industry, including the military production," Maverick said.

Effect Of Policy

He gave this example of the expected effect of the new policy: WPB now may limit the output of a civilian item to 40 per cent. of pre-war production; military purchasing of the same item may run to 80 per cent. of the pre-war production. The rate for the industry, therefore, may be 120 per cent. The new plan will make small plants eligible for enough material to operate at 120 per cent., instead of the 40 per cent. now allowed.

Applications for such increased allocations should not be made later than July 10, Maverick said. Only the following plants will be considered:

1. Those in the critical West Coast areas of Santiago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle, whose total employment does not exceed 50 workers and will not be increased by the proposed production;

2. Those in other critical labor areas where production urgency committees have been established and where total employment does not exceed 100 wage earners and will not be increased by the proposed production;

3. Those elsewhere whose total employment after the proposed expansion will not exced 100 wage earners.

Montgomery Ward Files Suit Against War Labor Board

WASHINGTON, June 26 (AP)—Montgomery Ward and Company today filed suit against the War Labor Board to enjoin enforcement of the board's June 6 order requiring maintenance of membership at their Chicago plant.

The suit charges the board acted arbitrarily without giving Ward's a hearing as required by the War Labor Disputes Act. Ward's also contended that the board's order is illegal and that maintenance of membership and check-off of union dues are prohibited by the National Labor Relations Act.

(The WLB order would require Ward's to discharge all employes who have resigned from the union since Dec. 8, 1943, according to Ward's officials.)

Today's suit is similar to previous ones the company has filed against the board. On March 4, 1944, and on June 15 the board's motions to dismiss suits filed by Ward's were overruled by Judge T. Alan Goldsborough of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia.

Industrial Aid By U.S. To Latin America Urged

Argentine Educator Stresses Danger of Fascism There

WELLESLEY, Mass., June 26 (AP).—One of the most important jobs the United States can perform in Latin America is to help the industrialization of those countries, Dr. Sergio Bagu, a native of Argentina and member of a university of La Plata commission making a study of post-war problems, declared tonight.

Upon the future course of American democracy depends whether Latin America becomes the best friend or worst enemy of the United States, Dr. Bagu asserted in a public lecture given before the New England Institute of International Relations at Wellesley College.

"In spite of the rapid rise of the democratic powers and accelerated social transformation of many of Dr. Bagu declared, "there is no doubt that the reactionary forces still hold a dangerous amount of power. Moreover, in every part of Latin America reaction is organizing and choosing new weapons to support or to regain its positions.

"Latin-American Fascism does not believe that the overthrow of Fascism in Europe can overthrow its plans. Their fundamental proposal consists of transforming Latin-America into a refuge for world-wide reaction."

British King's Doctor Opposes State Medicine

Sir John Weir Sends Message to Convention.

ATLANTIC CITY, June 26 (AP).—Sir John Weir, official physician to King George VI of England, urged opposition to socialized medicine legislation, in a communication read today at the 100th annual convention of the American Institute of Homeopathy.

The communication, addressed to the institute, cited the Murray-Wagner-Dingell bill in the United States and the Beveridge plan in Britain as containing examples of legislation for "state medicine."

Sir John's statement, read by Dr. Howard M. Engle, of San Francisco, president of the institute, said in part:

"In view of the attempts both in this country (Britain) and yours to introduce state medicine, it is of utmost importance that the interests of homeopathic practice be safeguarded. This is not easy unless the complete freedom of patient and doctor is conceded."

Sir John, who is consulting physician of the London Homeopathic Hospital, was prevented from attending the conference and then from addressing it by radio because of war developments, institute officials said.

Among the papers read today was one by Dr. George W. MacKenzie, of Philadelphia, dealing with a case of "pretzel jag," an affliction which the victims often blame on the beer. Dr. MacKenzie said he found the patient sensitive to table salt, in reaction to which "the heart becomes very irregular with marked shortness of breath."

Anti-New Deal Group Plans 4th-Term Fight

Atlanta, June 26 (AP)—Anti-New Deal Democrats, opposed to a fourth term for President Roosevelt, will meet in a Southern city, probably New Orleans, shortly after the Democratic National Convention in Chicago, Eugene Talmadge, former Governor of Georgia, said today.

He said, "the spirit of the meeting," would be, "to name electors opposed to a fourth term, and to arrange for them to run on the Democratic ticket and elect a President and Vice-President in the manner prescribed by the Constitution."

The Constitution, said Talmadge, who returned from Chicago after addressing an anti-fourth-term group, "prohibits anyone from running about the country making political deals and running for President and Vice-President." Instead, he said, it makes it mandatory that the people vote for electors who must agree by a majority vote on a choice.

Recalcitrant Nazis Back On Jobs Again

Omaha, June 26 (AP)—Seventh Service Command headquarters today said about 100 German prisoners of war employed in beet fields at Worlant, Wyo., returned to work Saturday after being idle since last Tuesday in protest against a change from day to piecework pay rates.

Headquarters said it did not know whether disciplinary action had been taken against the prisoners.

Fliers Await Rescue From Plateau Perch

Parachute From B-24 And Land in Almost Inaccessible Spot.

KINGMAN, Ariz., June 26 (AP)—Three Army fliers who parachuted from a B-24 bomber last Wednesday are alive and safe—stranded on Tonto plateau, an isolated formation 4,500 feet below the north rim of Grand Canyon, searchers from Kingman air base reported today.

At Least Two Days Wait

With no hope for rescue for at least two days, the refugees received food and medical supplies by parachute from searching planes.

Searching planes sighted one of the missing airmen on the plateau Sunday. Later signals indicated two men were perched on the almost inaccessible refuge. The searchers dropped colored flares asking that a green one be fired for each uninjured man, and a red one, for any injured men. Three green flares appeared.

Skeptical that all three could have parachuted safely to the plateau, only a mile long and a half mile wide, the searcher, Capt. F. W. Milam, Merom, Ind., repeated his instructions and dropped another bundle of flares. Three green ones lit up again.

10 Miles from Village

The plateau is 10 airline miles from the village on the south rim of the canyon, but rescuers will have to travel more than 40 miles of rugged, difficult trails to reach it.

The men parachuted from a plane en route from Tonopah, Nev., to Tucson, Ariz., which encountered engine trouble at 28,000 feet. With the engines dead, they were ordered to jump at 12,000 feet. At 8,000 feet the engines caught and the pilot and co-pilot brought the plane safely to Kingman.

Peace Plan Overnight Is Out, Says Admiral

Dallas, Texas, June 26 (AP)—Rear-Admiral A. C. Bennett said today that he sees no need for a peace conference after the war.

"It will take more than a peace conference," he added. "It will take the best brains of the world many years to work out a workable plan for peace. It is not an overnight proposition that can be worked out by a few men sitting around a table."

Admiral Bennett, commandant of the Eighth Naval district, expressed the hope that the United Nations will maintain joint chiefs of staff after the war is won.

Bridges' Deportation Sustained On Appeal

San Francisco, June 26 (AP)—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals today sustained a lower court denial of a writ of habeas corpus sought by Harry Bridges, CIO longshore union leader, aimed at blocking a deportation order issued by Attorney General Francis Biddle.

Bridges' attorneys said the Court of Appeals' three-to-two decision would be taken to the United States Supreme Court for final adjudication.

Biddle ordered Bridges deported to his native Australia in May, 1942, charging that the labor leader had been a member of the Communist party and that the party advocated violent overthrow of the United States Government. Bridges denied the charges, in Immigration Department hearings previous to Biddle's order and also in his petition for a writ of habeas corpus.

New-Type Transports Will Be Used in Pacific

Vickery Tells Workers No Program Is More Vital

WILMINGTON, Calif., June 26 (AP).—Vice-Admiral Howard L. Vickery told workers at the California Shipbuilding Corporation today that the new type streamlined transports on which they are working are all for use in the Pacific theater, and that "there is no program more vital to the war."

Calship has launched two of the vessels of which he spoke, it became known. They are a conversion of the Victory freighter, 455 feet long and of 10,500 deadweight tons. Details of armament, speed and capacity are restricted.

Admiral Vickery, vice-chairman of the United States Maritime Commission, told the workers the "present program gives you full assurance of jobs" at least until July, 1945, no matter how the war develops. After that, he said, the various yards will be weighed against each other on an efficiency basis.

SUCCESSFUL COMPLETION OF THE ASSAULT UPON THE PORT WAS ANNOUNCED SUDDENLY AT HEADQUARTERS IN A DRAMATIC THREE-WORD BULLETIN:

"FLASH--CHERBOURG FALLEN."

THE VICTORY CAME ALMOST FOUR YEARS TO THE DAY SINCE ADOLF HITLER PROCLAIMED IN 1940, AFTER SUCCESSFULLY PLUNGING THROUGH FRANCE, THAT "THE WAR IN THE WEST IS FINISHED."

JUN 27 1944

WITH CHERBOURG'S BIG DOCKS NOW IN ALLIED HANDS, THE WAY IS OPENED FOR A MIGHTY NEW ALLIED OFFENSIVE FROM THE WEST TO REGAIN THE TERRITORIES THAT HITLER WON. THE END OF THE DIFFICULT DAYS OF LANDING MEN AND SUPPLIES ON BEACHES NOW IS IN SIGHT.

FROM NOW ON THE ALLIED SCHEDULE FOR MOVEMENT OF SUPPLIES WILL NOT BE SO MUCH AT THE MERCY OF THE WEATHER.

LEADING THE AMERICAN DOUGHBOYS IN THEIR CONQUEST OF CHERBOURG WAS LT. GEN. OMAR N. BRADLEY, WHO ALSO WAS WITH THEM IN SOME OF THEIR GREATEST VICTORIES IN NORTH AFRICA OVER MARSHAL ERWIN ROMMEL.

WHILE THE AMERICANS WERE CLEARING THE ENEMY FROM THE GREAT PORT, GEN. SIR BERNARD L.MONTGOMERY'S BRITISH AND CANADIANS WERE DRIVING FORWARD IN A NEW OFFENSIVE IN THE TILLY-SUR-SEULLES SECTOR WEST OF CAEN TOWARD THE EASTERN END OF THE NORMANDY BATTLEGROUND.

HOWEVER, THE WASTE OF MANPOWER AS EVIDENT FROM THE ESTIMATE OF 100,000 GERMAN TROOPS PUT OUT OF ACTION, MANY SQUANDERED BY THE GERMANS IN FUTILE COUNTER-ATTACKS, HAS BEEN THE MOST ENCOURAGING FEATURE OF THE FIRST THREE WEEKS OF INVASION.

JUN 27 1944

MONTGOMERY'S DRIVE IS REGARDED HERE AS A JAB TO KEEP THE ENEMY'S FOUR ARMORED DIVISIONS TIGHTLY ENGAGED AND HIS RESERVES FLOWING IN TO PATCH UP HOLES WHILE THE MAIN FORCE IS BEING GATHERED FOR THE BIG ALLIED OFFENSIVE.

MONTGOMERY'S TROOPS SHOVED OFF UNDER A BARRAGE WHICH JUMPED FORWARD A HUNDRED YARDS EVERY THREE MINUTES, A FIELD DISPATCH SAID, AND THE BRITISH BATTLED THEIR WAY IN AND AROUND FOUR VILLAGES, FIGHTING HAND-TO-HAND WITH THE GERMANS IN HOUSES AND IN ORCHARDS.

THE ENEMY HAD HIDDEN IN THE THICK GROWTH OF THE COUNTRYSIDE AND POURED IN HEAVY MACHINE-GUN AND MORTAR FIRE.

WARSHIPS STANDING OFF SHORE LOBBED THEIR SHELLS MORE THAN TEN MILES INLAND IN SUPPORT OF MONTGOMERY'S ASSAULT. #

THE FORCES OF LT. GEN. OMAR N. BRADLEY STRUCK FROM SOUTH, EAST AND WEST.

ENTERING THE CITY UNDER FIRE WITH THE TROOPS IN THE LATE AFTERNOON, ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENT DON WHITEHEAD DESCRIBED HOW THE ARTILLERY FIRE OF THE ASSAULT FORCES SHATTERED EACH GERMAN STRONG POINT WHILE GERMAN DEMOTIONS EXPLODED AND FLAMED AMONG THE HARBOR FACILITIES.

ALTHOUGH CHERBOURG WAS OVERHUNG WITH CLOUDS OF DUST AND SMOKE, THE CITY PROPER WAS NOT TOUCHED BY AMERICAN ARTILLERY FIRE.

"ALL THAT REMAINS IS THE SLOW JOB OF CLEANING OUT THE MAIN PART OF THE CITY," WHITEHEAD WROTE. "AT 6 P.M. THERE WERE ONLY TWO STRONG POINTS AT FORT DU ROULE AND A FEW OTHER SCATTERED DEFENSE POINTS HOLDING OUT."

THE DEFENSE OF THE CITY COST THE GERMANS DEARLY. WHITEHEAD TOLD HOW THE LAST MILE OF THE ADVANCE WAS STREWN WITH NAZI CORPSES. IT WAS ESTIMATED BY A SENIOR BRITISH OFFICER THAT ABOUT 30,000 GERMAN PRISONERS WOULD BE TAKEN AT CHERBOURG.

AMERICAN TROOPS DRIVING DOWN INTO THE CITY FROM THE HEIGHTS SAW ALLIED WARSHIPS OUTSIDE THE HARBOR BLAZING AWAY AT THE LAST LONG-RANGE BATTERIES ON BOTH SIDES OF CHERBOURG AND IGNORING THE FIRE OF SHORE GUNS.

SIMULTANEOUSLY WITH THE FINAL AMERICAN ASSAULT ON CHERBOURG, BRITISH FORCES ON THE EASTERN FLANK OF THE BEACHHEAD LASHED OUT WITH A DAWN OFFENSIVE THAT GAINED A MILE SOUTH OF TILLY-SUR-SEULLES, 12 MILES WEST OF CAEN.

JUN 27 1944

ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENT ROGER GREENE SAID THE ATTACK RAN INTO STRONGLY HELD GERMAN POSITIONS AND THE NAZIS LOST HEAVILY WHEN THEY THREW IN REINFORCEMENTS.

(CBS CORRESPONDENT BILL DOWNS SAID THE BRITISH GAINED UP TO THREE MILES SOUTH OF TILLY-SUR-SEULLES AFTER HEAVY ARTILLERY PREPARATION.)

(THE GERMAN RADIO KEPT INSISTING THE ALLIES HAD MADE BIG NEW LANDINGS EAST OF THE ORNE RIVER ABOVE CAEN WITH THE IDEA OF

STARTING MAJOR OPERATIONS TO CAPTURE CAEN AND PUSH EAST TOWARD PARIS. THE GERMAN-CONTROLLED VICHY RADIO REPORTED NEW LANDINGS AT THE MOUTH OF THE ORNE. THE GERMAN TRANSOCEAN AGENCY SAID STRONGLY PROTECTED ALLIED TRANSPORTS WERE OFF THE MOUTH OF THE ORNE. IT CLAIMED A 5,000-TON TRANSPORT HAD BEEN SET AFIRE AND A DESTROYER SUNK.)

JUN 27 1944

SUCCESS OF BRADLEY'S FINAL ASSAULT ON CHERBOURG INDICATED THE GERMANS HAD BEEN SURPRISED BY HIS SWIFT DRIVE ACROSS THE PENINSULAR A WEEK AGO. IN FACT, 21ST ARMY GROUP HEADQUARTERS MADE PUBLIC A CAPTURED GERMAN ORDER WHICH COMMANDED SOME OF THE DIVISIONS AT CHERBOURG TO WITHDRAW TO THE SOUTH. THEY WERE CUT OFF BEFORE THEY COULD ESCAPE BRADLEY'S TRAP.

GERMAN FORCES AT CHERBOURG WERE BELIEVED TO CONSIST OF THE 709TH DIVISION, THE ORIGINAL GARRISON AND STILL NEARLY AT FULL STRENGTH, AND PARTS OF THE 77TH, 91ST AND 243RD DIVISIONS, ALL BADLY CUT UP.

IT WAS ESTIMATED THAT ONLY ABOUT 5,000 CIVILIANS REMAINED IN THE CITY. IN PEACETIME THE CITY HAD ABOUT 32,000 INHABITANTS, WITH ABOUT 60,000 IN THE GREATER CHERBOURG AREA.

MAJ. GEN. KARL WILHELM VON SCHLIEBAN, SENT IN BY FIELD MARSHAL VON RUNDSTEDT A MONTH AGO, COMMANDED THE CITY'S DEFENDERS.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS MADE KNOWN YESTERDAY THAT MAJ. GEN. JOSEPH LAWTON COLLINS AND LEONARD T.GEROW ARE CORPS COMMANDERS OF AMERICAN FORCES IN FRANCE. BRIG. GEN. JOSEPH PIERRE KOENIG, COMMANDER OF FRENCH FORCES IN BRITAIN WAS NAMED COMMANDER OF ALL RESISTANCE FORCES IN FRANCE, UNDER GEN. EISENHOWER.XX

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, JUNE 26-(AP)- FOURTEEN ALLIED WARSHIPS--HEADED BY A PEARL HARBOR VICTIM, THE BATTLESHIP NEVADA--STEAMED WELL INSIDE THE RANGE OF CHERBOURG'S NOTORIOUSLY TOUGH SHORE DEFENSES SUNDAY AFTERNOON AND BLASTED HER BATTERIES INTO SILENCE.

FOR THREE AND A HALF HOURS THREE U.S. BATTLESHIPS, FOUR CRUISERS AND SEVEN DESTROYERS UNDER THE COMMAND OF REAR ADMIRAL MORTON L. DEYO STOOD OFF THE SEMI-CIRCULAR BAY AND THREW STEEL INTO THE MIGHTY CONCRETE EMPLACEMENTS PROTECTING THE GUNS.

SEVERE ENEMY FIRE FAILED TO TURN THEM BACK AND SOME SHIPS MOVED IN AS CLOSE AS 8,000 YARDS TO SHORE--WHICH IS ABOUT THE EQUIVALENT OF AN INFANTRYMAN STICKING HIS GUN IN YOUR FACE.

FIELD DISPATCHES DESCRIBED THE ACTION AS THE HEAVIEST AND MOST CONCENTRATED NAVAL BOMBARDMENT OF THE INVASION. ONE CORRESPONDENT SAID THE SHIPS CLOSED IN AROUND DOOMED CHERBOURG "LIKE DOGS UNLEASHED."

CONCRETE DEFENSES RISING AROUND THE DOCKS CARVED FROM SOLID ROCK WERE OVERWHELMED BY THE ALMOST CONTINUOUS STREAM OF SHELLS.

THE ACTION CALLED FOR THE CLOSEST CO-OPERATION WITH LT. GEN. OMAR N.BRADLEY'S ARMY. MARKSMANSHIP HAD TO BE PERFECT, WITH SHELLS EXPLODING IN THE DOCK AREA OR ALONG THIN STRIPS OF THE COAST TO THE LEFT AND RIGHT.

ANYTHING HITTING MORE THAN 2,000 YARDS INLAND WOULD HAVE ENDANGERED TROOPS WAITING IN THEIR POSITIONS FOR THE SIGNAL TO MOVE IN AND CAPTURE CHERBOURG.

THE NEVADA WAS JOINED BY THE BATTLESHIP TEXAS AND THE BATTLESHIP ARKANSAS.

THE TEXAS IS THE FLAGSHIP OF REAR ADMIRAL CARLETON BRYANT, WHO WAS DEPUTY COMMANDER OF THE BOMBARDMENT FORCE. CAPT. C.A.BAKER, WASHINGTON, D.C., WAS COMMANDER OF THE TEXAS.

THE NEVADA IS COMMANDED BY CAPT. P.M.RHEA, WASHINGTON, D.C., AND THE ARKANSAS UNDER CAPT. F.G.RICHARDS, NEW CASTLE, ME. ADMIRAL DEYO'S FLAG FLEW FROM THE CRUISER TUSCALOOSA, COMMANDED BY CAPT. J.W.B.WALLER, MANCHESTER-BY-THE-SEAS, MASS.

PARTICIPATING
FOUR U.S. DESTROYERS AND THEIR OFFICERS/WERE THE O'BRIEN, COMMANDER W.W. OUTERBRIDGE; THE MURPHY, COMMANDER R.A. WOLBERTON; THE RODMAN, COMMANDER J.F. FOLEY, AND THE EMMONS, COMMANDER E.B. BILLINGSLEY.

BRITISH DESTROYERS WERE THE ONSLOW, OFFA AND MELBREAK.

MINE SWEEPING FORCES WHICH CLEARED THE WAY FOR THE WARSHIPS WERE MADE UP OF BOTH AMERICAN AND BRITISH FLOTILLAS.

THERE WERE A SERIES OF FIERCE GUN DUELS BEFORE THE SHORE BATTERIES WERE SUFFICIENTLY NEUTRALIZED FOR THE FIRE TO BE SHIFTED FROM THE STRONG POINTS TO DIRECT SUPPORT OF THE ARMY, IT WAS REPORTED AT SUPREME HEADQUARTERS.

JUN 27 1944

THE THUNDEROUS BOMBARDMENT BEGAN SHORTLY AFTER NOON WHEN THE SHIPS MET IN A RENDEZVOUS IN THE CHANNEL OFF CHERBOURG PENINSULA.

THE SILENCE OF THE BRIGHT SUNDAY AFTERNOON WAS BROKEN FIRST WITH A SALVO FROM THE NEVADA'S 14-INCH GUNS. OTHER BATTLESHIPS THEN OPENED UP ON SHORE BATTERIES FLANKING THE CITY.

THE QUINCY AND TUSCALOOSA FOLLOWED SUIT WITH THEIR EIGHT-INCH GUNS AND THE GLASGOW AND ENTERPRISE WITH THEIR SIX INCHERS.

ENEMY SHELLS FELL CLOSE TO THE BATTLESHIPS AS THEY STEAMED IN PLAIN VIEW OF THE SHORE GUNS, BUT THERE WAS NO MENTION OF ALLIED DAMAGE OR CASUALTIES. DESTROYERS SPED IN AND LAID A SMOKESCREEN BEHIND WHICH THE BOMBARDMENT CONTINUED.

AFTER 90 MINUTES OF SHELLING THE WARSHIPS HAD BEEN SCHEDULED TO WITHDRAW BUT ADMIRAL DEYO EXTENDED THE TIME LIMIT TWO HOURS.

WITH AMERICAN FORCES AT CHERBOURG, 8:45 A.M., JUNE 26-(AP)-DURING THE LAST 24 HOURS THE AMERICANS HAVE TAKEN 3,340 PRISONERS, AND HUNDREDS OF OTHERS WERE STREAMING INTO THE PRISONERS' CAGES TODAY.

DOUGHBOYS WERE CLEANING UP POCKETS OF ENEMY OPPOSITION IN CHERBOURG WHILE THE GERMANS GATHERED THE REMNANTS OF THEIR SCATTERED TROOPS ON THE CAP DE LA HAGUE. MANY GERMANS OVERRUN IN THE SWIFT ADVANCE WERE TRYING TO MAKE THEIR WAY TO THAT CAPE.

PATROLS PUSHING INTO THE CENTRAL PART OF THE CITY MET SMALL ARMS FIRE FROM A FEW SNIPERS, AND SMALL KNOTS OF RESISTANCE, BUTSTHE BACKBONE OF ENEMY OPPOSITION WAS SMASHED COMPLETELY. UNDER GRAY SKIES AMERICAN TROOPS WERE CLEANING UP THE TOWN.

BY DON WHITEHEAD

WITH AMERICAN TROOPS IN CHERBOURG, 9:12 P.M. JUNE 26-(AP)-FANATIC DEFENDERS OF CHERBOURG MADE A LAST DESPERATE EFFORT TODAY TO HOLD OUT AGAINST DOUGHBOYS CLOSING IN TO WIPE OUT THE LAST POCKETS OF RESISTANCE.

TONIGHT A FEW PILLBOXES AND SNIPERS WERE HOLDING OUT IN THIS SMOKE-HAZED CITY AND THERE WAS MUCH RESISTANCE ASTIR IN THE ARSENAL AREA BUT THEY WERE MAKING A FUTILE STAND AND COMPLETE CONTROL OF THE CITY IS ONLY A MATTER OF HOURS.

BUT THE GERMANS WHO RETREATED TO CAP DE LA HAGUE WERE DIRECTING HARASSING ARTILLERY FIRE INTO THE CITY IN AN ATTEMPT TO SLOW UP OUR OCCUPATION.

THROUGH SHELL POCKED STREETS THE DOUGHBOYS ADVANCED CAUTIOUSLY FROM HOUSE TO HOUSE, HUNTING DOWN SNIPERS AND POCKETS OF ENEMY TROOPS HOLED UP IN BUILDINGS--EITHER TO MAKE A LAST STAND FIGHT OR SO FRIGHTENED THEY WERE WAITING FOR SOMEONE TO TAKE THEM PRISONER.

WE DROVE INTO CHERBOURG TODAY OVER ROUNDABOUT ROADS AS SHELLS WERE SMUHING INTO THE CITY AND AS OUR ARTILLERY AND TANKS WERE BATTERING AT MACHINEGUN NESTS AND ISOLATED POCKETS OF RESISTANCE.

DOUGHBOYS STILL WERE WORKING TO CLEAN OUT A MAZE OF TUNNELS AND INTERLOCKING CHAMBERS IN FORT DU ROULE, WHICH WAS ONE OF THE LAST POINTS TO BE SUBDUED.

EVEN TONIGHT NO ONE WAS SURE THAT ALL THE GERMANS HAD BEEN CLEARED OUT OF THE FORTRESS WHICH HAS SEVERAL LEVELS SET INTO A CLIFF OVER-LOOKING THE CITY. THAT MAY BE A JOB TAKING SEVERAL DAYS.

AS WE WALKED THROUGH THE STREETS OF CHERBOURG DOUGHBOYS MOVED UP TO CLOSE IN ON THE PILLBOXES WHICH STILL WERE FIRING FROM THE BEACH. TANKS EDGED UP TO CORNER BUILDINGS AT THE WATERFRONT AND GUNS HAMMERED AWAY. MACHINE GUNS RATTLED AND THERE WAS A HEAVY CRUMP OF ENEMY SHELLS LANDING NEARBY.

JUN 27 1944

IN A WINE SHOP SGT.HAROLD SHORTSLEEVE, RUTLAND, VT., HADHIS HEAVY MACHINEGUN SQUAD CLEANING THEIR WEAPONS BEFORE MOVING UP TO TAKE PART IN THE ACTION AGAINST THE PILLBOXES STILL BLASTING AWAY AT OUR TROOPS.

"WE'RE WAITING FOR ARTILLERY AND MORTARS TO GET TO WORK AND THEN WE'LL GO IN TO CLEAR UP THE PILLBOXES," SHORTSLEEVE SAID WITH A GRIN.

IN THE HOTEL ATLANTIQUE WERE CASES OF WINE, COGNAC AND CHAMPAGNE LEFT BEHIND BY THE GERMANS WHEN THEY FLED THE CITY.

THERE THE SHELVES WERE FILLED WITH FINE SAUTERNES, BURGUNDYS AND LIQUERS. THE GERMANS HAD REQUISITIONED THE HOTEL FOR LABOR TROOPS OF THE TODT ORGANIZATION. THEY HAD LIVED IN COMFORT IN THE 500-ROOM HOSTELRY.

PVT.MICHAEL PASTERNAK, 13 SHERMAN ST., PEABODY, NJ., HAD FOUND A STOREROOM OF FINE CHAMPAGNE AND HE UNCORKED A BOTTLE AND OFFERED US A DRAINK. GERMAN STORES WERE SCATTERED THROUGHOUT THE RAMBLING HOTEL.

THEN THE DOOR OPENED AND A LITTLE FRENCHEMAN WITH A WHITE MUSTACHE BECKONED TO US. WE ENTERED HIS LIVING QUARTERS AND HE ALMOST BURST INTO TEARS. HIS EYES WERE WET WITH EMOTION. HE COULD HARDLY TALK.

"I BEEN WAITING FOR YOU FOR FOUR YEARS," HE SAID WIPING HIS EYES. "YOU ARE THE FIRST AMERICANS I HAVE SEEN."

THEN HE TOLD THE THREE OF US TO WAIT. HE WENT OUT OF THE ROOM. A FEW MINUTES LATER HE CAME BACK WITH A BOTTLE OF COGNAC AND OPENED IT.

JUN 27 1944

A64

"PLEASE TAKE A DRINK," HE SAID, AND STARTED TO POUR LIQUOR INTO SOME GLASSES. SUDDENLY HE STOPPED AND SAID "WAIT, I HAVE SOMETHING I HAVE BEEN SAVING FOR YOU. I HAD FORGOTTEN.

THEN HE CAME BACK WITH A BOTTLE OF SCOTCH.

"FOUR YEARS AGO," HE SAID, "THE ENGLISH WERE EVACUATING FRANCE THROUGH THIS PORT. IN TOWN A MAJOR GAVE ME THIS BOTTLE AND SAID 'WE'LL BE BACK IN FIVE YEARS' BUT I NEVER THOUGHT I'D LIVE TO SEE THIS DAY."

HE UNCORKED THE BOTTLE AND SLOWLY POURED A DRINK FOR US. THEN HE POURED ONE FOR HIMSELF.

"I DON'T DRINK ORDINARILY--BUT THIS IS A SPECIAL OCCASION."

HE RAISED THE GLASS, LOOKED AT EACH OF US WITH HIS TEAR-DIMMED BLUE EYES.

"VIVE LA FRANCE! VIVE L'AMERIQUE--FOR BRINGING US LIBERTY."

WE RAISED OUR GLASSES AND DRANK TO FRANCE AND TO OUR OWN UNITED STATES. IT WAS A STRANGE PLACE TO BE DRINKING TOASTS WITH SHELLS WHISTLING ACROSS AND GUNS CRACKING NEARBY. AND YET IT WAS A SOLEMN OCCASION.

OUTSIDE, OUR TROOPS WERE BATTERING AN ENEMY PILLBOX JUST A SHORT DISTANCE BEHIND THE HOTEL. WE WENT UPSTAIRS TO LOOK OUT A WINDOW AT THE FIGHT. SUDDENLY THE GERMANS PUT UP A WHITE FLAG AND A DOZEN OF THEM CAME OUT OF THE PILLBOX WITH THEIR HANDS IN THE AIR.

WE WERE WATCHING THIS LITTLE DRAMA WHEN SOMEONE TOUCHED ME ON THE SHOULDER. I TURNED AND THERE WERE FIVE GERMANS STANDING THERE WITH RIFLES IN HAND. TWO OF THEM HELD WHITE FLAGS.

"WE WANT TO SURRENDER," ONE OF THEM SAID IN ENGLISH.

"WE HAVEN'T FIRED A SHOT. I SWEAR IT," HE SAID PLEADINGLY, EXPLAINING THAT WHEN THE OFFICERS LEFT THEY HID IN THE HOTEL AND DECIDED TO GIVE THEMSELVES UP WHEN THEY HEARD OUR VOICES.

I TOLD THEM TO FOLLOW ME AND STARTED TO LEAD THEM TO THE STREET AND TURN THEM OVER TO MILITARY POLICE. BUT ONE OF THE GERMANS BROKE DOWN AND BEGAN SOBBING IN TERROR. HE TREMBLED AND CRIED.

FINALLY FIVE OF THEM WENT DOWN THE STREET TO A CORNER WHERE THEY GAVE THEMSELVES UP TO LT.ORIS BRYANT OF LOVINGTON, NEW MEXICO, AND LIEUT.CURTIS COMBS, OF LA GRANGE, GA.

JUN 27 1944

BACK AT THE HOTEL THE GREY-HAIRED FRENCHMAN, FERDINAND ZOPPE, SIPPED HIS DRINK AND TILTED HIS BLACK BERET AT A RAKISH ANGLE. HE WAS MANAGER OF THE ATLANTIQUE HOTEL FOR SIX YEARS AND HAD HATED THE GERMANS WITH A BURNING HATRED ALL THE TIME THEY WERE IN HIS HOTEL.

HE TOLD US OF THE GERMANS FIRING THE AMIOT AIRCRAFT PLANT, OF BLOWING UP THEIR COASTAL GUNS, OF SETTING FIRE TO A HUGE GARAGE FULL OF AUTOMOBILES AS WELL AS AMMUNITION DUMPS AND A LARGE MILL.

"THE GERMANS' MORALE WAS LOW," HE SAID.

WITH BRITISH AND CANADIAN FORCES IN FRANCE, JUNE 26--THE HEAVIEST ARTILLERY BARRAGE SINCE THE D-DAY LANDING ASSAULT SHOOK THE BEACHEAD SECTOR WEST AND SOUTHWEST OF CAEN TODAY AHEAD OF NEW BRITISH INFANTRY AND TANK ADVANCES.

THE SHELLING STARTED AT 7:30 A.M. AND FOR TWO HOURS AND 40 MINUTES THE DRUMMING, DEAFENING BARRAGE ROARED ON. AS IT CONTINUED, BRITISH TROOPS ROSE FROM THEIR SLIT TRENCHES IN THE RED POPPY FIELDS AND WENT FORWARD INTO BATTLE IN THE COOL, DAMP MORNING AIR.

LONG-RANGE AMERICAN GUNS FROM THE AMERICAN SECTOR IMMEDIATELY TO THE WEST ALSO JOINED IN SUPPORT OF THE BRITISH ATTACK.

THERE WERE GUNS IN EVERY CLUMP OF BUSHES, IN EVERY WOOD AND IN EVERY WHEAT FIELD AROUND US. THERE WAS SUCH A DIN YOU COULD NOT HEAR THE MAN NEXT TO YOU WHEN HE SHOUTED.

SHELLS WHIZZED OVERHEAD TO PLOW INTO GERMAN POSITIONS. EVERY TYPE OF GUN IN THIS NARROW SECTOR OF THE BEACHHEAD WAS FIRING, AND NOISE RUMBLED AND ECHOED OVER THE NORMAN FIELDS.

I REMAINED IN THE CANADIAN GUN LINES FOR THE FIRST HALF HOUR AND NEVER HEARD AN ANSWER FROM GERMAN ARTILLERY.

A GRAY SKY THREATENED RAIN AND AT 9 A.M., WITH THE BARRAGE REACHING ITS CRESCENDO, THERE WAS A HALF-HOUR DOWNPOUR. BRITISH TROOPS SLOGGED FORWARD IN THE RAIN. IT STOPPED RAINING AND BRITISH AND CANADIAN FIGHTERS WERE OVER THE BEACHHEAD AGAIN, ZOOMING ALONG THE FRONT.

THE SKY WAS STILL OVERCAST WHEN THE MAIN BARRAGE STOPPED AT 10:10 A.M. INTERMITTENT BURSTS OF GUNFIRE CONTINUED AS FOWARD OBSERVATION OFFICERS CALLED DOWN SALVOS ON SELECTED TARGETS.

BUT THE BARRAGE WHICH STARTED IN THE MORNING WAS THE BIGGEST BRITISH-CANADIAN EFFORT. IT MAY BE THE PRELUDE TO HEAVY FIGHTING AS THE TROOPS IN THIS SECTOR GO FORWARD TO EXPAND THE BEACHHEAD.

castlejaloux is a highway and rail junction of 3,000 about 25 miles northwest of agen and 40 miles northeast of mont de marsan, german general headquarters for southwestern france.

(the french radio at algiers, quoting the correspondent of a french independent agency in geneva, said tonight the germans on june 10 had "maccacred almost the whole population" of oradour, which is 12 miles northwest of limoges. the broadcast, recorded in new york by cbs, said only about 100 of 1,200 inhabitants remained alive.)

border advices received here said the french partisans which captured casteljaloux came from the wooded landes region and held the town long enough to execute local vichy collaborationists and set up a partisan municipal administration. they were reported driven out by a nazi force from agen.

ADD ABD FLAGSHIP-(WORDEN) XX DINNER

AFTER LUNCH THE ADMIRAL STILL HAD NOTHING MUCH TO DO. THIS IS AN AIR BATTLE NOW OUT OF SIGHT ALTHOUGH PLANES ARE STILL BUSY RUNNING UP A 369 TO 27 SCORE AGAINST THE ENEMY (IN ADDITION TO PLANES LOST IN AERIAL BATTLES THE JAPANESE LOST 18 PLANES TO ANTI-AIRCRAFT FIRE AND 15 WERE DESTROYED ON THE GROUND THE SAME DAY).

THE ADMIRAL HIMSELF SAID, "I TRY TO DO A LITTLE WALKING EVERY DAY. I FIND I THINK BETTER AND SLEEP MORE EASILY IF I DO. IT IS SURPRISING HOW FEW DAYS YOU CAN'T FIND TIME FOR IT."

IN THE NAVY THEY SAY SPRUANCE IS ONE OF THE TOP TACTICAL COMMANDERS. SOME CALL HIM IMPERTURBABLE: SOME SAY HE'S COLDBLOODED AS A CODFISH. AND OVER JAPAN WAY--WHERE TONIGHT THEY'RE LOOKING FOR 369 AIRPLANES WHICH WON'T EVER COME BACK--IT'S SAFE TO SAY THEY USE EVEN STRONGER LAUNGUAGE.

ON THE SAIPAN BEACHHEAD, MARIANAS ISLANDS, JUNE 26-(AP)-AMERICAN ARMY AND MARINE FORCES, FIGHTING ABREAST EACH OTHER, ATTACKED THE TOWN OF GARAPAN TODAY UNDER THE SMOKE AND FLAME OF THE HEAVIEST ARTILLERY BARRAGE YET LAID DOWN BY SHORE GUNS ON THIS ISLAND.

USING STAR SHELLS, DAISY CUTTERS AND ALL THE HORRIFIC INVENTIONS OF HARASSING ARTILLERY, THE GUNS BEGAN POUNDING THE TOWN LAST NIGHT HARDER THAN IT HAD BEEN POUNDED SINCE THE ORIGINAL LANDING ON SAIPAN 12 DAYS AGO.

AGAINST WEAK REPLIES FROM A FEW JAPANESE MORTARS AND WITHOUT NEEDING SUCH FLEET SUPPORT AS HAD BEEN REQUIRED PREVIOUSLY, FIRE WAS INCREASED THIS MORNING UNTIL THE WHOLE NORTHWEST CORNER OF SAIPAN IN THE GARAPAN AREA WAS WREATHED IN SMOKE AND SHAKING WITH THE SHOCK OF SHELLS.

JUST AFTER DAWN, WHEN THE PRELIMINARY BARRAGE HAD BEEN UNDER WAY FOR HOURS, THE ENTIRE AMERICAN LINE MOVED FORWARD FROM THE FOOTHILLS AND MOUNTAINS ON THE EAST SIDE TO THE BEACH FLATS JUST SOUTH OF GARAPAN ON THE WEST SIDE OF THE EMBATTLED LINE.

TODAY'S ATTACK INVOLVED ALMOST THE FULL STRENGTH OF THE MARINES, WHO HAVE BEEN FIGHTING AT THE FRONT CONTINUOUSLY, AND THE ARMY, WHICH WAS BROUGHT IN AS REINFORCEMENT SEVERAL DAYS AGO.

JUN 27 1944

THE ARMY STRUCK THE MIDDLE OF THE JAPANESE LINES, WHILE THE MARINES TOOK BOTH FLANKS. AFTER HOURS OF ATTACK, THE AMERICANS AT NOON HAD REACHED THE OUTSKIRTS OF GARAPAN WITHOUT ENCOUNTERING STRONG ENOUGH OPPOSITION TO HAVE A CHANCE OF STOPPING THEM.

THE ATTACK WAS PECULIAR IN THAT IT WAS CONFINED FOR THE FIRST TIME TO THE LAND ALONE.

THE JAPANESE, WHO HARASSED SHIPS AND PLANES OFF THE WEST SHORE IN THE EARLY DAYS OF THE BATTLE, NOW WERE FORCED TO CONFINE THEIR EFFORTS TO SHORE FIGHTING.

OFF SHORE, AMERICAN SMALL BOATS MOVED UNMOLESTED, AND SEA-PLANES TOOK OFF WITHOUT DIFFICULTY. LANDING CRAFT CONTINUED

THEIR UNLOADING OPERATIONS, AND AMERICAN HOSPITAL SHIPS LAY WITHIN GUN RANGE OF THE SHORE, TRANSFERRING PATIENTS FOR THE FIRST LEG OF THE LONG TRIP HOME.

UNDATED INVASION BACKGROUND (700)

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BY FIGHTING THEIR WAY into the port of Cherbourg ~~THE ALLIES HAVE WON~~ ~~THE FALL OF THE GREAT PORT OF CHERBOURG HAS GIVEN~~ THE ALLIES A RESOUNDING SUCCESS IN THE FIRST PHASE OF THEIR INVASION OF WESTERN EUROPE, WIDELY HAILED AS THE GREATEST MILITARY OPERATION EVER UNDERTAKEN.

WITH CHERBOURG IN THEIR HANDS, THEY WILL HAVE FRANCE'S THIRD PORT AT THEIR DISPOSAL THROUGH WHICH TO FUNNEL GREAT ARMIES AND MOUNTAINS OF EQUIPMENT FOR THE REAL ASSAULT ON HITLER'S EUROPE. JUN 27 1944

THE TRIUMPHAL ENTRY OF AMERICAN FORCES INTO CHERBOURG CAME JUST 19 DAYS AFTER THE ALLIES LANDED IN NORMANDY ON JUNE 6 AND REPRESENTED THE FRUITS OF MANY MONTHS OF PAINSTAKING PLANNING AND PREPARATION.

IN REALITY, THE INVASION BEGAN LONG BEFORE THE ACTUAL LANDINGS IN NORMANDY AND WAS LAUNCHED BY ENORMOUS FORMATIONS OF NIGHT AND DAY BOMBERS WHICH HIT GERMAN FACTORIES AND TRANSPORTATION AND GENERALLY SOFTENED ENEMY DEFENSES FOR D-DAY. A FEW WEEKS BEFORE THE LANDINGS THE FULL WEIGHT OF THE ATTACK WAS SWITCHED TO THE ATLANTIC WALL AND ITS COMMUNICATIONS.

ON SOME DAYS 5,000 PLANES WENT OUT FROM BRITAIN TO KEEP THE AIR OFFENSIVE GOING INCESSANTLY. MUCH OF THE ATTACK WAS DIRECTED

2.24 - 16599

AGAINST GERMAN AIR POWER. IT PAID DIVIDENDS. WHEN D-DAY CAME GERMAN AIR INTERFERENCE WAS NEGLIGIBLE.

ON D-DAY LIGHT AND HEAVY ALLIED NAVAL UNITS ADDED THEIR FIRE POWER MOST EFFECTIVELY, KNOCKING OUT GUN EMPLACEMENTS ASHORE. THIS SEA SUPPORT OF THE OPERATIONS ON LAND CONTINUED FOR MORE THAN A WEEK.

MINESWEEPERS CLEARED A SEA PATH TO THE LANDING BEACHES ON THE NIGHT BEFORE D-DAY. BEHIND THEM 4,000 SHIPS AND THOUSANDS OF SMALLER VESSELS, INCLUDING LANDING CRAFT OF ALL TYPES, POURED THOUSANDS OF MEN AND TONS OF GUNS, AMMUNITION AND OTHER SUPPLIES AS WELL AS TANKS AND VEHICLES OF ALL KINDS ONTO THE BEACHHEAD.

AN UMBRELLA OF 11,000 ALLIED PLANES COMMANDED THE AIR.

JUN 27 1944

THE TAKING OF SOME BEACHES WAS COSTLY. THOUSANDS OF BRITISH, CANADIAN AND AMERICAN SOLDIERS DIED. UNDERWATER OBSTRUCTIONS WRECKED MANY LANDING CRAFT. SMASHED LANDING BOATS AND VEHICLES LITTERED MANY OF THE BEACHES. BY THE END OF 11 DAYS U.S. LOSSES ALONE WERE 3,283 DEAD, 12,600 WOUNDED.

BUT THE BEACHHEAD WAS SECURE BY THEN, ALLIED LEADERS DECLARED.

SOME LANDINGS WENT SMOOTHLY. ALLIED LEADERS ASSERTED THEY ACTUALLY ACHIEVED TACTICAL SURPRISE.

AIRBORNE TROOPS ON A SCALE NEVER BEFORE EMPLOYED PLAYED A BIG PART IN THE INVASION. GLIDER TROOPS AND PARACHUTISTS DROPPED FAR INLAND, CUT GERMAN COMMUNICATIONS AND PREVENTED REINFORCEMENT OF THE BEACH POSITIONS, LATER JOINED UP WITH THE ASSAULT FORCES PUSHING IN FROM THE COAST.

THE AMERICAN AIRBORNE 82ND AND 101ST DIVISIONS WERE A PART OF THESE OPERATIONS.

BY JUNE 8 IT BECAME APPARENT THE AMERICANS AIMED AT PINCHING OFF THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA, 25 MILES ACROSS.

3o.24 - 16599

THE BRITISH AND CANADIANS WERE ASSIGNED TO THE EAST WING, WHERE THEY FOUND TOUGH GOING BUT MADE A NOTABLE CONTRIBUTION FROM THE START, PINNING DOWN GERMAN PANZER DIVISIONS WHICH MARSHAL ERWIN ROMMEL WELL COULD HAVE USED ELSEWHERE--AGAINST THE AMERICAN DRIVE TO THE WEST, FOR INSTANCE.

UNDER GEN. SIR BERNARD L. MONTGOMERY THE CANADIANS BATTLED THE GERMANS TO A STANDSTILL IN THE CAEN AREA, THEN HELD FAST WHILE "MONTY" BUILT UP STRENGTH FOR HIS FIRST BIG ATTACK.

BY JUNE 11 AMERICANS HAD BATTERED UP THE EASTERN SIDE OF THE PENINSULA TO WITHIN 15 MILES OF CHERBOURG. OTHER COLUMNS PIVOTED THROUGH THE CARENTAN AREA AND TOOK CARENTAN JUNE 12.

SEARCHING FOR A SOFT SPOT, THE AMERICANS PROBED SLOWLY WESTWARD. THE BREAK CAME JUNE 17 WHEN THE U.S. 9TH DIVISION AND THE 82ND AIRBORNE DIVISION SMASHED THROUGH ST.SAUVEUR LE VICOMTE AND OVERLOOKED THE SEA FROM THE WEST COAST OF THE PENINSULA. THEN THEY CARRIED THROUGH TO THE COAST AND CHERBOURG WAS CUT OFF FROM THE REST OF FRANCE.

JUN 27 1944

THE GERMAN 77TH DIVISION COUNTER-ATTACKED AND WAS "CUT TO PIECES," FRONT DISPATCHES SAID.

THEREAFTER THE GERMANS NEVER RECOVERED AND WERE PUSHED RELENTLESSLY BACK TOWARD CHERBOURG. BY JUNE 21 THE AMERICANS WERE WITHIN A MILE OF CHERBOURG. THE GERMANS IGNORED A CALL TO SURRENDER. BY JUNE 23 THE ALLIES HAD NEARLY REACHED THE SEA ON EITHER SIDE OF THE PORT. BY JUNE 24 THEY WERE 1,000 YARDS AWAY--AND COULD SEE THE GERMANS WRECKING CHERBOURG'S INSTALLATIONS.

IT WAS HARD GOING. THE GERMANS FOUGHT FOR EVERY FOOT OF GROUND.

AMONG THE DIVISIONS ENGAGED IN THE NORMANDY BEACHHEAD CAMPAIGN WERE TWO VETERAN OUTFITS OF THE MEDITERRANEAN CAMPAIGN, THE FIRST U.S. DIVISION AND BRITAIN'S 50TH NORTHUMBRIAN.

U.S. DIVISIONS KNOWN TO BE ENGAGED INCLUDED THE FOURTH, WHICH TOOK MONTEBOURG; THE 29TH INFANTRY; THE 82ND AND 101ST AIRBORNE AND THE 9TH INFANTRY.

Over 20,000 German Prisoners Taken in Clean-up of Peninsula.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Wednesday, June 28 — (AP) British troops striking out quickly on the eastern Normandy front after the fall of Cherbourg which boosted Axis losses to at least 70,000 men since D-Day, yesterday outflanked the German stronghold of Caen on the road to Paris.

Late front dispatches said the British had reached the Odon river at a point five miles southwest of Caen after cutting the trunk highway and railway linking Caen with Villers-Bocage and Avranches at the base of the Normandy peninsula.

Seven Mile Advance

The British in two days had advanced more than seven miles from positions around Tilly-Sur-Seulles, captured 10 or more villages, overrun numerous enemy gun emplacements and now were on the verge of breaking into open country ideal for a showdown with German tank formations.

A dispatch from Associated Press Front Correspondent Roger D. Greene said the British reached the Odon at 4 p. m., and quoted a British officer as saying that the Germans evidently were short of infantrymen to hold the ground in the area, although the enemy still packed a terrific wallop with his tanks.

Between 10 and 15 German tanks were destroyed during the day, and the British were cleaning up enemy remnants in Colleville, Tourville, and probably in nearby Mouen, five miles southwest of Caen, he said. The British also were fighting in the village of Grainville.

Other British units were reported within three miles of Caen on the west.

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's British units sprang into action even as thousands of German troops were filing into American prison cages at Cherbourg and Allied repair experts were hurrying to make the prize port a springboard for huge reinforcements and supplies as the invasion went into its fourth week.

Take 20,000 Prisoners

Twenty thousand Germans have been captured in the cleanup of the Cherbourg peninsula, the Allied communique said, "and more are being brought in."

A dispatch from Don Whitehead, Associated Press correspondent in Cherbourg, said the Americans had taken 22,000 in the peninsula drive, and that the captives still were being counted.

The total Axis prisoners bag thus far is at least 32,000 and probably will exceed that figure when the final Cherbourg count is tallied.

The fall of Cherbourg late Monday night gave the Allies the port and railhead for the double-track railway leading to Paris. A 75-mile section of the track now is in Allied hands, extending from Cherbourg through Carentan and Bayeux to a point only a few miles west of razed Caen, the "hinge" of the German eastern positions.

"We are continuing our attacks against the last remnants of organized opposition by elements of the enemy's forces holding out in Maupertus airfield, east of Cherbourg, and in the northwest tip of the peninsula," the communique said.

The American capture of valuable Cherbourg and the rapid British attack which gave the Germans no rest came almost four years to the day after Hitler had announced that "the war in the west is finished."

Warships Aid Push

Canadian artillery and the big guns of Allied warships aided the push toward Caen and the flanking movement below it. An Allied spokesman said the Allies were "infinitely" better than the Germans in artillery, and predicted a savage Allied aerial onslaught on the enemy should he try to mount a big counter-attack.

German broadcasts betrayed fears of new Allied "leap frog landings" along the French coast now that Cherbourg has been eliminated along with the big coastal guns the Germans had been manning around it.

A dispatch from 21st army group headquarters said that five German generals thus far had been killed in Normandy and that 100 German tanks had been destroyed and 200 knocked out, at least temporarily, since D-Day. Probably a large proportion of the tanks were wrecked in Montgomery's new drive which appeared to be building rapidly toward a full-scale test of Allied and German armored strength.

In this third phase of the careful Allied timetable in France, the British were hitting toward the open country behind Caen, and the aroused Germans were fighting savagely. Marshall Erwin Rommel had concentrated almost all the armored troops at his disposal —four divisions, including the crack 21st panzers and the 12th S.S. panzers—in a desperate effort to hold the British.

Cherbourg fell to the American Seventh corps under Maj. Gen. Joseph L. (Lightning) Collins, who commanded American troops at Guadalcanal. The corps comprises the Fourth, Ninth and 79th divisions, it was disclosed by Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, who hailed the seizure as "a magnificent job."

City Being Cleared

"The fall of Cherbourg ends the second phase in the campaign of liberation," said Allied communique No. 43 at 11 a.m. (5 a.m. E.W.T.)

With the Stars and Stripes fluttering beside the French tricolor over France's third largest port, labor battalions already were sweeping the debris from the streets and minesweepers were clearing the harbor for Allied convoys to come with mountains of supplies and thousands of fresh troops.

Lt. Gen. Carl Wilhelm von Schlieben, Nazi garrison commander, and Rear Admiral Hennecke, German naval commander in Normandy, were the prize captives in Cherbourg, where Gen. Collins' men crushed the remnants of four German divisions and a naval complement. With 800 men, they came out of an underground fortress and surrendered Monday night.

Great stockpiles of equipment worth millions of dollars were seized at Cherbourg. Hundreds of items from shaving cream to fine brandies and armaments were discovered in the underground maze comprising Fort du Roule alone.

Gen. Bradley announced: "It is now a pleasure to be able to say to the people of France 'Here is your first large city to be returned to you.'"

Grip on Continent

A high British staff officer at 21st army group headquarters declared "One can breathe much more easily now. We've got a good grip on the continent. We are here now, and for keeps. The enemy will no doubt try to put in a wedge somewhere. We would welcome that."

This officer said that German efforts to wreck Cherbourg completely had been impossible, and "before long we shall have full use of it."

Scattered German pockets still were holding out east and west of Cherbourg, but the quiet of the port city was only broken occasionally by the distant rumble of artillery as Yank mop-up squads moved northwest of the city to wipe out enemy resistance on Cap de la Hague. Other units were closing in on a small fanatical band of Germans holding out at Maupertus airfield, six miles east of Cherbourg.

It was expected that Allied supples and troops could start moving through Cherbourg within 48 hours, at least on a limited scale, with the stream expanding greatly within a week.

Without permitting disclosure of how many American divisions now are in Normandy, Gen. Bradley said that Maj. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow was commanding the U. S. Fifth corps, which has advanced to the Caumont-St. Lo region in the middle of the front. Gen. Bradley decorated both Gerow and Collins for distinguished service in the invasion.

British troops, hitting out from the beachhead now that Cherbourg has fallen, were movng ahead on a seven-mile front and in two days had overrun the villages of Cheux, La Gaule, St. Manvieu, Fontenay, Tessel, Breteville, Brettvillette, Juvigny and Colleville.

Railway Cut

The Caen-Villers-Bocage railway was cut near Colleville, six miles southwest of Caen, and field dispatches said some units were within three miles of Caen on the west.

The British were attacking through muddy poppy fields, drenched in a Monday night rainstorm. They had the support also of Allied warplanes operating from secure Normandy fields. The planes blasted German gun positons and strafed troop columns on the roads at the rear of Caen.

German snipers resorted to their usual trick of hiding in treetops or in the thick hedges bordering Normandy fields. British machine-gun units and tank men sprayed these nests blindly as the drive rolled ahead. Prisoners declared that the Germans had been ordered to "hold to the last round and last man," in an effort to keep the British from breaking into the open lands ideal for big-scale tank warfare beyond Caen.

An even greater battle than that for Cherbourg loomed ahead of Montgomery's British units because of Rommel's efforts to contain the Allied beachhead and keep it from spreading southward toward the Brittany peninsula, and eastward toward Rouen and Paris.

Naval headquarters reported a battle between German trawlers and minesweepers and British light coastal forces near the channel island of Jersey Monday night, with one enemy vessel believed sunk and "considerable damage" done to others.

FOE PLANS LAST DITCH STAND

Nazi Losses Reach 70,000 Since D Day—Thousands Give Up to American Forces.

GALLAGHER

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 27 (A. P.).—British troops in a major attack have struck within three miles of Caen, German bastion in eastern Normandy, a field dispatch said today as Americans mopped up in conquered Cherbourg, and Supreme Headquarters estimated Nazi casualties since D day at "not less than 70,000," including 32,000 prisoners.

Even as Allied experts were rushed in to make Cherbourg a huge invasion funnel of men and supplies, Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery struck powerfully on a front six to seven miles wide east and southeast of Tilly-sur-Seulles, toppling three more towns, and front reports said advanced elements reached within three miles of Caen on the west.

Caen—10 miles from Paris—was being savagely defended. Fighting through muddy, shell-torn poppy fields, Gen. Montgomery's Tommies, driving toward the city, battled this afternoon near the road running from Caen southwest across the base of the Normandy peninsula. They were within two miles of the River Odon, below this highway and paralleling it, and one front dispatch said a British patrol had cut the railway above the road during the night.

Gen. Montgomery's assault was reporting progressing well, despite rain-bogged roads and fields.

Meanwhile, with the capture of Cherbourg, the "beachhead has been expanded to a bridgehead with a port and airfields," the Supreme Command said. Lieut.-Gen. Omar N. Bradley, American ground commander, declared the troops seizing Cherbourg "have done a magnificent job." It was a job done by the American Seventh Corps under Major-Gen. Joseph L. Collins.

The Seventh Corps is composed of the Seventy-ninth, Fourth and Ninth Divisions. The Seventy-ninth, the Eighth American divisions identified as fighting in France, is from Pennsylvania and is commanded by Major-Gen. Ira T. Wyche. The Fourth Division is commanded by Major-Gen. Raymond O. Barton, the Ninth by Major-Gen. Manton S. Eddy.

Huge amounts of ammunition and booty fell to the Americans. Final nests of resistance were being cleaned out today. Thousands of prisoners were being rounded up. About 9,000 were taken yesterday, including Lieut.-Gen. Carl Wilhelm von Schlieben, Nazi garrison commander, and Rear Admiral Hennecke, sea defense commander of Normandy.

In the assault on Cherbourg "the enemy has lost the greater part of four infantry divisions, numerous naval and marine units and line of communications troops," headquarters declared.

The British offensive threatened Caen from the rear. Both sides were using crack divisions in this battle.

The three additional towns captured were La Gaulle, Cheux and St. Manvieu, in a stretch running some five miles east of Tilly.

(Reuter has reported that the German Transocean News Agency said this afternoon the British had broadened the front of their attacks on both wings in the Tilly area.)

Warship guns supported this push, battling against the most violent kind of opposition in the sector where the German command had concentrated four armored divisions.

Tank Drive Gains

A British tank assault against the main road from Villers Bocage to Caen advanced in the face of heavy opposition by German armor, Reuter reported. The attack started on the river Odon, which joins the river Seule near the coast.

British forward elements in advance of the forces taking part in the big tank battle have pushed forward two miles from Fontenay and have passed through the village of Haut du Bosq, two miles to the southeast.

Second Phase Ended

Other British reconnaissance elements have come up against German tanks and anti-tank guns at Colleville, which stands on high ground at a crossroad north of the Odon river. Colleville is only four and a half miles southwest of Caen and about the same distance southeast of Tilly.

Supreme headquarters declared "the fall of Cherbourg ends the second phase in the campaign of liberation," defeating the immediate German tactical reserves and obtaining a harbor for larger operations.

There were indications that Montgomery already had begun the third phase, that of engaging the full strength of the German army and defeating its strategic reserves.

Today's Allied communique was issued about four hours after supreme headquarters had given the first official word of the capture of Cherbourg with the terse announcement: "Flash — Cherbourg fallen."

A short time later came this special communique:

"Cherbourg was liberated by Allied troops last night."

Great Gateway Gained

Thus after five days of furious fighting Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's forces had won for the Allies France's third most important port—a great gateway through which to pour vast armies and huge quantities of war machinery to complete the liberation of France and the conquest of Germany.

Although the last resistance in the battered port ended last night several pockets of Germans still were holding out today in the peninsula itself.

One of these held Maupertus airfield, five miles east of the port, while the main remaining German force was bottled up in Cap de la Hague, at the northwest tip of the peninsula, where Bradley's men can deal with them at will.

Typical Monty Drive

The Montgomery attack was typical of his famous assaults. Artillery was packed along the front, eight yards from wheel to wheel and the thunderous barrage was the greatest laid down on a single sector since the original landings.

Added to the land artillery was the terrific explosion of naval shells hurled more than 10 miles inland from Allied warships standing offshore. All of the Caen area is within range of these ships and Montgomery was expected to make good use of this floating artillery.

The British were advancing under heavy cloud cover, which [illegible] them of the benefits of Allied air superiority and in the face of stubborn resistance.

Rommel Stand Seen

There was every indication that Rommel was determined to defend Caen to the last and an even greater battle than the assault on Cherbourg was likely to develop as Montgomery makes his bid to break out into the open country.

Cherbourg fell to American infantry after house-to-house fighting which climaxed five days of the most bitter fighting of the 21-day campaign.

The captured 49-year-old General Schlieben, who directed its defenses, was one of the German heroes of the Orel fighting in 1943 on the Russian front where he commanded a field division.

The fall of the port came almost four years to the day since Adolf Hitler, surveying a defeated France, proclaimed, "The war in the west is finished."

Many Nazis Killed

In its closing phases the capture of Cherbourg was a bloody grenade and bayonet business by clean-up squads which moved through smoky streets wiping out pillboxes and strong points. Schlieben ignored a second call to surrender yesterday and the last-ditch defenders died by the hundreds in the final hours of their fanatical fight.

One of the richest prizes in Europe, Cherbourg's outer harbor alone covers 1,250 acres of water and will hold more than 100 of the largest merchant ships. This trans-atlantic terminus provides a safe anchorage even in the roughest weather.

It was said at supreme headquarters that the Germans have been unable to damage its great breakwaters effectively, although they have done extentive damage to the docks.

It is impossible to block either the outer or inner harbors with sunken ships, as they are too wide and deep.

(Berlin radio declared this morning that the "heaviest explosions" indicated the destruction of the harbor "which was initiated some days ago according to plan," had been continued.

In a single field there were many charred and burned-out hulks of German tanks, their gun muzzles twisted, their steel sides burst by direct British hits, and their frameworks reddened by fires which consumed their crews.

Tommies Move Ahead

British Tommies slithered along the muddy roads, moving up to the blazing front ahead.

German guns had checked the British advance at St. Manvieu somewhat during the night, but now the British were moving again. They had taken Cheux, St. Manvieu, Colleville and other hamlets in their drive from Tilly-Sur-Seulles.

West of Colleville eight German tanks attacked just before dawn today. Four, including two Tigers, were knocked out by the British and the remainder retreated.

The 20-foot Odon river has been swollen with rain and will present an obstacle to the British forces. Bridges will have to be thrown across the water for British tanks and motor transport.

Grainville, a village near Colleville, was being entered by the British.

Moving up to the front I saw evidence that German armor had taken a terrifc beating near St. Manvieu.

British Reach Odon River, Sever Highway Near Caen

BY ROGER GREENE

AT THE BRITISH FRONT IN FRANCE, June 27—(AP) British troops smashed through to the Odon river five miles southwest of Caen late today, cutting the highway and railway between that German stronghold at Avranches at the southern base of the Normandy peninsula.

Just ahead of the advancing troops is what an officer described as "lovely open tank country."

Tanks Support Action

The tank-supported British chalked up a gain of 2,000 yards in a day of hard fighting in some sectors and now are mopping up enemy remnants at Tourville, Colleville and probably Mouen, five miles southwest of Caen.

The British reached the Odon shortly after 4 p. m. (10 a. m. E.W.T.)

Between 12 and 15 Nazi tanks, mostly Panthers, were destroyed today, four when a squadron of 15 German tanks made a savage "rabbit attack" on British-captured Cheux.

Staff officers said the Germans still command terrific firepower, but evidently were thin on infantry since the advancing Tommies found comparatively few Nazi dead as they overran numerous enemy gun positions.

79TH HELPS BRING CHERBOURG FALL

Division Part Of 7th Corps In Drive Against Port

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 27 (AP)—The United States 79th Infantry Division, one of three making up the Sevetnh Corps which captured Cherbourg, is commanded by Maj. Gen. Ira Wyche, a native of Ocracoke, N. C.

General Wyche was assigned to command the 79th Field Artillery Brigade in April, 1941, and was made commanding general of the 79th Division in May, 1942.

The division, known as the Lorraine Cross Division, made an enviable record in the latter stages of World War I, after arriving overseas in the spring of 1918. At that time it was composed principally of Maryland and Pennsylvania troops.

All Is Quiet in Cherbourg Today

Conquering Doughboys Stroll Through Streets as G. I. Musicians Harmonize.

By DON WHITEHEAD.

Cherbourg, June 27 (A. P.).—A warm sun bathed the Place de la Republique and doughboys strolled through Cherbourg's main square today, relaxing from the battle, while a tall American sergeant played nostalgic melodies on a piano accordion to the accompaniment of guitars strummed by a doughboy and a young Frenchman.

That was the story of Cherbourg this pleasant afternoon.

There were few sounds of battle. The guns had stopped their roaring and the city was as quiet as any peaceful community in the United States.

Occasionally a gun crashed, and there were sounds of distant firing, but the fall of Cherbourg was complete.

Little groups of soldiers and civilians were laughing and chatting about the troubadours in the grass-littered street. Sergt. Ivan Broten of Isanti, Minn., played softly on the accordion. Charles Horvatich of Pittsburgh, and his French companion couldn't understand each other's language, but their guitars blended sweetly.

Housecleaning Time.

Our troops wiped out the last German resistance in the arsenal area this morning, ending the fight for Cherbourg, and as we entered the city today labor battalions were already at work cleaning up the debris on the streets.

American, British and French flags are flying in all the streets. Some of the Tricolors were crudely stitched pieces of bunting which obviously the townspeople had made just for this day—when they could say their homes had been liberated from the mastery of the Germans. Flag scame out of hiding and began waving from windows as troops moved through the city.

"When we'd come to a street intersection flags would be stuck out of the windows behind us," said Pvt. Thomas Harney of 12 Lawrence street, Yonkers.

One of the last places in the city where the doughboys had to fight was the Gestapo headquarters an da pillbox just down the street from it. A unit under Capt. Milton Holladay of Lexington, Ky., cleaned out this strong point.

Gestapo Scurries to City Hall.

The Germans in the Gestapo headquarters finally fled through an underground passage to the City Hall in an attempt to escape, but they were captured there.

"We had to fight all the way in," said the tall Kentuckian, "and when we reached this street they opened fire on my men from the pillbox at the entrance of the headquarters and at the end of the street."

Capt. Holladay called on tank destroyers to come up and give his doughboys a hand, so Lieut. R. B. Fullerton of Tacoma, Wash., brought up one of the destroyers and blasted at the pillboxes to quiet their fire.

In the Gestapo headquarters Capt. Holladay's men found an American medic who had been held prisoner for four days. He said he knew the German captain commanding the pillbox at the end of the street and believed if some one talked to him he would surrender with his men.

A Visit to Herr Capitan.

The Geerman had lived in New York and knew English well. Lieut. Harry Aschkinasi, 1561 Sheridan avenue, New York city, went with the medic to the pillbox and went inside.

"The German captain had a bottle of brandy," Lieut. Aschkinasi said, "and he was slightly tipsy. We talked for half an hour, and I told him he didn't have a chance, and might as well give up.

"The captain said that if he had good German machine guns instead of old French weapons he never would surrender. Finally he agreed and came out with his troops."

The Germans had lived in comfort with plenty of food and liquors. In every place we have been there were stores of sausages, butter, loaves of bread, and canned goods. Many beds had bright-colored down comforters covering them.

Earlier today thousands of German prisoners were streaming into American prison cages and a huge amount of enemy equipment has fallen into doughboy hands—with no one yet having time to assess the great stores of ammunition and supplies captured in Cherbourg.

One of the most stubborn knots of resistance finally broke this morning when a German artillery colonel radioed to the Americans he wished to surrender. He was taken prisoner along with 300 others.

800 Give Up With General.

About 9,000 prisoners surrendered yesterday, among them Lieut.-Gen. Carl Wilhelm von Schlieben, German commander of Cherbourg, and Rear-Admiral Hennecke. These two came out of an underground fortress and gave themselves and 800 of their men up to the American major-general who directed the brillian drive seizing the port.

The Nazi commanders surrendered after United States guns had pounded the fortress in which they were directing the defense of the city.

First a lieutenant emerged from a tunnel thirty feet underground, goose-stepping and carrying a white flag. He carried a message that his commanding officer wished to give himself up.

A few minutes later Gen. Von Schlieben and Admiral Hennecke came out of the tunnel, with some 800 men and officers following them.

Gen. Von Schlieben, asked why he did not tell Cherbourg's defenders to surrender when they could not halt the American advance, said he had learned in Russia the value of resistance by small groups. He declared he would not ask his men to surrender.

After Gen. Von Schlieben and Admiral Hennecke gave themselves up, the Americans broadcast the news to the German defenders still holding out in Cherbourg, telling them it was useless to resist longer.

(The 9,000 new prisoners bring to about 30,000 the total of prisoners taken since D-day.)

Still other Germans were surrendering today in the final, confused collapse of resistance.

Die-Hards Give Up

The last die-hard defenders—except for groups in the arsenal area—gave up their Schlieben and Hennecke put up the white flag. Schlieben had refused an American demand on June 21 to surrender, and even after the defenses were broken up into isolated groups declined to ask his men to yield.

Nazi Oil Loss At Gelsenkirchen

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 27 (AP)—The Germans' already-acute oil shortage has been further aggravated by the loss of an additional 1,000 tons daily due to the RAF night raid June 12 on the synthetic plant at Gelsenkirchen, the Air Minister reported tonight.

WHAT CHERBOURG MEANS TO ALLIES

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 27 (A. P.).—One of the richest prizes in Europe, Cherbourg's outer harbor alone covers 1,250 acres of water and will hold more than 100 of the largest merchant ships. This trans-Atlantic terminus provides a safe anchorage even in the roughest weather.

It was said at Supreme Headquarters that the Germans have been unable to damage its great breakwaters effectively, although they have done extensive damage to the docks.

It is impossible to block either of the outer or inner harbors with sunken ships, as they are too wide and deep .

Waiting in the English Channel for the port to fall was an enormous Allied salvage convoy with every type of equipment ready to rush in and repair the dock facilities and remove any sunken ships.

One of America's greatest salvage experts, who cleared the harbors at Casablanca, Oran, Tunis and helped at Naples was waiting with the convoy.

Cherbourg, the French counterport of Southampton, eighty-three miles across the channel, handled more than 14,000,000 tons of shipping a year in peacetime and discharged 224,000 tons of cargo, but this total under war conditions can be increased many times over.

Frenchmen Show Hate For Nazis

On the American Beachhead in France, June 26 (AP—Delayed)—The Frenchman's traditional hate for the German conquerors showed plainly today as 15 truckloads of Nazi prisoners wheeled along the roads to American beach prison cages.

Farmers and fishermen waved gleefully at Negro soldiers bringing the Nordic "supermen," and made throat-slitting signs with their forefingers. The Negroes grinned back.

Even the prisoners—about 750 standing packed closely in the trucks—seemed to enjoy being through with the war. Some smiled, and all looked with interest at the Normandy countryside through which they were driven from the outskirts of Cherbourg.

Bradley Honors Corps Chiefs

New York, June 27 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, American ground commander in Normandy, declared in a statement there today that "our troops who have carried out the attack on Cherbourg have done a magnificent job," and awarded decorations to the two United States corps commanders who sped the victory.

"It is a pleasure to say to the people of France, 'Here is the first large city to be returned to you,'" Bradley declared, as quoted by an NBC broadcast.

Bradley awarded oak-leaf clusters to the Distinguished Service Medal to Maj. Gen. Joseph Lawton Collins, commanding the Seventh Corps, and Maj. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, Fifth Corps commander.

The broadcast said Collins' Seventh Corps "carried out the operations on the peninsula" of Cherbourg, while Gerow's Fifth made the assault on the eastern beaches and advanced to near St. Lo, road hub in the center of the Normandy front.

Hitler Honors Hennecke

New York, June 27 (AP)—The Berlin radio told the German people last night that Adolf Hitler had awarded the Knight's Cross of the Iron Cross to Rear Admiral Walter Hennecke, the German naval commander in Normandy, for preparing the "destruction of Cherbourg." The broadcast, reported by the Federal Communications Commission, boasted that the "feat" was "unprecedented in the annals of coastal defense."

Today's Allied communique from supreme headquarters announced Hennecke's capture at Cherbourg.

'Bluff' Fleet Fooled 'Em

New York, June 27 (AP)—The Allies sent a "bluff" fleet into the Calais-Boulogne area on D-day to draw the German air force away from the actual beachheads on the Normandy coast, says Commander Anthony Kimmins, British naval intelligence officer.

Ships in the "diversion" fleet did not suffer much damage, he said yesterday in an interview with the New York Times.

Kimmins said he believed the Germans expected the invasion in the Calais-Boulogne section and added: "When the Germans' final defense plans are found, I think we will discover that they thought we were coming in there."

Paris Now Being Mined, British Radio Reports

New York, June 27 (AP)—The British radio, quoting French-Spanish frontier reports, said the Germans are completing plans for evacuating the German garrison from Paris, and the city is being heavily mined.

"Delayed-action bombs have been placed in inaccessible tunnels, some of them specially bored. Dynamite has been laid in sewers and in abandoned sections of the underground railway," said the broadcast head by CBS.

Nazi Alignments Estimated

Allied 21st Army Group Headquarters in Europe, June 27 (AP)—A high British officer estimated today that roughly 60 per cent. of Germany's troops were on the Russian front and the remainder on fronts either under attack by the western Allies or confronted by them.

Refugees Replace Troops

London, June 27 (AP)—Women and child refugees from the Normandy battlefields are being housed in a well-known residential London square which previously housed American invasion troops.

Paris-Swiss Border Rail Traffic Diverted

Algiers, June 27 (AP)—French Partisan sabotage has forced German rail traffic between Paris and the Swiss frontier to be diverted via Brussels, Belgium, a French National Committee communique announced today, adding that the Germans' communications behind the Normandy front were disrupted completely.

Severe fighting continues between French and German forces in the Alpine regions, it said, putting enemy losses there at 300 dead.

ALLIES CONQUERED SUPPLY PROBLEMS OF THE INVASION

WASHINGTON, June 27 — (AP) Supply has been the near-miracle of the invasion—and supply possibilities the first and greatest miscalculation of the Nazis.

The fall of Cherbourg to the Allied armies was followed today by beachhead reports that engineer and salvage crews already were beginning restoration of the great port, and by a prediction from the war department that "within a few weeks the harbor will be filled with Allied shipping."

The port, of course is the great prize of the peninsula. Where the Germans made their first and irreparable mistake, however, was in the assumption that General Dwight D. Eisenhower's forces would have to capture the port before they could supply enough troops to seize the rest of the peninsula—or capture some other port to begin a major drive elsewhere on the continetn.

It is plain now that Nazi defense plans were based on careful calculation of the supply tonnage which could be handled across beaches, without the heavy handling equipment of a port. It is equally plain that the amount General Eisenhower's forces actually were able to move across the beaches was fantastically beyond those calculations.

For three weeks, the Allies have been pouring men and supplies into the widening Normandy foothold, without the use of a seaport. So far, thirteen Allied divisions have been identified in Normandy. On the usual rough basis of one supply soldier for every combat soldier, that would mean a total of around 350,000 men. The number may well be much higher—perhaps as many as a half millian men.

Nothing in previous military experience could have prepared the German general staff for an amphibious operation of such staggering size and power, and the enemy staff was not prepared for it. Expecting an assault of limited size, when the invasion forces struck at Normandy, the enemy assumed that other and probably heavier attacks would come elsewhere almost immediately — perhaps near Le Havre, or at Brest, or Boulogne or Calais.

Accordingly, such mobile reserves as they had, they hesitated to commit to action in Normandy. These mobile reserves, moreover, probably were smaller than has been generally assumed, because the enemy was forced to garrison coastal defenses. The Nazis still are forced to garrison them, from Norway to the Spanish border.

FIGHTING RAGES IN RAIL JUNCTIONS ON ROAD TO MINSK

Russians Thrust Two Spearheads at Prize City in White Russia.

MANY NAZI DEAD

Germans Lose 20,000 Men at Vitebsk, Many Prisoners Taken.

By RUSSELL LANDSTROM

LONDON, Wednesday, June 28—(AP) The Red army thrust out two sharp pincers at the prize city of Minsk in White Russia yesterday as Moscow announced that the Germans' "Fatherland line" was being shattered at enormous cost to the enemy both in casualties and equipment.

Twenty thousand Nazis were killed and 10,000 others surrendered in the liquidation of five already-riddled divisions of the enemy in a pocket between Vitebsk and Orsha, and at the other end of the blazing White Russian front 8,000 Germans were killed in three days of fighting around Bobruisk, the Russians reported in their early morning communique supplement.

NIGHT

Fight in Mogilev

Orsha itself was captured yesterday and Red troops were fighting in the streets of Mogilev and in the outskirts of Bobruisk, Moscow announced. All are strategic railway junctions of considerable importance and heavily fortified German strongpoints protecting routes to Minsk, the political and industrial capital of the White Russian Soviet Socialist republic.

The fall of both Mogilev and Bobruisk was believed imminent.

Simultaneously with the capture of Orsha, other Red troops took Bobr, a railway station 46 miles to west, and gained control of more than one-third of the main railroad between Orsha and Minsk, a segment of the line connecting Warsaw and Moscow.

Bobr is about 75 miles northeast of Minsk, and at the same distance southeast the Russians captured Glusk, thus giving the Red armies two spearheads pointed directly at the biggest prize still to be reclaimed from the Germans in Russia proper.

Blasting a path ahead of the ground forces, Red airmen attacked German troop and supply concentrations Monday night at Pinsk, Borisov, Polotsk, Luninets, Lovcha and other points, Moscow disclosed.

Battalions Wiped Out

Whole battalions and regiments were being wiped out by the relentless advance of the Red troops, Moscow said, and large groups of Germans were surrendering.

Twenty thousand German officers and men were left dead on the bloody battlefield of the encircled enemy grouping in the Vitebsk area, the broadcast Russian communique asserted.

Already battered far below their normal strength of 12,000 each, the German divisions fought desperately in a futile battle, Moscow said, and finally accepted an ultimatum of surrender. Preliminary reports showed 10,000 Germans had been taken prisoners in this action.

Even while announcing the liquidation of these units, identified by Moscow as the German Fourth, 197th, 206th and 246th infantry divisions and Sixth airborne division, the communique said five other Nazi infantry divisions had been encircled by Russian drives east and south of Bobruisk.

Altogether, nearly 1,500 places of varying size were recaptured during the day's advance against the German bulge in the center of the eastern front, it was announced.

Additional successes in the warfare against the Finns also were described by the communique almost at the same time that Finland was revealing her intention to fight on with armed support from Germany. Nazi troops were reported marching toward the battle zone in southern Finland.

Sheltozero Liberated

Sheltozero, a district center of the Karelo-Finnish Soviet Socialist republic, was among five railway stations and more than 30 other populated places named in the communique as having been liberated by the Red army drive between Lakes Ladoga and Onezhskoe (Onega).

The day's successes in the White Russian sector, powered by four strong Red armies with deadly assistance from artillery and aircraft, pointed two pincers directly toward Minsk, the historic city of 240,000 almost on the old Polish frontier.

At Bobruisk, about 90 miles south of Orsha, another Red army also was headed menacingly in the direction of Minsk. While the communique said troops were fighting in the outskirts there, it revealed also that a 17-mile advance south of the city had brought about the capture of more than 600 places, including 19 large ones and seven railway stations. Both the railway and the highway leading from Bobruisk to Minsk were cut.

In the center of the front between Orsha and Bobruisk Red troops slashed their way directly into the streets of Mogilev, the ancient fortress city 100 miles east of Minsk and a big regional transportation hub on the Leningrad-Odessa railroad.

300 Places Captured

More than 300 places were captured by the advance in this direction. Soviet forces crossed the Dnepr both north and south of the city and reached the river's eastern bank at a place described in the communique as the "Orsha-Mogilev-Vykhof sector."

North of Orsha, the communique said, the Russian smash in the direction of Lepel captured Chashniki, a district center of the Vitebsk region, and more than 200 other populated places including nine large communities and two railway stations.

The German radio, conceding losses all along the central front, said that Russian troops also were storming the stronghold of Polotsk, 55 miles northwest of Vitebsk and were only 20 miles from the city which is situated about 20 miles from the old Polish border and 45 from the Latvian frontier.

Orsha, like Vitebsk and Zhlobin, whose capture was announced yesterday, was subjected to merciless punishment from the Soviet artillery and air force, and Premier Stalin said in an order of the day that it fell to "a swift by-passing maneuver in conjunction with a frontal attack."

The implication was that few of its defenders escaped from that railway junction 50 miles south of Vitebsk on the main line to Minsk.

Strike In New Area

The German radio already had acknowledged that Nazi forces were retreating in the Mogilev sector, 45 miles south of Orsha, and said the Russians were striking in a new area south of Bobruisk, 70 miles southwest of Mogilev. Latest Russian dispatches showed Red army troops swinging a scythe around Bobruisk, with the tip only 13 miles away on the south.

The Germans admitted also that the battle had "spread north of Vitebsk, where the Russians have thrown in large forces east of Polotsk," and conceded that "the big Soviet offensive does not seem to have reached its full development."

Fall Of Other Cities Seen

Thus the Red army was in the process of rapidly caving in the whole German defensive system in White Russia on a stretch 200 miles long.

The early capture of Minsk, Lepel and Polotsk, last big German bases on Russian soil, was presaged by the speed and power of the Soviet advance.

Late Soviet dispatches said Russian troops already were more than 40 miles west of Vitebsk and within 20 miles of Lepel, important center near the pre-war Polish border.

4 Armies In Drive

Four powerful Russian armies are prosecuting the offensive. The northernmost is Col. Gen. Ivan C. Bagramian's First Baltic Army. Next, victor at Orsha, is the Third White Russian Army of Ivan D. Cherniakhovsky, who today was elevated from colonel general to general of the army. At 36 he is the youngest man in the Red army to hold so high a rank.

The assault on Mogilev was being pushed by General Zakkarov's Second White Russian Army, while Gen. Konstantin Rokossovsky's First White Russian Army was driving toward Bobruisk.

The Germans fought savagely but apparently hoplessly to try to hold their vital White Russian bulge, of which Minsk is the heart.

ORSHA FALLS TO ADVANCING RED FORCES

JUN 27 1944

Great German Bastion in White Russia Guarded Way to Minsk.

JUNCTION TAKEN BY STORM

Entire Nazi Wall Based on City Is Reported Near Collapse Under Terrific Blows.

London, June 27 (A. P.).—The Russians have captured the German bastion of Orsha, in White Russia, Premier Stalin announced tonight in a special order of the day.

DAY

The army that crashed into the fortress city at the northern tip of the 100-mile White Russian "Bulge" was one of four converging on Minsk, the gateway to Warsaw and Germany. Moscow dispatches said that the entire bulge defense line appeared to be collapsing under terrific ground and air blows.

Orsha was captured "as the result of a vigorous outflanking maneuver combined with a frontal attack," said the order of the day, as broadcast by the Moscow radio. It described the fortress city "an operationally important railway junction and large German defense center covering the Minsk direction."

Stalin ordered the Orsha victory, coming hard on the heels of the fall of Vitebsk and Zhlobin yesterday, to be celebrated with twenty salvoes from 224 guns at Moscow tonight.

Other immediate goals of the steamroller drives toward the Northeastern borders of old Poland were Polotsk, sixty miles northwest of Vitebsk; Mogilev, ninety miles south of Vitebsk, and Bobruisk, seventy miles southwest of Mogilev.

Orsha lies forty-seven miles south of Vitebsk on the railroad to Minsk.

Russ Closing In On 3 German Bastions

GILMORE

JUN 27 1944

Moscow, June 27 (AP)—Under one of the most terrific air assaults of the war, Germany's White Russia forward wall formed by the Orsha, Mogilev and Bobruisk bulge appeared to be collapsing today, with the entire salient of more than 100 miles in immediate danger.

Red air fleets from four fronts were ceaselessly attacking enemy reserves, tank formations and forward positions and hitting at bridges and communications behind the enemy's tottering lines.

Four Russ Armies Converging

On the ground, four powerful Red armies advancing along a 250-mile front began converging on the Minsk gateway to Warsaw and Hitler's Reich.

The Germans were fighting savagely to hold the great bulge, but it appeared a hopeless task.

Despite this stubborn resistance, the Red army was closing in rapidly on the three bulge cities. Units were already in the outskirts and outlying sectors of both Orsha and Mogilev, battering at a deep system of trenches and concrete fortifications.

DAY

Orsha Reported Surrounded

(A CBS broadcast from Moscow said that Orsha, next most important city south of fallen Vitebsk, was already surrounded with all means of escape cut off to the Germans.)

The great air role is being directed by Colonel General Vershinin, whose planes figured prominently in the capture of Sevastopol; Col. Gen. Timofey Kruikin, brilliant 33-year-old commander; Col. Gen. Sergei I. Rudenko, and Lieut. Gen. N. P. Papivin.

Stormovik planes were blasting the enemy's armored divisions incessantly, shooting up trenches and blockhouses in continuous sweeps over Orsha and Mogilev.

At Germans' Heels

Constituting the northern arm of the great converging ground forces was Gen. Ivan Bagramian's First Baltic Front, which, with 36-year-old Gen. Ivan Cherniakhovsky's Third White Russian Front, after taking Vitebsk, pushed rapidly at the heels of the beaten Germans through the lakes, swamps and forests of sparsely-populated northern White Russia. General Cherniakhovsky was promoted from colonel general to general, becoming the youngest general in the Soviet Union.

The threat from the immediate east was Gen. G. F. Zakyarou's Second White Russian Front, currently closing in on Mogilev, and Gen. Konstantin Rokossovsky's First Front driving through the valley lands of the Drut and Berezina rivers upon Bobruisk, one third of the way between liberated Zhlobin and Minsk.

Vitebsk Residents Returning

Red Star Correspondent Pavel Pavelenko, the first newsman to enter liberated Vitebsk, reported the roads were thronged with returning residents. The correspondent said the Germans had evacuated the civilians southward, westward and northwestward, but the sudden blows of the Russians interrupted their plans and they abandoned thousands of women, children and old persons.

There was much damage in Vitesbsk, but it was not destroyed. The ancient Cathedral of St. Nicholas was reported destroyed by the Germans. Long lines of prisoners, apparently crack troops, well-armed and well-dressed, poured eastward.

Nazi Pillboxes Close

Izvestia's correspondent, Abraham Roben, reported from a point six miles northeast of Mogilev that the Russians were breaching five defense lines, with 50 to 70 pillboxes and from 10 to 15 machine-gun platforms every half mile. Each line was described as several miles deep. Red Army units were well past the first line and hammering the second and third, the correspondent said.

The offensive against the Finns was maintained without letup, with more than a fourth of the Murmansk-Leningrad railway liberated. Izvestia Correspondent Nikolai Konovalov reported Soviet shipping already under way on the Svir river. He said a great amount of Finnish equipment is being seized, particularly horses, carts and trucks.

STALIN PRAISES U. S. PRODUCTION

Tells Button Aided Red Army.

CASSIDY

Moscow, June 27 (A. P.).—Eric Johnston, president of the

30. 24 — 16605

United States Chamber of Commerce, talked business with Premier-Marshal Joseph Stalin for two and a half hours in the Kremlin late last night and emerged with the declaration that the conversation had been very successful.

The interview was confined largely to questions by Mr. Johnston about future trade between the United States and the Soviet Union and direct answers by Stalin.

However, Stalin also gave his guest a statement praising American business, labor and agriculture for their contribution to the war.

The statement which Premier Stalin gave Mr. Johnston for publication follows:

"American business and American labor have done a remarkable job of production for the war. American agriculture also has performed unusually well. American machines of war and American food have contributed to the successes of the Red Army in its victories.

"The United States Government has played a major role in the development and co-ordination of this production and also in fostering co-operation between our two countries."

Sit at Conference Table.

As usual, Stalin sat at the side of a conference table in his office for his first meeting with the American business man. Translator Vladimir Pavlov sat at the head of the table beside Stalin, with Foreign Minister Vyacheslav Molotov on Stalin's right. On his left were Mr. Johnston, United States Ambassador W. Averell Harriman and Edward Page, second secretary of the American embassy.

Stalin wore the uniform of a Marshal of the Soviet Union with a single decoration, Hero of Socialist Labor.

"I cannot tell you what he said except for this particular statement," Mr. Johnston said. Referring to Stalin's formal statement, "I think this is a very nice statement on the American war effort."

Mr. Johnston said that he was particularly surprised at what he termed "the deepness of the Marshal's knowledge of America, particularly its production. His knowledge is accurate and very complete."

Mr. Johnston asserted that they talked briefly of the war while two salutes were fired outside the Kremlin windows celebrating the capture of Vitebsk and Zhlobin.

When the first salute was fired Mr. Johnston congratulated Premier Stalin on the Vitebsk victory, whereupon the Marshal told him there was another coming for the capture of Zhlobin.

Stalin did not smoke a pipe during the conversation but received an American cigarette from Mr. Harriman. The interview began at 9 P. M. and ended at 11:30.

Answers Called Decisive

Johnston said he asked questions which he described as "concerning what the Soviet Union expected to receive from the United States, what Russian production would be after the war, how they were going to achieve it and what would be their relations with the rest of the world as importers and exporters of goods."

He said Stalin "answered decisively and quickly."

GERMANS TO HELP FINNS STAY IN WAR

Nazi Troops March Through Helsinki On Way To Front

Stockholm, June 27 (AP)—Nazi troops marched through Helsinki tonight bound for the Eastern front as the Finnish Government agreed to remain in the war at the side of Germany on the Germans' promise of troops.

Even before the Finnish Government announced that solidarity and "perfect understanding" had been reached between Germany and the Finns, Nazi troops moved through the streets of the capital, singing army songs.

The communique announced that in answer to a request for military help by the Finns, German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop had promised all the armed aid necessary for Finland to continue in the war against Russia.

Moving Into All Finland

The Germans appeared to be moving into all Finland, including Helsinki, and Associated Press Correspondent Robert Sturdevant telephoned from Helsinki through the strict Finnish censorship that "I am moving—I emphasize moving—to the American legation tonight. Watch Berlin."

German divisions have been stationed in the northern part of Finland for some time.

The communique issued by the Finnish Government tonight said von Ribbentrop, Finnish President Risto Ryti and Foreign Minister Sir Henrik Ramsay, in discussions of Finland's plight last week, had reached a "perfect understanding."

Ribbentrop Gives Promise

The Finns said they had asked Germany for armed help to bolster their battered troops and declared that von Ribbentrop had agreed to "fulfill this request."

The negotations, the communique said, were "carried out in the spirit which has its root in the brotherhood of arms between the two armies and in the mutual friendship between the two nations. On all points perfect understanding was reached concerning the views of the Finnish and German governments."

A report here said von Ribbentrop had promised the Finns five German divisions and 500 warplanes to continue the struggle against the Soviet army which has battered through Finland's major defenses.

Parliament Is Ignored

Sturdevant said Ryti took the initiative a week ago in turning to the Germans for aid and last Thursday von Ribbentrop flew to Helsinki.

Throughout the negotiations the Finnish Parliament was left out of the picture, with Ryti and his associates acting in the same manner as they did in 1941 when Finland entered the war with Germany against Russia.

As a result of the developments, relations between the United States and Finland were said to have been put on a "day-to-day basis."

Swedish press dispatches from Berlin said henceforth the Finnish military communique will be incorporated in the German communique, ending all Finnish pretense of fighting a separate war against Russia.

BIG U. S. BOMBERS BATTER BUDAPEST

Yugoslav Railway Blasted; British Hit Flying Bomb Nests

LONDON, June 27—(AP) American heavy bombers and fighters from Italy attacked Budapest military targets and a Yugoslav railway yard today, while the RAF's heavy Halifaxes, in one of their rare daylight missions, attacked German flying-bomb installations across the channel from England in unfavorable weather.

The German radio tonight said Allied raiders were over western Germany indicating the aerial assault of the continent was continuing.

Planes Over Balkans

(The Sofia radio, in a broadcast recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, said Allied planes were over western Bulgaria and that others were flying over Albania and southwest Serbia.)

The Eastern command of the U. S. Strategic air forces announced that Russian-based American heavies attacked a German synthetic oil plant at Drohobycz, Poland, on Monday.

With Monday night's RAF "mystery" raid on the little north Ruhr town of Gottingen — possibly a stroke at the "backroom boys" who build the flying bombs—these attacks raised to five the number of Nazi-ridden European countries that felt the weight of Allied bombs in less than 24 hours.

Over the battlefronts in France air operations continued to be strictly limited by poor flying weather.

Five hundred to 750 American Fortresses and Liberators based in Italy braved the bad weather with fighter escorts and bombed unidentified targets in the Budapest area through cloud cover. They met strong enemy fighter opposition and knocked down an undisclosed number.

(The German and Hungarian radios said the bombers caused "fires and damage in several parts of the capital," and claimed German and Hungarian interceptors shot down "several" of the attackers. The Germans also said there was an air alarm at Bratislava, capital of the puppet state of Slovakia.)

Results at Budapest could not be observed because of clouds, but results at the railway yard of Brod, Yugoslavia, were described as good.

The Halifax mission from Britain, made without loss, was the first heavy-bomber operation in 48 hours and the first blow since late Sunday on the Nazi flying-bomb emplacements in France.

The enemy projectiles continued to fall in southern England throughout Monday night and Tuesday with slightly increased intensity. A school and postoffice were among the buildings hit.

There was no official indication of progress in the campaign against the bomb emplacements, although at least a score of them have been well pounded in the past fortnight, and this possibly covers at least half of those in active use.

Strike In Late Afternoon

Late in the afternoon United States Flying Fortresses and Liberators crossed the Channel toward the Pas de Calais rocket-bomb launching grounds and returned shortly afterward. American fighter-bombers also swept across half of France, renewing their attacks on German road convoys and rail facilities.

United States Thunderbolts and Mustangs of the United States Ninth Air Force attacked a German ammunition dump and truck convoy near Vire, 30 miles south of the American-held sector near St. Lo, in Normandy, and a tank convoy and ammunition dump at Alencon, 60 miles south of Caen.

Rail facilities at Laval, Rennes, Nantes, the latter an Atlantic port 125 miles south of St. Lo, also were attacked. No German planes were encountered. Five bombers and five fighters were reported missing, presumably victims of anti-aircraft fire.

Attack Not Explained

The RAF's Mosquito attack on Gottingen Monday night was not explained, but there was a possibility it had something to do with the sources of the winged bombs. The town, of 4,000 population, has no major industry and is not a transportation center.

Monday's American attack on Poland was at a point about 75 miles west of the German-Russian front lines. American Mustangs and Russian YAK fighters accompanied the bombers, and good results were reported in excellent weather.

AMERICAN PLANES BLAST BUDAPEST IN BALKAN RAIDS

Italy-based Bombers Hit Two Targets—Weather Cut Other Action.

London, June 27 (A. P.).—Up to 500 American heavy bombers attacked Budapest and Yugoslav railroads at Brod today, and United States Strategic Air Forces in Russia announced the bombardment of a synthetic oil plant Monday at Drohobycz in Poland.

From yet a third direction, British Halifax bombers from England attacked a military installation in northern France without loss. Dense clouds and near gales over the channel, however, limited air blows from Britain although Mosquitos by night bombed Gottingen in northwest Germany and Nazi troops concentrations south of Caen in Normandy.

The American heavies from Italy fought through screens of Nazi fighters and destroyed an unspecified number in reaching the overcast Hungarian capital and Brod. Targets at Budapest were not named and the clouds obscured results. The Brod yards were well covered.

The planes flying from the Russian shuttle bases were convoyed by United States Mustangs and Russian Yaks. Excellent weather prevailed and crews reported good bombing results on the target, approximately seventy-five miles west of the westbound Russian front, United States Strategic Air Force Headquarters in Russia announced. The attack group apparently returned to Russian bases.

Unfavorable weather over the battle zone again threatened to limit today's operations.

The only other activity reported overnight for Britain based Allied air units was a foray by a half dozen R. A. F. Beaufighters which administered a heavy pounding to a formation of E-boats near the Hook of Holland without loss.

Trieste Oil Refinery Hit

From Italy last night Allied bombers attacked the Aquila oil refinery at the Italian naval base of Trieste as a follow-up to yesterday's daylight attacks by American Fortresses and Liberators on oil installations and an aircraft plant in the Vienna area.

Forty-four Allied planes, 36 of them heavy bombers, were lost in the Mediterranean operations, but at least 55 German aircraft were destroyed, most of them on the run into Austria.

The Germans flew less than 50 sorties over the Normandy battle front yesterday and last night.

Normandy Area Patrolled

In spite of the thick weather, between 150 and 200 Allied fighters, most of them operating from Normandy bases, patrolled the area between Caen and Rouen yesterday.

They shot down four of the few German planes they encountered. Other fighters patrolling the beaches saw not a single enemy plane.

The Mosquito pilots said the weather last night was so bad they had to fly blind most of the time.

Convoys Guarded

The Allied Expeditionary Air Force announced, meanwhile, that Mosquitos of one defense group have destroyed more than 50 German planes—all at night—over the Normandy battle area since D-day.

"They have played an important part in helping to consolidate the bridgehead by guarding convoys from night attack and by their interception over the battlefield have reduced night bombing of our forward troops," an announcement said.

Air-Force Survey's Brighter Side

By G. Edwin Hill

London, June 27 (AP)—In the three weeks of the Western front assault Allied air power has far exceeded the expectations of even its most enthusiastic exponents and sober appraisal indicates there are still brighter prospects ahead—with certain important qualifications.

Air power had scored its first big point long before the first bomb was dropped on D-day through the preparatory campaign against the German air force—an aerial offensive that proved so effective the Nazis just didn't have the force to put up the opposition that was so desperately called for.

Luftwaffe Only Decimated

But the Luftwaffe is not dead. It is only decimated and still is strong enough to inflict considerable blows. At the start of the invasion it had about 2,000 bombers and fighters against our 11,000.

Many of them are being husbanded on the home grounds in Germany. The Luftwaffe can make a comeback if the German plane factories are not beaten down again and again.

The mighty D-day bombing of Normandy coastal defenses was praised alike by the army and navy. Before many days of the beachhead fighting had gone into history it became clear that this spring's bombing of German communications, a day and night endeavor for three months, had borne fruit.

Reinforcements Delayed

The Germans were able to bring up only enough ground reinforcements in Normandy to plug gaps and not make an effective counter-attack.

Since the invasion began, RAF heavy bombers have returned to high-altitude precision bombing after months of night work and are unanimously credited with having done a fine job in knocking out the Le Havre and Boulogne E-boat nests.

Opinion of air power has a way of swaying wildly according to the latest piece of news. One week air power is a cure-all. The next the plane isn't here to say. To avoid this swing it is wise to look at some outstanding realities.

Can't Stop Troops

First, while air power can really delay troops movements disastrously it cannot stop them. Railroad tracks can be repaired and improvised bridges can be thrown across rivers within a few hours. It is impossible to prevent troops from moving under cover of darkness.

Second, in daylight, air attacks are subject to human fallibilities and natural limitations. Bombs bounce off some emplacements harmlessly. Enemy forces and our own at times are so deeply interlocked that it is impossible to bomb the Germans without endangering our own men.

Nevertheless, in the past three weeks the Allied air forces have overcome some of their toughest hurdles.

German Flying Bombs Called Peace Problem

London, June 27 (AP)—Germany's flying bomb, which in 12 days of constant bombardment of southern England has shown itself to be a weapon of great potentialities, poses a new problem for the peacemakers and opens up vistas of savage warfare aimed at the civilian hearts of nations.

An American scientist who is closely associated with the war effort and was one of the developers of the radar and instruments for precision bombing through clouds described the flying bomb today as "a development as revolutionary as the airplane, with a tremendous future and a definite political problem."

International Control Urged

This scientist, whose name may not be disclosed, declared, "in the post-war world development of rocket and jet propulsion must be placed in the hands of some international body to administer. No nation in Europe — perhaps none in the world — could feel safe with another nation developing such weapons."

It is easily within the ability of modern science, he said, to iron out the present weaknesses of the flying bomb. Even in its present stage of development the weapon presents the possibility of some nation such as Germany to prepare quietly and secretly during peaceti[me] and then release thousands of t[hem] of explosives on an unsuspecting foreign capital, he said.

Another Secret Weapon

It is known generally that the Germans have another "secret weapon" which they expect to use with or after the present jet-propelled flying bomb. There is much speculation abouts its exact nature, but capture of vast installations on the Cherbourg peninsula incline many to believe it is a gigantic rocket-propelled bomb, which may weigh up to ten or fifteen tons and which would fly at a great height, then drop vertically with terrific piercing power.

It was estimated that in mass production the present flying bomb probably costs about $500—slightly higher than a conventional bomb. It is extremely simple, burns ordinary low-octane gasoline at a rate of one gallon per mile for a 2,000-pound projectile.

Inaccuracy Its Weakness

The bomb is aimed by compass, and while the Germans have no control over it once it is in flight, they probably can chart its course by radar and make adjustments in subsequent firings. However, its greatest weakness as a military weapon is its inaccuracy.

Only the fastest fighter planes can overtake it, and if the enemy had time to develop its speed it would be most difficult to intercept. The best defense thus far has been to bomb the launching positions.

Nazis Hurl New-Type Robots At Britain

London, June 27 (AP)—Streaking through a cloud cover, German rocket bombs subjected southern England during the night to one of the heaviest attacks it has suffered since the Nazis launched their robot assaults.

The robots seemed to include some of a different type. One crossed the sky at a slightly slower speed than the others and its engine cut out and then restarted. Some apparently carried heavier loads of explosives.

Urged To Lift Blackout

In the face of the continuing attacks by these blind raiders, two London newspapers—the Daily Express and the Daily Mail—are campaigning for a relaxation of the strict blackout.

"If pilotless planes are to replace bombers the sole original reason for the blackout will have gone," said the Daily Mail.

Numerous Eye Injuries

New York, June 27 (AP)—The British Information Services' office here released a dispatch received from London last night which said the proportion of eye injuries among rocket-bomb casualties is so great that the British Ministry of Health has warned people to stay away from windows during an attack.

The report said nearly all of the eye injuries had been caused by flying glass.

Ace Who Tackled Swarm Of Nazis Gets High Award

Congressional Medal Given to St. Louis Colonel

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 27 (AP).—Colonel James H. Howard, fighter ace, of St. Louis, was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor today for the single-handed attack on more than thirty Germans fighters threatening a Flying Fortress formation raiding Oschersleben last Jan. 11.

Lieutenant General Carl Spaatz, commander of the United States Strategic Air Force in Europe, pinned the decoration on the lanky Missourian, who now is on special assignment with the 9th Air Force Fighter Command.

Howard bagged a probable total of six Nazi planes when he dived into the swarm of fighters last winter. Before coming to the European war theater he was a member of the famous Flying Tigers in China, and was decorated by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek for his exploits there.

Howard also has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross the Air Medal, and an oak leaf cluster to the Air Medal for his feats over Europe.

Last 'Strafe-Bombing' Sweep Of Col. Bennett is Recounted

A United States Fighter Base in England, Wednesday, June 28 (AP)—The story of teh last mission of Lieut. Col. Donald K. Bennett, leading exponent of dangerous "strafe-bombing," was told today along with the official confirmation that he died after continuing to strafe a Nazi locomotive although his fighter-bomber was on fire.

After shooting up three locomotives, Bennett, 29-year-old Thunderbolt group commander from Corvallis, Ore., was going after another during the greatest American fighter sweep of the war, May 21, when the destruction of 303 locomotives, 35 military supply trains and other Nazi equipment paved the way for the invasion of Normandy.

Lands In Channel

German flak along the French coast hit his already smoking P-47, and forced him to land in the Channel. Flyers who saw him get out of his plane into a dinghy, refueled their ships and searched fruitlessly for hours. Hope that he might have reached shore held out until his body was recovered from the Channel.

Fellow-officers who attended his military funeral in an American cemetery in Britain said he died of exposure.

Lieut. Alonzo Morgan, of Glenn Falls, N. Y., who was flying in formation with the colonel, described the mission as follows:

Flying pieces of the first locomotive the colonel blew up knocked off a chunk of his wing.

"Part of your wing is gone, Colonel," another pilot radioed.

"That's all right—I've got enough left to get this other train," the colonel replied.

A flak hit left his plane smoking as he rose from locomotive No. 2.

"You're on fire," someone radioed.

"Roger," the colonel said coolly "There's another locomotive over there."

The Thunderbolt formation was headed for England when someone sighted another train. Hating to pass up the target the colonel immediately started back to it, only to be knocked down by flak.

"But For His Country"

"Colonel Bennett was an outstanding example of a man who fought not for glory or rank—but for his country," Morgan said, adding:

"He didn't like fighting like a professional soldier does but nevertheless what he did was above the call of duty. He always told us 'the harder we hit 'em the sooner we'll get home to our wives and families.'

"If he missed a target, he would apologize, saying 'I'm sorry gang.'"

Bennett successfully developed "strafe-bombing" methods whereby a fighter-bomber flies at or below target level in approaching a railway bridge or similar objective difficult to destroy at a higher angle of approach.

Bombs are flung horizontally into the target at point-blank range.

This was the method he and a wingman used in destroying the Hirson bridge over the Oise river in Belgium May 8.

GERMANS STRIKE IN BOSNIA

Attack in East but Are Forced to Retreat in West

LONDON, June 27 (AP)—German troops supported by many tanks and planes have launched an offensive in eastern Bosnia but have suffered heavy losses in the Srebrenica area about seventy-five miles southwest of Belgrade, Marshal Tito declared today.

His broadcast communiqué said that the Germans had been forced to withdraw from Grahovo in western Bosnia, about twenty-two miles inland from Ragusa, and that "German units including many Poles were defeated after a three-day battle near Delnice," eighteen miles northeast of Fiume.

British Casualties In 4 Years: 667,159

London, June 27 (AP)—Total casualties for British forces for the first four years of the war are 667,159, of which 158,741 were killed, 78,204 missing, 159,219 wounded and 270,995 prisoners, Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today.

These included 73,122 in killed, wounded and missing from the time of landings in Italy, September 3, to the fall of Rome, June 4.

Civilian casualties in the four years were 109,101, and the merchant marine 30,314, he said.

Canadian defense headquarters in Ottawa announced that Canadian army casualties from the invasion of Italy to the fall of Rome totaled 11,340, with 2,268 killed, 8,572 wounded, and 500 missing or prisoners. Canadian casualties in Sicily totaled 2,439, of which 475 were killed, 1,814 wounded and 150 missing or prisoners. Canadian air and naval casualties were not included.

United States casualties on all fronts were 178,677 for the army through June 16, and 46,705 for the navy to June 22. Army casualties included 31,289 killed, 71,432 wounded, 39,976 missing, and 35,980 prisoners. From September 9 to June 15, United States Army casualties in Italy were 11,610 killed, 44,426 wounded and 8,956 missing.

British Toll Put At 73,122 In Italy Drive

Ottawa, June 27 (AP)—The Defense Department said today that total Canadian army casualties in Italy to the fall of Rome were 11,340, made up of 2,268 killed and died of wounds; 8,572 wounded and 500 missing and prisoner of war.

London, June 27 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today that total British casualties from the time of the landings in Italy until the fall of Rome amounted to 73,122 killed, wounded and missing.

The period covered represents a total of about ten months of fighting ending June 4, during which time the British participated in many major engagements, including the battles of Cassino and the Anzio beachhead.

Churchill said his figures included 14,331 killed; 47,966 wounded, and 10,825 missing.

109,101 Civil Casualties

Figures on air force and naval losses on this period were not available.

Churchill said the over-all casualties for the British forces for the first four years of the war totaled 667,159—with 158,741 killed, 78,204 missing, 159,219 wounded and 270,995 prisoners.

Civilian casualties for the same period were 109,101 and merchant marine casualties 30,314, he said.

U. S. Toll Given

Latest reports on United States casualties on all fronts were 178,677 for the army through June 16, and 46,705 for the navy up to June 22. The total of 225,382 for both services included casualties suffered on the first day of the European invasion.

Of the army casualties, 31,289 are dead, 71,432 wounded, 39,976 missing and 35,980 prisoners. The campaign in Italy from September 9 to June 15 brought 64,992 army casualties, of whom 11,610 were killed, 44,426 wounded and 8,956 missing.

400, Injured In France, To Come Home By Plane

London, June 27 (AP)—Within the next few days, 400 American soldiers, their duty to their country done in the western invasion, will be going home by airplane. Some of them were wounded as recently as four or five days ago in Normandy.

Their special return to the United States will be made aboard sky troopers, which bring over military personnel, mail and freight and, returning, are sky ambulances.

WACs Soon May Have Arms On Some Tasks

London, June 27 (AP)—WACs going into France soon may carry firearms if the jobs to which they are assigned call for it, it was disclosed today, and officers and enlisted girls who will be in advance contingents have been practising marksmanship on a target range with .30-caliber carbines.

This doesn't mean they are going into combat, but there are many non-combatant jobs in the forward zone on which a soldier on duty is armed. An example would be a receptionist at advance headquarters.

Capt. Thelma Belford, of Portland, Ore., who never fired a gun before, scored 96 out of a possible 100.

Lieut. Jack Perdee, of Birmingham, Mich., is the instructor.

3 Americans Given Kosciuszko Badge

London, June 27 (AP)—The Kosciuszko Squadron badge has been awarded to Brig. Gen. Victor Strahm, of Bowling Green, Ky., chief of staff of the United States Ninth Air Force, and two of his fellow-officers, it was announced today.

They are Major Thomas Cummings, Columbus, Ohio, and Capt. Elliot Chess, El Paso, Texas. Strahm also was awarded the British air force silver flying wings.

The three officers flew with the original American volunteer Kosciuszko Squadron after the last war, and Chess, who is a novelist as a cilivilian, designed the squadron badge in 1919.

Nazi Channel Guns Open Up

FOLKESTONE, England, June 27 (AP).—The German big guns across the Channel in France opened up today, firing six shells shortly after 9 a. m. and following with another salvo soon afterward. It was clear at the time and the French coast was visible from this side.

Fierce Tank, Infantry Battle Rages Near Castiglione Del Lago

JUN 27 1944

ROME, June 27 — (AP) British troops, striking hard at the core of German resistance some 80 miles above Rome, have recaptured the ruins of Chiusi in heavy fighting and tonight were slugging with infantry and tanks in the outskirts of Castiglione del Lago, nine miles northeast of Chiusi on the shore of Lake Trasimeno.

NIGHT

Chiusi has been the site of the bitterest fighting since the fall of Rome. South African troops entered the town a week ago, but were thrown out by a German armored counter-attack. Since then the Eighth army has been gathering its strength for the decisive blow delivered yesterday.

Nazi Casualties Heavy

Lieutenant General Sir Oliver Leese's Eighth army headquarters announced that heavy casualties were inflicted on the Nazis defending Chiusi, with more than 200 captured in the concluding stages of the battle. Although Leese's troops drove on to the edge of Castiglione del Lago, front dispatches said the Germans were strongly emplaced in the town and probably would have to be blasted out by artillery.

Similarly stubborn enemy resistance had slowed but not stopped American and French divisions advancing along an approximate 70-mile line between Chiusi and the west coast. Fierce fighting was in progress southwest of the key city of Siena, 31 miles below Florence, with Yank forces reported gaining another five miles after occupying the rubbled town of Montieri.

10 Miles Beyond Piombino

American units, advancing directly up the west coast toward Livorno (Leghorn) and Pisa, put 10 miles between themselves and the useful port of Piombino, captured two days ago. A driving rain again was slowing the advance of Allied heavy equipment along much of the front.

It was announced that the American First armored division, veterans of the Tunisian campaign and the successful onslaught on Rome, destroyed or captured 22 enemy tanks, 25 motor vehicles, 26 anti-tank guns, 12 field guns and killed an estimated 300 of the enemy in a three-day period last week.

In the Perugia sector, directly north of Rome and east of Lake Trasimeno, Eighth army troops carved out limited gains and captured high ground overlooking Magione, on the eastern shore of the lake.

(Prime Minister Winston Churchill announced in London that total British casualties in Italy through the fall of Rome June 4 numbered 73,122 killed, wounded and missing).

8th Army Again Takes Chiusi

MORNING

Rome, June 27 (AP)—Eighth Army troops have again driven the enemy from the bitterly contested ruins of Chiusi, while the Fifth Army, advancing along Italy's west coast, has reached a point ten miles beyond Piombino in a stab toward Livorno and Pisa, Allied headquarters announced today.

The Eighth Army, after retaking Chiusi, nine miles southwest of Lake Trasimeno, the area where the Germans have been putting up their most vigorous delaying action, slugged on several miles to the northwest.

Counterblow Repelled

Chiusi, where a company of South Africans who entered it a number of days ago was later overrun by German tanks, was retaken and held despite an immediate enemy counterattack. Fifteen South Africans hiding in the town were rescued.

DAY

Seven miles to the northeast the Eighth Army drove into the outskirts of Castiglione del Lago, on the west shore of Lake Trasimeno, occupying the village of Vitellino, taking 200 prisoners and inflicting heavy casualties.

Limited advances have been made in the vicinity of Perugia, east of the lake.

15 Miles From Siena

Fierce fighting is in progress astride Highway 71, which leads to Siena, about 30 airline miles south of Florence, the communique said. Last reports had American and French troops battling up that road less than 15 miles from Siena.

The Mediterranean Army Air Force announced that at least 55 enemy planes were destroyed yesterday in giant air battles over the Vienna area, when the enemy sent the largest fighter force encountered in recent weeks into the skies against up to 750 American Fortresses, Liberators and their escort.

The Allies lost a total of 44 planes, including 36 heavy bombers.

Last night RAF Halifaxes, Liberators and Wellingtons poured two-ton block busters on the Aquila oil refinery at Trieste, causing fires and explosions which left much of the plant in ruins.

It was disclosed officially that the First Armored Division, veterans of the Tunisian campaign, was participating in Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army thrust toward Siena.

Town Demolished

The town of Montieri, which enemy demolitions reduced to rubble, was occupied before dawn yesterday. The German 50th Tank Battalion was identified as resisting in this area.

The Fifth Army command announced that the First Armored Division alone in three days, June 22-24, captured or destroyed 17 Mark IV tanks, 5 other tanks, 25 motor vehicles, 26 anti-tank guns, 12 field guns, killed an estimated 300 of the enemy and wounded at least 800.

The Vienna area resembled a vast battlefield as smoke and flames poured from six oil refineries bombed by the Fortresses and Liberators.

Tank Cars Wrecked

The Shell Oil refinery at Korneuburg, north of Vienna, the largest in Austria, was heavily hit, and similar destruction was reported to refineries at Moosbierbaum, Schwacht, Winterhafen, Lonbon and Floridsdorfer. In the Floridsdorfer rail yards many tank cars were hit and destroyed.

The enemy sent up every available type of aircraft, many of them firing streams of rockets at the American raiders.

Ten grounded enemy planes were destroyed by Spitfires which strafed a landing ground at Zagreb, Yugoslavia, bringing the total toll of the Luftwaffe put out of action to at least 65.

Genoa Strike Reported

JUN 27 1944

Rome, June 27 (AP)—The Communist press here reported today a general strike in the Genoa region has forced the closing of all factories, while street fighting is raging in Florence, with the Gestapo and Fascists unable to bring the situation under control.

Neofascist Movement Dissolved, Swiss Say

Bern, Switzerland, June 27 (AP)—The Swiss Telegraphic Agency today quoted "reliable frontier reports" to the effect that the Germans had dissolved the Neofascist movement in northern Italy and taken over complete administration of all public functions. There have been rumors that Benito Mussolini has gone to Germany.

DAY

The Swiss newspaper gazette De Lausanne, in an article reported today to the OWI, said Benito Mussolini and Roberto Farinacci, former member of the Fascist Grand Council, had "taken refuge" in Germany. The rapid advance of Allied forces in Italy is "causing panic among Fascist leaders," the newspaper said.

In the last two weeks, the article added, a Fascist army of 70,000, placed under the command of Fascist Minister of Defense Gen. Rodolfo Graziani in Miland, had melted away to nothing because of desertions.

"The recruits, once they get their equipment, hasten to take to the Maquis (underground)," the newspaper commented.

FASCISTS LOSE JOBS IN ROME

Poletti Ousts 3,750, Arrests 198, With 500 More Due

GEORGE BIRIA

Rome, June 27 (AP)—In a wholesale purge of Fascists from public agencies in Rome, Lieut. Col. Charles Poletti, Allied Military Government Commissioner for the city, announced today that 3,750 Fascists had been dismissed from office, 198 arrested and that between 500 and 600 additional arrests were contemplated.

Poletti said that among those under arrest were Prince Gabriele d'Annunzio, Vincenzo Azzolini, former governor of the Bank of Italy, a Baroness Elizabeth Koke, Captain Koch, a Grenadier who was notorious for his reprisals during the German occupation of Rome; General Presti, chief of the Polizia Africana Italiana, a police group composed of veterans of the Ethiopian war, and former Inspector General of Police Coletti.

Police Force Cleaned Out

NIGHT

The commissioner said most of those dismissed were policemen, including 1,700 members of the Polizia Africana Italiana, who were removed in a bloc, but other agencies also were hit.

Allied security officers declined to identify d'Annunzio. Prince Gabriellino d'Annunzio, son of the famed poet and forerunner of Fascism, was said to have been living in Rome at the time of the Allied occupation.

In regional order No. 1, issued earlier today, Poletti defined those who should be regarded as Fascists and included persons who held Fascist titles, Senators, deputies, Mayors, all Fascist tainted government officials, and political radio commentators, newsmen and publicists who "exalted the ideas and political aims of Fascism" after March 1, 1925.

POLETTI ARRESTS 198

Rome, June 27 (A. P.).—Lieut.-Col. Charles Poletti, Allied Military Government commissioner for Rome, announced today that 3,750 Fascists have been dismissed from Rome public agencies and 198 arrested.

DAY

Among those arrested were Vincenzo Azzolini, former governor of the Bank of Italy; Prince Gabriele d'Annunzio and former Police Chief Caruso of Rome.

KING PETER, TITO REACH ACCORD ON UNIFIED CABINET

MORNING JUN 27 1944

BARI, Italy, June 23—(AP) King Peter of the Yugoslav government-in-exile and Marshal Tito of the Partisans have agreed on a unified cabinet in which Tito will have direction of the military forces, according to reliable reports here.

Gen. Draja Mihailovic, the Yugoslav Chetnik leader and former war minister in Peter's government, was not consulted, it was understood.

As reported here today, the agreement followed these lines:

Subasic Heads Cabinet

Ivan Subasic, premier of Peter's recently reorganized regime, will head the cabinet, with two portfolios to go to Tito's partisans, one of them being that of War Minister. The National Committee of Liberation, the Partisan control body, will remain in existence.

The agreement is to continue for the duration of the war, with post-war government arrangements left open.

NIGHT

Further warships and merchantmen of the royal government now under Allied protection will be made available to the newly-coordinated Yugoslav forces and gold deposits now credited abroad to the royal government will be used jointly to press the war against the Germans.

Subasic, who now has returned to London, reached the agreement in discussions with Tito at the Marshal's secret headquarters inside Yugoslavia. King Peter, who came to Italy to be available for consultation, was said to have approved the agreement fully. A formal announcement is expected after details are worked out in London.

Resistance Suffered

The feeling here was widespread that the resistance to the Germans, which suffered recently from the enemy capture of Tito's headquarters, had been strengthened materially by agreement between the two factions that have been so long at bitter odds.

(Philip Jordan, London News-Chronicle correspondent who is with the partisans in Yugoslavia as a representative of the combined British and American press, said in a dispatch dated June 24 and released for publication Tuesday night, that the mere ouster of General Mihailovic would not suffice to win Mihailovic's followers to the partisan-royalist standard.

("In the opinion of those whom I believe to be competent to judge," wrote Jordan, "only a broadcast by the King himself, in which he would leave listeners in no doubt whatever about the sincerity of his repudiation of Mihailovic, would carry conviction to those who still remain almost fanatically loyal to him.")

Agreement Reported For New Slav Cabinet

Bari, Italy, June 20 (AP—Delayed)—Marshal Tito and King Peter of Yugoslavia were understood here today to have agreed on formation of a Cabinet headed by Dr. Ivan Subasic, the King's Prime Minister.

MORTON

Two portfolios in the Cabinet would go to Tito's Partisans. Of the latter, it is expected that one will become War Minister, giving Tito direction of the country's military effort.

DAY

Complete Accord Reported

Reliable reports said that Tito and Subasic reached a complete accord on formation of a new Yugoslav Government in conferences at the marshal's headquarters in Yugoslavia, the agreement to continue for duration of the war. The country's post-war governmental structure was reported left open.

It was learned here further that merchant vessels and warships of the Royal Government now under the protection of the Allies will be made available to the coordinated resistance elements and that the country's gold deposits abroad now credited to the Royal Government will be used for the joint prosecution of the war.

Peter Said To Approve

King Peter, who came to Italy to be near the scene of the conference and available for consultation, is reported to have given his full approval.

Both the King and Subasic are expected to return soon to London, where details will be worked out and a formal announcement made.

Pius X On Trial For Beatification

JUN 27 19

TUESDAY

Vatican City, June 27 (AP)—The body of Pope Pius X, who died August 20, 1914, was taken today to the Chapel of Relics in the Basilica of St. Peter's as part of the ceremonial ritual of beatification.

NIGHT

The body was taken from the cathedral crypt 50 days ago for identification purposes and the public unveiling today was the first step in the elaborate ritual which ultimately may lead to canonization of Pius as a saint.

Thousands of American soldiers, visiting Rome on a three day pass, filed by the iron-barred chapel within the Basilica and gazed at the body without realizing they were looking upon one of the great figures of the Catholic church.

Thousands of American soldiers filed by the iron-barred chapel within the basilica and gazed at the body, clad in gorgeous red, white and cold ceremonial robes, which were the gift of Pope Pius XII.

Beatification is predicated on at least two miracles, to be determined by the Congregation of Rites, which serves as a jury and passes on the subject's writings and acts while alive and on the testimony of people who knew him. There is also "a devil's advocate," or opposing attorney, who makes searching analysis of all claims. Pope Pius XII ultimately will pass on the judgment of the Congregation of Rites.

Beatification is only the first step toward eventual canonization.

The body will be returned to the crypt at 11 A. M. Thurdsay.

JAPANESE FORCE TRAPPED BY ALLIES NEAR MOGAUNG

KANDY, Ceylon, June 27—(AP) Chinese and British forces have captured the Japanese stronghold of Mogaung in north Burma and trapped a large force of Japanese between there and Kamaing, 20 miles to the northwest, Allied Southeast Asia headquarters announced today.

At the same time American troops advanced another 100 yards into the northern sector of Myitkyina, 35 miles east of Mogaung, and are near contact with Chinese attacking from the west. Other Chinese have established a bridgehead on the west bank of the Irrawaddy river just east of Myitkina, and the Chindits have attacked at Maingna on the east bank of the river, in an area south of Myitkyina. The city thus is almost entirely cut off by the Allies.

The Chinese 38th division and the Chindits, aided by fighter-bombers in strength that the Allied command called "overwhelming," took Mogaung Monday after a three-day assault.

The city is an important rail point in the wilds of upper Burma and has served as a supply center for the Japanese forces throughout the Hukawng and Mogaung valleys.

(A Chungking communique said that in addition to these successes, the Chinese in the Salween front just across the border in Yunnan provinces, China, had cut the old Burma road at a piont less than three miles north of Mangshih, 14 miles southwest of Lungling.

(The Chinese blocked the road after a westward advance from newly-occupied Hsiangta, which is ten miles southeast of Japanese-held Lungling. American B-25 medium bombers heavily attacked Mangshih to pave the way for an expected Chinese assault and cut off Japanese reinforcements by destroying a bridge on the Burma road south of Mangshih.

(British fighting continued on the Burma road east of Lungling.)

On the India border, Allied troops ten miles west of Bishenpur captured a disputed water point after strong artillery preparation and repulsed two Japanese counter-attacks with heavy enemy casualties, it was announced.

Allies Take Key Jap Base Of Mogaung

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, June 27 (AP)—British and Chinese troops have occupied the Japanese stronghold of Mogaung, in northern Burma, after a bitter three-day battle, an Allied communique announced today.

The final assault, in which the Allied forces drove into the town from three sides yesterday, was preceded by a deadly aerial bombardment, the bulletin said.

Pressure Stepped Up

The fall of Mogaung promised to intensify pressure on Japanese forces battling to retain Myitkyina, 40 miles to the east and last important base in northern Burma remaining in enemy hands. Myitkyina already has been partly invested by Allied troops.

Mogaung was taken after a prolonged air attack against the last Japanese holdings in the town.

Division Smashed

Capture of the town virtually chopped up the Japanese 18th (Singapore) Division. The remnants fled southward. The enemy's losses in men and materials were heavy.

Brigadier (Mad Mike) Calvert and Chinese Colonel Li Hong commanded the final phase of the attack on Mogaung.

House-To-House Fight

A communique said that American forces fighting a bitter, house-to-house battle in the northern sector of Myitkyina had gained another 100 yards and were nearly in contact with Chinese troops battling into the stronghold from the west.

South of the captured Japanese base of Kamaing, advancing Chinese forces were reported to have trapped a large Japanese force apparently attempting to fall back from the lost stronghold.

(The Chinese high command announced at Chungking that Chinese forces driving toward Burma from across the Salween river had again cut the Old Burma Road, at a point about ten miles below Lungling.

Base Is Cut Off

(The Chinese advance cuts off the Japanese base of Manghih, Burma Road stronghold only three miles above the road block, and isolates it from Lungling, the Japanese stronghold seized earlier in the campaign but recaptured by the enemy.

(The announcement added that Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault's bombers had severely bombed Mangshih, presumably to prepare the way for Chinese forces to storm the town, and had knocked out a Burma Road bridge to the south, further blocking the flow of Japanese supplies and reinforcements.)

JAPS PRESS DRIVE FOR RAILWAY TOWN

CHUNGKING, June 27—(AP) The Japanese, while pressing a frontal assault from the north toward the strategic Hunan province railway town of Hengyang, have begun a flanking movement to the southeast apparently aimed at cutting the railway south of Hengyang, a Chinese communique indicated today.

The Chinese high command said severe fighting with heavy casualties on both cases was in progress a dozen miles north of Hengyant, and while it said the city itself "remained calm", most quarters in Chungking were of the opinion that much stronger opposition would be needed if the Japanese were to be prevented from seizing all the Canton-Hankow railway, which would give them a through north-south line.

While the Japanese attack toward Hengyang was continuing, the Chinese command disclosed that other Japanese forces, striking down from occupied Yihsien, had advanced against Anjen, 38 miles southeast of Hengyang, and where were being engaged there. Their apparent objective was the rail town of Leiyang, 34 miles southwest of Anjen and the same distance south of Hengyang.

YAP HAMMERED BY YANK PLANES

Eight Japanese Aircraft Shot Down During 30-Minute Fight.

ADVANCED ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, New Guinea, Wednesday, June 28—(AP) Heavy bombers from southwest Pacific bases, ranging almost 1,000 miles over water, hammered Yap island in the northern Carolines with 35 tons of bombs in this sector's newest sweep in support of the Marianas campaign.

It was the third raid within a week upon Yap. Thirty Japanese planes rose to the island's defense—the strongest interception yet encountered at that base—and in a furious 30-minute battle eight enemy craft were shot down and three were probably destroyed.

One Liberator also was lost in the Sunday noon attack. The bombs damaged runways, revetments and installations, and destroyed one parked airplane. Yap is the northermost major airbase in the Carolines from which Japanese planes could strike at the American forces overrunning Saipan in the Marianas, 700 miles to the north.

Liberators and night air patrols bombed two other islands in the Carolines—Palau, south of Yap, and Woleai, to the east.

A Liberator destroyed a 3,500-ton Japanese freighter off Boeroe island, just west of New Guinea, Monday with two bomb hits and several damaging misses.

Three other merchantmen of 3,000 to 4,000 tons were damaged by air patrols, one off Sorong on the tip of Dutch New Guinea, another off the east coast of Halmaera island, and the third off Soembawa island in the Dutch East Indies, between Timor and Bali.

Other southwest Pacific bombers heavily attacked Manokwari in Dutch New Guinea, nearby Noemfoor island, Wewak in British New Guinea, and Rabaul on New Britain.

Japanese planes dropped 10 bombs upon Mokmer airdrome on Biak island Sunday night, causing minor casualties.

A headquarters spokesman disclosed that an explosion on a fuel dock at Emirau island, north of New Ireland, June 18 destroyed two patrol torpedo boats and caused a considerable number of casualties.

New Pacific Force Formed

as Japanese Resistance Stiffens.

New Guinea Headquarters, June 27 (AP)—Formation of an Allied Far Eastern Air Force, coupled with indications the main Japanese aerial strength has been withdrawn from the New Guinea-Solomons theater, today illustrated the northwestward surge of the sky war.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced the new air organization will be headed by Lieut. Gen. George C. Kenney, commander of Allied Air Forces in this area since 1942. The Far Eastern force combines the Fifth Army Air Force, which has operated in Australia and New Guinea, and the 13th Army Air Force, main striking power in the Solomons, Rabaul and Kavieng campaigns.

First Such U. S. Title

(This is the first Allied organization to bear the title "Far Eastern" since surrender of the Philippines. Defenders of that archipelago, under MacArthur, were called "United States forces in the Far East.")

A spokesman for MacArthur said indications are strong the Japanese are pulling their air force in this theater back to safer areas, probably the Netherlands East Indies and the Philippines.

Lack of enemy aerial opposition to current raids in this region has been noticeable.

Title Indicates New Theater

The title of the new air arm indicated it would be used for sustained attacks against new targets in the Indies and the Philippines. Recently captured airfields are several hundred miles westward of the airstrips employed by the Fifth and 13th in their early raids against Japanese strongpoints. Four of them on the American-invaded Schouten Islands, off northern Dutch New Guinea, are within bomber distance of the southern Philippines.

Under the new setup, Maj. Gen. Ennis C. Whitehead, of Kansas City, Mo., will command the Fifth Air Force. He has been in charge of the Fifth's bomber command since 1942. Maj. Gen. St. Clair Street, Washington, D. C., will head the 13th. He formerly commanded the Second Army Air Force in the United States.

Bitter Battle Raging For Capital of Saipan

Allout Infantry Fight Seen

Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, June 27 (AP)—American soldiers and marines who already have captured Saipan's best airdrome, biggest harbor and highest mountain, fought today for its largest town—Garapan, peacetime capital of the Japanese Marianas.

While American artillery rocked Garapan for several hours with the heaviest barrage yet laid down by Saipan shore guns, American planes and bombs battered front-line Japanese troops all the way from the Kurile Islands in the North Pacific to New Guinea and the Solomons across the equator.

Jap Fleet Still Hiding

Aside from a carrier task force raid upon Guam and Rota Islands in the Marianas Saturday, there were no reports of fleet activity. The Japanese fleet units which ventured out toward Guam last week, only to take a tremendous beating in plane and ship losses, presumably has retired to the Philippines.

In the strike at two airstrips on Guam, 7 enemy planes were destroyed on the ground and 10 to 12 damaged. Two aircraft were destroyed on the ground at Rota.

Other Bases Bombed

Liberators of the 11th Army Air Force and navy Venturas bombed Paramushiro and Shimushu islands, in the Kuriles, before dawn Saturday. Navy Hellcat fighters and marine dive bombers and Corsair fighters raided Jap-held islands in the Marshalls. Army Liberators from New Guinea bombed Truk, in the Carolines.

In Saipan's center, east of Garapan, marines reached the top of 1,554-foot Mount Tapotchau and routed the enemy from caves and cliffs. From the summit American observers were able to direct artillery fire and bombing at every point on the north end of the island, nine-mile-long sector to which an estimated 20,000 Japanese have retreated.

Hold Best Anchorage

Saipan's principal anchorage, Magicienne Bay, passed completely into American hands with the capture of Kagman Peninsula, on its northern shores. Today American shipping lay boldly in this bay, close to shore.

Associated Press Correspondent William L. Worden said small boats moved offshore unmolested. The Japanese for the first time were too busy fighting inland to expend shells or bullets seaward.

town, which had a peacetime population of 10,000.

Patrols cautiously probing into the city met the fire of Nipponese snipers and machinegunners. Every house and cellar was the hideout for enemy soldiers. Every street and alley was littered with the dead. The town was a pile of wreckage.

The island-wide battlelines hinged at the center on Mt. Tapotchau, now in American hands. From that dominating height at the island's center the front reached westward to coastal Garapan and eastward to Donnay village.

Japanese resistance had stiffened all along the front said a dispatch from Howard Handleman, representing the combined American press. It appeared the American invaders had reached a sector where the enemy had selected to stage a last-ditch defense.

Terrain typical of the worst of the Pacific battlefields was slowing the American advance. The irregular front poked sharply ahead where heavy opposition and difficult going confronted the troops.

The northern slope of Mt. Tapotchau was still held by the Japanese at last reports. There also were enemy pockets of resistance in caves or dug into the cliffs. Against these the assault forces moved warily.

Using small artillery and flamethrowers, the Americans cleaned out the pockets and caves one at a time. Each, reported Handleman, was a deadly small scale battle in itself.

Complete air and naval superiority aided the invaders.

There were sporadic night raids by enemy planes, probably based at Tinian island, three miles south of Saipan. American artillery and warplanes were pounding Tinian constantly, however.

With Magicienne Bay, principal anchorage on the southeastern side of Saipan, in American hands, the invading forces had a new base for supplies. Shipping already had pushed boldly into the harbor, unmolested by the enemy.

Drive On Saipan's Capital Opens

Whole Jap Line Stiffens On

30. 24 — 16609

Saipan

By Howard Handleman

[Representing the Combined American Press; Distributed by the Associated Press]

Aboard Joint Expeditionary Force Flagship, Saipan, June 27 (June 26 United States Time)—(via Navy Radio)—Japanese infantry resistance stiffened all along the island-wide front this morning as marine and army forces reached a sector possibly chosen for the beginning of Japan's last-ditch defense of Saipan.

Already five heavily defended Jap pockets have been by-passed on Mount Tapotchau from whose peak the American line pivots to the beaches on the eastern and western sides of the island.

Defending Caves

The pocketed Japs are defending caves from which they harass and slow the American advance.

Americans who wondered at Japanese abandonment of brutally strong defenses on Tapotchau's southern slopes were beginning to believe that even stronger defenses are ahead.

Jap resistance gives every evidence that the enemy is ready to end his delaying tactics and begin a battle of infantry masses.

Yank Patrols In Garapan

The Japanese defense line bends from the north slopes of Tapotchau and down into Garapan on the west and through Donnay village on the east shore.

Snipers and machine-gunners hiding in Garapan houses and cellars fought patrols venturing beyond American lines ten blocks into the southern outskirts of the town.

The American advance was spilling over lightly defended areas and slowing against the heavily resisting sectors to conform to enemy defense lines.

Defense-In-Depth Indicated

This line roughly cuts inland to the center, indicating a Jap defense-in-depth and possibly presaging a battle phase even more bloody than that of the first two weeks of the Seapan invasion, during which the Japanese retreated, avoiding infantry clashes but pounding the Americans with mortar and artillery.

Saipan, already ranking with the roughest Pacific battles, threatens to develop into a terrible campaign of bloodletting, with fighting in streets, houses, mountains, forests and canefields, combining the worst terrain features of all the Pacific battle fronts.

The Japanese still hold about half the island, giving both forces room for maneuvering, although the Americans hold every speed advantage because of superior mechanization and with roadways greatly improved over Jap-held roads.

Ship's Boom Fells Plane

The Americans continue to hold complete sea and air superiority. The enemy is still making light night raids.

Last night four light nemy raids alerted the island and shipping. A single enemy plane launched a torpedo and crashed into a cargo ship boom. The torpedo, launched too lat for a water run which would have armd it, failed to explode but killed one man and inflicted slight damage on the ship.

This afternoon the task force commander messaged the ship: "'Tis well-known principal weapons cargo vessels save for use against enemy are their cargo booms. With these weapons they do great damage to enemy.

Envious Of Winchmen

"However, the task force comcander notes with pride your ship also been able to use its cargo booms more actively and to attack and destroy the enemy plane with one of these terrible weapons. He compliments the ship on its achievement.

"When the ship paints a trophy sign for destroying the airplane do not paint it on the bridge but paint it on the cargo boom so as to make gun crews envious of winchmen.

"Deliver a copy of this to all winchmen."

Japanese ground opposition is a different thing. Mountain pockets are holding up the advance in spots which are well nigh impregnable.

One In A Blind Ravine

One I saw was a blind ravine, a huge hole in the mountain, lined with caves each carrying a death threat for marines probing over the ravine floor. Litter evidenced recent occupation of the ravine by the Japanese who left clothing, rations, cigarettes and ammunition.

It was these kinds of pockets behind, plus the mountain and mortar and small-arms fire ahead that slowed progress.

Must Be Hit Head-On

Pocketed caves had to be hit head-on by guns exposed to counterfire from the caves. Each pocket became a deadly, small-scale battlefield for the men assigned to clean out the caves with small artillery and flame throwers.

Although Saipan is the key to the Marianas, the American force is continuing to beat Guam, Rota and Tinian bases by sea and air.

Tinian, three miles south of Saipan, suffers daily attacks and smoke pillars usually rise from the island by day and flames by night.

A Grandstand Seat

Tinian defenders are in a similar position as those on Parry Island of the Eniwetok atoll last February, when they sat watching Americans take Eniwetok Island, awaiting their turn and powerless to resist.

Tinian's population has a grandstand seat at the crumbling of the Japanese south sea empire.

Slow, Bloody Fight For Garapan

By William L. Worden

Garapan, Saipan, June 25 (AP—Delayed)—There's nothing pleasant about either the town of Garapan or the approaches to it from the south.

Those approaches consist of one highway and one narrow-gauge railroad track.

Down in Charan Kanoa, four miles south, Marines turned railroaders have some pint-sized locomotives of this much-blasted railroad working again, although they leak steam around the cylinder packing. But here this is just a railroad track down which the Japs have a nasty habit of shooting and along which yesterday they staged an abortive tank counterattack.

Under Sniper Fire

The highway is just about as bad as the track. It runs along the beach and first-aid jeeps tear along it at full speed, slewing around foxholes and shell craters, while hospital corpsmen try to prevent the wounded from falling out.

Drivers hurry for good reason. The road is under occasional mortar and frequent sniper fire. Jeeps have been going along it for two days now and most of them reek with blood smells.

Animals Starving

The road leads into what must have been Garapan's slums before the whole town became a pile of wreckage. Here the houses never were more than shacks surrounded by thin goats and unhappy pigs. Now they're rubble and the animals are starving.

Marines are fighting from miserabl streets to streets more miserable still. Dead men lie in the alleys and flaming gasoline dumps sear whole neighborhoods. So far the marines have penetrated half a dozen of Garapan's worst streets, and they're fighting on in dust, in smoke, in the now-usual hail of gun and mortar fire.

They're taking Garapan but it's slow and bloody.

Japs Lose 10 Of 12 Tanks In Saipan Drive

American Forward Command Post on Saipan Island, June 24 (AP—Delayed)—The Japanese lost 10 of the 12 tanks they sent against American positions in vain counter-attacks as American forces moved on Mount Tapotchau and the main enemy strength today. (Subsequent reports have told of the capture of Mount Tapotchau.)

The enemy tanks were wiped out in two engagements.

A Japanese ammunition dump on the slopes of Tapotchau exploded last night. Recurrent explosions provided a spectacular show for more than a half hour.

Captured Material

The American supply condition was officially described as good. Captured material included 40 tanks, four 155-mm. field pieces and several other big guns.

American crews are repairing the narrow-gauge railway which runs past the captured Aslito airfield, now called Conroy Field. When they have completed the repairs they will have four locomotives and more than 50 10-ton flatcars to operate on the line.

5,000 Tons Hit Saipan

Aboard Joint Expeditionary Force Flagship off Saipan, June 19 (AP — Delayed) — American warships hit Saipan with more than 5,000 tons of explosives before the first boatloads of marines landed—one of the mightiest pre-invasion bombardments of the Pacific war. Airplanes dropped hundreds of tons in addition.

Only the plastering given Kwajalein in the Marshall Islands last February compared with it.

At Saipan the navy did not aim, however, at inflicting almost total destruction on enemy installations as in the Marshalls. Reason: Kwajalein is three miles long and 700 yards wide; Saipan is 13 miles long by 5 wide.

Yanks Encounter Real 'Savages'

Biak Island, Dutch New Guinea, June 26 (AP—Delayed) — Yank soldiers invading remote Biak Island have for the first time encountered natives whom they aptly can describe as "savages."

Unlike the coastal villagers of mainland New Guinea, the little black men and women of Biak bear no evidence of missionary influence or any schooling. Fierce, unkempt, virtually unclothed, they came out of the hills 10 days after the Americans first landed.

Seek Escape From Gunfire

They came not in friendship. They came in fear, seeking sanctuary from a hell of explosives. They carried their infants, their crude fishnets, their javelin-like spears, needle-pointed.

Sergt. William Moddemeyer, of Dayton, Oregon, who helped question the patriarch of one family of 13, said the natives had contrasted the unopposed occupation of Biak by the Japanese with the blood-and-thunder arrival of the Americans and had drawn their own conclusions.

170 Planes Raided Guam, Japs Declare

New York, June 27 (AP)—The Tokyo radio said today that 170 "small-sized enemy planes" had raided Guam, southernmost island in the Marianas group, on Monday (Japan time).

The domestic broadcast, recorded by United States Government monitors, said the Japanese had "suffered no damages." It asserted that 16 of the raiders had been downed.

New Zealand Shifts Troops To Industry

By Fred Hampson

South Pacific Headquarters, June 27 (AP)—New Zealand, two years ago one of the most tighly war mobilized nations on earth, is tapering off its armed forces and attempting thereby to boost its production of food and other war supplies.

Already a good many thousand troops of the Third New Zealand Division—veterans of the Vella Lavella, Treasuries and Green Island campaigns in the northern Solomons—have been or are being released for essential industry.

Production Dips

With manpower admittedly overcommitted to the military, butter and cheese production have declined ten per cent, and a desired increase in military export of meat and wool has not been achieved.

Because New Zealand, like Australia, is close to battle zones, United Nations leaders in this part of the world acquiesced to conversion of New Zealand from a source of fighting men to a source of supplies.

At the peak, New Zealand, with a population of only 1,600,000, had 150,000 men under arms, with more than 100,000 of them overseas. Even after she winnows essential workers from her army she will maintain—for her size—one of the largest fighting forces on earth.

Division In Italy

Currently New Zealand has two infantry divisions. One is in Italy. The other, in this area close to home, barring unexpected replacements, may be scaled down to a smaller force.

The change-over probably will not affect more highly specialized branches of the service, such as the Royal New Zealand Air Force. Several squadrons of Kiwi flyers are still operating in the northern Solomons, and New Zealand aviators are fighting in all parts of the world—Britain, Italy, India and elsewhere in the Pacific.

Japs Held Unlikely To Risk Fleet

By Russell Brines

Washington, June 27 (AP)—The American strike at Saipan Island has impaled Tokyo's strategists on an aerial-naval dilemma.

For the first time, the tremendous Allied strength has become a direct and consistent menace to Japan's war muscles—homeland factories.

If the Japanese allow American forces to conquer and hold Saipan, their major industrial areas will be open to sustained bombing. The island is 1,260 miles southeast of Tokyo, well within B-29 flying range.

Naval Aid Held Necessary

American field officers are confident of eventual victory over Saipan's stubborn land defenders. Without naval support no island of this size can be held against a sufficiently powerful and determined opponent.

The Japanese fleet which first tried this support was impressed properly with the firepower of United States Fifth Fleet units bulwarking the land battle. Admiral Chester W. Nimitz said the fleet was strong enough to hope for a head-on collision with Japan's grand or home fleet.

Desperate Gamble

A sortie of the Japanese grand fleet against the United States Fifth would be a desperate gamble. The fleet's defeat or decimation would weaken Japan's defenses. During its absence from home waters an American task force might hit Nippon with devastating force.

This is the delicate balance which has made Saipan so important for both sides. The island was selected with shrewd strategy from a cluster of Pacific objectives. It is close enough to Japan to provide the desired aerial squeeze, yet it is not so near that Nipponese units might attempt both attack and defense of the homeland in swift dashes—as the Bonins or Kuriles might permit.

Supply Lines Cleared

Island-hopping has cleared the American supply lines to the Saipan area. If the island and these routes are held firmly, large quantities of supplies can be shipped to future air bases there, while to provide China-based planes with sufficient materials would require months of arduous work.

From all evidences the Japanese will attempt to solve their dilemma piecemeal. Rather than risk the grand fleet, they can be expected to attack by air or task force, particularly if units of the Fifth are withdrawn after American victory. Then they will attempt to nullify the American bomber threat by intensified homeland defenses.

'Administration Peace Plan Approved, Report

Washington, June 27 (AP)—President Roosevelt said today the Administration's plan to unite the peace-loving nations of the world in an organization to put down future wars, by force if necessary, has met a generally favorable public reaction.

Mr. Roosevelt, in response to a question, said the plan he outlined ten days ago inspired lots of letters—all favorable so far.

Tells News Conference

He made the remark to a news conference shortly after the platform committee of the Republican National Convention in Chicago made public a foreign policy plan opposing a world state and urging "peace forces" to outlaw aggressions.

The Republicans called for adequate post-war military forces to defend the United States and its outposts, to maintain the Monroe Doctrine and to meet military commitments of Congress.

The post-war program outlined by the President on June 15 would set up an international organization of peace-loving nations to work for world stability. It would include a world council composed of the four major powers and "a suitable number" of other nations, and an international court. Participating nations would use armed force, if necessary, to prevent wars.

Query On De Gaulle

An indication that Gen. Charles de Gaulle of the French Committee of National Liberation will visit Washington early next month came from Mr. Roosevelt's news conference remark that French sources have asked whether the Chief Executive could receive the general between July 5 and July 9. The President said the dates were perfectly all right.

Recently there had been indications from abroad that de Gaulle's trip might be put off because of this Government's non-recognition of the committee's claims to be the provisional government of France.

Presidential Brush-Off

A reporter asked the President, "is there anything that can be said about the Democratic candidate for President?"—and got the laughing brush-off that has become almost routine in recent White House news conferences.

The President observed that the assembled reporters had saddled the question on his questioner today, and said there was no news on the subject.

He also told the conference that he has opened a series of conversations with Dr. H. H. Kung, of China, on the war and economic problems of China.

Dr. Kung will represent his nation at the international monetary conference which opens July 1 at Bretton Woods, N. H. He visited Mr. Roosevelt today and the President said he will come back tomorrow.

State Department Recalls Armour from Argentina

JUN 27 1944

WASHINGTON, June 27—(AP) The State department announced tonight that American Ambassador Norman Armour has been recalled from Buenos Aires "for consultation," in a move hitting sharply at the militarist government of Argentina.

The United States and all but three other American republics have refused to recognize the regime of General Edelmiro Farrell since it established itself by revolution four months ago. However, Armour stayed on in Buenos Aires, presumably in the hope that Farrell would take moves towards bringing his country into line with the general policy of hemispheric defense.

Will Leave Soon

Armour is expected to leave Buenos Aires tomororw or the next day. His recall indicates a stiffening of the American attitude toward Farrell's government. Further emphasis is provided by the fact that Mrs. Amour will follow the ambassador home.

While Armour's departure is expected to come as a heavy blow to Argentina, there has been speculation here that still further expressions of the American republics' disapproval of Argentina's government may be imminent.

A State Department spokesmon pointed out that this government has been in constant consultation with the other American nations and it can be presumed that they were informed of the American decision to bring Armour back.

Argentine Ambassador Adrian C. Escobar, who arrived in Washington shortly before relations broke down last February 25 when Farrell's coup took place, remains here although he has no official contacts with this government. He said he had no immediate comment on Armour's recall.

Wife Will Follow

It was learned that Armour's wife will follow him, supporting the belief that his return has been ordered as a diplomatic blow.

Speculation that some move of emphatic disapproval was in the making had been generated by a series of unusual conferences between Secretary of State Hull and Latin American ambassadors.

Recognition of Bolivia last week cleared Pan-American dockets for taking up the Argentine problem, viewed here as especially grave.

During the past week Hull has seen most of the Latin American ambassadors. Yesterday he met with six Central American diplomats at once. Today he saw representatives from Haiti, Cuba and the Dominican Republic, as well as the ambassador from Mexico.

Officials here have been particularly disturbed by a recent speech by Col. Juan Peron, Argentine minister of war, who called for an expansion policy for Argentina and told his country that it should be prepared to fight.

No Diplomatic Relations

The United States has had no diplomatic relations with Argentina since Feb. 25, when General Edelmiro Farrell took over the government from President Pedro Ramirez in a coup d'etat.

Argentina broke relations with Germany and Japan on Jan. 26, and opposition to this move was reported to have been a factor in Ramirez' fall. Since then, the Argentine government has not taken the measures agreed upon by all the American republics just after Pearl Harbor to protect the hemisphere against Axis aggression.

It was adoption of such measures including the ouster of 81 Axis agents which led to the recognition of Bolivia by 19 American countries last week.

Much concern has been apparent here over Argentina's failure to take anti-Axis steps during the four months her government has not been recognized by this country and many officials have said privately that a more vigorous attitude should be adopted toward Argentina.

Economic sanctions have been studied as well as possible diplomatic moves. Observers said that undoubtedly the policy of concerted action by the American republics will be followed when a decision is made.

MAKES COINS FOR DUTCH

United States Starts on Second Order Looking to Liberation

WASHINGTON, June 27 (AP)—United States mints have completed one "large order" of coins for the Netherlands Government-in-exile in London and have started work on a second order, the Treasury Department disclosed today.

The coins, to be used in the liberation of Holland and the East Indies, are being stamped from silver lend-leased by this country. Minting costs are being paid by the Netherlands.

Officials said the Dutch Government asked to buy the silver outright but that this country preferred to retain title to the metal. Eventually, the coins are to be melted into bullion and returned to the United States.

They were minted in three denominations: 10 cents, 25 cents and one guilder. The par value of the guilder is 40.2 cents.

Treasury officials declined to say how many coins had been or would be minted for the Netherlands Government but said that about 500,000 coins would be turned out for all foreign countries in United States mints during the fiscal year ending June 30.

Roosevelt Invites Rios to U. S.

WASHINGTON, June 27 (AP).—President Roosevelt is sending word to President Juan Antonio Rios, of Chile, inviting him to visit Washington, Rodolfo Michels, Chilean Ambassador, said today after a visit with the Chief Executive. Ambassador Michels, who is leaving soon for Santiago, where he will submit his resignation as envoy to the United States, said relations between the United States and Chile "never have been better."

Goldstein on Mission to Mexico

WASHINGTON, June 27 (AP).—The Zionist Organization of America announced today that Dr. Israel Goldstein, president, is en route to Mexico City by plane on a special mission designed to further the work of rescue of Jewish refugees in Europe and the building up of Palestine as the Jewish national home.

Roosevelt Honors 2 Russian Cities

Washington, June 27 (AP)—Scrolls to Leningrad and Stalingrad, saluting their historic fights against the Nazis, have been presented to Marshal Stalin by the United States Government, President Roosevelt said today.

The scrolls were presented in Moscow by Ambassador Harriman. They bear the signature of President Roosevelt and were accompanied by a letter from the President to Premier Stalin, in which he said:

"I am sending to you two scrolls for Stalingrad and Leningrad, which cities have won the wholehearted admiration of the American people.

The heroism of the citizens of these two cities and the soldiers who so ably defended them has not only been an inspiration to the people of the United States, but has served to bind even more closely the friendship of our two nations.

Stalingrad and Leningrad have become synonyms for the fortitude and endurance which has enabled us to resist and will finally enable us to overcome the aggression of our enemies.

"I hope that in presenting these scrolls to the two cities you will see fit to convey to their citizens my own personal expressions of friendship and admiration and my hope that our people will continue to develop that close understanding which has marked our common effort."

NAZI CAPTAIN PLANNED REUNION

Washington, June 27 (A. P.).—Lieut. Weldon James, Marine Corps public relations officer, reports from the European theater that the Germans may have known when the invasion was coming but there was at least one officer who didn't know where it would be.

Among the effects of a dead German captain was found an unmailed letter, written on the eve of invasion to a friend in Berlin, which began:

"My lovely wife and child arrived today to visit me. . . ."

Army To Continue Thunderbolt Plans

Washington, June 27 (AP)—Production of Thunderbolts, the army's fastest fighter and the only one powered by a radial, air-cooled engine, will continue through 1944 at both the Long Island and Indiana plants of the Republic Aviation Corporation, under current War Department plans, it was learned today.

At the end of this year, according to the present schedule, production will be dropped at the Evansville (Ind.) factory. The stubby winged, high flying speedsters will continue on assembly lines at the Farmingdale (N. Y.) plant.

Bombers At Evansville

It is understood here that the Evansville facilities will be assigned subassembly work on a large bomber.

The fate of the Thunderbolts has been in doubt for some time. The army never has been enthusiastic about radial-engined fighters, and is reported planning to build its long-range program around liquid-cooled, in-line engines.

Last January an order to cut production of Thunderbolts was issued, but promptly withdrawn. In the European theater the heavy pursuit is reported to have a victory ration of nearly 10 to 1 in combat with Focke-Wulf 190's.

The top speed of the P-47 is in excess of that of the P-51 Mustang, which recently set a cross-country record of 6 hours 31½ minutes. However, it is generally understood that the army feels the Mustang is better adapted to service in the Pacific theater, and that long-range plans naturally are built around the expected concentration of the war in that area.

WASP Course Abandoned

Washington, June 27 (AP)—Abandonment of the Women's Air Service Pilot training program has been announced by the army, effective as soon as student flyers now in schools complete their courses.

The WASP now has 721 women pilots on active ferrying duty. Those now in training will boost the number to 1,019 by next September.

Gen. H. H. Arnold, commander of the Army Air Forces, said the rejection by the House last week of a measure to give WASP members the rating of commissioned officers in the army prompted the decision to discontinue the program.

The WASP was organized June 28, 1943. Jacqueline Cochran, director of women pilots for the army, is head of the WASP.

NAVY HONORS DEAD HERO

Marine Sergeant Saved Comrades by Falling on a Grenade

WASHINGTON, June 27 (AP)—To Marine Sergeant Herbert J. Thomas, who threw himself on a grenade to save the lives of his squad in the jungle fighting on Bougainville, has been awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor posthumously, the Navy said today.

The 25-year-old sergeant, son of Herbert Thomas of South Charleston, W. Va., was leading his squad against a Japanese emplacement. He hurled a grenade but it struck dense jungle vines and fell back into the squad.

Sergeant Thomas deliberately flung himself upon it to smother the explosion, valiantly sacrificing his life for his comrades," the citation said. "Inspired by his selfless action, his men unhesitatingly charged the enemy machine gun and, with fierce determination, killed the crew and several other near-by defenders."

Attorney For Defense In Sedition Trial Fined

Washington, June 27 (AP)—A defense attorney at the mass sedition trial of 29 persons was fined $200 by the presiding judge today for assertedly prolonging a cross-examination beyond reasonable limits.

Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher in U. S. District Court, fined the attorney, Henry H. Klein after several times ordering him to proceed with his questioning of a witness for the Government. Klein earlier in the trial was fined $200 for arguing with the court.

The witness, Roy P. Arnold, of Los Angeles, testified about an alleged plan of the German-American Bund to seibe control of the Government. Arnold quoted Hans Diebel, one of the defendants, as stating that a farmers' strike in the New York city area was to be the signal for the start of a bund "putsch" to take over the Government.

HERSHEY JOINS MARINES

WASHINGTON, June 27 — (AP) Gilbert R. Hershey, 22-year-old son of Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, selective service director, and a former West Point cadet, was sworn in today as a private in the Marines and sent to Parris Island, S. C., for boot training.

APPROPRIATION BILL SIGNED BY PRESIDENT

JUN 27 1944

WASHINGTON, June 27—(AP) President Roosevelt signed today an appropriation bill providing $8,485,099,785 for operation during the coming fiscal year of various federal offices, including his own.

The measure, known as the independent offices appropriation bill, contains an amendment specifying that the Tennessee Valley authority must make periodic reports to Congress on its activities. This was a compromise proposal accepted after rejection by the House of two controversial amendments by Senator McKeller (D-Tenn.). One would have required TVA to depend on Congress for operating funds rather than use its own revenues. The other would have required Senate approval of all employes paid more than $4,500 yearly.

TVA, Federal Communications commission, the Interstate Commerce commission, the National Housing agency and the Civil Service commission are among the agencies allocated funds by the bill. The total appropriation is $5,863,732,906 higher than last year for the same purposes.

WARREN REFUSES SECOND PLACE ON REPUBLICAN TICKET

30.24— 16611

California Governor Says He Cannot Evade Commitments to Home State

JUN 27 1944

DRAFT MOVE STARTED

Platform Adopted Snubbing Willkie on Foreign Policy Stand.

CHICAGO STADIUM, June 27—(AP) The Republican convention accepted tonight a platform which snubbed the ideas of its 1940 standard bearer, Wendell L. Willkie, and then heard its last President, Herbert Hoover, declare that only by a change in the White House can freedom be assured.

A few minutes before Hoover began his address, Governor Earl Warren of California declared firmly that he "could not accept a nomination" for vice president on the 1944 ticket.

Warren said his statement was as final "as I know how to make it."

Dewey to Decide

But on the convention floor, many delegates awaited to learn the preferences of Governor Thomas E. Dewey of New York, for a running mate. Dewey, with more than the necessary votes in his pocket, may arrive in Chicago tomorrow.

Representative Clare Boothe Luce, of Connecticut, followed Hoover on tonight's convention program. She declared that the incumbent Administration might have averted war by "skillful and determined American statesmanship."

Warren had spurned the idea of a second place draft in a letter to the Oregon delegation. The far westerners had joined the Pennsylvania representatives at the convention in asking him to accept it.

He said in a letter to the chairman of the Oregon group:

"Any good citizen should be willing to accept such a responsibility, unless prevented from so doing by compelling obligations inconsistent therewith. And, you may be sure that I would be happy to accept your offer if I were a free agent in that regard. However, I have made certain commitments and assumed certain obligations to the people of my state which are not yet fulfilled. x x x

"It, therefore, becomes my duty to request you not to place my name in nomination or to cast your ballots for me because I could not accept a nomination for a place on the national ticket if it were offered."

Warren has insisted all along that he did not desire a place on the national ticket, but sentiment for him in the convention has been so strong that he had been regarded from the opening day as the leading possibility.

Bricker Mentioned

Others who have been mentioned include Governor John W. Bricker of Ohio, Representative Dirksen of Illinois, Governor Dwight Griswold of Nebraska, and William Hutcheson, vice president of the American Federation of Labor.

Eric Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, also has figured in talk.

With Warren apparently adamant that he could not take the post, speculation moved back to these.

Dewey is reported to have wanted Warren and there is still the possibility he might prevail upon the Californian to accept a draft.

Warren's decision was announced after a caucus of the California delegation.

Even as the Californians began gathering, however, the drive to persuade Warren to accept second place on a ticket with Gov. Dewey, if offered, proceeded apace.

Pennsylvania caucused and reported a unanimous vote to urge that Warren say he will accept. The group promised support of its mighty delegation if he does.

Other states were ready to follow this lead.

Warren's decision was announced soon after the convention, swiftly ratifying a platform on which it hopes to regain the presidency, delivered a snub to Willkie which may assume significant proportions.

Opposition Fades

The foreign policy plank had offered the only possible issue capable of producing a rousing floor scrap. But it was evident that opposition had fizzled before Chairman Robert A. Taft of the drafting committee stepped forward under the stadium's brilliant floodlights to read the document.

On the foreign policy, the Republicans declare for a "post-war cooperative organization among sovereign nations to prevent military aggression and to attain permanent peace with organized justice in a free world." The party proposes that "peace forces" be used to "prevent or repel military aggression."

"We pledge prosecution of the war to total victory x x x," the platform says.

"We declare our relentless aim to win the war against all our enemies: (1) for our own American security and welfare; (2) to make and keep the Axis powers impotent to renew tyranny and attack; (3) for the attainment of peace and freedom based on justice and security."

Willkie, the dark horse Republican candidate of four years ago, had assailed the plank as an ineffective means of stamping out aggression. Fifteen Republican governors had called it too involved.

But only Willkie knew whether adoption of the plank over his objection would mean he might bolt his adopted party and thereby possibly weaken its chances to climb back to the political pinnacles.

Perhaps with a view to placating him, both Taft and Senator Austin, platform committee member, said the foreign plank meant "military forces" should be used to halt aggression.

Gov. Edge Placated

Whether that satisfied Willkie was not known immediately. But it placated at least one governor. Walter E. Edge of New Jersey, who had termed the foreign policy plank weasel-worded, voiced faith in these assurances and thought nothing would be gained by a floor fight.

Austin himself said the foreign policy statement was not all he desired. The senator, whose views are similar to Willkie's said he did not believe the latter would bolt.

"I sincerely believe," he said, "that Wendell Willkie will lend strong support to this policy of the Republican party relative to peace and war."

Nailed into the platform was a strongly phrased labor plank which condemned "the freezing of wage rates at arbitrary levels and the binding of men to their jobs as destructive to the advancement of a free people."

Along with the platform and the growing intensity of efforts to settle the vice-presidential situation, there was a speech in which Representative Joseph W. Martin of Massachusetts, convention chairman, pronounced the Republican party ready "to keep American citizens from being chained like vassals to a New Deal bureaucratic machine."

Despite stifling heat, the delegates' seats and gallery spaces were well filled when Martin called the night session to order at 8:30 p.m. After singing "The Star Spangled Banner," an invocation was offered by Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver of the Temple, Cleveland.

Martin announced receipt of a telegram by J. C. Dolan of Flagstaff, Ariz., reporting that Dolan's home county was the first to go over the top in the current war bond drive.

A bond sales plea was made by Gov. Bourke B. Hickenlooper of Iowa. He won an ovation when he declared the Republican party would win in November and accept responsibility for "the complete defeat of our enemy and the speedy return of our sons and daughters" from war.

Danaher Escorts Mrs. Luce

Hoover was escorted to the speaker's platform by a committee that included Governors Hickenlooper and Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts. Another committee, including Senator John A. Danaher of Connecticut later escorted Mrs. Luce to the platform.

Hoover won a thunderous ovation as he walked to the platform to the accompaniment of "California, Here I Come."

Convention business was rolling along about on schedule, except for a delay this afternoon in completing the entire platform and submitting it to the delegates for ratification.

Getting rid of routine in order to clear the way for action on the platform—and the balloting tomorrow on candidates—the convention approved reports of its credentials committee, adopted some changes recommended by the rules committee, and elected Martin permanent chairman.

JUN 27

Chicago, June 27 (AP)—The following is the text of the Republican platform, as adopted unanimously by the convention today:

The tragedy of wars is upon our people. We take this opportunity to render homage and enduring gratitude to those brave members of our armed forces who have already made the supreme sacrifice, and to those who stand ready to make the same sacrifice that the American course of life may be secure. Mindful of the solemn hours and humbly conscious of our heavy responsibilities, the Republican party in convention assembled presents herewith its principles and makes these covenants with the people of our nation.

The War And The Peace

We pledge prosecution of the war to total victory against our enemies in full cooperation with the United Nations and all-out support of our armies and the maintenance of our navy under the competent and trained direction of our general staff and office of naval operations without civilian interference and with every civilian resource.

At the earliest possible time after the cessation of hostilities we will bring home all members of our armed forces who do not have unexpired enlistments and who do not volunteer for further overseas duty.

We declare our relentless aim to win the war against all our enemies: (1) For our own American security and welfare; (2) to make and keep the Axis powers impotent to renew tyranny and attack; (3) for the attainment of peace and freedom based on justice and security.

International Cooperation

We shall seek to achieve such aims through organized international cooperation and not by joining a world state.

We favor responsible participation by the United States in postwar cooperative organization among sovereign nations to prevent military aggression and to attain permanent peace with organized justice in a free world.

Such organization should develop effective cooperative means to direct peace forces to prevent or repel military aggression. Pending this, we pledge continuing collaboration with the United Nations to assure these ultimate objectives.

We believe, however, that peace and security do not depend upon the sanction of force alone, but should prevail by virtue of reciprocal interests and spiritual values recognized in these security agreements.

Treaties Of Peace

The treaties of peace should be just; the nations which are the victims of aggression should be restored to sovereignty and self-government; and the organized cooperation of the nations should concern itself with basic causes of world disorder. It should promote a world opinion to influence the nations to right conduct, develop international law and maintain an international tribunal to deal with justiciable disputes.

We shall seek, in our relations with other nations, conditions calculated to promote world-wide economic stability, not only for the sake of the world, but also to the end that our own people may enjoy a high level of employment in an increasingly prosperous world.

We shall keep the American people informed concerning all agreements with foreign nations. In all of these undertakings we favor the widest consultations of the gallant men and women in our armed forces who have a special right to speak with authority in behalf of the security and liberty for which they fight.

The Constitution

We shall sustain the Constitution of the United States in the attainment of our international aims; and pursuant to the Constitution of the United States and treaty or agreement to attain such aims made on behalf of the United States with any other nation or any association of nations, shall be made only by and with the advice and consent of the Senate of the United States provided two thirds of the Senators present concur.

We shall at all times protect the essential interests and resources of the United States.

Western Hemisphere Relations

We shall develop Pan-American solidarity. The citizens of our neighboring nations in the Western Hemisphere are, like ourselves, Americans. Cooperation with them shall be achieved through mutual agreement and without interference in the internal affairs of any nation. Our policy should be a genuine good-neighbor policy commanding their respect, and not one based on the reckless squandering of American funds by overlapping agencies.

Post-War Preparedness

We favor the maintenance of post-war military forces and establishments of ample strength for the successful defense and the safety of the United States, its possessions and outposts, for the maintenance of the Monroe Doctrine, and for meeting any military commitments determined by Congress.

We favor the peacetime maintenance and strengthening of the national guards under State control with Federal training and equipment as now provided in the National Defense Act.

Domestic Policy

We shall devote ourselves to reestablishing liberty at home.

We shall adopt a program to put men to work in peace industry as promptly as possible and with special attention to those who have made sacrifice by serving in the armed forces. We shall take Government out of competition with private industry and terminate rationing, price fixing and all other emergency powers. We shall promote the fullest stable employment through private enterprise.

The measures we propose shall avoid federalization of Government activities, to the end that our States, schools and cities shall be free; shall avoid delegation of legislative and judicial power to administrative agencies, to the end that the people's representatives in Congress shall be independent and in full control of legislative policy; and shall avoid, subject to war necessities, detailed regulation of farmers, workers, businessmen and consumers, to the end that the individual shall be free.

Based On Cooperation

The remedies we propose shall be based on intelligent cooperation between the Federal Government, the States and local government and the initiative of civic groups, not on the panacea of Federal cash.

Four years more of New Deal policy would centralize all power in the President, and would daily subject every act of every citizen to regulation by his henchmen; and this country could remain a republic only in name. No problem exists which cannot be solved by American methods. We have no need of either the Communistic or the Fascist technique.

Security

JUN 27

Our goal is to prevent hardship and poverty in America. That goal is attainable by reason of the productive ability of free American labor, industry and agriculture, if supplemented by a system of social security on sound principles.

We pledge our support of the following:

1. Extension of the existing old-age insurance and unemployment insurance systems to all employes not already covered.

2. The return of the public employment-office system to the States at the earliest possible time, financed as before Pearl Harbor.

3. A careful study of Federal-State programs for maternal and child health, dependent children, and assistance to the blind, with a view to strengthening these programs.

4. The continuation of these and other programs relating to health, and the stimulation by Federal aid of State plans to make medical and hospital service available to those in need without disturbing doctor-patient relationship or socializing medicine.

5. The stimulation of State and local plans to provide decent low-cost housing properly financed by the Federal Housing Administration, or otherwise, when such housing cannot be supplied or financed by private sources.

Labor

The Republican party is the historical champion of free labor. Under Republican administrations American manufacturing developed, and American workers attained the most progressive standards of living of any workers in the wor'd. Now the nation owes those workers a debt of gratitude for their magnificent productive effort in support of the war.

Regardless of the professed friendship of the New Deal for the workingman, the fact remains that under the New Deal American economic life is being destroyed.

The New Deal has usurped selfish and partisan control over the functions of Government agencies where labor relationships are concerned. The continued perversion of the Wagner Act by the New Deal menaces the purposes of the law and threatens to destroy collective bargaining completely and permanently.

Executive Orders Hit

The long series of executive orders and bureaucratic decrees reveal a deliberate purpose to substitute for contractual agreements of employers and employes the political edicts of a New Deal bureaucracy. Labor would thus remain organized only for the convenience of the New Deal in enforcing its orders and inflicting its whims upon labor and industry.

We condemn the conversion of administrative boards, ostensibly set up to settle industrial disputes, into instruments for putting into effect the financial and economic theories of the New Deal.

We condemn the freezing of wage rates at arbitrary levels and the binding of men to their jobs as destructive to the advancement of a free people. We condemn the repeal by executive order of the laws secured by the Republican party to abolish "contract labor" and peonage. We condemn the gradual but effective creation of a labor front as but one of the New Deal's steps toward a totalitarian state.

Equal Benefits Pledged

We pledge an end to political trickery in the administration of labor laws and the handling of labor disputes; and equal benefits on the basis of equality to all labor in the administration of labor controls and laws, regardless of political affiliation.

The Department of Labor has been emasculated by the New Deal. Labor bureaus, agencies and committees are scattered far and wide, in Washington and throughout the country, and have no semblance of systematic or responsible organization. All governmental labor activities must be placed under the direct authority and responsibility of the Secretary of Labor. Such labor bureaus as are not performing a substantial and definite service in the interest of labor must be abolished.

The Secretary of Labor should be a representative of labor. The office of the Secretary of Labor was created under a Republican President, William Howard Taft. It was intended that a representative of labor should occupy this Cabinet office. The present Administration is the first to disregard this intention.

Labor Relations Act

The Republican party accepts the purposes of the National Labor Relations Act, the Wage and Hour Act, the Social Security Act and all other Federal statutes designed to promote and protect the welfare of American working men and women, and we promise a fair and just administration of these laws.

American well-being is indivisible. Any national program which injures the national economy inevitably injures the wage earner. The American labor movement and the Republican party, while continuously striving for the betterment of labor's status, reject the Communistic and New Deal concept that a single group can benefit while the general economy suffers.

JUN 27 1944

Agriculture

We salute the American farmers, their wives and families for their magnificent job of wartime production and their contribution to the war effort, without which victory could not be assured. They have accomplished this in spite of labor shortages, a bungled and inexcusable machinery program and confused, unreliable, impractical price and production administration.

Abundant production is the best security against inflation. Governmental policies in war and in peace must be practical and efficient with freedom from regimentation by an impractical Washington bureaucracy in order to assure independence of operation and bountiful production, fair and equitable market prices for farm products, and a sound program for conservation and use of our soil and natural resources. Educational progress and the social and economic stability and well-being of the farm family must be a prime national purpose.

For the establishment of such a program we propose the following:

1. A Department of Agriculture under practical and experienced administration free from regimentation and confusing Government manipulation and control of farm programs.

2. An American market price to the American farmer and protection of such price by means of support prices, commodity loans, or a combination thereof, together with such other economic means as will assure an income to agriculture that is fair and equitable in comparison with labor, business and industry. We oppose subsidies as a substitute for fair markets.

3. Disposition of surplus war commodities in an orderly manner without destroying markets or continued production and without benefit to speculative profiteers.

4. The control and disposition of future surpluses by means of (a) new uses developed through constant research; (b) vigorous development of foreign markets; (c) efficient domestic distribution to meet all domestic requirements, and (d) arrangements which will enable farmers to make necessary adjustments in production of any given basic crop only if domestic surpluses should become abnormal and exceed manageable proportions.

5. Intensified research to discover new crops, and new and profitable uses for existing crops.

6. Support of the principle of bona fide farmer-owned and farmer-operated cooperatives.

7. Consolidation of all Government farm credit under a nonpartisan board.

8. To make life more attractive on the family-type farm through development of rural roads, sound extension of rural electrification service to the farm and elimination of basic evils of tenancy wherever they exist.

9. Serious study of and search for a sound program of crop insurance with empasis upon establishing a self-supporting program.

10. A comprehensive program of soil, forest, water and wildlife conservation and development, and sound irrigation projects, administered as far as possible at State and regional levels.

Business and Industry

We give assurance now to restore peacetime industry at the earliest possible time, using every care to avoid discrimination between different sections of the country, (a) by prompt settlement of war contracts with early payment of Government obligations and disposal of surplus inventories, and (b) by disposal of surplus Government plants, equipment and supplies, with due consideration to small buyers and with care to prevent monopoly and injury to existing agriculture and industry.

Small business is the basis of American enterprise. It must be preserved. If protected against discrimination and afforded equality of opportunity throughout the nation, it will become the most potent factor in providing employment. It must also be aided by changes in taxation, by eliminating excessive and repressive regulation and Government competition, by the enforcement of laws against monopoly and unfair competition, and by providing simpler and cheaper methods for obtaining venture capital necessary for growth and expansion.

For the protection of the public, and for the security of millions of holders of policies of insurance in mutual and private companies, we insist upon strict and exclusive regulation and supervision of the business of insurance by the several States where local conditions are best known and where local needs can best be met.

The Merchant Marine

We favor the reestablishment and maintenance, as early as military considerations will permit, of a sound and adequate American merchant marine under private ownership and management.

The Republican party pledges itself to foster the development of such strong privately owned air transportation systems and communications systems as will best serve the interests of the American people.

The Federal Government should plan a program for flood control, inland waterways and other economically justifiable public works, and prepare the necessary plans in advance so that construction may proceed rapidly in emergency and in times of reduced employment. We urge that States and local governments pursue the same policy with reference to highways and other public works within their jurisdiction.

Taxation and Finance

JUN 27 1944

As soon as the war ends the present rates of taxation on individual incomes, on corporations, and on consumption should be reduced as far as is consistent with the payment of the normal expenditures of government in the post-war period. We reject the theory of restoring prosperity through Government spending and deficit financing.

We shall eliminate from the budget all wasteful and unnecessary expenditures and exercise the most rigid economy.

It is essential that Federal and State tax structures be more effectively coordinated to the end that State tax sources be not unduly impaired.

We shall maintain the value of the American dollar and regard the payment of Government debt as an obligation of honor which prohibits any policy leading to the depreciation of the currency. We shall reduce that debt as soon as economic conditions make such reduction possible.

Control of the currency must be restored to Congress by repeal of existing legislation which gives the President unnecessary and dangerous powers over our currency.

Foreign Trade

We assure American farmers, live-stock producers, workers and industry that we will establish and maintain a fair protective tariff on competitive products so that the standards of living of our people shall not be impared through the importation of commodities produced abroad by labor or producers functioning upon lower standards than our own.

If the post-war world is to be properly organized, a great extension of world trade will be necessary to repair the wastes of war and build an enduring peace. The Republican party, always remembering that its primary obligation which must be fulfilled, is to our own workers, our own farmers and our own industry, pledges that it will join with others in leadership in every cooperative effort to remove unnecessary and destructive barriers to international trade. We will always bear in mind that the domestic market is America's greatest market and that tariffs which protect it against foreign competition should be modified only by reciprocal bilateral trade agreements approved by Congress.

Relief and Rehabilitation

We favor the prompt extension of relief and emergency assistance to the peoples of the liberated countries without duplication and conflict between Government agencies.

We favor immediate feeding of the starving children of our Allies and friends in the Nazi-dominated countries and we condemn the New Deal administration for its failure, in the face of humanitarian demands, to make any effort to do this.

We favor assistance by direct credits in reasonable amounts to liberated countries to enable them to buy from this country the goods necessary to revive their economic systems.

Bureaucracy

The national Administration has become a sprawling, overlapping bureaucracy. It is undermined by executive abuse of power, confused lines of authority, duplication of effort, inadequate fiscal controls, loose personnel practices and an attitude of arrogance previously unknown in our history.

The times cry out for the restoration of harmony in government, for a balance of legislative and executive responsibility, for efficiency and economy, for pruning and abolishing unnecessary agencies and personnel, for effective fiscal and personnel controls, and for an entirely new spirit in our Federal Government.

We pledge an administration wherein the President, acting in harmony with Congress, will effect these necessary reforms and raise the Federal service to a high level of efficiency and competence.

We insist that limitations must be placed upon spending by Government corporations of vast sums never appropriated by Congress, but made available by directives, and that their accounts should be subject to audit by the General Accounting Office.

Two-Term Limit For President

We favor an amendment to the Constitution providing that no person shall be President of the United States for more than two terms of four years each.

Equal Rights

We favor submission by Congress to the States of an amendment to the Constitution providing for equal rights for men and women. We favor job opportunities in the post-war world open to men and women alike without discrimination in rate of pay because of sex.

Veterans

The Republican party has always supported suitable measures to reflect the nation's gratitude and to discharge its duty toward the veterans of all wars.

We approve, have supported and have aided in the enactment of laws which provide for reemployment of veterans of this war in their old positions, for mustering-out pay, for pensions for widows and orphans of such veterans killed or disabled, for rehabilitation of disabled veterans, for temporary unemployment benefits, for education and vocational training, and for assisting veterans in acquiring homes and farms and in establishing themselves in business.

We shall be diligent in remedying defects in veterans' legislation and shall insist upon efficient administration of all measures for the veterans' benefit.

Racial and Religious Intolerance

We unreservedly condemn the injection into American life of appeals to racial or religious prejudice.

We pledge an immediate Congressional inquiry to ascertain the extent to which mistreatment, segregation and discrimination against Negroes who are in our armed forces are impairing morale and efficiency, and the adoption of corrective legislation.

We pledge the establishment by Federal legislation of a permanent Fair Employment Practice Commission.

Anti-Poll Tax

The payment of any poll tax should not be a condition of voting in Federal elections and we favor immediate submission of a Constitutional amendment for its abolition.

Anti-Lynching

We favor legislation against lynching and pledge our sincere efforts in behalf of its early enactment.

Indians

We pledge an immediate, just and final settlement of all Indian claims between the Government and the Indian citizenship of the nation. We will take politics out of the administration of Indian affairs.

Problems Of The West

We favor a comprehensive program of reclamation projects for our arid and semi-arid States, with recognition and full protection of the rights and interests of those States in the use and control of water for present and future irrigation and other beneficial consumptive uses.

We favor:

(a) Exclusion from this country of live stock and fresh chilled meat from countries harboring foot and mouth disease or rinderpest.

JUN 27 1944

(b) Full protection of our fisheries whether by domestic regulation or treaties.

(c) Consistent with military needs, the prompt return to private ownership of lands acquired for war purposes.

(d) Withdrawal or acquisition of lands for establishment of national parks, monuments and wildlife refuges, only after due regard to local problems and under closer controls to be established by the Congress.

(e) Restoration of the long-established public land policy which provides opportunity of ownership by citizens to promote the highest land use.

(f) Full development of our forests on the basis of cropping and sustained yield; cooperation with private owners for conservation and fire protection.

(g) The prompt reopening of mines which can be operated by miners and workers not subject to military service and which have been closed by bureaucratic denial of labor or material.

(h) Adequate stockpiling of war minerals and metals for possible future emergencies.

(i) Continuance, for tax purposes, of adequate depletion allowances on oil, gas and minerals.

(j) Administration of laws relating to oil and gas on the public domain to encourage exploratory operations to meet the public need.

(k) Continuance of present Federal laws on mining claims on the public domain, good-faith administration thereof, and we state our opposition to the plans of the Secretary of the Interior to substitute a leasing system.

(l) Larger representation in the Federal Government of men and women especially familiar with Western problems.

Hawaii

Hawaii, which shares the nation's obligations equally with the several States, is entitled to the fullest measure of home rule looking toward statehood; and to equality with the several States in the rights of their citizens and in the application of all our national laws.

Alaska

Alaska is entitled to the fullest measure of home rule looking toward statehood.

Puerto Rico

Statehood is a logical aspiration of the people of Puerto Rico who were made citizens of the United

30.24— 16613

States by Congress in 1917; legislation affecting Puerto Rico, in so far as feasible, should be in harmony with the realization of that aspiration.

PALESTINE

In order to give refuge to millions of distressed Jewish men, women and children driven from their homes by tyranny, we call for the opening of Palestine to their unrestricted immigration and land ownership, so that in accordance with the full intent and purpose of the Balfour Declaration of 1917 and the resolution of a Republican Congress in 1922, Palestine may be constituted as a free and democratic commonwealth. We condemn the failure of the President to insist that the mandatory of Palestine carry out the provision of the Balfour Declaration and of the mandate while he pretends to support them.

FREE PRESS AND RADIO

In times like these, when whole peoples have found themselves shackled by governments which denied the truth, or, worse, dealt in half-truths or withheld the facts from the public, it is imperative to the maintenance of a free America that the press and radio be free and that full and complete information be available to Americans. There must be no censorship except to the extent required by war necessity.

We insistently condemn any tendency to regard the press or the radio as instruments of the Administration and the use of Government publicity agencies for partisan ends. We need a new radio law which will define, in clear and unmistakable language, the role of the Federal Communications Commission.

All channels of news must be kept open with equality of access to information at the source. If agreement can be achieved with foreign nations to establish the same principles, it will be a valuable contribution to future peace.

Vital facts must not be withheld.

We want no more Pearl Harbor reports.

The acceptance of the nominations made by this convention carries with it, as a matter of private honor and public faith, an undertaking by each candidate to be true to the principles and program herein set forth.

CONCLUSION

The essential question at trial in this nation is whether men can organize together in a highly industrialized society, succeed, and still be free. That is the essential question at trial throughout the world today.

In this time of confusion and strife, when moral values are being crushed on every side, we pledge ourselves to uphold with all our strength the Bill of Rights, the Constitution and the law of the land. We so pledge ourselves that the American tradition may stand forever as the beacon light of civilization.

HOOVER ASSAILS NEW DEAL REGIME

JUN 27 19

Charges Roosevelt Administration Used Tactics of European Revolution.

CHICAGO, June 27—(AP) Herbert Hoover, asserting that the New Deal in milder form has followed tactics of European revolutions, told the Republican convention tonight that "only by a change in administration will our returning soldiers find freedom preserved at home."

He also declared that President Roosevelt apparently was engaging in "power politics" and "personal power diplomacy" in foreign affairs. This, he asserted, is "not the diplomacy of freedom."

New Generation Takes Lead

"This convention is handing the leadership of the Republican party to a new generation," the former President and party elder statesman said, and addressed these words particularly to the "younger men":

"You in your own manner can lead our people away from the jungle of disorderly, cynical and bitter ideas, the topsy-turvy confusions, the hopelessness and lack of faith and defeatism that have haunted this nation over these dozen years.

"You can lead our nation back to unity of purpose again."

In general, Mr. Hoover's theme was that this war is being fought for freedom and it will not be attained at home or in the world if there is a continuation of the Roosevelt Administration's domestic and foreign policies.

He made these principal points:

1. "Any compromise with Hitler or Tojo will destroy all hope of either freedom or a lasting peace."

2. The young people in the armed services want, most of all, freedom when they return from the war—"they want to be free to choose ther own jobs and not be ordered to them by a bureaucrat."

New Deal Curbs Freedom

3. Under the New Deal, there has been a progressive degeneration of freedom in America.

"Has not every distress, every sorrow, every fear of the people been used to further fasten some part of these totalitarian practices upon us?" he asked.

4. Freedom can be regenerated in this country but it means the "hard task" of actions to "build self-reliance, stimulate initiative, and thereby create men and women of energy, of dignity and of independence."

"The easiest task of government," he said, "is to suppress individuals, subject them to bureaucracy and subsidize them to lean on government—or a political party. If a government has enough power, it can always do that."

5. "We are faced already with the gigantic problems of making a peace where freedom can live."

Developing that last point at length, Mr. Hoover said it is obvious that nationalism is on the rise and that "ideas of world supergovernment, no matter how idealistic, are already dead from these cold blasts of realism."

"Peace must be based upon cooperation between independent sovereign nations," he said.

World Organization Needed

It is also obvious, he declared, that there must be "some sort of world organization to preserve peace."

If the general assembly of this organization is not to be "a mere debating society," Mr. Hoover continued, "it should be split into three divisions—one for Europe, one for Asia and one for the western hemisphere.

"And each region should be given the primary responsibility for peace in its area before the central council is called upon. Especially should that responsibility be imposed on Europe where the dangers of world wars come from."

Mr. Hoover said President Roosevelt's peace methods, according to published reports, are termed the "great design" by the President. He remarked that a peace plan under the same name was proposed by Henry, the Fourth, a French monarch, some 350 years ago and "it has similarities to Mr. Roosevelt's idea."

"So far as these published descriptions go," Mr. Hoover said of President Roosevelt's reported views, "this method is power politics and balance-of-power diplomacy.

"That is not the diplomacy of freedom. And worse still apparently the United States is to furnish the balance between Britain and Russia. If that be the case you may be sure that we will sooner or later gain the enmity of both of them.

"The basis of lasting peace for America must be friendship of nations not brokerage of power politics.

"America needs a change in administration to get out of personal power diplomacy."

Martin Pledges GOP To Keep Faith

JUN 27 19

Chicago, June 27 (AP)—The Republican National Convention received with lusty cheers today a declaration from Representative Joseph W. Martin, taking over as permanent chairman, that the party is being called on to "save the country for our American way of life."

Martin, minority leader of the House, pledged that the Republicans will be "true to our obligations to other nations and true to our own people."

"We will aid other nations to achieve security and rehabilitate themselves," he said, adding:

"We can and will do it without lowering our own standards of living or sacrificing our own independence."

Gets Loud Ovation

The Massachusetts Representative who in other conventions has been suggested as a candidate for the Presidency strode to teh platform to take over the gavel from Gov. Earl Warren of California, the temporary chairman, amid a loud ovation.

He was escorted from his seat among the Massachusetts delegates by Gov. Walter Edge of New Jersey; Alf Landon, former Presidential nominee, and Mrs. Louis M. Williams, of Taunton, Mass.

Gov. Leverett Saltonstall and the balance of the Massachusetts delegation cheered while Martin mounted the klieg-lighted rostrum.

Calls It Excellent

Saltonstall summed up general opinion of party workers when he described the Martin speech as "excellent," as one "which every American can indorse."

Martin, speaking with great enthusiasm, swung his arm and shouted that the "call" was to "save the country for our American way of life!"

"There can be no question as to the position of the American people," he said.

"We will keep faith with the fighting forces 'over there' and their loved ones at home. We will save Constitutional Government at home and, on the firm foundation of freedom and individual opportunity, we will build an enduring peace.

Says U. S. Will Be True

"As a solvent, sound, forward looking nation, we will be true to our obligations to other nations, and we will be equally true to our own people. We will aid other nations to achieve security and rehabilitate themselves.

"We never shrink from duty nor have we ever fail to aid afflicted people everywhere in the world. We can and will do it without lowering our own standards of living or sacrificing our own independence."

The Congressional leader was loudly cheered when he said "the Democratic party has been captured by a minority whose philosophy it despises," and "has become a prisoner of the New Deal."

"Thank God some of its leaders realize this and have had the courage to revolt," said Martin. "This election, curiously, is not merely a fight to put the Republicans into office but by a strange twist of fate it is also a fight to emancipate the Democrats."

G.O.P. Accuses New Deal Of Harming Free Labor

JUN 27 1944

CHICAGO, June 27 — (AP) In sizzling language, the Republican labor plank accused the New Deal tonight of attempting to destroy collective bargaining and substitute a totalitarian labor front.

Lauding the Republican party as "the historical champion of free labor," the plank set down such charges against the Roosevelt Administration as these: "Perversion" of the Wagner act, "political trickery" in the administration of labor laws, conversion of administrative boards into instruments for effectuating New Deal financial and economic theories, emasculation of the Department of Labor, freezing of wage rates at arbitrary levels.

Among the pledges were these: A secretary of labor "representative of labor," fair administration of the Wagner, wage and hour, social security, and other acts designed for the welfare of labor, and equal benefits to all labor "regardless of political affiliation."

Hutcheson Heads Sub-Committee

Heading the labor sub-committee on platform drafting was William L. Hutcheson, vice president of the A.F.L. and president of the Carpenters' union. The plank reflected not only his views but those of John L. Lewis, United Mine Workers' president, whose personal emissaries delivered Lewis' representations and were in constant contact with the sub-committee. Hutcheson and Lewis are old political friends, although they quarreled violently over labor issues nine years ago.

The plank made no reference to the Connally-Smith labor disputes act, repeal of which was urged before the committee by A.F.L. President William Green. Nor did it specifically mention Green's proposed amendment of the Wagner act to provide stronger safeguards for craft unions. Another Green proposal, endorsement of the Wagner-Murray-Dingell social security bill, was omitted, as was the annual wage proposal of the C.I.O.

Coordination of scattered labor agencies under the Department of Labor, however, was a principal A.F.L. demand.

Aimed at All Labor

The plank was aimed at all labor. Nowhere did it use the term "organized labor."

Praising workers for their "magnificent productive effort," the plank added: "Regardless of the professed friendship of the New Deal for the workingman, the fact remains that under the New Deal American economic life is being destroyed."

Executive orders, said the plank, "reveal a deliberate purpose to substitute for contractual agreements of employers and employees the political edicts of a New Deal bureaucracy. x x x

"We condemn the repeal by executive order of the laws secured by the Republican party to abolish 'contract labor' and peonage. We condemn the gradual but effective creation of a labor front as but one of the New Deal's steps toward a totalitarian state."

In a farm plank pledging abundant production of food and fiber crops, the platform endorsed the principle of crop control as a "last resort" for dealing with any future "unmanageable" surpluses.

The party promised to restore peace-time industry at the earliest possible moment. Small business, described as the basis of American enterprise, was told it would be protected against discrimination. It also was promised aid through changes in taxation and elimination of "excessive and repressive regulation and government competition."

Pledges Tax Reductions

The platform pledged, to individuals and corporations, post-war tax reductions "consistent with the payment of the normal expenditures of government in the post-war period."

"We reject," the document asserted, "the theory of restoring prosperity through government spending and deficit financing."

The party promised a "fair protective tariff on competitive products" to preserve domestic standards of living, but it offered the post-war world cooperation in removing "unnecessary and destructive" barriers to international trade.

Another plank called for a constitutional amendment providing that no person shall be President for more than two terms of four years each.

The party asked for the immediate submission of a constitutional amendment abolishing the poll tax as a condition of voting in Federal elections.

In sharply critical language, the platform charged that the present Administration is becoming a "sprawling, overlapping bureaucracy" x x x "undermined by executive abuse of power, confused lines of authority, duplication of effort, inadequate fiscal controls, loose personnel practices and an attitude of arrogance previously unknown in our history."

oday in a plank which was praised by aides of John L. Lewis but which AFL President William Green termed "disappointing."

The plank was quickly indorsed by K. C. Adams, editor of the United Mine Workers' Journal and frequent spokesman for Lewis, as "the best platform the Republican party has ever offered labor."

Green said in a statement commenting on the plank that "instead of being simple and direct, the language is general in character and susceptible of varied interpretaions. It denies labor's request for the repeal of the notorious Connally-Smith (Labor Disputes) Act. The Republican party has missed a great opportunity."

Accuses New Deal

The labor plank accused the New Deal of attempting to destroy collective bargaining and substitute a totalitarian labor front.

Lauding the Republican party as "the historical champion of free labor," the plank set down such charges against the Roosevelt Administration as these: "Perversion" of the Wagner Act, "political trickery" in the administration of labor laws, conversion of administrative boards into instruments for effectuating New Deal financial and economic theories, emasculation of the Department of Labor, freezing of wage rates at arbitrary levels.

Pledges New Secretary

Among the pledges were these: A Secretary of Labor "representative of labor," fair administration of the Wagner, wage and hour, social security, and other acts designed for the welfare of labor, and equal benefits to all labor "regardless of political affiliation."

Heading the labor subcommittee on platform drafting was William L. Hutcheson, vice-president of the AFL and president of the Carpenters' Union. The plank reflected not only his views but those of John L. Lewis, United Mine Workers' president, whose personal emissaries delivered Lewis' representations and were in constant contact with the subcommittee. Hutcheson and Lewis are old political friends, although they quarreled violently over labor issues nine years ago.

Besides making no reference to the Connally-Smith Act, it did not specifically mention Green's proposed amendment of the Wagner Act to provide stronger safeguards for craft unions. Another Green proposal, endorsement of the Wagner-Murray-Dingell social security bill, was omitted, as was the annual wage proposal of the CIO.

AFL Sought Coordination

Coordination of scattered labor agencies under the Department of Labor, however, was a principal AFL demand.

The plank was aimed at all labor. Nowhere did it use the term "organized labor."

Praising workers for their "magnificent productive effort," the plank added: "Regardless of the professed friendship of the New Deal for the working man, the fact remains that under the New Deal American economic life is being destroyed."

Executive orders, said the plank, "reveal a deliberate purpose to substitute for contractual agreements of employers and employes the political edicts of a New Deal bureaucracy.

"We condemn the repeal by executive order of the laws secured by the Republican party to abolish 'contract labor' and peonage. We condemn the gradual but effective creation of a labor front as but one of the New Deal's steps toward a totalitarian state."

GOP Labor Plank Pleases CIO, Is Disappointing To AFL

Chicago, June 27 (AP) — The Republican convention slashed at New Deal administration of labor laws obtained, would be in the midst of convention activities in Chicago, sat in his Fifth avenue apartment here, hair rumpled, carpet slippers on his feet and smiling through most of an interview.

"Don't let anyone kid you; I am a very happy man," he declared.

He said he had been in touch with the convention by telephone throughout the day and added:

"I have no statement to make at this time."

Willkie, who withdrew in April as a candidate for the Presidential nomination which will be made tomorrow, had "a few friends in" tonight. He said they were paying an ordinary social call.

DEWEY DRAFTS HIS ACCEPTANCE

ALBANY, N. Y., June 27—(AP) Gov. Thomas E. Dewey began working on his acceptance speech this afternoon amid indications he would not leave for Chicago until

Willkie Silent On Support Of Foreign Policy Plank

New York, June 27 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie refused tonight to say whether he would support the Republican foreign policy plank adopted at Chicago, despite the expressed opinion of Senator Warren Austin, of Vermont, that he would do so.

"In the language of Priscilla, speak for yourself, Warren," the 1940 Presidential candidate told an interviewer after the Senator's prediction that he would "lend strong support to this policy of the Republican party relative to peace and war" had been read to him.

In the face of speculation in Chicago that he might bolt the party which rebuffed his foreign policy proposal, Willkie declined to amplify tonight's statement beyond the paraphrase of the apocryphal advice of Priscilla Mullins to John Alden.

It was just four years ago tonight that Willkie, then virtually a political unknown, put the finishing touches to the strategy which next day stampededth e Republican convention in Philadelphia into nominating him as its Presidential candidate.

The picture was different tonight. The man who, had precedent the Republican national convention nominated him for President, scheduled for tomorrow.

The governor began dictating and writing the speech after lunch. Later, advisers were called in to help. This was Gov. Dewey's first definite indication he would accept the nomination, if offered.

Although earlier reports indicated arrangements had been made for a possible quick train trip to Chicago tonight, it appeared late today the governor would fly to the convention city immediately after being informed of his nomination.

This would be in keeping with his repeated assertions that he was not a candidate, whereas if he left before the actual designation he might be accused of repudiating his stand.

Both plane and train arrangements have been made for the trip, the mode of travel depending upon developments.

Should Gov. Dewey be nominated by mid-afternoon tomorrow, it was believed he and four members of his official family would fly in order to arrive in time to make the acceptance speech tomorrow night.

Indications of a faster aerial trip came with word from Chicago that many delegates had made reservations to leave Thursday afternoon.

Once Gov. Dewey has been nominated, it was deemed unlikely he would resign as governor.

Capitol observers recalled that former Governors Alfred E. Smith and Franklin D. Roosevelt continued to serve during their Presidential campaigns. There is no state law prohibiting this course.

OPTICAL SHOPS GO WITH ARMY

System Speeds Service For Soldiers With Glasses

JUN 27 1944

New York, June 27 (AP)—The life of a pair of glasses worn by a tank corpsman in combat often is only a matter of hours.

Worn by a gunsighter in an anti-aircraft unit, glasses last but little longer.

They are perhaps the most expendable of the army Medical Corps' many items of equipment, and 18 per cent. of field soldiers wear them. Their loss changes the fighting man from an asset into a liability. All possible speed is needed to change him back again.

Three Kinds Of Shops

To facilitate this transition, the Medical Corps has devised three kinds of optical shops for overseas duty, in contrast to the single optical shop for the AEF in the last war. Stationary, because of the size and weight of its equipment, it was established in Paris. Combat soldiers spent weeks on KP duty, waiting for their prescriptions to be refilled.

With the three kinds of shops now in operation the army hopes to shorten that wait to a matter of hours or minutes.

First of these repair units is the stationary base shop. It is a warehouse and can make lenses of any foci. Second is a mobile unit; the third, a portable.

Fourteen Now Overseas

Within six weeks, a half dozen of the newest two and one-half-ton mobile shops will be overseas. Fourteen of the older models are already there. They are about the size of a large Red Cross ambulance, and are staffed by eight men, carry frames and lenses of 700 different powers.

"Wherever they are," says Capt. Aurel Mangold, "we should be able to fill prescriptions in a maximum of 20 minutes. Sometimes it can be done in seven." It is estimated that one of these mobile units can accommodate a field army.

Portable Unit Size Of Trunk

To take care of the boys in the foremost areas there is a portable unit about the size of a small steamer trunk. It can go anywhere from a jungle swamp to a frozen ice cap, can be carried by jeep, plane, mule, boat or head-load.

It stocks 300 different lens powers. Still other foci can be made by hitching lenses of two different powers. Fifty portables now are overseas, 50 more on order and there'll be more to come.

Upon induction, every soldier who needs glasses is supplied with two GI pairs, and if necessary, his gas mask has optical lenses. Most of these men have only slightly impaired vision, easily corrected.

Once Were Far Behind

Keeping those glasses replaced and building up stockpiles was a long, hard pull.

"Only six months ago," says D. K. Garvin, chief of purchasing, "we were behind 150,000 presciptions in the United States, and it took a week to a month to get a prescription filled here. Now the maximum for filling a prescription is 10 days. Usually it only takes two or three. In one recent month 170,000 prescriptions were filled."

Most ingenuity used in filling prescriptions, during the lean months, was reported by Col. W. H. Patton, of the Surgeon General's office, just returned from a tour in the Atlantic theater.

Ingenuity In Desert

"In the Persian Gulf area," he recounted, "optical technicians were salvaging bullet-proof glass from tanks and aircraft, using desert sand as an abrasive and grinding their own lenses."

Ingenuity also is necessary under varied climatic conditions. In Alaska the steel-nickel frames must not be allowed to touch the skin, for they will freeze to it and jerk it away when the glasses are removed. In the tropics, chemicalization is apt to produce a skin poisoning.

To guard against both these, the army has issued a tubing, called "spaghetti," to cover the ear pieces.

N. Y. Archbishop Hits Move Against Jews

New York, June 27 (AP)—Archbishop Francis J. Spellman of the Archdiocese of New York, tonight said the announcement that Hungary had agreed to enforce discriminatory laws against Jews "has shocked all men and women who cherish a sense of justice and of human sympathy."

In a statement broadcast to Europe by the Office of War Information, Archbishop Spellman declared: "It is in direct contradiction to the doctrines of the Catholic faith professed by the vast majority of the Hungarian people. It is a negation of the noblest pages of Hungarian history and cultural tradition."

Air Vets Come Back Thinking

Atlantic City, N. J., June 27 (AP)—After talking the past week with army air force combat veterans returned from all parts of the globe, Dean Christian Gauss, of Princeton University, says soldiers are doing "more intensive thinking" than college undergraduates.

Dr. Gauss and Prof. David McCabe, of the Princeton Department of Government, have been speaking at the Army Air Forces Redistribution Station No. 1 in an indoctrination program designed to help returned servicemen understand what is going on in the world today.

Eager To Swap Ideas

"They are eager to discuss almost everything," Dean Gauss said yesterday. "Returnees didn't have much opportunity to discuss their ideas overseas, and they also had only meager sources of information open to them. But they are keenly aware of the issues at stake in the war.

"Nothing could be more important than to help soldiers think clearly and understand what is happening in the world and why it is happening."

Processing Period

The indoctrination program, which the Princeton educators inaugurated a week ago, is now one of the regular processing periods for returned airmen here awaiting new assignments.

Dean Gauss and Professor McCabe will be here until the first of July, and will be followed by educators from other Eastern universities.

He told film-colony executives at a luncheon meeting yesterday that overseas distribution of movies has expanded so that in April alone 32,706,193 men and women in military forces attended 93,153 performances.

Movie Cosmetics 'Inducted' Into Army

Hollywood, June 27 (AP)—Hollywood makeup men, who have done so well in distorting human features for horror films, are going to send some of their stuff to the army.

A big Hollywood cosmetics firm today was given a $31,200 contract to supply camouflage paste for use in battle.

Bullets Sound Like Bees

Elrod, who was wounded March 28, only 18 days after he had landed on the island, arrived at McCloskey General Hospital yesterday.

Elrod's report of his injury:

"Two snipers had me pinned down. They were really working on me. The bullets sounded like bees. I saw a good spot ahead and crawled over to it, pulled myself over a huge root and grabbed some overhanging vines. It was a booby trap. The next thing I knew, my helmet was knocked off and my left hand was mangled. I yelled back to my buddies and they knocked the snipers out."

ACTOR RECEIVES MEDAL

LOS ANGELES, June 27—(AP) For directing the "most complete and technically excellent" combat photography of the war during the battle for Tarawa, Marine Captain Louis Hayward, former screen actor, has been awarded the Bronze Star Medal, navy spokesmen announced today.

The award was made at the U. S. Naval hospital at nearby Corona where Hayward was resting after combat service. He is the husband of actress Ida Lupino.

Harry Bridges Loses Another Court Battle

San Francisco, June 27 (AP)—Harry Bridges, West Coast CIO labor leader, has lost another round in his long legal fight against deportation to his native Australia.

The United States Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday upheld by a 3 to 2 decision Federal Judge Martin I. Welsh's denial to Bridges of a writ of habeas corpus. The Longshoremen's executive seeks the writ to block United States Attorney General Francis Biddle's deportation order. His attorneys said they would appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

The opinion rejected Bridges' claim that he had been placed in double jeopardy and cited that at his original hearing he was represented by counsel and took the stand on his own behalf.

WITH SOME OF THE GREATEST AIR AND ARTILLERY ONSLAUGHTS OF THE WAR, THE RUSSIANS WERE BATTERING DOWN AND THEN STORMING WITH INFANTRY THE DEEP SYSTEMS OF CONCRETE FORTIFICATIONS, TRENCHES AND TREMENDOUS TANK TRAPS WHICH THE GERMANS HAVE CONSTRUCTED EVERYWHERE.

WRITING FROM A POINT SIX MILES NORTHEAST OF MOGILEV, A CORRESPONDENT FOR THE RUSSIAN PAPER IZVESTIA SAID RED ARMY TROOPS WERE BREACHING FIVE SEPARATE DEFENSE LINES, SET WITH 50 TO 70 PILLBOXES AND 10 TO 15 MACHINE-GUN NESTS EVERY KILOMETER (FIVE-EIGHTHS OF A MILE). EACH LINE WAS THREE TO FOUR KILOMETERS (UP TO 2.5 MILES) DEEP.

MEANWHILE, THE SOVIET OFFENSIVE AGAINST FINLAND INCREASED IN PITCH, WITH MORE THAN ONE-QUARTER OF THE LENINGRAD-MURMANSK RAILWAY LIBERATED AND SOVIET SHIPPING ALREADY REPORTED USING THE SVIR RIVER, WHICH LINES LAKES LADOGA AND ONEZHSKOE (ONEGA).

THE FINNS ACKNOWLEDGED RUSSIAN CAPTURE OF AUNUKSENLINNA, ON THE AUNUS ISTHMUS, AND SAID SOVIET PRESSURE WAS HEAVY ALL AROUND LAKE LADOGA, WITH VIOLENT BATTLES RAGING IN THE KARELIAN ISTHMUS NORTH OF HEINJOKI. A RUSSIAN BREAK-THROUGH NORTH OF KALI ALSO WAS ADMITTED.

DESPITE THESE REVERSES, THE STOCKHOLM PRESS SAID THE FINNISH GOVERNMENT HAD "DECIDED TO CONTINUE THE WAR AND DECLARE ITS SOLIDARITY WITH GERMANY," AND THE GERMAN RADIO ANNOUNCED THAT NAZI FOREIGN MINISTER JOACHIM VON RIBBENTROP HAD REACHED "COMPLETE AGREEMENT" IN A CONFERENCE AT HELSINKI TODAY, COMMITTING GERMANY "TO COMPLY WITH FINNISH DEMANDS FOR MORE ARMS AND MILITARY HELP." HOW GERMANY--HARD PRESSED FROM THE WEST, SOUTH AND EAST--WAS TO SUPPLY SUCH HELP WAS NOT EXPLAINED, BUT ONE SWEDISH REPORT SAID A GERMAN PANZER BRIGADE AND AN INFANTRY DIVISION HAD REACHED FINLAND FROM ESTONIA.

THE SPEED ACHIEVED BY THE RUSSIANS WAS DEMONSTRATED BY A MOSCOW ANNOUNCEMENT THAT THE RED ARMY HAD CAPTURED MORE THAN 1,700 POPULATED PLACES AS IT LEFT VITEBSK AND ZHLOBIN TO BE MOPPED UP AND PLUNGED WESTWARD TOWARD GERMANY ITSELF.

A BROADCAST COMMUNIQUE FROM MOSCOW SAID 6,000 GERMANS WERE KILLED AND 1,000 CAPTURED IN VITEBSK, AND DECLARED THAT SOVIET TROOPS WERE TIGHTENING THE RING AROUND TWO OTHER POCKETS WEST OF THE CITY POSSIBLY THE REMNANTS OF THE GARRISON.

JUN 27 1944

ANOTHER 1,000 WERE DECLARED WIPED OUT IN A BATTLE FOR CAPTURED BESHENKOVICHI, DISTRICT CENTER SOUTHWEST OF VITEBSK; ABOUT 2,000 IN THE FIGHTING AT ZHLOBIN; AND 900 WEST OF ROGACHEV TO THE NORTH. THE TOTAL KILLED IN 24 HOURS WAS APPROXIMATELY 10,000, MOSCOW SAID.

SWEDISH DISPATCHES FROM BERLIN INDICATED THE GERMANS WERE CONSIDERING A WITHDRAWAL FROM WHITE RUSSIA, AND SAID THAT OFFICIAL NAZI SPOKESMEN EXPRESSED A FEAR THAT A RUSSIAN DRIVE IN THE SOUTH MIGHT BE COUPLED WITH AN ALLIED ADVANCE FROM ITALY TO PINCH OFF THE BALKANS.

THE SOVIET COMMUNIQUE SAID THE GERMANS WERE ABANDONING GIANT STORES OF AMMUNITION AND EQUIPMENT, INCLUDING 1,100 TRUCKS FOUND IN VITEBSK, AND RETREATING IN SOME SECTORS "IN GREAT DISORDER."

THIS WAS THE PROGRESS WHICH MOSCOW SAID HAD BEEN MADE BY THE RUSSIANS AS THEY ADVANCED TOWARD THE FOUR VITAL NAZI BASES:

SOVIET TROOPS CAPTURED OBEL, ONLY 20 MILES FROM POLOTSK. THE LINE OF THIS NEW FRONT EXTENDED 53 MILES SOUTHWARD TO CAPTURED CHEREYA, 58 MILES SOUTHWEST OF VITEBSK.

30.24— 16617

PISHCHALOVO, LESS THAN TWO MILES NORTH OF ORSHA, WAS IN SOVIET HANDS AND THE PROCESS OF ENCIRCLEMENT OF ORSHA WAS UNDER WAY. OTHER TROOPSNWERE 23 MILES NORTHWEST OF ORSHA AND OTHER COLUMNS CUT THE ORSHA-LEPEL HIGHWAY AND RAIL LINES, NAZI ESCAPE ROUTES TO THE WEST OF THE CITY.

JUN 27 1944

THE RUSSIANS TOOK MOSTOK, SIX MILES NORTHEAST OF MOGILEV, AND WERE ASTRIDE THE RAILWAY 18 MILES TO THE EAST OF THE BASE. OTHER UNITS CONVERGED ON IT FROM THE NORTH, AND WERE PREPARED TO CROSS THE DNEPR IN THEIR WESTERN SURGE.

STILL OTHER SOVIET TROOPS PLUNGED MORE THAN 40 MILES BEYOND CAPTURED ZHLOBIN. THE TOWN OF BROZHA WAS CAPTURED, LACING THE TROOPS 12 MILES SOUTHWEST OF BOBRUISK, APPARENTLY DESTINED TO BE ENCIRCLED. RATMIROVICHI, 35 MILES SOUTHWEST OF BOBRUISK, AND PARICHI, 23 MILES SOUTHEAST, ERE TAKEN.

FIGHTING CONTINUED ON THE FINNISH FRONT, WITH 40 LOCALITIES EAST OF LAKE ONEGA (ONEZHSKOE) CAPTURED, INCLUDING THE DISTRICT CENTER OF OLONETS, 10 MILES BEYOND THE LAKE AND 115 MILES NORTHEAST OF LENINGRAD. ANOTHER SECTION OF THE LENINGRAD-MURMANSK RAILWAY WAS FREED ABOVE LAKE ONEGA.

THE SOVIET BULLETIN SAID THE FINNS HAD BEEN CLEARED FROM THE FORTIFIED ISLANDS OF KOVISTO AND TUIRINSAARI, SOUTH OF CAPTURED VIIPURI. THE ENTIRE LENGTH OF THE BALTIC-WHITE SEA CANAL WAS IN RUSSIAN HANDS, MOSCOW ANNOUNCED, ENABLING SOVIET OR OTHER ALLIED WARSHIPS UP TO LIGHT CRUISERS TO SAIL FROM THE NORTHERN SHORES TO LENINGRAD.

THERE WAS NO CONFIRMATION IN MOSCOW OF A GERMAN REPORT THAT ANOTHER RED ARMY WAS ATTACKING IN THE OSTROV SECTOR, 165 MILES NORTHWEST OF VITEBSK.

THE VALUE OF VITEBSK AND ZHLOBIN TO THE RUSSIANS WAS REGARDED AS HIGH. THROUGH VITEBSK RUN THE ROADS TO THE BALTIC AND EAST PRUSSIA, AND THROUGH ZHLOBIN THOSE LEADING TO MINSK, CAPITAL OF WHITE RUSSIA. THE GERMANS HAD HELD VITEBSK SINCE JULY 13, 1941.

CHERBOURG, JUNE 27-(AP)-AN INSPECTION TODAY OF FORT DU ROULE DISCLOSED STOCKS OF AMMUNITION AND A HUGE INVENTORY OF STORES WORTH MILLIONS OF DOLLARS.

JUN 27 1944

AND ALL THE MYSTERIES OF THIS FORT, THE GERMANS' STRONGEST BASTION GUARDING THE SOUTHERN APPROACHES TO CHERBOURG, HAVE NOT YET BEEN SOLVED BY AMERICAN FORCES, NOW SWARMING THE UNDERGROUND CHAMBERS DRIVEN INTO A CLIFFSIDE AND REINFORCED BY STEEL AND CONCRETE.

THE DEEP TUNNELS HELD ENOUGH FOOD, AMMUNITION, GUNS AND OTHER SUPPLIES INSIDE THE DEEP TUNNELS TO HAVE KEPT A LARGE FORCE SUPPLIED FOR MONTHS. THERE ARE THOUSANDS OF CASES OF COGNAC, FINE FRENCH WINES, CHAMPAGNES AND LIQUEURS, AND VAST STORES OF EVERYTHING FROM SHAVING CREAM TO TORPEDOES.

OFFICERS HAVE NOT YET LOCATED THE PASSAGES LEADING TO ALL THE SERIES OF LEVELS, AND THERE IS THE POSSIBILITY GERMANS MAY STILL BE INSIDE THE FORTRESS. BUT THEY MADE NO MOVE TO DESTROY IT BEFORE OUR TROOPS BROKE IN.

CPL.JAMES BRESNAHAN OF WATERBURY, CONN., LED A GROUP OF US THROUGH ONE OF THE GREAT SERIES OF CHAMBER, 300 FEET BELOW THE CLIFF TOP WHERE THE YANKS FIRST BROKE INTO THE FORTRESS. THICK STEEL DOORS WERE BLASTED OPEN, AND INSIDE WAS AN INTRICATE, AMAZING INSTALLATION.

THE MAIN TUNNEL WAS 200 YARDS DEEP, 38 FEET HIGH AND EQUALLY AS WIDE. OFF THE MAIN TUNNEL WERE OTHER ROOMS OF THE SAME HEIGHT AND WIDTH AND ABOUT 50 YARDS IN DEPTH. AN OVERHEAD CRANE WAS ELECTRICALLY POWERED FOR MOVING HEAVY WEAPONS OR AMMUNITION FROM ONE

PART OF THE TUNNELS TO OTHERS.

AN ELECTRIC LIGHT SYSTEM WAS FOUND, ALONG WITH TELEPHONES, AUTOMATICALLY CONTROLLED VENTILATORS AND WATER MAINS.

BY LANTERN LIGHT WE WALKED THROUGH THE TUNNELS. THEY WERE LITTERED WITH CLOTHING AND EQUIPMENT OF THE FORTRESS' DEFENDERS.

DOUBLE-DECKED BUNKS RAN ALONG THE SIDES OF MOST OF THE TUNNELS WHERE THE MEN LIVED. THEIR PERSONAL BELONGINGS WERE STREWN ABOUT IN DISARRAY. SOME OF THE GERMANS HAD WRAPPED PACKAGES AND ADDRESSED THEM TO FRIENDS AND RELATIVES IN GERMANY, BUT WERE CAUGHT BEFORE THEY COULD SEND THEM OUT. THEY CONTAINED PIECES OF SILKS AND SATINS, CIGARS. TINS OF FOOD AND TRINKETS.

JUN 27 1944

MAJ.GLENN PLUMLEE, CLAREMONT AVE., BIRMINGHAM, ALA., WALKED INTO A GREAT CHAMBER STACKED HIGH WITH AMMUNITION OF ALL KINDS, FROM SHELLS FOR HUGE GUNS TO SMALL ARMS CARTRIDGES.

ONE CHAMBER THAT HAD BEEN OCCUPIED BY MARINES CONTAINED 12 LARGE TORPEDOES HANGING ON THE WALLS IN RACKS. DOWN THE MAIN CORRIDORS THE WALLS WERE STACKED HIGH WITH BOXES OF RADIOS, COMBS, LOTIONS, SOAP, MATCHES, CIGARETTES, CHEWING TOBACCO, PLAYING CARDS, TOOTHPASTE, SHAVING CREAM, RAZOR BLADES AND HUNDREDS OF OTHER ITEMS.

MUCH OF THESE HUGE STORES WILL BE A BLESSING TO AMERICAN TROOPS, WHO ARE SHORT ON ITEMS AVAILABLE IN QUANTITY INSIDE FORT DU ROULE.

ALMOST ALL THE BUNKS HAD FOOD ABOUT THEM, AND THE LOCKERS HAD HALF-EATEN CANS OF PRESERVES AND FOODSTUFFS.

OUTSIDE CHERBOURG, JUNE 26-(DELAYED)-(AP)-AMERICAN INFANTRY STORMING CHERBOURG CAPTURED TWO MORE SITES FROM WHICH THE GERMANS PLANNED TO LAUNCH ROBOT BOMBS--REVEALING THE EXTENT TO WHICH THE ENEMY INTENDED TO USE NORMANDY AS A FIRING POINT AGAINST GREAT BRITAIN.

AT LEAST A HALF DOZEN OF THESE THICK CONCRETE INSTALLATIONS HAVE BEEN DISCOVERED ON THE PENINSULA. ALL HAD BEEN HEAVILY BOMBED. NONE HAD BEEN COMPLETED OR PLACED IN OPERATION.

THE TWO I INSPECTED WERE ESSENTIALLY THE SAME IN DESIGN, AND BOTH WERE ELABORATELY CAMOUFLAGED WITH NETTING, LIMBS OF TREES AND STRAW. WHEN THEY WERE TAKEN, PERSONAL POSSESSIONS AND MILITARY EQUIPMENT OF THE GERMAN SOLDIERS WERE STILL STREWN ABOUT.

THEIR PRINCIPAL FEATURE WAS A LAUNCHING PLATFORM, ABOUT 20 FEET WIDE, EXTENDING BETWEEN WALLS TWO AND A HALF FEET THICK, FOR ABOUT 60 FEET UP A VERY SLIGHT INCLINE. HERE THE WALLS ENDED BUT THERE WAS A 90-FOOT EARTH EXTENSION BUILT UP FROM THE GROUND.

ONE SITE HAD A PAIR OF RAILROAD TRACKS, SET ABOUT TEN FEET APART ON SHORT WOOD TIES BETWEEN THE WALLS.

IT WAS OBVIOUS THAT THE PROJECTILES WOULD HAVE TO RISE VERY QUICKLY TO CLEAR THE TREES 100 YARDS FROM THE LAUNCHING POINT.

BROAD CONCRETE PAVEMENTS FOUR INCHES THICK LED FROM THE LAUNCHING ALLEYS TO MYSTERIOUS BUILDINGS, APPARENTLY STORAGE PLACES, WITH ENTRANCES CURVED TO PREVENT BLASTS REACHING THE BOMBS.

EACH SITE HAD A SOLIDLY BUILT CONTROL HOUSE, AND BOTH LAUNCHING ALLEYS POINTED ALMOST DUE NORTH TOWARDS LONDON.

THE SITE WITH THE TRACKS ALREADY INSTALLED WAS ABOUT FOUR MILES OUTSIDE CHERBOURG AND IT WAS ECHOING WITH GUNFIRE AS WE CLIMBED INTO THE INSTALLATION AND CRAWLED THROUGH IT.

THERE WAS GRASS GROWING IN SURROUNDING CRATERS, INDICATING THAT SOME TIME AGO ALLIED AIRPLANES HAD MADE A HEAVY ATTACK ON THE SITE. ONE OF THE STORAGE HOUSES HAD BEEN SMASHED, ITS THREE-FOOT WALLS REDUCED TO HUGE CHUNKS OF CONCRETE.

DIRECT HITS ALSO HAD BEEN SCORED ON OTHER INSTALLATIONS, BUT HAD DONE LITTLE DAMAGE.

IN HEAVY FIGHTING, A BRITISH OFFICER SAID, THE REMAINING GERMANS FELL BACK LEAVING GREAT NUMBERS OF SNIPERS HIDDEN IN TREE TOPS.

THEY WERE SUCH PESTS THAT TANKS WERE FIRING BURSTS INTO EVERY TREE AS THEY PASSED.

GERMAN GUNS SOUTH OF MARCELET CHECKED THE BRITISH ADVANCE IN THE ST.MANVIEU AREA SOMEWHAT DURING THE NIGHT, BUT COULDN'T HALT THE SURGE TO COLLEVILLE.

ABOARD AN LST IN THE ENGLISH CHANNEL, JUNE 24-(DELAYED)-(AP)-DEMOLITION AND SALVAGE EXPERTS ARE POISED IN THE CHANNEL WITH A CONVOY OF DYNAMITE READY TO TACKLE THE DANGEROUS INITIAL PHASE OF TURNING CHERBOURG INTO A SHELTERED SUPPLY BASE FOR LLIED FORCES ONCE THE FRENCH PORT FALLS.

JUN 27 1944

"WE ARE READY FOR ANYTHING," SAID DIVING OFFICER J.H. MAC DONALD, OF HOEHNE, COLO., WHO WON THE CONGRESSIONAL MEDAL OF HONOR FOR HIS WORK DURING THE RESCUE OF HALF OF THE CREW OF THE SUBMARINE SQUALUS OFF PORTSMOUTH, .H., AND HELPING SALVAGE IT FOR WARTIME DUTIES IN THE PACIFIC WHICH HAVE BEEN CITED BY PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

BY "ANYTHING" MAC DONALD MEANT HUNDREDS UPON HUNDREDS OF HIGH EXPLOSIVES--MINES, BOOBYTRAPS AND UNDERWATER EXPLOSIVES--WHICH UNDOUBTEDLY HAVE BEEN SOWN IN CHERBOURG'S HARBOR AND SECRETED IN WATERFRONT FACILITIES BY THE GERMANS IN AN EFFORT TO DELAY THE HARBOR'S USE AS LONG AS POSSIBLE.

THE IMPORTANCE OF SWIFT ACQUISITION OF THESE FACILITIES IS OBVIOUS. ONCE THE HARBOR IS CLEAR OF SUNKEN OBSTRUCTIONS, OR THEIR POSITIONS CHARTED, AND THE MINES AND OTHER EXPLOSIVES NEUTRALIZED, THE PORT CAN BE USED TO POUR IN SUPPLIES AND TROOPS ABOARD DEEP-WATER VESSELS WITHOUT DANGER FROM WIND AND TIDE--THE TWIN FACTORS WHICH HAVE BEEN IMPEDING BEACHHEAD DELIVERY.

IN THE DAYS OF PEACE CHERBOURG WAS A CHANNEL CALLING PORT FOR TRANSATLANTIC LINERS. THOUSANDS OF AMERICAN TOURISTS HAVE CROWDED THE RAILS IN BYGONE YEARS AS THE LINERS STEAMED THROUGH THE OUTER BREAKWATER INTO THE GRAND RADE (LARGE BASIN) AND THROUGH THE SECOND BREAKWATER INTO THE QUIET WATERS OF THE PETITE RADE.

IT WILL BE A DIFFERENT SCENE WHEN THE SMALL BOATS OF THIS CONVOY GINGERLY PICK A PATH BEHIND MINESWEEPERS TO WITHIN SIGHT OF CHERBOURG'S FAMOUS CLOCK TOWER--IF IT'S STILL STANDING.

JUN 27 1944

THE ALLIES LONG HAVE BEEN PREPARING FOR THAT MOMENT. ABOARD THIS LST ARE MEN TRAINED ESPECIALLY FOR THE JOB--BOTH BRITONS AND AMERICANS. THEY ARE MEN WHO RISKED THEIR LIVES IN SIMILAR TASKS AT NAPLES, SALVAGE EXPERTS WHO WORKED MIRACLES OF RESTORATION AT PEARL HARBOR, DEMOLITION EXPERTS WHO LEARNED THE HARD WAY IN DEALING WITH TIME BOMBS DROPPED ON ENGLAND.

THE DEPTH OF THE HARBOR WATERS EVEN AT HIGH TIDE--THE RISE THERE IS BETWEEN 38 AND 40 FEET--IS NOT EXPECTED TO PROVE A GREAT HANDICAP FOR THE UNDERWATER WORKERS. DEPENDING UPON THE TEMPERATURE, THEY CAN WORK SAFELY AT A DEPTH OF 60 FEET FOR THREE OR FOUR HOURS AND HAVE TO REMAIN IN THE DECOMPRESSION CHAMBER ONLY 20 MINUTES.

BENEATH THE HOT SUN, BEATING DOWN ON THE BLUE GREEN CHANNEL WATERS, MEN OF THIS PORT-CLEARING ADVANCE UNIT SPRAWLED ABOUT THE SHIP AS IT SWUNG AT ANCHOR, AWAITING WORD FROM THE COMMANDER OF THE CONVOY WHICH WILL SEND THEM INTO AN ASSIGNMENT PERHAPS AS DANGEROUS AS ANY OF THE WAR.

AS THIS IS WRITTEN A HUGE MAW OF A LANDING RAMP HAS BEEN LET DOWN, AND SINEW-TOUGHENED YOUNGSTERS OF THE CREW, SPLASHING MERRILY IN THE WATER, ARE HORSING AROUND SMALL BOATS STANDING SENTRY AS LIFE GUARDS.

OFF TO PORT A HALF-DOZEN OTHERS ARE PLACIDLY FISHING AND DREAMING OF THE DAYS WHEN THEY DID THE SAME THINGS IN THE LAKES OF MAINE AND MICHIGAN, AND THE CREEKS OF GEORGIA AND ALABAMA. ON THE BOAT DECK A CARD GAME IS IN PROGRESS--NOT MOVING RAPIDLY BECAUSE IT WOULD REQUIRE A TREASURY EXPERT TO SETTLE THE DIFFERENT OPINIONS ON EXCHANGE VALUE OF MONEY--FRENCH FRANC NOTES, BRITISH POUNDS AND AMERICAN CURRENCY.

AS A NEWS BROADCAST BREAKS IN ON THE BLARE OF AMERICAN DANCE MUSIC, A DIVER POISED ATOP HIS PERCH ON THE RAMP AND THE FISHERMEN SHOWED THE FIRST SIGN OF INTEREST OF THE DAY.

"AMERICAN TROOPS ARE IN THE OUTSKIRTS OF CHERBOURG," SAID THE ANNOUNCER.

JUN 27 1944

"WE'LL BE GOING IN SOON," PREDICTED A POKER PLAYER, FLIPPING ANOTHEI CARD.

MOSCOW, JUNE 27-(AP)-TWO SCROLLS OF HONOR FROM PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT FOR STALINGRAD AND LENINGRAD HAVE BEEN ACCEPTED BY PREMIER STALIN "AS A SYMBOL OF FRUITFUL COLLABORATION BETWEEN OUR GOVERNMENTS WHICH IS BEING EFFECTED IN THE NAME OF FREEDOM OF OUR PEOPLES AND PROGRESS OF HUMANITY."

STALIN MADE THIS STATEMENT LAST NIGHT UPON RECEIVING THE SCROLLS FROM THE U.S. AMBASSADOR, W.AVERELL HARRIMAN, IN A CEREMONY AT THE KREMLIN. HE PROMISED TO FORWARD THE PARCHMENTS TO STALINGRAD AND LENINGRAD.

SOMEWHERE IN CENTRAL BOSNIA, JUNE 21-(DELAYED)-(AP)-IT MAY BE TAKEN FOR GRANTED THAT ONE OF THE FIRST RESULTS OF THE AGREEMENT BETWEEN MARSHAL TITO AND KING PETER'S PREMIER IVAN SUBASIC WILL BE FINAL REPUDIATION OF GEN. DRAJA MIHAILOVIC BY ELEMENTS WHICH STILL SURROUND AND INFLUENCE THE KING.

JUN 27 1944

SINCE THE RECENT DISMISSAL OF THE PURIC GOVERNMENT, MIHAILOVIC HAS AUTOMATICALLY LOST HIS POSITION AS MINISTER FOR WAR OF THE YUGOSLAV ROYALIST GOVERNMENT BUT HE STILL CLAIMS TO BE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF O THE ROYAL YUGOSLAV ARMY.

THAT HE SHOULD CONTINUE TO HOLD THIS POSITION AT A TIME WHEN THE MAJORITY OF HIS COMMANDERS HAVE BECOME LITTLE MORE THAN GERMAN AUXILIARIES IS REPUGNANT TO MEMBERS OF TITO'S PARTISAN NATIONAL LIBERATION COMMITTEE.

MERELY TO DISMISS HIM, HOWEVER, IN THE USUAL MANNER, WOULD NOT, I AM ASSURED BY THOSE WHO HAVE BUT RECENTLY VISITED HIM IN SERBIA, BE SUFFICIENT

DETACH THE GREATER PART OF HIS FOLLOWING.

DR. SUBASIC HAS NO INFLUENCE WHATEVER IN THAT PART OF SERBIA NOW CONTROLLED BY MIHAILOVIC. ONLY THE VOICE OF THE KING CARRIES WEIGHT THERE.

JUN 27 1944

IT IS THE OPINION OF THOSE WHOM I BELIEVE TO BE COMPETENT TO JUDGE THAT ONLY A BROADCAST MADE BY THE KING HIMSELF, IN WHICH HE WOULD LEAVE LISTENERS IN NO DOUBT WHATEVER ABOUT THE SIGEREITY OF HIS REPUDIATION OF MIHAILOVIC, WOULD CARRY CONVICTION TO THOSE WHO STILL REMAIN ALMOST FANATICALLY LOYAL ~~XX~~ TO HIM.

THE MOST THAT ANYONE HOPED FOR WHEN THE TITO-SUBASIC DISCUSSIONS BEGAN WAS THAT THE TWO ADMINISTRATIONS MIGHT AGREE TO PARALLEL LINES OF INDEPENDENT ACTION AGAINST THE COMMON ENEMY, BUT IT WOULD NOT NOW BE SURPRISING IF, WHEN SUBASIC FORMS A CABINET ~~XNB~~ THE NAMES OF ONE OR MORE REPRESENTATIVES OF THE NATIONAL LIBERATION (PARTISAN) MOVEMENT WERE INCLUDED.

THE FACT THAT SUBASIC SHOULD HAVE COME SO FAR AND SHOULD HAVE THOUGHT IT WISE TO VISIT TERRITORY WHICH MIGHT PROPERLY BE CALLED

HOSTILE TO HIM, IS SOME PROOF OF THE URGENCY WITH WHICH THE ROYAL GOVERNMENT VIEWS THE PRESENT SITUATION.

JUN 27 1944

IT HAS BEEN STATED THAT IN THE NEAR FUTURE KING PETER AND TITO MAY MEET, BUT IT IS MY IMPRESSION THAT THIS IS NOT LIKELY.

ACCOMPANYING DR. SUBASIC IS RALPH STEPHENSON, BRITISH AMBASSADOR TO THE ROYAL GOVERNMENT, A SOMEWHAT STRANGE FIGURE TO BE FOUND WANDERING THROUGH THIS LOVELY DISTRICT, WHICH SEEMS SO REMOTE FROM ALL THE BITTERNESS AND STRIFE WHICH SINCE 1941 HAS BEEN THE ONLY PORTION OF THESE GALLANT PEASANTS, AND WHICH IS CLOSER TO THE WAR THAN WE CAN IMAGINE OURSELVES TO BE.

BRIGADIER MACLEAN, HEAD OF THE BRITISH MISSION, IS HERE TOO, HOLDING DISCUSSIONS BESIDE FRESH WATER INTO WHICH WE DIVE FROM TIME TO TIME TO ESCAPE THE RAYS OF THE ROASTING SUN. IF WE WANT TO GO UP TO THE PLACE WHERE THE MEETINGS ARE BEING HELD, WE MUST WALK A HALF-MILE THROUGH PLEASANT FIELDS IN WHICH PEASANTS ARE GOING ABOUT THEIR BUSINESS, TENDING CROPS OR REPAIRING THE TERRACES WHICH HOLD THE SPARSE EARTH IN PLACE.

JUN 27 1944

CHUNGKING, JUNE 27-(AP)-SEVERE FIGHTING IS RAGING FOR THE CANTON-HANKOW RAIL LINE CITY OF HENGYANG, WITH SEVERE CASUALTIES ON BOTH SIDES, THE CHINESE HIGH COMMAND ANNOUNCED TONIGHT IN A COMMUNIQUE WHICH ALSO SAID THAT SEVERAL JAPANESE COLUMNS WERE PREPARING FOR A CONCERTED ATTACK UPON THE BELEAGUERED STRONGHOLD. JUN 27 1944

IT SAID THAT "HENGYANG, ALTHOUGH THE CENTER OF HOSTILITIES, REMAINS CALM," BUT IT WAS FEARED HERE GENERALLY THAT UNLESS THE CHINESE ARE ABLE TO MUSTER MUCH STRONGER OPPSOTION THE JAPANESE WILL TAKE THE CITY AND MOVE ON DOWN THE RAIL LINE TO CUT OFF ALL OF EASTERN CHINA.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT INDICATED THAT THE ENEMY ALREADY WAS ATTEMPTING A WIDE FLANKING MOVEMENT EAST OF HENGYANG, AIMED POSSIBLY AT CUTTING THE LINE WELL SOUTH OF THE CITY.

IT WAS BELIEVED HERE ALSO THAT ONCE IN POSSESSION OF THE CANTON-HANKOW NORTH-SOUTH LINE, THE JAPANESE WOULD STRIKE WESTWARD TOWARD KWEILIN ALONG THE HUNAN-KWANGSI RAILROAD.

ABOARD THE USS TEXAS-(DELAYED)-THE GERMANS "KNEW" THE GREAT INVASION WAS COMING ON THAT HISTORIC JUNE 6, AND TOLD THE NATIVES SO THE DAY BEFORE, WARNING THEM TO TAKE TO THEIR SHELTERS OR THE BACK COUNTRY. BUT THAT ISN'T AS SENSATIONAL AS IT SOUNDS. THE FRENCH DIDN'T BELIEVE IT, AND THE EVIDENCE SHOWS THAT THE GERMANS DIDN'T EITHER. JUN 27 1944

SPEND A DAY ASHORE TOURING UP AND DOWN AN EIGHT MILE SECTOR PLASTERED BY THE GUNS OF THE TEXAS AND OTHER SHIPS OF THIS BOMBARD-

MENT FORCE, AND YOU CAN LEARN SOME SURPRISING THINGS.

THE FRENCH HAD NOT BEEN CLEARED OUT FOR 50 MILES BACK FROM THE COAST. THE GERMANS HAD WARNED, BUT NOT FORCED THEM TO LEAVE.

THERE WERE FLOCKS OF GEESE, DUCKS, AND CHICKENS IN MANY FARM-YARDS AND TWO HERDS OF FINE LOOKING MILK COWS ALONG THE ROAD WE TRAVELLED. THE FRENCH, WHO LOOKED NOT UNDERFED BUT VERY BADLY CLOTHED, SAID THAT THE GERMANS, AS USUAL, TOOK THE BEST AND THE MOST OF EVERYTHING.

JUN 27 1944

THE FRENCH TOLD US THAT THEY WERE SKEPTICAL WHEN THE GERMANS SAID JUNE 6 WOULD BE INVASION DAY BECAUSE THIS WAS "AT LEAST THE TENTH TIME THIS SPRING" THAT THE GERMANS INVASION JITTERS HAD TIGHTENED TO THE PREDICTION POINT--A PARTICULARLY FAVORITE SCARE PERIOD, THEY SAID, HAD BEEN MAY 17,18,19.

AFTER SO MANY CRIES OF "WOLF", THE FRENCH ANNOUNCED TO EACH OTHER, AND TO THE GERMANS, THAT THEY WOULD HEAD FOR THEIR SHELTER ONLY WHEN THEY HEARD GUN FIRE FROM THE SEA.

AND THEY DEVELOPED A FINE LITTLE GALLIC GAME. THOSE WHO HAD GERMANS BILLETED IN THEIR HOMES, WOULD BEGIN EACH DAY WITH A BLAND, VERY POLITE QUESTION, "AND WHEN DO YOU SAY THE ALLIES WILL VISIT US NOW, HERR CAPTAIN?"

OUTSIDE EVIDENCE OF THE COMPLETE TACTICAL SURPRISE SUFFERED BY THE GERMANS IS AFFORDED BY THE MAJOR DEVELOPMENTS OF THE CAMPAIGN TO DATE.

JUN 27 1944

THOUGH ALLIED AIR FORCES SEVERAL TIMES HAD BOMBED ONE LOCAL STRONG-POINT, STUDDED WITH STEEL-AND-CONCRETE CASEMATES 10 FEET THICK ON THEIR ROUNDED TOPS AND SIX FEET THICK ON SIDES, AND SUNK INTO THE EARTH, NOT ONE CASEMATE HAD BEEN HIT. NATIVES SAID BOMBS HAD FREQUENTLY LANDED WITHIN 200 YARDS OF EACH CASEMATE, BUT NEVER DAMAGED IT.

NAVAL FIVE-INCH SHELLS, IT WAS OBVIOUS, HAD LITERALLY BOUNCED OFF THE DOME-LIKE TOPS, MERELY CHIPPING THEM. BUT THE 14-INCH, 1500-POUND SHELLS OF THE TEXAS, ARCHED OVER WITH DEADLY ACCURACY FROM A POINT 12,000 YARDS DISTANT, HAD OPENED UP EACH ONE WIDE. SOME OF THESE SHELLS, ALSO, CHANGED THE FRENCH COAST-LINE A BIT, MAKING SLOPING BEACHES WHERE BEFORE THERE HAD BEEN TOWERING CLIFFS.

JUN 27 1944

THE ARMY AND THE NAVY'S FAMED SEABEES HAVE WORKED A MIRACLE OF ORGANIZING A PORT, BUILDING ROADS AND POURING A STEADY STREAM OF SOLDIERS, GUNS, TANKS, AND SUPPLIES INLAND FROM A WIDE SPOT ON A COUNTRY BEACH THAT NEVER SAW ANYTHING BIGGER THAN A FISHING SMACK BEFORE.

WORKING UNDER FIRE, THE ENGINEERS HAD THAT ROAD UP FROM THE BEACH STARTED LONG BEFORE NIGHTFALL OF D-DAY.

IT'S A TWO-WAY TRAFFIC ON THAT DUSTY ROAD INLAND. LONG LINES OF SHERMAN TANKS ROAR UP FROM THE BEACH, FOLLOWED BY LONG LINES OF GREAT TRUCKLOADS OF TOUGH-LOOKING INFANTRY GUNS, MUNITIONS, AND FOODSTUFFS. BACK FROM THE FRONT COME THE EMPTIED TRUCKS, THEIR GRIMY TRANSPORTATION CORPS CREWS, WHITE AND NEGRO, ARMED WITH CARBINES, AND LOOKING SERIOUS AND PREOCCUPIED, THE WAY MEN DO WHO'VE SEEN THEIR COMRADES DIE.

MULTIPLY THAT BEACH SO MANY TIMES OVER AN 80 MILE BEACHHEAD, AND YOU HAVE A BEAUTIFUL PICTURE. IT MAY BE NO MIRACLE TO THE ARMY

ENGINEERS OR THE NAVY SEABEES, BUT IT PROBABLY LOOKS LIKE ONE TO HITLER. IT'S THE SORT OF THING HE SAID THOSE "MILITARY IDIOTS" IN WASHINGTON AND LONDON COULD NEVER DO.

BY WILLIAM L.WORDEN

ABOARD A CONVOY TO SAIPAN, JUNE 12-(DELAYED)-(AP)- JUN 27 1944

THE EUROPEAN WAR OUTCLASSES THIS PACIFIC ONE IN NUMBERS, IN BEING FOUGHT IN PLACES YOU'VE HEARD ABOUT BEFORE, IN HAVING MORE SOLDIERS FROM YOUR HOME TOWN IN IT.

BUT WHEN IT COMES TO CONVOYS, THE TWO WARS CAN'T BE COMPARED.

OUT HERE THEY ARE BIGGER, LONGER, DULLER AND MUCH, MUCH CLOSER TO THE HUBS OF HELL IN TEMPERATURE. IF ANYBODY, FROM ADMIRALS DOWN, ACTUALLY ENJOY ONE OF THEM, HE'S READY FOR HOSPITAL TIME IN THE STATES.

MOST OF THE MEN ON THIS SHIP, FOR EXAMPLE, HAVE BEEN ABOARD FOR MANY DAYS NOW, AND WE'RE NOT AT SAIPAN YET. AT FIRST READING, THAT MAY NOT SOUND TOO BAD--A CRUISE, WITH NOTHING MUCH TO DO, AMONG STORY BOOK ISLANDS UNDER A BRIGHT BLUE SKY.

BUT THESE MENSRE LIVING IN THE HOLDS, I.E., ON IRON COTS STRUNG FROM THE OVERHEADS, FOUR DEEP, WITH A PASSAGE ABOUT TWO FEET WIDE BETWEEN THE ROWS. A COT IS A PIECE OF CANVAS STRUNG FROM AN IRON FRAME WITH A DEPRESSION IN THE CENTERS AS A MEMENTO OF THE FAT MAN WHO HAD IT LAST TRIP. THE HOLD JUN 27 194

HAS A VENTILATION SYSTEM OF SORTS, BUT SOMETHING ALWAYS HAPPENS. SOME BRIGHT LAD DOESN'T HANG HIS SWEATY SHIRT OVER THE OUTLET, SOMEBODY ABOVE DECKS INVARIABLY CLOGS THE INLET WITH HIS LAUNDRY OF HIS OWN POSTERIOR.

ALSO, ONE OF THE SEWAGE LINES SPRANG A LEAK A DAY OR SO AGO. IT'S REPAIRED NOW.

BATHING ABOARD PACIFIC TRANSPORTS FOLLOW THE PATTERN OF TRANSPORTS EVERYWHERE BUT GOES ON LONGER. THAT IS, THERE NEVER IS ENOUGH WATER. SOME SHIPS RUN WATER TO SHOWERS AND WASH BOWLS FOR HALF AN HOUR, TWICE A DAY. WITH LUCK AND PUSHING A MAN CAN SHAVE ABOUT EVERY OTHER DAY.

THIS SHIP HAS NO LIMIT ON WATER HOURS (WHICH MAKES IT UNIQUE) BUT SOLVES ITS LIMITATION PROBLEM WITH SPECIAL SHOWER HEADS CONTAINING ONLY A FEW VERY SMALL HOLES. IF THE BATHER LATHERS SO HEAVILY THAT HE CAN'T GET IT OFF WITH THE RESULTANT THIN SPRAY, WHY THAT'S TOO BAD.

AS YOU CAN SEE, PEOPLE IN THE TROPICS THINK ABOUT WATER A LOT. JUN 27 1944

TRANSPORT RULES VARY ACCORDING TO THE IDEAS OF SKIPPERS. ALL OF THEM BLACK OUT THEIR DECKS AT NIGHT, BUT ONE BLACKS OUT COMPLETELY, ABOVE AND BELOW. NO LIGHTS BURN ANYWHERE ABOARD EXCEPT DIM SHIELDED BULBS, SO NO ONE READS, PLAYS CARDS OR WRITES LETTERS AFTER DUSK. DULL, THAT'S WHAT.

AT ONE TIME, SUN BATHING WAS COMMONLY PROHIBITED, BUT EXPERIENCE HAS CHANGED THIS RULE. TROOP COMMANDERS DISCOVERED MEN GOING ASHORE INTO BATTLE HAD MORE RESISTANCE TO HEAT PROSTRATION AND SUNBURN IF THEY WERRE TANNED TO START WITH. SO NOW OFFICERS AND MEN SUN THEMSELVES ON TRANSPORT DECKS RELIGIOUSLY--AND ON ORDER.

LAUNDRY, LIKE EVERYTHING ELSE, TAKES ON A DIFFERENT IMPORTANCE ON THIS TRIP THAN ON ONE OF A FEW DAYS AS IN THE EUROPEAN THEATER. GENERALLY SPEAKING, SHIP LAUNDRIES CAN DO NOTHING FOR PASSENGER TROOPS, LITTLE FOR THEIR OWN PEOPLE. SO TABLE-CLOTHES IN WARDROOMS GO DIRTY, SHEETS GET GRAY AND THE SOLDIER OR MARINE BELOW DECKS DOES WHAT HE CAN FOR HIMSELF. TRADITIONALLY, SAILORS DROP A BUCKET OVERSIDE FOR SALT WATER, HAUL IT UP, SCRUB DUNGAREES ON THE DECK. MARINES FROWN ON SO MUCH WORK, SIMPLY TIE THEIR CLOTHES TIGHTLY TO A LONG LINE, TOSS IT OVERSIDE AND LET THE CLOTHES DANGLE IN THE BOW WAVES OF THE SHIP, BOUNCING MERRILY UP AND TOWN. THE MARINES CLAIM THEY GET THEIR CLOTHES CLEANER WITH LESS EFFORT--- IF THEY DON'T LOSE THEM.

JUN 27 1944

ODDLY ENOUGH, ENLISTED MEN GENERALLY EAT AS WELL OR BETTER THAN SHIP AND PASSENGER OFFICERS. THE REASON IS THAT THE ENLISTED MEN'S MESS IS REDUCED TO ESSENTIALS---MEN STAND IN LINE WITH TRAYS, TAKE THEIR FOOD CAFETERIA STYLE AND CARRY IT OFF SOMEWHERE TO EAT IT WHILE IT IS STILL HOT. BUT TRANSPORT OFFICERS-- PERHAPS RESENTING STILL THAT NAMELESS PASSENGER WHO ONCE REFERRED TO TRANSPORTS AS "THE SLUMS OF THE NAVY"---TRY TO MAINTAIN THE OLD TRADITIONS OF WARDROOM SERVICE. THIS GETS A LITTLE TOUGH WHEN NEITHER TABLECLOTHES NOR THE MESS BOYS' JACKETS CAN BE LAUNDRED THE WATER FAUCETS DON'T WORK AND THE WARDROOM BUILT TO SEAT SEVENTY HAS TO FEED THREE TIMES THAT MANY.

THE ONLY CANADIAN DIVISION IDENTIFIED SO FAR IN FRANCE HAS BEEN THE 3RD DIVISION UNDER MAJ.-GEN. R.F.L. KELLER OF KELOWNA, B.C., AND CANADIAN PARATROOPERS. HOWEVER, THERE ARE PROBABLY OTHER CANADIAN FORCES IN THE ACTION AND THE UNITED STATES-BRITISH UNITS IDENTIFIED DO NOT NECESSARILY COMPLETE THE TOTAL MAKEUP OF THE FORCE. BRITISH TROOPS MENTIONED IN FRONT LINE DISPATCHES HAVE BEEN THE FAMOUS 50TH NORTHUMBRIAN INFANTRY DIVISION, THE 7TH DIVISION AND THE 6TH AIRBORNE DIVISION.

AMERICAN UNITS IDENTIFIED HAVE BEEN THE 1ST, 2ND, 4TH, 9TH, 29TH AND 79TH INFANTRY AND THE 82ND AND 101ST AIRBORNE DIVISIONS.

CANADIANS, WHO PIONEERED MASS INVASION TACTICS AT DIEPPE, SUFFERED POSSIBLY MORE HEAVILY THAN ANY CANADIAN FORCE SINCE.

AND HIS STATEMENT SEEMED BORNE OUT FOR THE FRENCH FIGURES COVERED A 15-DAY PERIOD COMPARED TO THE DAWN-TO-DUSK ENCOUNTER AT DIEPPE WHEN CANADA SUFFERED 1,985 CASUALTIES. THE ARMYSPOKESMAN MADE HIS STATEMENT BEFORE THE FRENCH CASUALTIES WERE GIVEN AND HE SAID HE DOUBTED IF ANY DAY'S CASUALTY TOTAL IN FRANCE WOULD EXCEED THE DIEPPE FIGURE.

JUN 27 1944

OTHER SHORT CAMPAIGNS WHICH HAVE TAKEN A TOLL OF CANADIAN ARMS HAVE BEEN THE TWO-WEEK HONG KONG STAND WHERE THE DOMINION SUFFERED 3,384 IN DEAD AND PRISONERS AND THE FOUR-WEEK SICILIAN CAMPAIGN WHICH RESULTED IN 2,439 CASUALTIES.

FIGURES FOR THE MEDITERRANEAN FIGHTING SHOWED A TOTAL OF 5,735 FOR THE FOUR-MONTH PERIOD FROM FEB. 12 TO THE FALL OF ROME, COMPARED WITH 5,605 IN THE FIVE-MONTH PERIOD FROM THE START OF THE ITALIAN INVASION SEPT. 3 TO FEB. 12.

THE MOST RECENT COMPILATION OF ARMY CASUALTIES MADE BY THE WARTIME INFORMATION BOARD COVERED THE PERIOD UP TO APRIL 30 AND SHOWED A TOTAL OF 18,390 COMPRISING 6,133 DEAD, 381 MISSING, 8,225 WOUNDED AND 3,651 PRISONERS.

ON JUNE 17, LT.-GEN. OMAR BRADLEY, UNITED STATES FIELD COMMANDER, ANNOUNCED THE AMERICAN CASUALTIES FOR THE FIRST 11 DAYS OF FIGHTING AS 3,283 KILLED AND 12,600 WOUNDED. HE SAID THAT AT THE CENRAL BEACHHEAD WHERE THE 1ST DIVISION AND ELEMENTS OF THE 29TH DIVISION LANDED, CASUALTIES HAD RUN HIGHER THAN ANTICIPATED WHILE CASUALTIES IN THE PENINSULAR AREA TO THE WEST HAD BEEN LOWER THAN ANTICIPATD. LATER WAR SECRETARY STIMSON SAID THAT GEN. BRADLEY'S FIGURES HAD NOT BEEN FINAL.

Allies on 3 Sides of Caen; Reds Take Mogilev

60 GERMAN TANKS ARE KNOCKED OUT IN FIERY BATTLE

Tommies and Canadians Crash Ahead Despite Stubborn Nazi Defense.

COUNTERATTACKS FAIL

British Officer Says Three Nazi Divisions in 'Complete Turmoil'.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Thursday, June 29.—(AP)—British tanks and infantry backed by Canadian gunners caught the prize inland port of Caen in a steel nutcracker last night, reaching to within four miles southwest of the city and throwing at least three German divisions into turmoil in probably the greatest armored battle ever fought in western Europe.

North and northeast of Caen the British pressed down at distances of two to three miles from Caen in fierce, fluid combat between Epron and Herouville and along the Orne River canal, but it was the southwestern outflanking move that brought the greatest conflict and threw the Nazis into the deadliest peril.

NIGHT

Beat Off Counterattack

Roger D. Greene, Associated Press correspondent with the British forces, said in a frontline dispatch that nine separate German counterattacks had been beaten off without any gain for the enemy, while the British tanks and Tommies pressed ahead, crossing the Odon river line at several places.

Crashing through the woods, tank confronted tank at distances as little as 30 yards, he said, and in three days of the British offensive more than 60 German tanks have been knocked out, making a total of more than 160 since the Allies invaded Normandy June 6.

British tanks overran German long-range gun positions so swiftly that the enemy could not bring his cannon to bear, and had either to surrender or be mowed down.

"It it a big operation, very successful, and very difficult," said a British staff officer at field headquarters.

He described three German armored divisions as thrown into "complete turmoil," milling around in confusion all along the front in vain attempts to stem the British advance.

The German infantry has been so depleted, Greene wrote, that few prisoners are being taken, for the Germans are having to rely on their tanks and artillery in the ferocious but confused effort to save Caen from encirclement.

German counterattacks were led by as many as 35 tanks each, but all failed.

(The German radio complained that the British had thrown in "considerable reserves, especially tanks and artillery," and that Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery was "stubbornly sticking to his intention of encircling the city of Caen from the south." It spoke also of a German "elastic defense.")

A headquarters communique late Wednesday night announced continuing progress in spite of more bad weather and intense opposition.

Both infantry and armored forces cracked through the Germans' Odon river line on a two-mile-wide front south of Tourville, the communique said, adding, "our advance continued toward high ground south of the Odon."

The push went on at least two miles past the Oddon and within two and one-half miles from the Orne river, on which Caen is situated.

Other British troops fought two miles north of Caen and three miles northeast, ready to drive in frontally while the outflanking movement which was the main threat looped rapidly around from the west and southwest.

Clean Out German Units

The by-passed German position at the village of Rauray, southeast of Fontenay and west of Caen, was cleaned out during the day. Resistance there had been most stubborn," the communique said.

On the Cherbourg peninsula the Americans seized Maupertus airfield east of the city of Cherbourg and were breaking down the last enemy resistance at the peninsula's northeastern and northwestern capes.

The final tally of prisoners was expected to reach 30,000 to 40,000, bringing close to 50,000 the total taken since the invasion began June 6.

A staff officer at Field Headquarters described this as just a sweeping job, with no remaining opposition worthy of the name, but said the British in the southeastern sector of the French beachhead were battling against furious German opposition from the 21st, 12th S.S. (Elite Guard), and Lehrpanzer (Model) divisions. These probably are not now at full strength, due to battle losses, but are described as excellent troops. Nevertheless, they are in "complete turmoil" west and southwest of Caen, he stated.

Another Panzer division, not officially identified, was also in action elsewhere on the British front, and it was said at headquarters that the present terrific battle might determine the fate of a large portion of the German 15th and 17th armies.

Lt. Gen. Miles C. Dempsey, 47, who commanded the 13th corps of the British Eighth Army in Africa, Sicily and Italy, was disclosed to be in command of the British forces, designated as the Second army.

Headquarters said the originally-narrow British front was being broadened steadily and progress was continuing, despite bad weather which continued to hamper use of the overwhelming Allied air power. Advanced ground patrols had pushed into the farmlands less than a mile northeast of Esquay, about four miles southwest of Caen, and two and one-half miles from the Orne river.

In their two-mile-wide thrust across the Odon river, the Tommies engulfed Mouen, Grainville-sur-Odon, Mondrainville, Tourville and Colleville and mopped up the Germans in a previously-by-passed pocket at Onchy and at Tessel-Bretteville.

"The operation is very successful and we hold a very strong corridor across the Odon," said a staff officer in the field. "We are firmly established along the villers Bocage-Caen road."

This placed them in more open country suitable to the type of armored offensive being waged.

Immediately north of Caen, there was heavy fighting just south of the village of Cambes.

A Busy Port

Caen, thus threatened both by encirclement and headon assault, should prove a valuable addition to the Allied unloading facilities. Although it is nine miles in from the sea, its position on the canalized Orne river made it France's seventh busiest port in peacetime.

Supreme headquarters meanwhile disclosed the prospective value of Caen in a survey which showed the Germans had damaged seriously Cherbourg's great port facilities. The nature of the damage was not specified, but it was declared that considerable improvisation would be required to get the fullest advantage from the port. A salvage fleet under experts who got smashed North African ports going in less than two weeks was prepared to do the same for Cherbourg, however.

On both flanks of the British positions north and northeast of Caen, the Germans were resisting bitterly, with anti-tank guns hidden in the woods and supported by roving tank patrols.

2-WEEK YANK LOSS IN FRANCE 24,162

3,082 U. S. Dead; Total Allied Casualties Are 40,549

JUN 28 1944

London, June 28 (AP)—The first two weeks of the European invasion cost the Allies 40,549 casualties, including 24,162 Americans killed, wounded or missing, supreme headquarters announced today, compared with 70,000 German casualties in three weeks of battle.

The Allied casualty figures do not include last week's losses in the final assault on Cherbourg, or in the launching of the new British offensive in the Caen sector.

3,082 Americans Killed

The casualty total for the period from June 6 to June 20, inclusive, listed 3,082 Americans killed, 12.7 per cent. of all American losses. Many of these came in the first two days of fighting on the beaches, when elements of the First and 29th divisions ran headlong into a German division engaged in maneuvers.

The British lost 1,842 dead, 13.5 per cent. of their total losses, and the Canadians, 363, or 12.9 per cent. of their casutities. The total dead for all forces was 5,287, which was 13 per cent. of the total casualties.

NIGHT

The total missing in the fighting in France was 12.183, some of whom probably are dead. The wounded totaled 23,079.

The Americans lost 13,121 wounded and 7,959 missing. Of the British total of 13,57z, there were 8,599 wounded and 3,131 missing; and of the Canadians, with a 2,815 total. 1,359 were wounded and 1,093 missing.

Given Burma-India Figures

Meanwhile, Southeast Asia Command headquarters at Kandy, Ceylon, disclosed that in Burma and India from January 1 to May 31 the Allies lost 6,000 killed or missing and 12,000 wounded, against Japanese losses of 21,700 dead and a probable 20,000 wounded. These were exclusive of Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's Chinese-American forces in northern Burma.

Last June 22, an announcement in Washington had place ' the total American casualties in all war theaters since the beginning of hostilities at 225,382, including 178,677 for the army through June 6, the first day of the Normandy invasion, and 46,705 for the navy to June 22.

British forces' casualties for the first four years of the war were 667,159, Prime Minister Winston Churchill told the House of Commons yesterday.

British Drive Forging Ahead; Nazis Described as in Turmoil

Montgomery's Offensive Rolls Up to Line 2½ Miles From River Orne and a Mile From Maltot.

BULLETIN.

On the British Front, June 28 (A. P.).—Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's thundering offensive rolled up to within two and one-half miles of the Orne River tonight at a point a mile from Maltot. The Germans were described by a staff officer as in complete turmoil along the front west of Caen.

Tank Battle On Behind Caen.

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 28 (A. P.).—British tank columns burst two miles through the Germans' Odon River line and engaged the enemy in the greatest armored battle of the liberation campaign four miles southwest of Caen today.

The battle raging now in open country may decide the fate of a large part of the German Fifteenth and Seventeenth armies. The enemy had grouped four armored divisions around Caen, his eastern Normandy stronghold 120 miles from Paris.

Advancing southwest of Caen in a flanking drive, Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's forces tore a breach six miles wide in Nazi defenses, cut the peninsular base road from Caen, poured over the Odon River, and drove two miles deeper to a point northeast of Esquay. This deep penetration sliced the road from Caen to Evrecy, and threatened the remaining German-held highways feeding Caen from the south and southeast.

British armor can move swiftly across the open, rolling plains below Caen, and the Germans must block this thrust or face the threat of having large forces encircled. Swift armored drives are an old story to Gen. Montgomer's desert veterans, and one of Britain's most famous tank generals is directing the operations.

Violent fighting also broke out a few miles north of Caen in the Combes area with British troops pinning down German defense forces while tanks swept in from behind.

Allied planes hovered over the tank battle and blasted Nazi reserves. Twenty-five German tanks were knocked out in Tuesday's fighting, and today's battle was on a much larger scale. Planes shot up twenty-seven troop-carrying vehicles rushing about 800 German reinforcements to a weak spot, destroying twelve and damaging the others.

British infantrymen alone have advanced more than six miles since Gen. Montgomery began his offensive Monday. The drive won Tourville along the cross-peninsular road from Caen, then moved northeast of Esquay, about six miles southwest of Caen and midway between the Odon and Orne rivers.

Strong Corridor Across River.

"The operation is very successful and we hold a very strong corridor across the Odon," a staff officer in the field told Associated Press War Correspondent Roger Greene.

[Vichy radio declared Gen. Montgomery was using 100,000 troops and two armored divisions in this all-out assault. The German High Command acknowledged a penetration in one area in this sector, but said other blows were thwarted.]

Gen. Montgomery held a position of great potential advantage at Tourville, about six miles southwest of Caen. A swift armored drive from there, such as characterized his African Desert offensives, would cut all Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's communications into Caen and certainly trap a number of Nazi divisions around the city.

Rommel was known to have four tank divisions, two of them seasoned outfits, in this area. The biggest tank battle of the campaign, similar to those which characterized the fighting in Libya and Tunisia, appeared in the offing.

Gen. Montgomery's heavy offensive, which had out-flanked Caen, 120 miles from Paris, was headed into country which Allied officers called ideal for a show-down tank battle with Rommel's armor. The drive already had cut both the highway and the railway leading to Avranches, on the southern end of the Cherbourg peninsula.

Headquarters disclosed that Lieut.-Gen Miles C. Dempsey, 47, commander of the veteran Thirteenth Corps of the Eighth Army in Africa, Sicily, and Italy, was leading the British Second Army in France.

Americans in Cherbourg captured a second German general, the deputy commander of Cherbourg, Major-Gen. Robert Stattler, yesterday when they stormed the arsenal in the port city, one of the last centers of Nazi resistance.

On the Cherbourg peninsula Americans continued their mop-up job and attacking German-held Maupertus Airfield to the east of Cherbourg and remnants of Germans trapped at Cap de la Hague.

Supreme Headquarters estimated at 30,000 to 40,000 the total of prisoners on Cherbourg peninsula. Perhaps 10,000 prisoners have been captured in other sectors of Normandy, bringing to 40,000-50,000 the total Allied bag.

Potential Advantage

General Montgomery held a position of great potential advantage at Tourville. A swift armored drive from there, such as characterized his African desert offensives, would cut all Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's communications into Caen and certainly trap a number of Nazi divisions around the city.

The British advance was made in the hardest kind of fighting. The Germans used tanks extensively and dozens of big German Tiger and Panther tanks were destroyed.

Shape Of V

The breach in the German lines extends from St. Manvieu, west and south of Caen, to a point west of Juvigny. The salient then shapes down in a "V" across the river Odon at Tourville.

(Berlin radio declared the guns of "modern British battleships" were being employed in the fighting around Tilly, with planes directing their fire for several hours. It acknowledged a withdrawal of two kilometers "to avoid unnecessary losses."

Montgomery's heavy offensive was headed into country which Allied officers called ideal for a show-down tank battle with Rommel's armor.

Rail Line Cut

The drive already had cut both the highway and the railway leading to Avranches, on the southern end of the Cherbourg peninsula.

Associated Press Correspondent Roger D. Greene, moving up with the British troops, said he saw many smashed and burned-out German tanks. Allied officers said the Germans in that area still possessed great fire power but seemed to be short on infantry.

A dispatch from 21st Army Group Headquarters said five German generals had been killed thus far in the Normandy campaign. It estimated 100 German tanks had been destroyed and at least 200 knocked out.

In Cherbourg Sector

Americans in Cherbourg captured a second German general, the deputy commander of Cherbourg, Maj-Gen. Robert Stattler, yesterday when they stormed the arsenal in the port city, one of the last centers of Nazi resistance.

Americans continued their mop-up in the Cherbourg peninsula, capturing an arsenal which had been holding out, and attacking German-held Maupertus airfield to the east of Cherbourg and remnants of Germans trapped at Cap de la Hague.

Progress In Cleanup

"Allied forces made progress in cleaning out enemy remnants hemmed in on the horns of the peninsula," said communique No. 45, issued at 11 A. M. today.

The business of mopping up isolated German garrisons was not expected to take long, although it was considered that Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley would not launch a quick attack if he feels the garrisons will give up under incessant land and air bombardment when their food and munitions run low.

Among the effective air operations was an attack by rocket-firing Typhoons of the RAF, which demolished a German army corps headquarters located in a chateau at St. Sauveur-Endelin, in the southern part of the Cherbourg Peninsula.

Allies Report 40,549 Casualties in France

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 28 (A. P.).—The supreme command announced today that the first two weeks of the European invasion cost the Allies 40,549 casualties, including 24,162 Americans killed, wounded and missing, figures which do not include last week's losses in the Cherbourg assault, or the start of the new British offensive in the Caen area. Of the casualty total for the period from June 6 to June 20, inclusive, 5,287 were killed—of which 3,082 were Americans, 1,842 British and 363 Canadians.

Against these Allied losses, German casualties in Normandy through the fall of Cherbourg have been estimated by Supreme Headquarters at not less than 70,000 men. A large percentage of the American casualties came in the first two bloody days of fighting on the beaches when elements of the First and Twenty-ninth Divisions ran head-on into a German division practicing invasion exercises along the landing coast. The British and Canadians were able to land with less opposition.

The complete Allied figures for the two-week period:

United States—3,082 killed, 13,121 wounded, and 7,959 missing, a total of 24,162.

British—1,842 killed, 8,599 wounded, and 3,131 missing, a total of 13,572.

Canadian—363 killed, 1,359 wounded, and 1,093 missing, a total of 2,815.

Against these casualties are more than 32,000 German prisoners already in the Allied bag and many hundreds more uncounted, as well as many dead. The casualties showed remarkable uniformity as to the number killed out of the total casualties.

Out of the 40,549 casualties, 5,287 were killed, 23,079 wounded and 12,183 missing. The per cent of fatal casualties of the total was 13. The per cent of Americans killed was 12.7, the British 13.5 and the Canadian 12.9. Some missing probably are dead. Others are prisoners.

A Washington announcement on June 22 placed the total American casualties in all war theaters since the beginning of hostilities at 225,382. This included 178,677 for the Army through June —the first day of the Normandy invasion—and 46,705 for the Navy to June 22.

Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons yesterday that casualties for British forces for the first four years of the war totaled 667,159. This morning's Supreme Headquarters announcements showed a revison of the American losses over the figures announced on June 17 by Lieut.-Gen. Omar N. Bradley for the first eleven days of the campaign. He said that they included 3,283 kiled and 12,600 wounded.

Nazis in Turmoil

ON THE BRITISH FRONT IN FRANCE, June 28 (A. P.)—Tank-led British troops reached within two and one-half miles of the Orne River southeast of Caen tonight, and a British staff officer described the Germans as in "complete turmoil" along the front west and southwest of Caen.

Nine separate German tank counter-attacks jabbing at all sides of the British crossing, have been beaten off without a single enemy gain.

The obviously confused Germans, who have had their infantry defense lines west and southwest of Caen shattered by the three-day-old British offensive, are dependent now almost entirely on artillery and tanks in their frenzied attempts to block the British break-through.

The tank battle, perhaps the biggest ever fought in western Europe, raged all day long. At times tanks came within thirty yards of each other in the closely wooded country. More than sixty German tanks have been knocked out in the last three days, making more than 160 for the campaign in this sector.

Few Prisoners Taken

Few prisoners have been taken because the German infantry forces have been so badly depleted. However, many gun positions have been overrun by British tanks, which roared up among the thickly studded enemy artillery with such speed they mowed down the Nazi gunners.

The flanking threat to Caen now has become acute, but it remains to be seen whether Field Marshal von Rundstedt will withdraw from that stronghold or remain to fight it out.

Just above Caen, within 5,000 yards of the British infantry, tanks stormed and captured the strategic Chateau de la Lond, southeast of Cambes, after three earlier assaults had been hurled back by deployed, entrenched German infantry with dug-in tanks and anti-tank guns. The chateau was seized after an all-day battle.

Here is the last-minute battle line above the Odon: Juvigny to Tessel-Bretteville, to Rauray, Grainville-sur-Odon, Gavrus, Tourville, Mouen and Marcelet.

The British captured Grainville-sur-Odon and Marcelet and drove to a new crossing of the Odon north of Gavrus to within a mile of Evrecy. The Germans counter-attacked with as high as thirty-five tanks on a single sector but "not a single enemy thrust was successful."

FRENCH CIVILIAN REFUGEES STREAM

INTO CHERBOURG

BOYLE

CHERBOURG, France, June 28—(AP) Die-hard Germans hopelessly trapped on Cap De La Hague northwest of this fallen port fought sporadically today against American troops methodically ironing them out.

Slight resistance also continued at Fort Central, the breakwater entrance to the harbor, but thousands of French civilian refugees began streaming back into the city even as the liberating Yanks were reducing enemy strongpoints.

The Nazis still had several artillery batteries in action and retained positions in Vauville, Branville, Beaumont-Hague and Querqueville, west of the city.

At Branville, keystone of the anti- climactic German defense, one strong unit stubbornly continued the battle and offered heavy opposition to American mopping-up forces.

NIGHT

It was moving day in Cherbourg. Scores of carts packed with household belongings trundled into the city, but most shops remained closed. In the port and warehouses troops began sorting out great stores of German military supplies, including liquor, food and tobacco. Dozens of beef and pork carcasses hung in one storage plant and in a nearby abbatoir hogs, which had been brought for slaughter but were given a brief new lease of life by the battle for the city, were wandering at will.

The German garrison of 400 troops which had been holding out near Maupertus airport, east of Cherbourg, put up the white flag at 6 a.m. The surrendering troops said they were the last of Nazi forces on the northeastern cape.

Second Lieutenant John C. Rebarchek, 24, of Graceton, Minn. The enemy's five 105-mm. guns, five 88s and 16 other automatic weapons awed him not a whit.

Rebarchek led 125 men up the wooded slope to storm the strong point against withering frontal and flanking fire. Three times he leaped on top of a tank rallying his men and keeping the assault moving forward. When victory came, only 60 of his command were still in combat; 25 were dead and 40 were wounded.

DAY

228 Nazis Gave Up

But 228 Germans came out waving white flags and behind them were 70 dead.

Lieut. Col. Carlton MacNeely, of Columbus, Ga., commander of the second battalion which closely followed Company E into the strong point with Capt. George Mobry, Jr., of Sumter, S. C., said the position was one of the most stoutly defended spots he had seen since D-day.

Rebarchek's colonel said he was recommending for the lieutenant a Congressional Medal of Honor, adding:

"I believe that in all 20 days of the invasion there has been a no more heroic attack. The men were magnificent. As the wounded came back they wanted to know only one thing—how are we doing?"

Most From South

Company E, Second Battalion, Fourth Division, is composed of brave men, mostly from the South but with a generous sprinkling of soldiers from New York, New England and the Middle West.

Rebarchek captured a Nazi battle flag. Bede Irvin, Associated Press photographer, and I took it back with us to mail to Rebarchek's wife in Portland, Ore.

of the Nazi fleet and harbor fortifications here.

Took Nazi Headquarters

They also took Nazi general headquarters, deep in the hill outside the town and seized more than 5,000 prisoners.

This is quite a story, and Gordon, a resident of Magee, Miss., is a modest man. He is tall, blond, and, as a commander, beloved by his men. I had to go to them to get the whole story of the company's exploits from the time they surrounded the deep, central underground headquarters high on the hill above Cherbourg, and captured the brains of the German defense.

NIGHT

More than 1,500 officers and men were captured in this action, including Lieut. Gen. Carl Wilhelm von Schlieben, commanding general at the Cherbourg garrison, and Rear Admiral Walther Hennecke, German naval commander in Normandy.

NIGHT

Scouts Located Headquarters

"We came sweeping up to this hill," said Lieut. William E. Goodrich, whose wife lives at Louisville, Miss. "Advance scouts told us where the huge dugout was located and that it was a mine with three exits.

"We surrounded them pronto and forced the Nazis back into one main exit. The Fourth Platoon then threw in mortars. They had 20-mm. guns, machine guns and small-arms fire, and were tossing that stuff straight at us. It wasn't nice.

"We were on the top of a cliff overlooking them and we had no way to get in, in the face of concentrated fire. Hell, they had one machine gunner as tough as the devil. He shot that stuff straighter than old Dizzy Dean could shoot a baseball. We never did get him as far as I know.

City, and Sergt. Grant C. Reber, of Detroit, also sent in a youth they had captured, with orders to have that bunch come out in a half hour or 'we blow the hell outta you.'

Bickered Over Terms

"In less than a half hour an adjutant to the Nazi general marched stiffly out an dbickered with General Eddy, who remained adamant on unconditional surrender.

"Then he went back into the dugout, where we learned later some of them had been living for four years. All of a sudden men started coming out. They came and came. We couldn't believe our eyes. You should have seen the brass of these officers—real Nazi and all that—strutting their stuff, clicking their heels and looking down their noses.

"Some of the other outfits came up and damn if they didn't go after our prisoners. They hadn't even been in the fighting, so I thought I'd be darned if they were going to get the big boys, so I went down and steered the Nazi general and the admiral and the other officers our way, and brought them up to General Eddy.

High-Tailed Into Town

"The outfit left some 1,500 prisoners in the hands of British marines and high-tailed it to the town. They went through the outskirts of the port city with flank protection on both sides and their machine guns up front, looking for snipers and other trouble."

Near the city hall they found same Nazis hiding out in a dugout. As it was pitch dark, Goodrich said, but he, Corporal Dale Garner, of Ravenna, Ohio, Staff Sergeant Larry T. Faulkner, of Cincinnati, and Sergt. Raymond Hurst, of Louisville, slid silently into the pit. The Germans proved only too happy to surrender.

Tiny American Flag Waves Over Cherbourg

NEW YORK, June 28—(AP) A little American flag about six inches long hangs from one flagpole over the port of Cherbourg, CBS correspondent Larry LeSueur said tonight in a broadcast from the French port.

JUN 29 1944

The flag, LeSueur said "was hung there by an American soldier, Roy Fishstuecker of Gastonia, N. C., who shinnied up the pole while the fighting was still on, tore down the Nazi swastika, and ripped off a little American flag that he wore on his shoulder. Tonight it waves bravely over Cherbourg."

28,849 Nazis Captured

CHERBOURG, June 28 (AP).—Germans captured by American forces in France from D-Day, June 6, to last night totaled 28,849, it was disclosed officially today, and others still are being brought in. The biggest day's haul was June 26, when 9,381 were captured. Yesterday's figure was 8,592.

Allies Lay Channel Cable

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 28 (AP). — A special telephone cable laid under the English Channel since the invasion now is in use, it was disclosed today. The first call was from a Royal Air Force Normandy base to the office of Air Chief Marshal Trafford Leigh-Mallory. "It came through so clearly that it might easily have been an ordinary local call," said the W. A. A. F. telephone operator.

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 28 (AP)—The Canadian destroyer Huron and the British destroyer Eskimo sank two of three armed German trawlers near the Channel Islands early today and damaged a third, Allied headquarters announced tonight as Allied naval forces continued to blast apart any threat of German sea-borne interference.

Madrid, June 28 (AP)—French patriotic forces operating in the Limoges Mountains who withdrew from the town of Limoges only after the arrival of strong German reinforcements were reported today to have swept down last night into the Dordogne department on the south and to have severed all communications with its capital of Perigueux.

Montron in the north and Sarlat in the southwest were reported held by French Partisan forces. Five railroad lines running into Perigueux were severed.

Last night guerrillas were reported moving into the city, once called the gastronomic capital of France but now suffering the same food shortages as the rest of the German-occupied regions. Maqui forces were believed to be in control of the city, although the German garrison of several hundred strong has been prepared for just such an attack. German reinforcements were said to be en route from Bordeaux, 70 miles to the southwest.

French Cut 2d Nazi Railway Line

Port Bou, Spain, June 28 (AP)—French guerrillas striking in the Tarbes region of the Pyrenees, have cut the railroad between the junctions of Auch and Tarbes in a raid on Mielan, about half way between those two points, it was reported today.

JUN 29 1944

The Patroits, descending from the Lannemezan plateau, which they were said to hold firmly, blew up stretches of the secondary rail line and cut telephone and telegraph lines at Mielan, frontier advices said.

DAY

Main Line Cut Previously

The Toulouse-Bayonne main line had been reported severed previously in that region, compelling the Germans to rely on the secondary line through Auch for east-and-west rail communications.

Farther north French Patriot forces were reported to have taken hostages from local collaborationists in the Villeneuve region of the Lot river, about 18 miles north of Agen, and to have driven off with a number of truckloads of food and munitions. Vichy officials were said to have retaliated by arresting Allied sympathizers.

Washington, June 28 (AP)—Advance shipments for the invasion piled up more than 16,000,000 tons of supplies in Britain in a year, twice the tonnage which General Pershing received during World War I, Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell reported today.

The commanding general of the Army Service Forces said in an interview that pre-shipment of supplies for the invasion stock piles began more than 12 months ago, and that as long ago as last August 11, the army began planning in exact detail the restoration of the port of Cherbourg.

A "Keyed Project"

Cherbourg was a "keyed project," said Somervell, and a hint of the staggering planning job that preceded the landings in Normandy was contained in his added comment that there were more than 300 keyed projects of various size and importance.

Complete restoration of the port of Cherbourg, based on the experience at Naples, may take several weeks, Somervell stated, but it will be in use long before that—probably is already in use. And when the work is complete, the port's capacity will have been greatly expanded.

Learned In Other Campaigns

The beachhead supply was on a scale which no one would have dreamed was possible, he said.

"We learned an awful lot in our operations in Africa, Sicily and Italy, and the dozens of operations in the Pacific," the general said.

"We learned what could be put across a beach, and how it could be put across. The result has been that, with proper organization and equipment, we landed several times as much as anyone dreamed was possible.

Everything Moved Inland

"General Arnold told me when he came back that he was on the beachhead on the fifth day and there was nothing piled up there, no confusion. Everything had been moved inland."

Somervell looked fatigued, but only by implication did he refer to the endless conferences, the constant exchange of telegrams and radiograms and telephone conversations with headquarters in England.

The planning began, he said, with fixing a deadline for arrival of the equipment, then working back from that to fix production schedules in the factories, shipments from the factories to the ports of embarkation, shipment from the ports to England.

Bottleneck—Size Of Ports

It had to take into account the number and capacity of ships available, the capacity of English ports, the capacity of rail lines from the ports in England, and finally the capacity of the storage depots in Britain.

"In this case, the bottleneck was not shipping, but the number of ships that could be received in English ports," Somervell continued.

"As time went on people began to get flurried, with their nerves on edge. It was the old 'cut and try' method. All of this was tied, of course, to priorities."

Requisitions Clash

Requisitions for critical items clashed at times with requisitions from other theaters, and sometimes it was necessary to appeal to the operations division of the general staff to make a decision when there was not enough to go around. Some of these decisions involved taking equipment away from troops in training in this country.

"I established a shortage list several months ago," Somervell said. "Out of about 1,000,000 items, we wound up with only six in short supply.

"That's a better mark than I ever was able to make in school, thanks to the cooperation of the people over there, and the extremely fine work of the technical services over here."

WASHINGTON, June 28 (AP).—The Army announced today that the first German prisoners captured by Allied forces in Normandy have reached the United States. RUSSIANS SEIZE THREE NAZI-HELD FORTIFIED TOWNS

Mogilev, Lepel and Osipovichi Fall to Surging Red Army Advance.

TRAP IS TIGHTENED

Soviets Within 50 Miles of Minsk—Some German Units Surrendering.

LONDON, Thursday, June 29—(AP) Continuing the swift westward advance which in less than a week has re-occupied approximately 25,000 square miles of Russian soil and liberated some 5,000 places, Soviet troops captured the Nazi strongholds of Mogilev, Lepeland Osipovichi in White Russia yesterday and closed to within 50 miles of the historic city of Minsk, Moscow said today.

The new successes virtually destroyed the "Fatherland Line" which the Germans had heavily fortified over a depth of many miles and brought the complete encirclement of Bobruisk, last Nazi stronghold in this system of fortifications.

By taking the railway junction of Osipovichi on the Minsk-Bobruisk line the Reds established a strong salient within 60 miles of Minsk from the southeast and to the northeast were even closer to the White Russian capital.

The Russian communique announced the capture of Kostritsa, eight miles northeast of Borisov, placing this important enemy base on the railroad and highway 46 miles east of Minsk in imminent danger of capture.

Berlin radio said Soviet tank columns and troop concentrations were near Borisov and were being attacked by the German air force.

Report Nazis Surrendering

Moscow said Nazi troops were surrendering in large numbers and everywhere being routed at a tremendous cost in German lives and equipment.

The midnight supplement to the Soviet communique declared fighting for the capture of Lepel, 42 miles south of Polotsk, was "characterized by mass annihilation of enemy manpower."

The supplement also said that the Red army of General Konstantin K. Rokossovsky was tightening its ring of encirclement around the five trapped German infantry divisions in the Bobruisk area.

The Germans were so closely surrounded that it seemd possible the toll there might be even greater than in the liquidation of five divisions south of Vitebsk Tuesday when 20,000 were reported killed and 10,000 taken prisoner.

Altogether more than 1,000 populated places within the flaming 250-mile zone of fighting were taken during the day as the Soviet forces swept through what were reputed to be the Nazis' strongest defenses on the eastern front.

Mogilev fell to Col. Gen. Matvei Zakharov's Second White Russian army after 24 hours of bitter street fighting, Premier Stalin announced in one of two special orders of the day.

Capture Two Generals

In the course of blasting the Nazis out of their last fortress on the Dnepr river, the Russian troops captured two German generals, Lt. Gen. Bammler and Maj. Gen. Ermannsdorf, and completely routed the 12th German infantry division, said the daily broadcast communique recorded by the Soviet monitor.

The capture of Lepel placed the advancing first Baltic army of Gen. Ivan Bagramian about 20 miles from the old Polish border, the closest the Reds have reached to the frontier in north central Russia.

Field dispatches said the Russians, who opened their tremendous summer offensive last Friday, were within 50 miles of Minsk and it seemed possible that this major goal of the White Russian front might be reached in the first week of fighting.

Osipovichi, 60 miles southeast of Minsk on the railway to Bobruisk, was taken in a "deep out-flanking" maneuver by Gen. Konstantin K. Rokossovsky's First White Russian army and completed the encirclement of Bobruisk, Stalin announced in his second order of the day.

Five Divisions Trapped

The Russians already had trapped five German infantry divisions in the area of Bobruisk, 70 miles southwest of Mogilev, and the latest fighting conquered a new and larger area of encirclement.

More than 200 localities were liberated during the day's fighting on this southern perimeter of the ring around the Germans, and one of them, Stariye Dorogi, is 38 miles west of Bobruisk. Osipovichi, on the railway and highway to Minsk, is 26 miles northwest of Bobruisk and captured Klichev is 25 miles due north of the city.

The drive around Mogilev, piercing the second belt of German fortifications in this area, brought the capture of more than 450 other places, including the district centers of Shklov and Bykov, and cleared the last stretch of the trunk railroad connecting Leningrad and Odessa — an important strategic gain for supplying the Red armies as they press on toward old Poland.

Due West Toward Minsk

Striking almost due westward in the Minsk direction, the Soviets fought their way into another 400 inhabited communities and captured two district centers.

The Soviet generals were using tanks and aircraft in great waves to help the infantry blast holes through the German lines and the communique said that in Tuesday's fighting 109 Nazi tanks and 61 enemy planes were destroyed on all fronts.

In the north on the Finnish front, Moscow said the Russians also were rolling forward. Southwest of Viipuri, in the Gulf of Finland, enemy troops were cleared from another island and between Lakes Ladoga and Onezhskoe (Onega) the Reds advanced 19 miles and captured 11 places.

Stalin's Order Of Day

Shklov, 20 milees north of Mogilev, and Bykhov, 23 miles south of the city, also fell in pincers, Stalin announced. The victory called for 20 salvoes from Moscow's 224 guns.

Stalin's order of the day, addressed to Gen. Matvei Zakharov, said:

"Troops of the second White Russian front, having forced the Dnepr along a stretch of 75 miles, pierced the second defense line of the Germans on the western bank of the river and carried by assault the large regional center of the White Russian town of Mogilev, strategically important stronghold in the Minsk direction."

Mogilev had been held by the Germans since July, 1941.

March To Berlin Hailed

Berlin acknowledged it could not check the sweep westward through White Russia. Moscow hailed the drive as an auspicious start on the march to Berlin, 580 miles west of Minsk. The Russians were astride the main route and traveling at one of the fastest paces of the war.

The troops closest to Minsk, [illegible] city (239,000 population) still in German hands, were those of 36-year-old Gen. Ivan Cherniakhovsky. He was pressing at Borisov and along the Berezina banks after taking Orsha. His northern flank joined the troops under Gen. Ivan Bagramian's First Baltic Army now menacing Borisov with a wide encircling maneuver.

Gen. Konstantin Rokossovsky's forward fighters were driving from the southeast over Minsk-Gomel arteries and were said by Moscow to be less than 70 miles from the White Russian capital.

Heavy Air Support Given Drives For Minsk

Moscow, June 28 (AP)—Supported by one of the greatest air attacks ever hurled against the Germans on the Russian front, the Red army closed in from three directions today on Minsk, the capital of White Russia.

Dispatches said that probably never before had Stormoviks (dive bombers) been thrown with such strength and effectiveness against Nazi armored forces. Hour after hour they were reported searching out German tanks, plastering them with their flying artillery and blasting the way for four armies converging in a great semi-circle on the gateway city to Warsaw and Germany.

36-Year-Old General Commands

The northernmost of the three spearheads aimed at Minsk was composed of Gen. Ivan Bagramian's First Baltic Army and 36-year-old Gen. Ivan Cherniakhovsky's Third White Russian Army. In the van of this group were the Stormoviks, fast Yak fighter planes, and medium bombers of Lieut. Gen. N. P. Papivin, Bagramian's 37-year-old air commander, and Col. Gen. Timofey Kruikin, Cherniakhovsky's youthful aviation chief.

Two of the most astute students of aviation in the Red air force, these young officers were reported throwing clouds of dive-bombers and medium bombers against the German ground troops and fortifications, blasting bridges and strafing communications lines over a wide area.

Reds Face Two Obstacles

Cherniakhovsky, the youngest army general in Russia, turned westward toward Minsk after capturing Orsha yesterday and drove steadily forward. Two big obstacles were in his path—the Berezina River and the city of Borisov.

A communique said Soviet forces had seized Bobr, another rail center 46 miles to the southwest of Orsha, and Glusk, about 75 miles southeast of Minsk.

50 Miles From Minsk

Field dispatches said that Cherniakhovsky's advance units were less than 50 miles from Minsk and about 26 miles east of Borisov. Other units under his command were reported moving rapidly through sparsely settled lake country to the forest area farther north, where they were threatening to outflank Borisov from the northwest in conjunction with Bagramian's troops.

This combined force, which possesses great strength as far north as positions west of the captured town of Kamen, also offered the Germans another problem. While it is only 85 miles northeast of Minsk, it is only 35 miles from the railway leading from Germany and Poland into Polotsk, 65 miles from the Latvian border and less than 100 miles from Lithuania.

Drive From Southeast Also

The third thrust to Minsk came from Gen. Konstantin Rokossovsky's First White Russian Army, driving up from the southeast over the Minsk-Gomel highway and railway. A tremendous aviation force was likewise in the battle along this front.

Rokossovsky's army has pushed ahead toward Minsk, its advancing units about 75 miles away, while other units mopped up and surrounded a group of five German divisions just southeast of Bobruisk, which is tottering, with Russians already in its streets.

Chase Near Orsha Reported

The Red army is today close on the heels of the demoralized German troops fleeing from Orsha.

Mogilev Falls to Russians; Reds Race On Toward Minsk

German Lines in Central Front Sagging Under Heavy Land and Air Blows of Soviet Offensive.

London, June 28 (A. P.).—The Red Army has captured Mogilev and Osipovichi, guardian fortresses on the approaches to Minsk, less than sixty miles ahead of the onrushing Soviet troops, Marshal Stalin announced tonight in two orders of the day.

An earlier announcement broadcast from Moscow said:

"Troops of the Second White Russian front, having forced the Dnepr River along a stretch of seventy-five miles, pierced the second defense line of the Germans on the western bank of the river and carried by assault the large regional center of White Russia, the town of Mogilev, strategically important stronghold in the Minsk direction."

Shklov, twenty miles north of Mogilev, and Bykhov, twenty-three miles south of Mogilev, also fell to the three powerful Russian forces converging on the gateway to the Reich in overwhelming drives.

The German Fatherland Front had been split wide open.

A previous announcement told of the fall of both Orsha, vital railway junction fifty miles south of Vitebsk, and Bohr, another rail center forty-six miles to the southwest, and declared that more than a third of the main rail line between Orsha and Minsk was now in Russian hands.

Soviet troops also were fighting at the outskirts of Bobruisk said a Red Star dispatch broadcast by Moscow radio today, Reuter reported in London.

The report said: "The enemy first attempted to cover his flank with artillery barrages, but he was outgunned by the Soviet forces. The Germans broke and fled in disorder when the Russians entered Orsha."

The Soviet avalanche is moving westward, said Ilya Ehrenburg in an article broadcast by Moscow radio. "One front after another opens up as the new summer offensive widens with extraordinary speed—and every blow is a bulls-eye," he added.

Moscow radio quoted German prisoners as saying: "The Soviet artillery barrage at Bobruisk surpasses anything the eastern front has ever seen."

German Claims On Orsha

(The German radio said the German garrison at Orsha had succeeded in breaking through a strong Soviet encirclement to the west and is fighting its way toward German lines. The Vitebsk garrison is also making its way toward Nazi lines, the broadcast added.

(The Germans admitted the Russians had gained ground in the Bobruisk and Mogilev areas, but said the Red army was unable to smash those Nazi defense bases.)

Fight In Mogilev Streets

Strong air support was thrown also into the battle for Mogilev, where Gen. Georg Fedorovich Zaharov's Second White Russian Army battled the Nazis in the city's streets.

Between Mogilev and Orsha and and Orsha and Minsk the Russians have seized numerous trains packed with tanks, guns, ammunition and other stores, front dispatches said.

Reds Use New Bomber

The Red air force is employing a new two-engine bomber, the Tupolev Two, over the entire front. It is especially useful against railways, trains and blockhouses

In the far north the Red army continued its steady progress in the liberation of Karelia and the clearing of the Murmansk-Leningrad railway. Red army units edged steadily toward Petrozavdosk, on Lake Onezhskoe (Onega), 185 miles northeast of Leningrad.

Stalin Spurs Plane Outpu

Demands Mass Production Rathe Than Latest Improvements

MOSCOW, June 28 (AP).—Alexander Yakovlev, designer of the famed YAK fighter plane of the Red Air Force, said today that Premier Stalin personally supervised production of new machines for the front and consistently refused to sacrifice mass production in favor of the latest improvements. He qutoed Stalin as saying, "It is quite all right to improve construction, but what's most important is an increase in production."

While Soviet factories were turning out planes for the present offensive, Yakovlev declared, it was suggested to Stalin that heavier armor be used. Yakovlev said Stalin replied indignantly: "You might have a corner of a club installed in the planes for entertaining during the flight."

FINNS SPLIT OVER NAZI RULE

Five Social Democrats To Quit Ryti Government

Stockholm, Thursday, June 29 (AP)—The Berlin correspondent of the newspaper Dagens Nyheter said today it was rumored that Gen. Eduard Dietl, commander of German divisions in Finland, had been killed in an airplane crash. The correspondent said there had been no confirmation in Berlin.

By ROBERT STURDEVANT

Stockholm, Thursday, June 28 (AP)—Finland's dominant Social Democratic party has ordered its five Cabinet Ministers, including Finance Minister Vaino Tanner, withdrawn from the Ryti-Linkomies Government which plunged Finland into full collaboration with German and opened the doors of Southern Finland to Nazi troops.

The formal withdrawal is scheduled for a meeting of parliament today, but after spending five tense days in Helsinki it is my impression the action may yet be withheld as a result of the widely expressed fear of many Finns that Tanner's resignation might precipitate a collapse of the morale of Finnish troops at the front.

The Progressive party and the Swedish Peoples' party also expressed no confidence in the government in party caucuses. One Progressive member may withdraw from the Cabinet.

Other Members To Quit

Besides Tanner, who symbolizes Finland's resistance to Russia, other Social Democratic cabinet ministers slated to leave the Government are A. Aaltonen, Minister of Social Affairs; Vaino Salovaara, Minister of Communications; Dr. Takki, Minister of Trade, and Jalo Aura, Minister of Food.

Tanner, whose place in the jumbled political picture is not clear as a result of the tight censorship, actually was leader with President Risto Ryti in the unsuccessful move to form a new Government. Subsequently he opposed with other Social Democrats complete collaboration with Germany.

If Tanner and the other Social Democrats leave the Cabinet, Finland will be left virtually without a semblance of a democratic government.

Parliament Ignored

Finland at the moment is a democracy in little more than name only since Ryti, Premier Edwin Linkomies and Foreign Minister Sir Henrik Ramsay, without consulting Parliament, accepted Nazi Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop's proposals for full military collaboration with the Germans.

Owing to the tight censorship, which except for a slight lapse Tuesday night permitted me to disclose the arrival of German troops in Helsinki and other details, I was unable to report any of the dramatic events as they unfolded daily during my stay in Helsinki.

Beginning last Friday swarms of green-clad German troops, blue jackets and SS men made their appearance as if by magic in the streets of the capital while Ribbentrop urged the Government to stand pat and consent to nothing which would make a separate peace with Russia possible.

Nazis Appear Veterans

The troops appeared to be veterans, probably from the Narva front in Estonia. They came ashore from transports which docked at the Helsinki harbor and steamed away immediately after unloading. Others were reported to have landed at the naval base at Hango.

I watched columns of men, artillery and horses wind through the main streets to bivouacs on the outskirts of the city. Daily, small detachments of infantry also swung through the streets, singing Nazi marching songs for the benefit of the apathetic Finnish by-standers. It was a good show in the best Nazi tradition.

One cargo ship loaded with tanks overturned at the dock, dumping several tanks into the water. There were at least two submarines in the harbor.

Thought Only Token Aid

Despite the show there was a feeling in Helsinki the Germans were sending only token aid and nothing like the nine divisions von Ribbentrop reportedly had promised. Although authoritative information was difficult to obtain, at least some of the new arrivals already have reached the Finnish southern front.

With all pretense gone that Finland was battling only to settle her own score with Russia, relations between the United States and Finland appeared ready to snap.

Political Coup Hands Finland Over To Germany

Stockholm, June 28 (AP)—Finland, handed over to Germany by its leaders without Parliament's approval, swarmed with German troops today and all pretentions that the country was fighting a separate war with Russia were ended.

The capital resounded with the songs of German regulars and SS guards. Some were reported already at the eastern front to bolster Finnish defenses crumbling before the Russian onslaught.

An eyewitness who left Helsinki yesterday said President Risto Ryti, Premier Edwin Linkomies and Finance Minister Vaino Tanner submitted to Nazi pressure after a series of meetings with German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, Field Marshal General Wilhelm Keitel, Gen. Alfred Jodl and Col. Gen. Eduard Dietl.

Finland's leaders called for open German military support after the Nazis had turned the capital into a parade ground of German might. Destroyers brought blue-coated officers with their hip-swinging swords and German cavalry paraded through the heart of Helsinki.

Finland's Government announced officially last night that Ribbentrop had answered an appeal for helj with troops, and proclaimed that a "perfect understanding" had been reached between the two countries. Dispatches said the allignment was so complete the Finnish communique henceforth would be a part of the German communique.

Peace Drive Lost

The eyewitness gave the following report:

"A week ago Monday there was a well-organized move to force a change in the Government to one which could ask Russia for peace.

"Through bungling and dilly-dallying the opportunity was missed. The new Cabinet list actually was ready, with Foreign Minister Sir Henrik Ramsay as Premier and Labor Minister Kustaa Eemil Hynninen as the new Foreign Minister.

Reasons Explained

"But President Ryti held it up, fighting for time because he feels that the Russians are nearing exhaustion and eventually the Germans will be able to force a compromise peace in the East.

[Editor's Note—One section of this dispatch is missing at this point.]

"There were a couple of destroyers among them. Blue-coated officers with hip-swinging scabbards were evidence of a considerable navy on hand. One afternoon a Wehrmacht cavalry unit of about 50 horses paraded through the heart of the city down Mannerheim Boulevard.

Many Are Veterans

"The threat to the Finns was about as subtle as a ten-ton truck smashing into a brick wall.

"I learned authoritatively that German troops apparently were coming from Hamburg and debarking at Hango. They were good-looking soldiers, many of them decorated veterans.

"Ribbentrop arrived Thursday in a bomber. Field Marshal Keitel, General Jodl and Colonel General Dietl also arrived and apparently went to Field Marshal Baron Mannerheim's headquarters.

Caucuses Held

"I am told on good authority that a meeting of the cabinet occurred Saturday night, lasting until 3 A. M. Sunday. Ribbentrop, Johl and Dietl were tere, but Mannerheim was not.

"Various party groups met in caucuses Sunday to discuss the Government's decision to continue the war. Social Democrats and Swedes definitely refused to accept the Government's decision. With a few other peace activists among the other parties they could swing a majority in Parliament voting. One prominent Finn said he tallied 140 out of 200 Deputies against the Ryti-Linkomies-Tanner plan. Two secret sessions were held by Parliament Monday, but the Government didn't dare to risk its policy by submitting it for approval.

Coup Is Charged

"One leading Parliament member commented: 'We are the victims of a political coup d'etat.'

"When I left Helsinki early Tuesday the people appeared calm on the surface. Naturally the man in the street knows very little but he can see plenty."

As the Germans took possession of Helsinki Associated Press Correspondent Robert Sturdevant telephoned from there, despite stringent censorship: "I am moving—I emphasize moving—to the American legation tonight. Watch Berlin."

It was uncertain whether Ribbentrop still was in Helsinki, although one report said he had been seen dining yesterday. He was understood to have given a dinner last night at which Finland's total collaboration with Germany was formalized.

Sees Mannerheim

Sturdevant said Ryti was understood to have gone to Mannerheim at the same time he appeled to the Germans. The Helsinki censorship refused to permit Sturdevant to report what transpired between the two Finnish leaders.

Swedish sources said Mannerheim has remained non-committal and refused to accept the presidency if Ryti stepped down.

One report here said Ribbentrop had promised the Finns five German divisions and 500 planes to continue the fight.

U. S. AND FINLAND RELATIONS NEAR BREAKING POINT

WASHINGTON, June 28— (AP) American relations with Finland appeared today to be headed for a final break as the result of the Finnish government's announcement that it will fight an active war with the Nazis against Russia.

At the same time, further diplomatic moves were under consideration to show this nation's concern over Argentina's failure to take part in a united hemispheric front against the Axis.

The decision is now up to President Roosevelt on whether to snap the thin diplomatic thread remaining between the United States and Finland since Finnish Minister Hjalmar Procope was sent home from Washington ten days ago. Officials here consider it extremely unlikely that Finland would take the first step.

Since Pearl Harbor, when Finland was already fighting Russia at the side of the Nazis, this government has maintained gradually deteriorating ties with the Finns in the hope that they would get out of the war, but has often denounced the course Finland chose.

The American minister to Helsinki, H. Arthur Schoenfeld, was brought home two years ago, and only Charge D'Affaires Robert Gullion now represents the United States there.

Reports from Stockholm indicate that German troops are spreading out through Finland. It was considered here to be likely that the Nazis soon may be in as complete control of the country as they are in Hungary.

American diplomatic relations deteriorated on another front with the recall of Ambassador Norman Armour from Argentina.

The State department is consulting constantly with other Latin-American republics on the policy toward Argentina. There is a strong likelihood, observers said, that when Armour's report is circulated, there will be a joint expression of disapproval of the militaristic Argentine regime.

American officials said reports still come in that military information is going to the Axis from Argentina, which broke relations with Germany and Japan in January.

They said that beyond a political thrust, economic measures are being considered to reduce the wealth Argentina is reaping by her heavy exports to the Allies.

SEVEN AIR FLEETS HAMMER EUROPE

Four Different Countries Attacked by Waves of Allied Bombers.

LONDON, June 28.—(AP) In one of the most impressive demonstrations of air power to date the Allies flung seven major heavy bomber spearheads into four European countries today, hammering important enemy installations all the way from France to Romania.

From England, fleets of American and British bombers roared out simultaneously in daylight for the first time, hitting an array of targets from French airfields to railroads within the Reich itself.

The Mediterranean air force — with a force of some 500 heavy bombers plus fighter escorts — smashed two oil refineries at Bucharest, rail yards at Chitila, Romania, on the route to Bucharest from the Ploesti oil fields, and a German airdrome at Karlova, Bulgaria.

A Britain-based Liberator and Flying Fortress group split likewise into three task forces, one going to the railroad yards at Saarbrucken just across the German border, the second streaming over the Paris area for blows on unspecified targets, and the third rumbling on to Laon, 70 miles northeast of Paris, and unloading explosives on a trio of air bases.

Simultaneously, R.A.F. Halifaxes gave flying bomb installations in the Pas de-Calais their fourth heavy drubbing in less than 24 hours.

Somewhat improved weather conditions enabled fighter-bombers to join the almost-endless procession of daylight raiders. They raced along the battle lines in Normandy, hammering convoys, troop concentrations and supply dumps.

Even this demonstration of Allied aerial might was heightened with the delayed announcement that Britain-based American Flying Fortresses which dealt Berlin one of the heaviest blows of the war on June 21 and then flew on to bases in Russia, had thundered out from the Soviet Monday, hurled bombs into an oil refinery at Drohobycz, in old Poland, and flown on to Italy to complete the first three-way shuttle bombing attack of the war.

Batter E Boats

At sea also the Germans felt the weight of the big Wednesday daylight offensive. R.A.F. Beaufighters pounced on seven E- boats off Holland and left two of them burning.

These operations followed an active night in which R.A.F. Typhoon fighter-bombers and rocket shooters staged a precision attack on a German Army Corps headquarters—a single house in the little town of St. Sauveur-Lendelin just below the Normandy front about 15 miles southwest of Coutentan.

As the building crumbled into smoking ruins—without damage to a church 500 yards away—The R.A.F.'s night-flying heavy bombers droned out 1,000 strong for a triple attack on Pas-de-Calais and two big interior rail yards. Battle-front support was carried out also during the night by R.A.F. Mosquitos which hit German transport lines and convoys.

The Ninth Air force meanwhile disclosed one of the outstanding air support operations of the invasion in the announcement of the destruction Saturday and Sunday of eight German gun positions on the Cherbourg peninsula which the Americans had by-passed in their steamroller advance and which had been firing on the doughboys from the rear.

3-WAY SHUTTLE BY U. S. PLANES BOMBING BEGUN

Flying Fortress Group From Britain to Russia Returns to Italy Via Balkans.

ROMANIA OIL CENTERS RAIDED

Junctions Around Ploesti Struck and Tank Cars Set on Fire by American Flyers.

London, June 28 (A. P.).—American bombers struck the enemy hard today in France, Romania and Bulgaria in mass attacks from Britain and Italy close upon the disclosure of the first three-way shuttle assault of the war. A cloud of 750 or more Flying Fortresses and Liberators soared widely over France and western Germany, bombing three airdromes near Laon, targets near Paris and rail yards at Saarbrucken.

By night 1,000 Royal Air Force heavy bombers attacked the Calais robot bomb-spawning grounds and rail centers east and south of Paris. The avowed purpose was to flatten every Nazi airdrome in France and tangle every rail junction.

Oil Centers Attacked.

From Italy, 500 American heavy bombers, with escorting Mustangs, Lightnings and Thunderbolts attacked two oil refineries near and in the Bucharest suburbs and rail yards at Chitila, north of the Romanian capital, on the main line to the Ploesti oilfields, thirty-five miles away. The Germans said that Bucharest itself and Ploesti both were bombed.

The Karlovo airdrome in Bulgaria, seventy-five miles east of Sofia, also was attacked. A number of intercepting Nazi planes were destroyed.

Returning pilots reported flames darting from dense black smoke erupting from a bombed refinery northwest of Bucharest and the Titan Oil Works, in the eastern suburbs. The Chitila rail yards normally are clogged with tankcars and columns of black smoke rose from them.

Germans Lack Oil.

Allied air commanders in Britain, even before today's attack, said that the Germans were suffering an acute shortage of oil. The triple shuttle bombing smashed Berlin a week ago and a Polish oil refinery on Monday.

America's vast air power was demonstrated in the operation on Monday—and disclosed only today—which sent Flying Fortresses thundering out from the new bases in Russia, plastered the refinery at Drohobycz, forty-five miles southwest of Lwow, in old Poland, and carried them on to Italy to complete the mission without loss. The bombers were those which flew from Britain on June 21 and gave Berlin one of its most terrible poundings of the war before going on to Russia.

The daylight offensive from British bases featured a triple attack by at least 750 American heavy bombers which loosed explosives on airdromes in France after the Royal Air Force had hurled 1,000 planes against two key rail centers in France and rocket installations along the channel coast during the night. A great triangular shuttle bombing run over all Nazi dominated Europe was established by the mission from Russia.

Mustangs Fly Escort.

Heavy bombers have made shuttle runs from Britain to Italian bases and from the Mediterranean back to Britain. The Italy-to-Russia route also had already been established by American bombers lashing out from Italy at targets in the Balkans and completing the trip to bases in Russia.

Mustangs escorted the Flying Fortresses from Russia into Poland on the Monday raid and Fifteenth Air Force Mustangs from Italy joined the escort after the bombing. Airdromes at Couvren, Athies and Juvincourt—all in the vicinity of Laon—were blasted in clear weather this morning by Liberators and Flying Fortresses swarming into France from Britain.

Fighters escorting the heavy bombers over France also carried out a number of strafing attacks on trains, airfields and flak towers. One Lightning group thwarted eight ME-109s trying to get at the bombers when Lieut. Robert E. Miles of Fort Worth, Tex., shot one.

Robot Launching Fields Blasted.

Railway yards at Saarbrucken and other unspecified military targets in the vicinity of Paris and Laon also were attacked by Flying Fortresses and Liberators. In daylight this morning, another formation of R. A. F Halifaxes with fighter escort bombed flying-bomb emplacements in France.

British Beaufighters caught seven German E-boats off Holland this morning, sprayed them with steel and left two craft burning.

The morning bombing raids were a victory for the weatherman, who chartered a perfect course through the clouds. "We flew down a stretch of fine visibility and could see the target twenty-five miles away, though there was a solid cloud cover to the right and left," reported Major Arthur F. Briggs of San Antonio, a group commander.

(The Paris area was raided this morning, the Paris radio reported.)

The British overnight operations followed a day of more than 2,000 sorties flown in unfavorable weather. The RAF raiders split into three forces, the two largest striking simultaneous blows at the rail junctions of Vitry-le-Francois and Vaires, south and east of Paris, which the Nazis have been jamming with troops and suupplies headed for the front.

Nazi 'Phone Exchange Hit

The third attacked the rocket bomb coast.

Light bombers during the night struck enemy headquarters south of the Normandy battle area and a military telephone exchange on the Brest peninsula.

Four bombers were missing from the night operations from Britain and at least six enemy fighters were downed. Twenty-three German planes were destroyed in yesterday's widespread operations, ranging from Cherbourg to Paris, and 13 Allied bombers and eight fighters were reported missing.

The Germans continued their attacks on Southern England with winged bombs during the night but on a lesser scale than on Monday night.

66 Locomotives Destroyed

On one of the most intensive low-level bombing and strafing attacks since the invasion, pilots of the United States Eighth Fighter Command late yesterday made one sweep across France, netting these results:

Sixteen railyards bombed or shot up; and 66 locomotives, 371 freight cars, a roundhouse, 5 ammunition cars, 2 troop trains and 1 ammunition train, all destroyed.

Air Blows Hit Nazis' Oil

London, June 28 (AP)—Capitalizing on lessons learned in Tunisia, when the Nazi war machine collapsed in a welter of stalled trucks and grounded planes, due to an oil shortage, the Allies are making an all-out effort to speed Germany's final surrender by again draining away her military life blood.

Allied air chiefs directing this campaign say there already is an "acute shortage" of oil in Germany.

Britain's Ministry of Economic Warfare, however, has estimated that German oil production has been cut to one-third of maximum and that the Nazi army is getting less than half the oil it requires for normal operations.

Heaviest Blows Dealt

Since that information became available the Allied air forces have dealt some of their heaviest blows against enemy oil production.

On June 20 American daylight bombers hit 12 German oil plants in a raid which the United States Army Air Forces describe as one of the two heaviest blows they have levelled against the German war effort to date.

Other Oil Centers Hit

Last Friday and Saturday Mediterranean-based bombers attacked the Ploesti oil fields in Romania and on Sunday joined with Britain-based heavyweights in raids on German oil installations in Southern France.

On Monday a refinery at Vienna was bombed and last night the Air Ministry announced that a night attack upon the synthetic oil plant at Gelsenkirchen had cut at least another 1,000 tons of oil per day from German supplies.

That figure is about one fortieth of the normal German supply, and on the basis of the latest estimates about one tenth of the actual present supply.

Germany's normal oil supply (now reduced by two thirds) is estimated at about 15,000,000 tons annually—one third from Romania (principally the great Ploesti fields which have been the target of repeated attacks during the past year); one third from small German, Austrian, Hungarian, Polish and Estonian fields, and one third from synthetic plants in Germany.

Sure Way To Beat Nazis

While this total supply is reported to have been cut to about 5,000,000 tons, it cannot be assumed, however, Allied experts point out, that Germany is about to go under, because of the oil situation.

Damage to installations is constantly being repaired, and there always is the imponderable question of the reserves that Germany has been able to store up.

The Allied air chiefs are doing no guessing, but they know that one of the surest ways to beat the German army is to dry up its fuel supply.

Fighter Plane Ace Ties Combat Record

An American Fighter Base in England, June 28 (AP)—Thunderbolt Pilot Lieutenant Colonel Francis E. Gabreski, of Oil City, Pa., shot down a German ME-109 yesterday over France, bringing his total of enemy planes destroyed in the air to 27, tying the American combat record.

Major Robert Johnston, of Lawton, Okla., has 27 victories in the European theater of operations, and Major Richard I. Bong, of Poplar, Wis., knocked down 27 in the Pacific. Neither Johnston nor Bong is currently flying in combat.

VICHY MINISTER ASSASSINATED

Philippi Henriot Killed In His Home In Paris

London, June 28 (AP)—French underground executioners struck boldly in Paris early today, killing Philippe Henriot, Vichy Minister of Propaganda, and apparently escaped death or capture themselevs.

Fifteen or 20 uniformed patriots invaded the ministry-home of the "Goebbels of France" and shot him down in his bedroom, Axis radios reported. Neither the enemy broadcasts nor a subsequent speech of sympathy by Pierre Laval, Vichy chief of government, mentioned any arrests. Transocean News Agency said flatly that the assailants escaped.

Killed By Own Guard, Report

An Associated Press dispatch from Madrid said, however, that according to reports reaching the Spanish border Henroit was slain by one of his own bodyguards in his office as the result of a quarrel with other Vichy propagandists over present policies.

An editorial Henriot wrote in Monday's Ecipide Nancy intimated he believed the German cause was lost, saying, "now France is a battlefield and it is too late to weep."

Early Joined The Germans

The blow silenced one of the most hated voices in France. Since his apointment as Propaganda Minister last January, the 55-year-old former schoolteacher has broadcast twice daily, exhorting Frenchmen to aid the Nazis for the sake of the future of France.

A French source in London said Henriot probably had received "more threatening letters than anyone in France" because of these broadcasts. Before the war Henriot was a Rightist Deputy. He joined the Germans soon after France fell.

Laval Attacks Patriots

A broadcast by DNB said several carloads of men drove up to the gate before Henriot's residence just before 6 A. M. today and held up two guards with tommy guns. Three men, "evidently acquainted with the plan of the house," then entered and shot down Henriot in his pajamas, the agency reported.

Laval, going on the Paris radio at the hour Henriot had been making one of his daily broadcasts, bitterly attacked the members of the French resistance movement, charging that they wanted to "precipitate France into civil war."

Henriot became the most important French collaborationist yet to fall. An effort was made to kill Henriot at Tarbes in May, 1943, when three bombs exploded in a hall where he was speaking. Several persons were killed, but Henriot escaped.

It was reported today from Port Bou, Spain, that French guerrillas, striking in the Tarbes region of the Pyrenees, had blown up stretches of the railroad between Auch and Tarbes. The Germans were said to have been relying on this railway for east and west rail communications since the Toulouse-Bayonne main line was severed by patriots.

ASSASSINS KILL PHILIPPE HENRIOT, VICHY MINISTER

L. HAWKINS

Laval's Propaganda Chief Shot in Paris by Group of Uniformed Men.

JUN 29 1944

London, June 28 (A. P.).—Philippe Henriot, Vichy Minister of Information and Propaganda, was assassinated last night in Paris by fifteen or twenty uniformed men who forced their way into his bedroom, the Axis radios announced today.

DAY

Apparently a victim of French patriots, Henriot was the most important collaborationist yet to fall.

Berlin agencies first broadcast reports of the assassination. A short time later Pierre Laval, Vichy Chief of State, took to the air and declared Henriot "was animated only by patriotism. He fell this morning a hero."

The German agency Transocean, which said that Henriot had reached Paris yesterday in company with Laval, declared it was not possible to ascertain whether the killers were dressed in the uniform of militia or police. DNB declared flatly the assassins were masquerading as members of the Vichy militia.

Transocean said that fifteen or twenty men forced their way into the Ministry of Information where Henriot was living, demanded to see him, and fired when his bedroom door was opened.

The Berlin broadcasts failed to mention whether any of the assassins had been captured—a strong indication that they got away.

Two weeks ago Henriot was reported visiting Germany where he was said to have conferred with Dr. Joseph Paul Goebbels, Nazi propaganda minister, and Nazi Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop.

DNB reported Berlin comment that Henriot "died for the battle of Europe" and blamed England for inciting French terrorists to this action. Berlin broadcasts gave him voluminous praise.

Attempts have been made before on the life of Henriot, but each time he escaped. The most determined effort was at Tarbes in May, 1943, when three bombs were placed in the exit of a hall where he was speaking. Several persons were killed, but Henriot was uninjured.

Was a Schoolmaster.

Born in 1889 in Reims, Henriot began his adult life as a schoolmaster and lecturer. In 1932 he was elected as a Rightest Deputy for Bordeaux and was re-elected in 1936. He became allied with the collaborationists soon after the fall of France and was named Propaganda Minister in January, 1944. Since then he had been particularly active in attempts to quell the operations of the Maquis—the strong French guerrilla forces.

He has been broadcasting twice daily. One French source in London said that he probably had received more threatening letters than any one in France because of these constant appeals for collaboration.

Paquis Reported As Successor

Barcelona, Spain, June 28 (AP)—Reports from Vichy said tonight that Jean Herold Paquis, military commentator on the Nazi-controlled Paris radio and a prominent German collaborationist and anti-Semite, would be named Minister of Propaganda for the Vichy Government, succeeding Philippe Henriot.

British Unexcited About Dewey

JUN 29 1944

London, Thursday, June 29 (AP). Britons, watching the Republican convention more as a lesson in American politics than anything else, calmly received the news of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's nomination for the Presidency.

British papers gave full reports, mostly from their own correspondents, who generally expressed the opinion that the convention was apathetic. War news pushed the Republican stories into the inside pages, however.

Only the London News-Chronicle carried an editorial on the subject, saying: "The platform commits the party to participation in some form of world organization. Admittedly, its terms are somewhat woolly. . . . All the same, this is a very different state of affairs from that which existed in 1920."

Ironside Tells British "War Is Nearly Over"

London, June 28 (AP)—Field Marshal Lord Ironside, former chief of the British imperial defense staff, told a meeting at Bury St. Edmunds today that "the war is nearly over," because the Germans won't fight on any front when their lines have been broken.

"We broke the line in the last war in July and the enemy never faced us again and we had an armistice in November," he declared.

"Look at the picture now. We've broken the line in Italy and the Germans are not standing against us. In the east the line has been broken more than once and they're not standing against us."

New Anesthetic Claimed

Stockholm, June 28 (AP) — Two Swedish scientists, Nils Lovgren and Bengt Lundquist, report that after six years of research they have developed a local anesthetic which they call LL30. They claim it is easier to produce than novocaine and more effective.

NAZI ADMIRAL SEES HIS NAVY FINISHED

JUN 29 1944

Madrid, June 28 (A. P.).—Rear-Admiral Richard Gadow, retired German naval officer, declares that the German Navy is finished as an offensive force and is "in process of reorganization." Writing in the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, Admiral Gadow, who is considered the principal spokesman for the German Navy, said that the answer to the question "Where are our U-boats and heavy warships?" was that they were at the bottom of the sea.

DAY

The submarine arm, Admiral Gadow said, had great success until 1943, "when technical defenses of the enemy put an end to these achievements." The German Navy, he continued, could change from defense to offensive actions only if Allied coastal air bases are destroyed.

Man power needs for the land and air forces, he said, prevented the German Navy from completing many warships planned or on the ways.

AMERICAN FORCES DRIVE ON LEGHORN

NORGAARD

ROME, June 28—(AP) American troops pushed within some 30 miles of the big Italian west coast port of Livorno (Leghorn) today after a savage all-night battle in which they hurled the Germans out of San Vincenzo, a little coastal town which has been converted into a fortress.

JUN 29 1944

NIGHT

The ferocity of the Nazis' resistance to the Yank advance was duplicated clear across the peninsula as the enemy clung stubbornly to every defensible position and took the fullest advantage of rough terrain. Fresh German infantry and guns continued to join the battle, and the fighting was the fiercest since the Gustav and Hitler lines were cracked at the outset of the Allied offensive.

Every civilian was cleared from San Vincenzo before the Americans attacked last night, and for hours the fighting raged from house to house. Every street was protected by barricades and wire entanglements. It was regarded as a sample of what the Allies may expect in every Italian town now between them and the Germans' Pisa-Rimini defense line.

Field Marshal Albert Kesselring, having halted the disorganized flight of his forces, now obviously was determined to forestall an Allied assault on the "Gothic" line this summer. The rough country prevented swift thrusts by Allied armor.

(Wednesday's German high command communique told of "heavy, fluctuating fighting" the length of the Italian front and claimed the Allies gained only on the West coast.)

Sasseta Captured

Four miles inland from San Vincenze, other American armored forces surrounded and captured the town of Sasseta after a stiff fight with units of an elite SS division. Also occupied was the village of Chiusdino, 17 miles southwest of the communications center of Siena. French troops advanced to the vicnity of San Quirico D'Orcia, 22 miles southeast of Siena, after repulsing repeated Nazi counterattacks.

Eighth Army forces registered limited gains at the main points of their attack both west and east of Lake Trasimeno, 80 miles north of Rome, where the Germans have offered bitter resistance for the past two weeks. Gioiella, five miles above Chiusi on the west side of the lake, fell to an Allied tank force after a six-hour fight. On the east side the Eighth Army stormed two heights about five miles above Perugia.

The Germans, besides moving in reinforcements, were opposing the Allied advance with increased artillery and anti-tank gun fire and extensive mine fields. Disabled German tanks were used as road block.

It was announced that 38 Nazi fighters were destroyed by American heavy bombers and escorting fighters over the Budapest area yesterday, bringing to more than 100 the number shot down by the Italy-based air fleet in the past two days. Six Allied planes were lost yesterday.

Allies Take Base Near Livorno

NORGAARD

JUN 29 1944

Rome, June 28 (AP)—San Vincenzo, only 32 miles below the big port of Livorno (Leghorn) on the Italian west coast, was wrested from the Germans after a bitter house-to-house battle last night, and today the Fifth Army was reported slugging its way steadily forward.

San Vincenzo had been converted into a fortress by the Nazis, who had evacuated all civilians, then erected barricades and wire entanglements.

Farther inland an American armored force occupied the villages of Chiusdino and Travale. Chiusdino is only 17 miles southwest of Siena, key highway and communications center, and 75 miles below Florence.

DAY

Counterblows Repelled

Supported by Italian Partisans, an American infantry force bypassed, then surrounded and captured the town of Sasseta, four miles northeast of San Vincenzo, despite its defense by elements of the German 17th SS Division, identified in that sector for the first time.

Other enemy units were mopped up in the village of Belvedere, below Chiusdino and Travale, while the French, who advanced to the vicinity of San Quirico d'Orcia, 22 miles southeast of Siena on Highway 2, beat back repeated enemy counterattacks.

Resistance Stiffens

In addition to moving in reinforcements, the Germans opposed a further Fifth Army advance with increased artillery fire, hurriedly laid mine fields and assembled new concentrations of anti-tank guns. Disabled Germans tanks were used as road blocks and the village of Travale was demolished in an attempt to convert the entire town into a road block.

The Eight Army continued to move forward slowly against fierce opposition at the main points of its attack. West and southwest of Lake Trasimeno, the British captured the towns of Goiella and Porto. Gioiela, four miles southwest of Castiglione, on the west shore of the lake, fell to a tank force after a six-hour battle. Limited gains were made on the east side of the lake.

Five miles north of Perugia the Eighth Army climaxed a day's hard fighting by occupying the dominating hilltops of Monte Bagnola and Monte Pacciano. East of the Tiber river the village of Pagliaccia was taken.

Enemy losses at the hands of Italian-based Allied planes were placed officially at more than 100 in two days. It was announced that 38 Luftwaffe fighters were blasted out of the air by American heavy bombers and escorting fighters over the Budapest area yesterday. A total of 65 had been reported destroyed in the air and on the ground the preceding day.

Six Planes Lost

More than 100 enemy fighters were encountered over the targets yesterday, but the Mediterranean Allied Air Force said that some of the pilots were, "apparently inexperienced and few of them were aggressive." Allied losses in yesterday's operations totalled six planes.

Three of yesterday's victims were Me-109's shot down by 22-year-old Lieut. James S. Varnell, Jr., Charleston, (Tenn.) Mustang pilot. This raised his score to 12, making him the third high United States army air force pilot in the Mediterranean theater. All of his victories have been scored in a 29-day period.

The naval command announced that at least one enemy vessel blew up when French naval units in the Adriatic attacked an escorted enemy convoy.

Medal of Bombed Rome For Pope Is Withdrawn

JUN 29 1944

Church Cancels Prayer Scene on Site Hit by Allies

ROME, June 28 (AP)—Issuance of a medal showing Pope Pius XII in prayer among people pleading for protection and kneeling on Roman ground bombed by American airmen last July 19, which was scheduled to be presented to the Pope today, was canceled suddenly by church authorities, a written statement from a Vatican source said.

NIGHT

The statement added that the cancellation broke an annual custom for the Pope to receive a medal on each June 28, the eve of the celebration of the feasts of Saints Peter and Paul, showing the most important event of the preceding year as related to the Vatican.

The reason for the cancellation was not given, but the statement said a new medal would be struck later, intended to show the Pope as the protector and savior of Rome.

Pope Receives Gen. Donovan

JUN 29 1944

DAY

Rome, June 28 (A. P.).—Brig.-Gen. William J. Donovan, chief of the Army's Office of Strategic Services and a frequent special emissary of President Roosevelt, had a private audience with Pope Pius today. Major-Gen. Fred L. Walker, who commanded the Thirty-sixth (Texas) Division in the offensive from the Anzio beachhead, also had an audience.

Body Of Pope Pius X Seen By Thousands

JUN 29 1944

DAY

Vatican City, June 28 (AP)—The body of Pope Pius X, who died August 20, 1914, has been placed in the ironbarred chapel of relics in the basilica of St. Peter's as the first step in a beatification ritual that ultimately may lead to his canonization as a saint.

Thousands of persons, including many American soldiers, filed past the chapel yesterday to gaze at the body after the public unveiling. The body will be returned to the cathedral crypt at 11 A. M. tomorrow.

It was clad in red, white and gold ceremonial robes presented by Pope Pius XII.

First 3-Way Shuttle Raid

Rome, June 28 (AP)—The first three-way shuttle bombing operation of the European war was disclosed today. United States Eighth Air Force Fortresses took off at Russian bases, bombed a Polish Galicia oil refinery and landed in Italy.

JUN 29 1944

DAY

JUN 29 1944

Drohobycz Raided

The Fortresses started from England June 21, participated in the record American assault against Berlin, and landed at Russian fields of the Eastern Command, United States Strategic Air Forces.

Mustangs escorted the Forts on Monday's flight from Russia against a refinery at Drohobycz, 45 miles southwest of Lwow, in Old Poland. Many explosions and fires were reported there.

A few enemy planes were encountered, but they did not attack, and headquarters said all the Fortresses and their escort completed the mission. Fifteen Air Force Mustangs from Italy joined the escort after the bombing.

DAY

They were convicted of murder, as well as mutiny, in connection with the death of officers and men putting down the rebellion.

Two other sailors were sentenced to life imprisonment and five more to terms ranging from five to fifteen years. Six were acquitted.

NAMTI FALLS TO CHINESE

JUN 29 1944

Burma Town Between Mogaung And Myitkyina Taken

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, June 28 (AP)—Taking swift advantage of their capture of the Japanese north Burma supply base of Mogaung, Chinese troops have lunged six miles eastward toward Myitkyina, embattled bastion 35 miles away and have captured Namti, Allied headquarters announced tonight.

This drive placed them within 30 miles west of Myitkyina. Within that stronghold, already encircled and besieged by American and Chinese forces, the Chinese took another strong point in the southern sector. The Japanese there abandoned large supplies of small arms and ammunition.

18,000 Allied Casualties

Headquarters announced tonight that the Allies have lost 6,000 men killed or missing and 12,000 wounded from January 1 to May 31 in the Burma-India campaign, and that the Japanese in the same period lost 21,700 dead and a probable 21,000 wounded. These figures did not include the north Burma campaign of troops under Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell.

Allied troops fanned out in two other directions from captured Mogaung. Maj. Gen. W. D. A. Lentaigne's Chindits drove southwest and engaged the enemy in a fierce 90-minute struggle, and other Chinese went southward, capturing the village of Loilaw and much equipment.

NIGHT

Chinese Push South

At the same time, moving south from the captured base of Kamaing, 20 miles northwest of Mogaung, another Chinese column found many enemy dead and large amounts of abandoned equipment, a communique said.

In India, operations continued against the Japanese remaining in Manipur state. One British position in the Bishenpur area, overrun by the enemy last Sunday, has been recaptured.

North of Imphal, heavy artillery fire was concentrated on Japanese bunkers, and southward, east of the Kohima-Imphal road, mopping-up operations continued on a vigorous scale.

Chinese Take Namti, 6 Miles Beyond Mogaung

JUN 29 1944

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, June 28 (AP)—Chinese forces, following up their success in capturing the Japanese North Burma base of Mogaung in conjunction with British troops, have occupied Namti, six miles northeast of that town, an Allied communique announced today.

Other Chinese forces are advancing south from Mogaung to Loilaw, the bulletin said.

DAY

18,000 Allied Casualties

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, June 28 (AP).—The Allies lost 6,000 men killed or missing and 12,000 wounded in the Burma-India campaign from Jan. 1 to May 31, it was estimated officially today. The Japanese in the same period lost 21,700 dead, and probably 20,000 wounded, headquarters said.

DAY

JUN 29 1944

These figures do not include losses suffered or inflicted by Lieutenant General Joseph W. Stilwell's Chinese-American forces.

Japs Surround Hengyang

JUN 29 1944

Chungking, June 28 (AP)—The high command indicated tonight that Japanese forces have surrounded Hengyang, vital railway junction in Hunan province. Loss of this city would be the greatest blow to China since the fall of Canton and Hankow in October, 1938.

NIGHT

"Severe fighting for the possession of Hengyang is now in progress on all sides of the city," said a communique, adding that "the city, however, is still in our hands."

Importance Cited

With the fall of Hengyang the way would be open for a Japanese advance on Kuwong, provisional capital of Kwantung, or on Kewilin, provision capital of Kwangsi, from which most foreign agencies have already withdrawn or are now withdrawing.

American and other missionaries in the threatened areas have left for Weiyang or Kunmiang.

Seven Aircraft Missing

The Fourteenth Air Force continued its slashing blows against the Japanese units in Hunan, with widespread attacks on troop columns and cavalry units and Japanese-held points. These slowed down but did not halt the enemy advance.

Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters announced that seven aircraft were missing from the latest operations in Hunan and Yunnan—the largest number in some time.

Japanese Encircle Hengyang; Way Open For Drives To South

MOOSA

Chungking, June 28 (AP)—Hengyang, junction of the Canton-Hankow and Hunan and Kwangsi railways, has been encircled completely by hard-driving Japanese forces, the Chinese high command admitted tonight, and the way appeared open for enemy drives either directly south to capture the rest of the Canton-Hankow route, or southwest toward Kwangsi province.

Chinese still held the vital railway town against battering pressure from the Japanese, a communique said, with both sides losing heavily.

Fall of Hengyang would be the most grevious blow to the Chinese since 1938.

JUN 29 1944

China In Danger Of Split

A successful southward drive would virtually complete conquest of the Canton-Hankow route, splitting China in two and giving the enemy an unbroken supply line for 1,000 miles from north to south.

American planes staged their biggest series of operations for some time over Hunan and Yunnan provinces, a communique of Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters said, and seven planes were lost.

The United States 14th Air Force continued slashing blows against enemy troop and cavalry concentrations in Hunan, and fighter and bomber sorties have killed some 500 Japanese in the Changsha area in the past two days, it said.

Missionaries Flee

As Hengyang was encircled, reports from provinces to the south and southwest said American and other missionaries were leaving the threatened route of the offensive, and going to Kunming in Yunnan province, or to other, safer points in western China.

Liang Han Chao, Chinese Minister of Information, expressed hope the Allies could give China "more material help and spiritual encouragement," adding that "given modern equipment we can certainly defeat the enemy."

Aussies Take Hansa Bay, Trap Thousands Of Japs

Advanced Headquarters, New Guinea, Thursday, June 29 (AP)—Compressing the eastern jaw of a trap on thousands of Japanese, Australians have advanced 80 miles in 28 days to within 70 miles of Wewak, British New Guinea.

The advance, which overran strategic Hansa Bay, where much booty was seized, was announced today by Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

The Japanes have been falling back on Wewak since that base was by-passed by the simultaneous leapfrog invasions of Aitape, British New Guinea, and Hollandia, Dutch New Guinea, late in April.

Aitape 200 Miles Off

Virtually unopposed, the Aussies started from Bunabun harbor May 31 and have reached the mouth of the Sepik river where they are less than 200 miles from Yank invaders of Aitape to the northwest. The advance, still unopposed, continues toward Wewak.

NIGHT

Hansa Bay fell June 15, but its capture was kept secret until today. The Aussies seized vast stores of food and ammunition there, also trucks, medical supplies and fuel. These indicated the once-important status of Hansa Bay. The Aussies also liberated 90 Chinese workers.

Jap Planes Shot Down

The announcement was the first pertaining to the Aussies in several weeks.

The fourth raid since June 22 on Japan's air base on Yap in the Carolines also was reported. Twenty-seven tons of explosives were dropped on Yap's airdrome Monday and seven of 30 interceptors were shot down.

At MacArthur's westernmost point of advance, on Biak Island in the Schoutens off north Dutch New Guinea, 272 more Japanese defenders have been slain, bringing the total enemy killed or captured there to 2,655. The invaders of the Schoutens possess four airfields within bombing range of the Philippines—three on Biak, one on nearby Owi.

day, possibly indicating that the situation had not changed.

The Sunday raid upon Yap was the island's fourth attack by land-based bombers. Intercepted by 30 planes, the Liberators shot down eight at a cost of one B-24. Their bombs destroyed a grounded Japanese plane and damaged runways and revetments.

Cargo Ships Damaged

Other New Guinea-based planes destroyed a 3,500-ton Japanese freighter and damaged three other merchantmen, west of New Guinea, and bombed and strafed the string of by-passed enemy bases from New Guinea to the Solomons.

The Japanese attempted retaliation with a raid upon Biak Island, off Dutch New Guinea. Ten bombs caused some casualties in the Mokmer airstrip area.

Headquarters announced that a fuel dock explosion at Emirau Island, north of New Ireland, June 18, caused many casualties and destroyed two P-T boats. Cause of the explosion was not disclosed.

New Allied Air Force Rips Caroline Bases

JUN 29 1944

New Guinea Headquarters, June 28 (AP)—The newly organized Far Eastern Air Force, giving long-range support to Saipan's American invaders, bombed three important Japanese bases in the Caroline Islands and destroyed nine planes, headquarters announced today.

New Guinea-based Liberators, ranging over water for almost 1,000 miles, bombed Palau and Woleai airdromes and attacked Yap, northeast of Palau.

In the Marianas, where Americans have taken half of Saipan Island and forced an estimated 20,000 Japanese to retreat into the northern end, enemy resistance had stiffened.

Eight Japs Bagged

For the first 24-hour period since the Saipan invasion there was no Pearl Harbor communique Tuesday, possibly indicating that the situation had not changed.

PARAMUSHIRO SHELLED BY U.S. WARSHIPS

JUN 29 1944

DAY

Two-Mile Northward Advance On East Coast Of Saipan Made

Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, June 28 (AP)—United States warships shelled Japanese positions in the northern Kuriles and on Tinian in the Marianas, thousands of miles apart, over the week end, while carrier planes again raked Guam and Rota to support a further American advance on invaded Saipan, key island in the steppingstone chain to Japan.

These actions were announced today by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz. He also reported futile attacks by Japanese torpedo planes on an American carrier force and transports off Saipan.

NIGHT

Two-Mile Advance Made

The advance on Saipan took marines and infantry two miles northward along the eastern coast of that island. At the western end of the sector, assault forces had battered their way farther into Garapan. The Nipponese were making a desperate effort to hold that island capital city.

Kurabu Zaki, principal town at the southern tip of Paramushiro in the Kuriles, was shelled Sunday night. There were no details of this third bombardment of the war on that enemy naval base.

Planes Hit Paramushiro

In a prelude to the shelling, army and navy planes hit Paramushiro and adjoining Shumushu Island before dawn Sunday. They started several fires. A follow-up attack was made again before dawn Monday. In both strikes intense anti-aircraft fire was encountered.

In Monday's attack, 11 Japanese interceptors pounced on a single navy Ventura. The American gunners fought back, damaging two of the attackers. A third disappeared in the fog, trailing smoke. The Ventura was damaged superficially.

A desperate enemy force surrounded for several days on Nafutan Point, in the southeast sector, broke through American containing lines Monday night in a futile effort to fight northward.

Two hundred Japanese were killed in this counter-attack, by which the isolated Japanese hoped to fight their way to a junction with the main body of defenders.

Yanks Fight Phantom Enemy On Saipan Ridge

By Morrie Landsberg

A Forward Post, Saipan, Marianas Islands, June 26 (Delayed—AP—via Navy radio)—The battle on Nafutan ridge goes on as something of a sideshow to the main event on Saipan, where for more than a week army troops have punched their way along the escarpment that runs 1,500 yards into the sea.

(Nauftan is a southwestern peninsula which Americans have bottled up far to the rear of the main Saipan fighting line.)

Fight Unseen Enemy

While marines stormed the heights of Mount Tapotchau on the left flank and captured Chacha village on the right, army infantrymen in the center consolidated positions for an advance around the east slope of the mountain. Actual fighting along the army sector came to a standstill except for sniper hunting.

At Nafutan ridge, infantrymen are confronted by a network of shoreline caves to which the Japanese cling. They are fighting an unseen enemy who is adept at phantom warfare.

Even on approaching the highlands the troops heard but couldn't see the Japs. It took tanks crashing over canefields, where the enemy had hidden, to hold clear the area of Japanese machine-gun nests and mortars.

Question Of Time

When infantrymen reached a hill leading to Nafutan ridge after a terrific bombardment, they found no trace of the enemy except abandoned dugouts and trenches. If any Japs were killed their bodies were carried off by retreating soldiers.

The Japanese have deposits of supplies in caves but it is just a question of time before they are routed from Nafutan peninsula, giving the Americans full control of the southern tip of Saipan.

Japs Get Rough War Lessons From Yanks

By Rembert James

With the United States Marines in Garapan City, Saipan, June 24 (AP—Delayed)—The Japanese on Saipan are getting from the invading American forces a classical education in the use of all weapons of modern warfare—but there will be no chance for them to use it.

Like Japanese troops trapped on other islands, they have no escape.

Before entering Garapan with the marines, who today became the first American troops to invade a sizable Japanese city, I watched from an advanced observation post some of the preparations.

Various Shells Tossed

The Americans threw everything from rifle bullets to highest-caliber naval shells at the enemy. There were rockets, mortars, white phosphorous shells that spiattered and burned, machine guns, hand grenades, divebombers, strafing planes and massed artillery batteries and tanks.

The first units to enter Garapan moved northward along the beach road, hard-surfaced pavement 20 feet wide, about 30 yards inland from the water's edge.

Visits Edge Of Garapan

This morning I went to the edge of Garapan with two other correspondents—Keith Wheeler, of the Chicago Times, and Denis Warner, of the Melbourne Herald. The advanced company command post was in a drainage ditch alongside the highway, across the street from a shell-wrecked signal tower of the Garapan-Charankanoa railroad. Japanese mortar shells were coming from the hills above and from the tree-lined causeway jutting out into Garapan harbor half a mile ahead.

So far mortar bursts were only soft thumps in the distance, but they grew louder and four landed within 100 yards. The correspondents found safety in an abandoned Japanese dugout between the highway and surf. Into it also crawled two marine privates.

Buddy Was Killed

One was bandaging his left hand.

"That last burst nicked me and killed the guy beside me," he said, looking at his shoe where sharpnel had chewed off part of the rubber heel.

Three hours later we moved up into the city. A sergeant said the Japanese were 75 yards ahead behind a gray stone wall, but we saw marines moving along the highway edge beyond the wall. Mortars were falling and snipers were firing from trees 50 yards inland.

Forty yards to the right a mortar burst set off a gasoline dump fire. There were more mortar bursts and more rifle and machine-gun fire and then the gasoline fire drew nearer. Three gasoline barrels were bounced into the air by the roaring fire. They landed near the machine shop.

Down the highway from Fifth street came a marine with a request from the most advanced patrol.

"Get some tanks up there quick," he told the company commander.

Jap Tanks Advance

"The Japs are coming down the highway with tanks."

The company commander relayed the request over his radio set, but the correspondents didn't wait to see how long it took for the tanks to arrive. Backtracking down the highway, they passed a halftrack mounting a large gun—an American tank-killer.

Fifty yards back they heard a blast. A Japanese mortar had landed squarely inside the tank-killer.

Five Tanks Destroyed

Later from a hillside observation post they got the score on the Garapan tank battle; five Japanese tanks knocked out by American tanks and artillery, and the attack repulsed with no American tank losses.

Down below, men in small sections moved steadily ahead. The marines were still advancing.

FALL OF SAIPAN IS NOW IN SIGHT

Americans Seize Initiative at All Points.

By KEMBERT JAMES.

Associated Press Correspondent Representing the Combined American Press.

Aboard a Joint Expeditionary Flagship at Saipan Island, June 28 (June 27, United States time) (A. P.).—Overcoming natural obstacles almost as formidable as the Japanese, Americans on Saipan crunched down the rocky northern slopes of Mount Tapotchau today with their goal in full view after thirteen days of invasion of the Marianas Islands. Ahead of them lay Japanese strong points, twenty-seven years in the building, and an intrenched enemy still committed to defense but already abandoned by his fleet and his Emperor.

Behind the Americans was more than half the island, 1,500 miles from Tokyo. The invaders held the full initiative.

The Japanese, pounded day and night by massed artillery and naval batteries, had been unable to launch any sizable counter-attack in three days. Overhead, American planes, able to use conquered Aslito Airfield on southern Saipan without interference from Japanese stragglers, held undisputed control of the air.

It was a situation in which the Marines and infantry along the firing line thought they glimpsed the eventual end of the hardest land battle in the Central Pacific, though none doubted that the most difficult fighting lay ahead. From the peak of Mount Tapotchau, the Americans could see long, wooded ridges ahead between which thousands of Japanese were dug in, as well as Garapan, largest city in the Marianas and their capital. To the north was the important harbor at Tanapag.

Japs Try Ambush Tactics.

Garapan, bombarded constantly and largely burned out, looked from the heights like an abandoned mining town of the California mother-lode country. Marine patrols penetrated toward the center of Garapan and found plenty of Japanese ambushes. Some 500 yards inland from the governmental pier in central Garapan, the patrols found an enemy strongpoint on Flame Tree Hill, a rocky eminence covered with flowering trees.

From there the enemy has been sending detachments down through the grounds around the governor's palace and the insular legislature park into the ruined center of the town. Today's advance was along the heights above Garapan, where troops pushed along a one-mile front to bisect the island with a straight line extending to the eastern shore, where a large land area on Chatcha peninsula, north of Magicienne Bay, was captured yesterday.

The Japanese had strong positions in the rocks and caves. The last organized resistance on the southern tip of the island, at Nafutan Point, collapsed when between 300 and 500 Japanese abandoned dugouts in the rugged cliffs and tried to fight their way through American lines northward to the Japanese half of the seventy-five-square mile island. The Americans killed 200 in one spot. Scores of others died in small groups.

Much Booty Is Taken.

The destruction of this enemy pocket enabled the Americans for the first time to obtain full use of Aslito Airfield, the most important flying strip in the Marianas. The Japanese had been infiltrating to the field at night, trying to sabotage planes and forcing fatigued flyers into an unwilling night-time role of infantrymen. One group of Japanese hid at the edge of the field before dusk one night and fired on planes as they were landing.

Engineers examining the conquered portion of the island said that some bombproof shelters around Aslito Field and other installations were constructed years ago. On the Japanese-held northern end are military installations which the Japanese started building when they took Saipan during the world war.

Struggling ahead along the mountain ridges, American officers surveyed enormous quantities of captured war material and other booty. They found everything from trains to baby carriages. There were Japanese guns and plenty of ammunition for them, considerable food and clothing. Even more important was the fact that the Americans had captured the portion of Saipan which has plenty of fairly good roads. None of these things, however, counted for much when compared with the real prize of battle—the island of Saipan itself, key to the Marianas.

U. S. To Rule Many Japs On Saipan

By William L. Worden

Aboard Joint Expeditionary Force Flagship off Saipan (AP)—Saipan Island, with its large Japanese civilian population, is writing a new page in American history. Never before have Americans attempted to rule a Japanese people.

On Saipan the navy's civil affairs units are faced for the first time in the Pacific with the necessity of governing a considerable body of civilians.

Here are an estimated 25,000 civilians on the island, plus about 5,000 native islanders.

Migrated To Saipan

Most of them migrated to Saipan from the Ryukyu Islands, just south of Japan proper. Their ancestors were Koreans, then ruled by China, who fought bitterly against Japanese conquest in the 1870s. Today they are more Japanese-minded than Korean, but still represent a doubtful quantity and one of the few elements harboring possible dissidence within peoples ordinarily considered Japanese.

American planes began the effort to convert them to American rule when, in pre-assault sweeps, they dropped thousands of leaflets advising civilians to evacuate parts of the island which were the most likely battle areas.

Fled To American Lines

Early in the fight for Saipan hundreds of these civilians fled to American lines for safety. They were the first sizable group of refugees to become an American responsibility behind Pacific battle lines.

These hungry and wounded noncombatants must be governed, cared for, fed and given no chance to aid the enemy.

But this population speaks Japanese and presumably thinks in the Japanese manner. Lessons learned on Saipan may prove invaluable when American military government is extended to other Japanese civilian masses.

Lieut. Hall, although wounded, co-piloted the plane in a low altitude attack on the submarine, while Ensign Butcher manned the bow gun, scored hits, and then helped navigate the damaged plane back to its base.

All Recruiting for RCAF Suspended Until October

By The Associated Press.

OTTAWA, June 28—Air Minister C. G. Power announced today the suspension of all Royal Canadian Air Force recruiting until Oct. 1 as a result of the "diminishing strength" of the German Air Force, the low rate of casualties and reductions in the Commonwealth air training plan.

Mr. Power also announced that an accumulation of fully-trained fighter pilots in the United Kingdom had made it possible to extend the length of pilot-training courses in Canada by eight weeks.

Guam, Rota Raids Reported By Tokyo

New York, June 28 (AP)—The Tokyo radio said today that "from 60 to 100 American planes had attacked Guam yesterday (Tokyo time) and that "about 60 enemy planes" had raided Rota Island, directly north of Guam, at the same time.

The broadcast, reported by the Federal Communications Commission, made the usual claim that defense garrisons had "repulsed" each of the raids.

Two Navy Flyers Receive D. F. C.

San Juan, Puerto Rico, June 28 (A. P.).—The Navy announced the award Tuesday of two Distinguished Flying Crosses to the crew of a patrol plane for "exceptional courage" during an attack on a submarine near a convoy off the coast of Africa.

Downed Flyers Saw Jap Ships Burn

U. S. Airmen Prayed, Talked and Joked While Awaiting Rescue in Marianas

By ELMONT WAIT

Aboard the Carrier Flagship Off the Marianas, June 24 (Delayed) (A. P.).—At least five American airmen who parachuted down amidst the Japanese fleet into the Pacific Ocean through anti-aircraft fire so heavy they doubted they would live, were rescued by float planes from cruisers of the American battle fleet the next day.

For three of them it was the second such rescue.

Floating about in the black night as they awaited rescue they saw terrific fires and explosions wreck a great share of Japan's carrier fleet. Alone and supported only by their life jackets, the men sang, talked aloud, prayed and laughed at their ridiculous thoughts.

One admitted later he talked aloud to a buddy who had been killed at Guam.

Lieut. (j.g.) Warren McLellan, 22 years old, Fort Smith, Ark., a torpedo pilot, said that he reached the Jap fleet at 6:05 P. M. and the sight was not frightening.

Forced to Bail Out.

"It looked like any other bunch of ships," he said.

Enemy tracer shells streaked past and hit the center of his main gas tank. A gush of flame seared his wrist and "the cockpit was too hot to stay in" and he and the crew bailed out within ten seconds.

The flames had started to creep back into the plane when Radioman Selbie Greenhalgh, 22, of Pawtucket, R. I., tried to jump. Gunner John Hutchinson of Burbank, Cal., yelled "hurry, this thing is going to blow" and kicked the door which had been stuck. Then Greenhalgh's leg caught and Hutchinson pulled him free. Both jumped.

All three went down within 300 yards of each other. Two other crewmen from another torpedo plane also dropping in the same area were Radioman Ellis Babcock of Buffalo, N. Y., and Herman Platz of the Bronx, N. Y. Yet none of them saw or heard of the others again until after their rescue late the next day.

Saw Bomb Hit Carrier.

Lieut. McLellan saw bombs hitting a big carrier of the Shokaku class some distance away as he drifted down on his 'chute. After dropping in the midst of another group of ships he saw another big carrier "blazing from stem to stern."

"A heavy Jap cruiser was coming at me," he said, "but it turned just in time to miss me. I could see men all standing around the deck and top gun turrets watching the carrier burn."

Lieut. McLellan said that he saw another go by smoking and Hutchinson later reported she was listing and down by the bow. He looked for a piece of wreckage to climb upon but couldn't find any. Jap searchlights were moving here and there through the night seeking their own survivors.

Greenhalgh said that he saw searchlights and flares and tried signaling with his own flashlight.

"Anything to get aboard anything."

Talked About His Girl.

"I tried to make jokes and laughed about losing my borrowed shoes," he related. "I laughed about a letter from my girl who told me after Palau I shouldn't take any more chances."

[McLellan, Hutchinson and Greenhalgh were rescued by floatplanes after anti-aircraft fire had forced their torpedo plane down five miles off the enemy's shore at Palau last March.]

"My legs were getting numb and my tongue was swelling," Greenhalgh continued. "I'm not religious, but I prayed, then talked aloud to my buddy who was killed at Guam, telling him we'd soon be together, crabbing about the food just like always.

"I saw three odd clouds at dawn that looked like the letters I, T and C. I figured it meant 'I trust Christ.' About the same time I heard engines from bombers, but they missed me. A half hour later fighters came by, saw me and dropped a raft, which I was unable to reach. Then a torpedo plane dropped one close and I got in and slept until noon.

"I was really sunburned when I woke and began to get really scared they weren't going to find me. I dozed again and pretty soon was picked up by float planes from a cruiser."

400 CZECHS SEIZED

NEW YORK, June 28.—(AP) Four hundred Czechs, comprising the entire male population of four villages alleged of being centers of resistance, have been arrested by the Gestapo and, it is feared, shot in "mass execution," the BBC said in a broadcast monitored tonight by NBC.

16 Million Tons Of War Goods Sent to Britain

Somervell Reports Huge U. S. Stockpile Shipped in Pre-Invasion Year

WASHINGTON, June 28 (AP).—Advance shipments for the invasion piled up more than 16,000,000 tons of supplies in Britain in a year, twice the tonnage which General John J. Pershing received during World War I, Lieutenant General Brehon Somervell reported today.

The commanding general of the Army Service Forces said in an interview that preshipment of supplies for the invasion stockpiles began more than twelve months ago, while as long ago as last Aug. 11 the Army began planning in exact detail the restoration of the port of Cherbourg.

Cherbourg was a "keyed project," said General Somervell, and a hint of the staggering planning job that preceded the landings in Normandy was contained in his added comment that there were more than 300 keyed projects of various size and importance.

The beachhead supply was on a scale which no one would have dreamed was possible, he said.

"We learned an awful lot in our operations in Africa, Sicily and Italy and the dozens of operations in the Pacific," the general said.

"General Arnold told me when he came back that he was on the beachhead on the fifth day and there was nothing piled up there, no confusion. Everything had been moved inland."

The planning began, he said, with fixing a deadline for arrival of the equipment, then working back from that to fix production schedules in the factories, shipments from the factories to the ports of embarkation, shipment from the ports to England.

It had to take into account the number and capacity of ships available, the capacity of English ports, the capacity of rail lines from the ports in England, and finally the capacity of the storage depots in Britain.

Requisitions for critical items clashed at times with requisitions from other theaters, and sometimes it was necessary to appeal to the operations division of the General Staff to make a decision when there was not enough to go around. Some of these decisions involved taking equipment away from troops in training in this country.

"I established a shortage list several months ago," General Somervell said. "Out of about 1,000,000 items, we wound up with only six in short supply."

CHURCHILL HAILS U.S. NAVY

Prime Minister and Cunningham Praise Pacific Victory

WASHINGTON, June 28 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill and Sir Andrew B. Cunningham, First Sea Lord, have congratulated the United States Navy on the defeat of a Japanese fleet east of the Philippines, Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal disclosed today.

Mr. Churchill's message read: "The fine victory of United States fleet units over the Japanese on June 20 inflicts further severe losses and damage to their rapidly diminishing sea power. My heartfelt congratulations."

Admiral Cunningham said: "Admiral Spruance [Raymond A. Spruance, commander of the Fifth Fleet] is again to be congratulated for another fine job in defeating the Japs in successful actions westward of the Marianas. My personal congratulations."

3 Japs Bagged In 30 Seconds

Washington, June 28 (AP)—Lieut. Com. Robert A. Winston, chief of the "Meataxe" squadron of navy fighter pilots, shot three Japanese planes out of the air in 30 seconds.

Winston, a Princeton graduate and magazine writer and author of books on aviation, is a resident of New York and Washington. While in Washington, he was aviation assistant to the director of the Navy's Bureau of Public Relations.

His quick disposal of the enemy planes occurred during action off Palau, in the Southwest Pacific, on March 30 and was reported today by the navy. The "Meataxe" squadron intercepted nine enemy dive bombers bound for attack on the squadron's carrier. All nine were shot down.

In the same action, Lieut. (j. g.) R. C. Wilson, of Los Angeles, Cal., shot down three more of the dive-bombers, narrowly escaping disaster when one of the bombers exploded.

Two Others Fired

Two more of the bombers were accounted for by Lieut. (j. g.) C. N. Nooy, of St. James, L. I. In between shooting down the two planes he fired on two others which smoked and fell away but did not crash.

Ensign Frank Hancock, Bentonia, Miss., accounted for the ninth plane. In his attack, all but one of the guns on his plane jammed, but the fire from the one was sufficient to send the enemy down in flames.

The squadron, whose motto is "We Cut 'Em Down," has shot down 21 Japanese planes since going into action, with no losses.

U. S.-Argentina Status Tightens

Washington, June 28 (AP)—The United States attitude toward Argentina drew more taut today with the recall of American Ambassador Norman Armour. Armour is expected to leave Buenos Aires today or tomorrow.

The ambassador has been ordered home for consulations. His departure from Buenos Aires will serve to register sharply this country's concern over Argentina's failure to join the rest of the hemisphere in the drive against the Axis.

The State Department has had a series of conferences with other American Governments on Argentina recently, and it is likely that the American slap at the regime of Gen. Edelmiro arrell will be followed by a multilateral expression of poicy.

Escobar's Return Is Denied

WASHINGTON, June 28 (AP)—Dr. Adrian C. Escobar, Argentina Ambassador to the United States, denied today press reports from South America that he is returning to Buenos Aires.

An embassy spokesman emphatically said: "Dr. Escobar is not leaving Washington."

New Blows At Japan Foreseen By Forrestal

Washington, June 28 (AP)—New heavy blows against the mainland of Japan, the Philippine Islands and a greater part of the Dutch East Indies can be expected with final occupation of Saipan Island in the Marianas, Navy Secretary Forrestal declared today.

He made the prediction in outlining the steady westward advance of American forces since reoccupation of the Aluetians and capture of the Solomon Islands group from the Japanese a year ago.

Tank And Shell Steel Needs Are Increased

Washington, June 28 (AP)—Sharply stepped up military demands for tanks and heavy artillery shells have caused indefinite deferment of plans for removing cooking and heating stoves from rationing, William Y. Elliott, director of the Office of Civilian Requirements, said today.

He stated in an interview that steel requirements to produce these high priority war materials made it necessary to revise production programs for civilian durable goods.

Elliott did not indicate how soon stoves would have been removed from rationing if the military's need for more steel had not arisen.

At the request of Representative Calvin Johnson (R., Ill.), OCR began a survey several weeks ago to determine whether restrictions on stove sales could be eliminated.

Roosevelt Approves Bill On Veterans Employment

Measure Grants Preference in Federal Jobs

WASHINGTON, June 28 (AP).—President Roosevelt signed today a bill giving preference in government employment to honorably discharged service men, their widows and the wives of disabled veterans of any United States war.

The measure gives statutory effect to existing civil service regulations giving service-connected disabled veterans a ten-point preference and non-disabled veterans a five-point preference in competition for Federal jobs. It eliminates from future preference ex-service men whose only service was performed in peace time. However, peace-time veterans now in government employment or on civil service registers will not lose the preference they already hold.

NAVY CASUALTIES

Washington, June 28 (A. P.).—The Navy Department announced today the names of fifty-seven additional casualties in the Navy, Maring Corps and Coast Guard, which makes a total of 46,984 casualties reported by the Navy since December 7, 1941. Of this number 20,093 are reported dead, 13,124 wounded, 9,306 missing and 4,461 prisoners of war. Included in today's list are the following with their next of kin:

WOUNDED

PETTY, ROGER DONALD, coxswain, U. S. Naval Reserve; parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Petty, 2726 Holmes street, Brooklyn.

Navy Hospitals Nearly Full, McIntire Reports

Washington, June 28 (AP)—Vice-Admiral Ross T. McIntire, Navy Surgeon General, reported today that naval hospitals in the United States, whose total capacity is for 70,000 patients, are approximately 80 per cent. filled.

He added that on the West Coast, where casualties from the Pacific war are taken, the hopitals are 95 per cent occupied, some men are being moved to convalescent hospitals near their homes, and additional facilities may be required.

On the East Coast, where casualties from the European theater are cared for, he said, no crowding is expected.

PINCH TO COME, CIVILIANS TOLD

Built-Up Supplies Now Gone, WPB Official Says

Washington, June 28 (AP)—The civilian is "just beginning to feel the pinch" of wartime shortages and, despite Government efforts to fill in the worst gaps in civilian supply, can expect no large-scale relief until the war ends, William Y. Elliott, director of the Office of of Civilian Requirements, stated today.

"Up to this point this country has suffered no serious deprivation," the War Production Board official said in an interview. "Now the war is coming home to civilians.

"The average American must expect a very thin time of it unless there is an early end to hostilities."

Built-Up Supplies Gone

Large supplies of consumer goods built up in the period of intensive manufacture before war work hit its stride have now been drained from factory, wholesale and retail stocks, Elliott explained.

A new shortage has developed in steel—the result of invasion demands for landing craft, heavy artillery shells and more tanks—which will affect all consumers' goods made of that metal, Elliott reported, adding that the munitions cutbacks that were expected to cut military demands have not arrived.

"One result is a delay in our plans to remove stoves from rationing," Elliott disclosed.

Steel For Stoves Uncertain

"We do not yet know how much steel will be available in the fourth quarter for the manufacture of gas, electric and oil ranges.

"Some of the shortages were foreseen and cured—some like aluminum were more than cured," he added.

"But certain shortages we never thought of showed up. No American was willing to think, for instance, that manpower could limit our production, but it is the major problem now. Our manpower is not always applied to the right things—there probably is plenty of manpower if it were properly distributed.

Lumber And Textiles

"There will not be enough lumber and lumber products to go around," he declared, adding that the lumber-container shortage is holding up production of other items for lack of packaging.

In cotton textiles the WPB is now "up gainst the question: What is essential?" Elliott said. Experts now are trying to compile a list of "luxury" fabrics which can be prohibited from manufacture, he stated.

"The wool situation is the only comfortable situation in the entire civilian economy," Elliott said, but manpower shortages prevent letting up on restrictions even there.

JOBS FOR ALL IS GOAL

Pledges Appointment of Able Cabinet, Will End One-Man Government.

CHICAGO STADIUM, June 28. —(AP) Governor Thomas E. Dewey accepted tonight the Republican presidential nomination voted him with a lone dissent and pledged his countrymen "a lasting peace" when Germany and Japan have been taught by force to say: "Never again."

Acclaimed by thundering thousands who interrupted 58 times to cheer his words, the youthful New York executive hammered at an Administration he said had "grown old in office," become "tired and quarrelsome."

A white orchid gleaming brilliantly on her black dress, Mrs. Dewey shared the tumultuous reception accorded her husband. While the governor spoke, she sat on the platform about 10 feet from him and watched him intently.

Bricker, Dewey Chat

When Dewey completed his address and the applause had quieted, Governor John W. Bricker of Ohio, unanimously named his running mate, came forward and clasped his hand. The two chatted briefly in a hubbub that drowned their words for all others.

Dewey, his own face glistening with perspiration, told the Republican delegates that "it seems that the great men who founded this nation really knew what they were talking about when they said that three terms were too many."

Text of Dewey's Speech Will Be Found on Page 6

In an ultimate victory next November, the governor voiced the highest confidence. And he said if the turn of the political wheel of fortune brings him to the presidency, the military conduct of the war "must remain completely out of politics."

As for winning the peace, Dewey made it clear he stood firmly on the Republican platform, which advocated an international organization employing "peace forces" to keep in check the forces of aggression.

"We shall not," he said, "make secure the peace of the world by mere words."

Stands on Platform

His remarks drew from Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, chairman of the convention Platform committee the comment to reporters:

"He stands on the platform 100 per cent. He did not attempt to go into specific detail on the nature of the international peace organization that will grow out of the war. The details can not be reached until we know what Great Britain and Russia will do."

Building the structure of peace, the governor declared, "is no task for men who specialize in dividing our people," no task for "stubborn men, grown old and tired and quarrelsome in office."

He listed "full employment" as the first objective of Republican domestic policy. By that, he said, he meant "a real chance for every man and woman to earn a decent living, at a decent wage."

"Do we have to have a war in order to get jobs?" he asked.

"No! No!" the crowd roared back.

"No organization for peace will last," Dewey told steaming applauding thousands crammed into this vast indoor bowl, "if it is slipped through by stealth or trickery or the momentary hypnotism of high-sounding phrases.

"We shall have to work and pray and be patient and make sacrifices to achieve a really lasting peace. That is not too much to ask in the name of those who have died for the future of our country. This is no task to be entrusted to stubborn men, grown old and tired and quarrelsome in office. We learned that in 1919."

Dewey was introduced by Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, the convention chairman, as "the next President of the United States."

The nominee wore a gray business suit and a dark maroon tie.

Selected today with Governor John W. Bricker of Ohio, to try to lead the Republican party on a triumphal march back to the White House, Dewey departed from his prepared speech to say:

Praise for Bricker

"I am happy and proud to be associated with my good friend from the state of Ohio, John W. Bricker.

JUN 29 1944

"For many months John Bricker has gone from state to state telling the people of the issues, of the great need for a better government, for the sound principles of government, and the leadership which will come to it with a Republican victory this year.

"Never before have I seen such good statesmanship and good sportsmanship as that displayed by John Bricker here this morning and I am proud to be associated with him."

In tier on tier of seats, greatest throng yet attracted to the twenty-third Republican conclave, heard Dewey promise:

"On January 20th next year our government will again have a cabinet of the ablest men and women to be found in America."

The 42-year-old former racket buster, who would be the youngest President in American history — if he wins in November — injected into his acceptance speech an accent on youth. He laid special emphasis, too, on the assertion that "this election will bring an end to one-man government in America."

Sitting about 10 feet from where her husband spoke into microphones on the flag-draped platform, Mrs. Dewey's eyes never wandered from her husband as he spoke. On her face was an expression of content and concentration.

Attacks New Deal

Getting out his verbal bludgeon, tingling his voice with sarcasm, the New York governor accused the Roosevelt Administration of never having solved "this fundamental problem of jobs and opportunity."

"The problem of jobs will not be easily solved," he declared. "But it will never be solved at all unless we get a new, progressive administration in Washington — and that means a Republican administration."

A lone Wisconsin holdout, Grant Ritter, Beloit farmer, was the only convention delegate to cast a vote against Dewey. Bricker was nominated unanimously.

Dewey won a ten-minute ovation, the delegates screaming and whistling onto the platform. He smiled broadly and lifted high his hands in recognition. His attractive wife stood beside him during the demonstration, and, when he started talking, took a seat. The nominee spent several minutes posing for photographers, and again, at the end of his speech, posed with his running-mate, Gov. Bricker.

He spoke without benefit of water, Chairman Martin having banged his gavel so lustily that he knocked the water glass from the stand and broke it to pieces. No one thought to replace it.

Fifty-eight separate times the audience broke into his speech to applaud.

For the first time during the convention, the towering wooden hillsides of the upper balconies were nearly filled with spectators. As soon as Dewey finished—at 9:42 p. m. (C.W.T.)—the 23rd Republican Convention ended.

Wendell Willkie, who didn't like the foreign policy plank ratified by the convention, nevertheless was quick to congratulate Dewey today on his nomination.

"You have one of the great opportunities of history," he said.

The convention today was a scene of hand-holding harmony. It shrieked and whistled at mention of men who might have been picked but weren't. It had doubts for a time about who would get second place, but not for long.

Once it buckled down to work it became obvious a clear-cut pattern had been worked out overnight for it to follow. Without a hitch, the convention took its cue.

Dewey-Bricker forces were in complete command. Action unfolded like a quick-breaking play from a T-formation.

Governor Dwight Griswold of Nebraska nominated Dewey:

"The past will have its spokesman in this campaign. I give to you, as the nominee of the Republican party., the spokesman of the future, Thomas E. Dewey."

Convention Acclaims Dewey

Banners and placards leaped magically into hands of delegates and whirled aloft in frenzied acclaim. The convention had its first real chance for an old-fashioned demonstration and did not miss it. For twenty minutes, men and women streamed up and down the aisles, yelling, perspiring in a stadium that steamed like a Turkish bath.

Chairman Martin banged for order with a gavel that looked like an undersized beer keg with a handle.

Bricker, tall, gray, composed moved up to the speaker's stand.

Another outburst from the delegates. Bricker posters on laths rose aloft in the sultry stadium air. Cries of "We want Bricker."

But the Ohio governor, who had wanted the presidential nomination and had said so, no longer was in quest of that top honor.

Bricker spoke:

He was deeply grateful to those who had backed his presidential aspirations. But he was "more interested in defeating the New Deal philosophy of absolutism" than in "being President of these United States."

He understood, as did the delegates, that "it is the overwhelming desire of this convention to nominate a great, vigorous, fighting young American—the noble, the dramatic and the appealing governor of the great state of New York, Thomas E. Dewey."

So, he said, he was asking his Ohio delegation to cast its vote for Dewey.

In the Ohio section of the delegate seats, Dewey placards appeared.

Stassen's Backers Retire

Senator Joseph H. Ball of Minnesota took the podium, his face serious and tired. For days he had been leading a battle for Lt. Comdr. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota.

"As long as there was the slightest chance of Stassen's nomination," he said, "we were determined to present his name to this convention. Governor Bricker's eloquent statement has eliminated any chance that existed. Minnesota's delegation has therefore decided not to present Stassen's name to this convention."

It was all over then but the balloting. But there had to be a few more speeches first.

Representative Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, the only avowed candidate for the presidential nomination other than Bricker, pledged his support to Dewey.

JUN 29 1944

Seconding speeches were made by Gov. Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts and Representative Leonard W. Hall of New York.

Eager to begin voting, delegates listened listlessly, but didn't forget to applaud at the proper times.

Chairman Martin didn't keep them waiting. A clerk began calling the roll of states. And this is the way it went:

Alabama, 14 votes, 14 for Dewey. . .

Minnesota 25 votes, 25 for Dewey. . .

Ohio 50 votes, 50 for Dewey. . .

Wisconsin 24 votes, 23 votes for Dewey, one for MacArthur.

Puerto Rico wound up the first and last ballot by tossing in all two votes for the New Yorker.

Gov. Martin Nominates Bricker

To Governor Edward Martin of Pennsylvania was given the privilege of nominating Bricker for vice-president.

"We named a young and vigorous and courageous man to lead us in the battle this fall," Martin declared. "He needs a man with similar qualifications to assist him.

"I want to place in nomination a man of real courage, starting back in that little log house where he was born, and carried out as governor of the great state of Ohio."

A seconding speech came from Mayor James Garfield Stewart of Cincinnati, who had to make major repairs on an address in which he had planned originally to nominate Bricker for the presidency.

Seconds came, too, from Governors Harry F. Kelly of Michigan and Simeon S. Willis of Kentucky, and from Senator John A. Danaher of Connecticut.

The roll was called again, and this time there wasn't even one dissenting vote.

30.24 — 16647

CHICAGO, June 28.—(AP) Following is the text of Thomas E. Dewey's address accepting the Republican presidential nomination at his party's national convention:

I am profoundly moved by the trust you have placed in me. I deeply feel the responsibility which goes with your nomination for President of the United States at this grave hour of our nation's history.

That I have not sought this responsibility, all of you know. I told the people of my state, two years ago, that it was my intention to devote my full term as governor exclusively to their service. You have decided otherwise. In accordance with the principles of our republican form of government you have laid upon me the highest duty to which an American can be called. No one has a right to refuse that call. With the help of God, I shall try to be worthy of the trust. I accept the nomination.

I come to this great task a free man. I have made no pledges, promises or commitments, expressed or implied, to any man or woman. I shall make none, except to the American people.

These pledges I do make:

To men and women of the Republican party everywhere I pledge my utmost efforts in the months ahead. In return, I ask for your support. Without it, I cannot discharge the heavy obligation you lay upon me.

Pledges Appointment Of Able Cabinet

To Americans of every party I pledge that on January 20th next year our government will again have a cabinet of the ablest men and women to be found in America. Its members will expect and will receive full delegation of the powers of their office. They will be capable of administering those powers. They will each be experienced in the task to be done and young enough to do it. This election will bring an end to one-man government in America.

To Americans of every party I pledge a campaign dedicated to one and above all others— that this nation under God may continue in the years ahead a free nation of free men.

At this moment on battlegrounds around the world Americans are dying for the freedom of our country. Their comrades are pressing on in the face of hardship and suffering. They are pressing on for total victory and for the liberties of all of us.

Everything we say or do today and in the future must be devoted to the single purpose of that victory. Then, when victory is won, we must devote ourselves with equal unity of purpose to re-winning at home the freedom they have won at such desperate cost abroad.

To our Allies let us send from this convention one message from our hearts: The American people are united with you to the limit of our resources and our manpower, devoted to the single task of victory and the establishment of a firm and lasting peace.

To every member of the Axis powers let us send this message: By this political campaign, which you are unable to understand, our will to victory will be strengthened, and with every day of further delay and blunder the consequences to you will be more severe.

That we shall win this war none of us and few of our enemies can now have any doubt. But how we win this war is of major importance for the years ahead. We won the last war but it did not stay won. This time we must also win the purposes for which we are fighting. Germany must never again nourish the delusion that she could have won. We must carry to Japan a defeat so crushing and complete that every last man among them knows that he has been beaten. We must not merely defeat the armies and navies of our enemies. We must defeat, once and for all, their will to make war. In their hearts as well as with their lips, let them be taught to say: "Never again."

Military Leadership To Remain Unchanged

The military conduct of the war is outside this campaign. It is and must remain completely out of politics. General Marshall and Admiral [illegible] are doing a superb job. Thank God for both of them. Let me make it crystal clear that a change of administration next January cannot and will not involve any change in the military conduct of the war. If there is not now any civilian interference with the military and naval commands, a change in administration will not alter that status. If there is civilian interference, the new administration will put a stop to it forthwith.

But the war is being fought on the home front as well as abroad. While all of us are deeply proud of the military conduct of the war, can we honestly say that the home front could not bear improvement? The present administration in Washington has been in office for more than eleven years. Today, it is at war with Congress, and at war with itself. Squabbles between cabinet members, feuds between rival bureaucrats and bitterness between the President and his own party members, in and out of Congress, have become the order of the day. In the vital matters of taxation, price control, rationing, labor relations, manpower, we have become familiar with the spectacle of wrangling, bungling and confusion.

Does anyone suggest that the present national administration is giving either efficient or competent government? We have not heard that claim made, even by its most fanatical supporters. No, all they tell us is that in its young days it did some good things. That we freely grant. But now it has grown old in office. It has become tired and quarrelsome. It seems that the great men who founded this nation really knew what they were talking about when they said that three terms were too many.

When we have won the war, we shall still have to win the peace. We are agreed, all of us, that America will participate with other sovereign nations in a cooperative effort to prevent future wars. Let us face up boldly to the magnitude of that task. We shall not make secure the peace of the world by mere words. We cannot do it simply by drawing up a fine-sounding treaty. It can not be the work of one man or of a little group of rulers who meet together in private conferences. The structure of peace must be built. It must be the work of many men. We must have as our representatives in this task the ablest men and women America can produce, and the structure they join in building must rest upon the solid rock of a united American public opinion.

I am not one of those who despair of achieving that end. I am utterly confident we can do it. For years, we have had men in Washington who were notoriously weak in certain branches of arithmetic but who specialized in division. They have played up minor differences of opinion among our people until the people of other countries might have thought that America was cleft in two.

But all the while there was a large, growing area of agreement. Recently the overwhelming majesty of that broad area of agreement has become obvious. The Republican party can take pride in helping to define it and broaden it. There are only a few, a very few, who really believe that America should try to remain aloof from the world. There are only a relatively few who believe it would be practical for America or her Allies to renounce all sovereignty and join a super-state. I certainly would not deny those two extremes the right to their opinions; but I stand firmly with the overwhelming majority of my fellow citizens in that great wide area of agreement. That agreement was clearly expressed by the Republican Mackinac declaration and was adopted in the foreign policy plank of this convention.

Lasting Peace Will Require Sacrifice

No organization for peace will last if it is slipped through by stealth or trickery or the momentary hypnotism of high-sounding phrases. We shall have to work and pray and be patient and make sacrifices to get really lasting peace. That is not too much to ask in the name of those who have died for the future of our country. This is no task to be entrusted to stubborn men, grown old and tired and quarrelsome in office. We learned that in 1919.

The building of the peace is more than a matter of international cooperation. God has endowed America with such blessings as to fit her for a great role in the world. We can only play that role if we are strong and healthy and vigorous as nature has equipped us to be. It would be a tragedy after this war if Americans returned from our armed forces and failed to find the freedom and opportunity for which they fought. This must be a land where every man and woman has a fair chance to work and get ahead. Never again must free Americans face the spectre of long-continued, mass unemployment. We Republicans are agreed that full employment shall be a first objective of national policy. By full employment I mean a real chance for every man and woman to earn a decent living, at a decent wage.

What hope does the present administration offer here? In 1940, the year before this country entered the war, there were still ten million unemployed. After seven years of unequalled power and unparalleled spending, the New Deal had failed utterly to solve that problem. It never solved that problem. It was left to be solved by war. Do we have to have a war in order to get jobs?

What are we now offered? Only the dreary prospect of a continued war economy after the war, with interference piled on interference and petty tyrannies rivaling the very regimentation against which we are now at war.

The present administration has never solved this fundamental problem of jobs and opportunity. It never can solve this problem. It has never even understood what makes a job. It has never been for full production. It has lived in chattering fear of abundance. It has specialized in curtailment and restriction. It has been consistently hostile to and abusive of American business and American industry, although it is in business and industry that most of us make our living.

Questions Record Of New Deal Administration

In all the record of the past eleven years is there anything that suggests the present administration can bring about high-level employment after this war? Is there any reason to believe that those who have so signally failed in the past can succeed in the future? The problem of jobs will not be easily solved; but it will never be solved at all unless we get a new, progressive administration in Washington, and that means a Republican administration.

For one hundred and fifty years America was the hope of the world. Here on this great broad continent we had brought into being something for which men had longed throughout all history. Here, all men were held to be free and equal. Here, government derived its just powers from the consent of the governed. Here men believed passionately in freedom, independence—the God-given right of the individual to be his own master. Yet, with all of this freedom—I insist—because of this freedom—ours was a land of plenty. In a fashion unequalled anywhere else in the world, America grew and strengthened; our standard of living became the envy of the world. In all lands, men and women looked toward America as the pattern of what they, themselves, desired. And because we were what we were, good will flowed toward us from all corners of the earth.

An American was welcomed everywhere and looked upon with admiration and regard.

At times, we had our troubles; made our share of mistakes; but we faltered only to go forward with renewed vigor. It remained for this past eleven years, under the present national administration, for continuing unemployment to be accepted with resignation as the inevitable condition of a nation past its prime.

It is the New Deal which tells us that America has lost its capacity to grow. We shall never build a better world by listening to those counsels of defeat. Is America old and worn out? Look to the beaches of Normandy for the answer. Look to the reaches of the wide Pacific—to the corners of the world where American men are fighting. Look to the marvels of production in the war plants in your own towns. I say to you: Our country is just fighting its way through to new horizons. The future of America has no limit.

True, we now pass through dark and troubled times. Scarcely a home escapes the touch of dread anxiety and grief; yet in this hour the American spirit rises, faith returns—faith in our God, faith in our fellowman, faith in the land our fathers died to win, faith in the future, limitless, and bright of this, our country.

In the name of that faith we shall carry our cause in the coming months to the American people.

BRICKER IS CHOSEN FOR SECOND PLACE

Ohio Governor Throws Support to Dewey for Presidential Nomination.

CHICAGO STADIUM, June 28—(AP) John W. Bricker, Ohio's tall, white-haired governor — who says the destruction of President Roosevelt's New Deal is more vital to him than his own ambitions for the presidency—won the vice-presidential nomination today by a unanimous vote of the Republican convention.

No other name for the vice-presidency was placed before the convention.

Supports Dewey

His nomination came after he addressed the roaring delegates, dramatically throwing his support to Governor Dewey of New York for the first place on the G.O.P. ticket.

Bricker was placed in nomination by Governor Edward Martin of Pennsylvania, who described the 50-year-old log-cabin born Ohioan as "a man in tune with American ideals—a statesman, a soldier, a man of courage."

Seconds were made by Governors Harry F. Kelly of Michigan and Simeon Willis of Kentucky, and by Senator John A. Danaher, of Connnecticut, and Mayor James G. Stewart of Cincinnati, who has been nominated by Ohio Republicans to succeed Bricker as governor.

Convention Chairman Joseph Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, called for any other nominations, and none was heard. Then began the roll call of states, and all cast their full allotment of votes for Bricker.

Bedlam broke loose in the convention as the Ohioan strode out on the platform to withdraw from the presidential running, throwing his support to Dewey.

Bricker Banners Displayed

Bricker banners, originally intended to boost his candidacy for the first spot on the ticket, broke out over the floor of the huge stadium. His enthusiasts marched into the aisles with their banners, to the tune of brass bands. Delegates shouted. The booming of the gavel, to restore order, hardly could be heard.

When order finally was achieved, Bricker said:

"I am more interested in defeating the New Deal philosophy of absolutism which is threatening America today; I am more interested in defeating that than I am more to the United States than the election of a Republican President and a Republican Congress this fall.

Bricker described Dewey as "a great, a grand, a vigorous young American."

"What a significant job he has done as governor of that state," he said. "He understands not alone the domestic issues but the involvements of the international issues.

ever of being President of these United States.

"The Republican party unselfishly goes into this campaign to redeem free government that the world may live better tomorrow. We shall preserve representative government by a Republican victory this fall."

Asserting that his first ambition is to destroy the New Deal, Bricker declared nothing could mean

We cannot separate the domestic policy from the international program. x x x

"Tom Dewey will become the gallant leader of the Republicans of this nation who will change this administration. My heart and soul will be in the service of the man who will be nominated here today."

Bricker went to the platform just as Dewey was placed in nomination. After he spoke, Dewey banners broke out in the Ohio delegation—and it was all over but the shouting and voting.

HOW BRICKER GOT ON TICKET

Story Behind Story Unravels As 3-Act Drama

Chicago, June 28 (AP)—The story behind the story of the Republicans' Dewey-Bricker ticket unraveled tonight as a three-act drama, played by an all-male cast for a one-night run in hotel rooms of this jammed convention town.

The public saw and heard perspiring convention delegates proclaim their unity with a 1,056-to-1 vote nominating Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York for President and unanimously indorsing Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio as his running mate.

Warren Refuses

But hardly a delegate thought all of this just happened by itself.

The news filtered swiftly through the hall when the delegates met today that something was up. Gradually the details of the spectatorless drama got around. It went like this:

Gov. Earl Warren of California, an odds-on favoriate for the Vice-Presidential nomination, opened the first act with a final refusal to be drafted. He meant it when he said he wouldn't accept. To clinch it, he put it in writing in a letter to the Oregon delegation.

Get O. K. From Dewey

That was enough for the trio who have made up the Dewey brain trust in Chicago — J. Russel Sprague, of New York, national committeeman; Edwin F. Jaeckle, State chairman, and Herbert Brownell, Jr., whose specialty is political campaigns.

They lifted the second-act curtain with a call to Dewey. Warren wouldn't take the nomination, they said. What about Bricker? If they could get him to withdraw and urge Dewey's nomination in return for second place they could shut off an otherwise sour note in the campaign. They got an O. K.

The next scene brough. Sprague and his aides together in a hotel room with Ed Schorr, Ohio State chairman; Roy D. Moore, Bricker's Presidential campaign manager, and others. The proposition was made and cordially received. The Bricker people had counted noses and knew they had no chance for first place.

Then Bricker Agrees

In an effort to clinch it, a telephone call was put through. Governor Tom talked to Governor John. Still there was no final answer.

That came at the opening of the third act, only an hour or two before the convention met. Bricker agreed. The Dewey trio swung into action, laid their cards before Senator Joe Ball, of Minnesota, and others of the camp supporting Lieut. Com. Harold E. Stassen. The Stassen people also knew a stone wall when they saw it. They caved, agreed to make it unanimous.

Even before Representative Joe Martin, of Massachusetts, banged his chairman's gavel to open the day's meeting it was all set. Bricker and Ball took the platform, and the rest is history.

Dewey Shot From Obscurity Within Less Than A Decade

Chicago, June 28 (AP)—Thomas E. Dewey shot from comparative obscurity to national prominence within less than a decade.

As short a time ago as 1935, he was a highly successful lawyer in private practice in New York but scarcely known to the public. Then Gov. Herbert H. Lehman appointed him a special prosecutor of rackets and Dewey launched on a public career which has been meteoric.

Now only 42 years old, the New York Governor is a solidly built man of about 5 feet 7 inches, who can and often does work longer hours and at a faster pace than younger associates can match.

Voice Reflects Training

In formal speech or casual conversation, his words invariably are direct, incisive, and his voice reflects the fact that in college days at the Unversity of Michigan he was a member of the glee club and later placed third in a national singing competition.

Dewey, elected New York Governor in 1942, was the first of his party to gain the office in 20 years.

At Albany, he has appointed as heads of State departments and to other key jobs, men who, for the most part, have had little or no background in State politics.

Point To His Administration

In urging Dewey for the Republican Presidential nomination, friends pointed to his 18 months' administration of New York affairs as one of "reason, rationalism and restraint."

They also pointed to the $163,000,000 State surplus which Dewey reported last April 1. This has been frozen in a special fund, created on his recommendation, to provide post-war jobs for veterans and those leaving war industry.

Over opposition of many Republicans, Dewey put through a reapportionment of New York State legislative districts, which had not been revised since 1917.

Court Held It Constitutional

Some Republicans told Dewey the bill he recommended was poor politics. Democrats and some Republicans called it unconstitutional. But Dewey, having pledged reapportionment in his 1942 campaign, was adamant.

The Republican-controlled Legislature thereupon approved the measure and the State's highest court subsequently held it constitutional.

The reapportionment was a high light of broad legislative programs, including extensive aid for war veterans, recommended by Dewey and indorsed in their entirety by the 1943 and 1944 Legislatures.

The Governor takes his chief relaxation in the Executive Mansion swimming pool or at golf at his Pawling (N. Y.) farm, to which he goes with Mrs. Dewey and their sons, Tommy, 11, and John, 8, whenever opportunity offers. The Governor and Mrs. Dewey, the former Frances Eileen Hutt, of Sherman, Texas, were married in 1928.

Dewey, born in Owosso, Mich., March 24, 1902, first saw New York city as a student at Columbia Law School, from which he was graduated in 1925.

Dewey as President Would Be Youngest

CHICAGO, June 28 (AP)—Thomas E. Dewey of New York if elected would become the nations youngest President—by a matter of 20 days.

The New York governor is 42—he was born March 24, 1902—and if elected he would be inaugurated Jan. 20, 1945, or 63 days before his 43rd birthday anniversary.

Theodore Roosevelt also was 42 when he became President upon the death, by assassination, of William McKinley on Sept. 14, 1901. But that was only 43 days before "Teddy's" 43rd birthday. He was born Oct. 27, 1858.

There have been only six Presidents who were under 50 when they were inaugurated—James K. Polk at 49, Franklin Pierce at 48, U. S. Grant at 46, James A. Garfield at 49, Grover Cleveland at 47, and "T. R."

FARLEY STILL A SEER

ST. LOUIS, June 28—(AP) James A. Farley, former chairman of the Democratic National committee, predicted the Republican presidential and vice-presidential candidates at a press conference here March 17.

"You can put it (his prediction) down as (Gov. Thomas E.) Dewey and (Gov. John W.) Bricker on the Republican slate. And don't forget that," Farley told reporters.

WILLKIE MESSAGE TO DEWEY BARRED

NEW YORK, June 28 — (AP) Wartime communication restrictions prevented Wendell L. Willkie from sending a congratulatory telegram to Republican presidential nominee Gov. Thomas E. Dewey today, but Willkie got a "thank you" reply—by wire.

He also got a hearty laugh out of the one-sided exchange, which developed this way:

Keeping up with developments at the national Republican convention in Chicago Willkie quickly prepared a message to Dewey when the governor's name was placed in nomination.

"Hearty congratulations to you on your nomination," it said. "You have one of the great opportunities of history."

Willkie gave the telegram to a Western Union messenger, then told the press about it. But the Western Union didn't send the telegram. The company notified Willkie that War Communications Order 25 prohibits the dispatching of congratulatory messages.

Meantime, however, radio newscasters picked up the story and broadcast it. Dewey, waiting at Albany for word of his nomination, heard the message and sent a telegram to Willkie, saying:

"Many thanks for your gracious wire and for your good wishes. I appreciate them ever so much."

A Western Union spokesman explained that Dewey's telegram was transmitted because Order 25 doesn't apply to "thank you" messages.

DEWEY IS NOVICE, SAYS HANNEGAN IN APPRAISING TICKET

WASHINGTON, June 28.—(AP) Robert E. Hannegan, chairman of the Democratic National committee, said today the Republican party's choice of platform and candidates is almost identical with those of 1932, 1936 and 1940, and he added that "the results will be the same" next November as before.

"Dewey is, of course, an inexperienced novice in national and international affairs," Hannegan declared. "The more vocal Bricker talks like Hoover and will run like Landon. The Democratic ticket will overwhelmingly defeat this choice of the old guard."

Both the G.O.P. platform and its slate of candidates, he said, were "designed to appeal to all conflicting groups in the party."

G. O. P. Congressmen Happy

The Chicago selection of Governor Dewey and Bricker as G.O.P. standard bearers left Republican congressmen jubilantly predicting victory for them in November. Their Democratic colleagues contended the voters would reject the pair as lacking needed experience.

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (R-Mass) said "Dewey's choice by acclamation is indicative of the party unity that will lead to a victory in November. I am very happy about the choice."

Taking for granted that President Roosevelt will get the Democratic nod for a fourth term, Representative Ramspeck (D-Ga), the House majority whip, said he doubted that the "people will want to exchange Dewey's inexperience, for the proved ability of Mr. Roosevelt, Secretary of State Hull and others of the present Administration."

"I'm not surprised to hear of Dewey's choice," said Ramspeck. "He's been working hard at it for a good many years."

From Senator Davis (R-Pa) came the comment that Dewey has the "ability, vigor, strength and determination to carry out the sound and forward-looking platform of a rejuvenated Republican party. He'll turn back the tides of rampant and irresponsible bureaucracy and put the government back in the hands of the American people."

"Dewey's nomination," remarked Senator Thomas (D-Utah), "will be considered by the people as an experiment as he runs against the tried leader. The shoving of Mr. Willkie in the background and bringing Herbert Hoover into the front, I think, means the Republican party will remain the G.O.P. of the 1920s."

The Dewey-Bricker combination was seen by Representative Rockwell (R-Colo) as a "very strong team: If the Republicans can't win with it they can't win with any. Dewey and Bricker will appeal to the voters."

DELEGATE FIRM FOR M'ARTHUR

Wisconsin Farmer Keeps Dewey From Clean Sweep

Chicago, June 28 (AP)—Grant A. Ritter, Wisconsin farmer, was the sole dissenter today when 1,056 of the 1,057 Republican convention delegates nominated Thomas E. Dewey as their Presidential candidate.

The 55-year-old Ritter cast his vote for General Douglas MacArthur. As soon as that vote boomed out on the stadium amplifiers, reporters swarmed around him. They worked on him in relays.

Explains His Vote

"Why? Why?" they asked. Some of his friends said he was "stubborn." One Wisconsin delegate told him to his face "this is sad, very sad."

But wearily wiping the perspiration from his neck, Ritter said over and over: "I did it because I had it in my heart to do it, it was my conviction."

A photographer got set to take a picture and someone snatched away the Wisconsin sign so it would not show.

Ritter, whose farm is near Beloit, explained he had two reasons for his action: "I represent people who want MacArthur. And I am opposed to the regimentation at this convention, the steam-roller tactics."

Martin's Viewpoint

George F. Cady, of Kenosha, chairman of the Wisconsin delegation, said Ritter and two Milwaukee delegates, Dr. John P. Koehler and Stanley Johnson, had intended to place MacArthur's name in nomination and had asked Joseph Martin, of Massachusetts, convention chairman, for permission to do so.

Martin said later he gave Wisconsin time to offer MacArthur's name when nominations were open, but no one spoke up.

Then time came to vote for Dewey, who was the only one nominated, and Koehler and Johnson threw their votes to the New Yorker, but not Ritter.

So, although MacArthur was not nominated, Ritter voted for him anyway.

Filipino Regrets GOP Ignoring Of Philippines

San Francisco, June 28 (AP)—Vicente Villamin, Filipino lawyer and economist, expressed keen disappointment today over failure of the Republican platform to mention the Philippines. He said he telegraphed his views to Senator Taft (R., Ohio).

In a statement Villamin, widely known in Filipino circles in the United States and the Philippines, said:

"The Republican platform adopted by the Republican convention at Chicago mentioned the future of Hawaii, Puerto Rico and Alaska, but failed to say a word about the Philippines, not even a word of commendation of the loyalty of the Filipinos that made the epic of Bataan the symbol of America's magnanimity to a people under her sovereignty for 44 years.

"The failure of the platform to reaffirm the granting of Philippine independence after the war will be used by the Japanese effectively to alienate the Filipino people from America by telling them that the party which had opposed independence in the past might continue in that position after the war through possible amendment of the Independence Act. . . ."

U. S. Planes Securing Absolute Air Control, Publication Says

JUN 29 1944

New York, June 28 (AP)—Superior American flying equipment is securing "absolute control of the air over all fronts," the authoritative Aircraft Year Book says in its 1944 edition, published today.

Major factors in maintaining that control, the publication says, are "our vastly increased production of strategically important combat airplanes and the superb training and fighting qualities of our airmen."

Over 75 Models In Service

Reviewing the nation's war record in the air, it says:

"The United States now has in service more than 75 different models of military aircraft ranging from trainers to the most devastating combat planes seen in action thus far during the war.

"We have under test other planes which promise to keep us ahead of our enemies in all kinds of air warfare over all fronts.

"We now have in service at least five different models of fighter planes with speeds over 400 miles an hour. England has three. Germany has two. Japan has none.

"No enemy bomber has approached in range, bomb-load, accuracy and defensive power the effectiveness of Allied long-range bombers such as our Boeing Fortresses, Consolidated Vultee Liberators and the British Lancaster.

More Powerful Engines

"Our continuous improvement in combat performance under the stimulus of war has been remarkable.

"Our aircraft engines develop greater power for less weight than formerly. Improved fuels, better cooling and improved working conditions in the cylinders, brought about by better valves, piston rings and lubricants are partly responsible.

"It has remained for Anglo-American ingenuity to solve the numerous mechanical complexities which have prevented earlier realization of the inherent advantages of jet propulsion.

"Development of our wartime transport service was one of the most important contributions to control of the air. Our American transport aircraft were unequaled anywhere."

N. Y.-Europe Flights Mark 5th Anniversary

New York, June 28 (AP)—Today marks the fifth anniversary of regular air passenger service between New York and Europe.

During the five years Clipper planes have flown 1,800 crossings, carrying 60,000 passengers, according to Pan American Airways.

AFRICA CHANGE LAID TO WEST

Bishop Booth Cites 'Spiritual Destruction' Of Natives

Lakeside, Onio, June 28 (AP)—The western world has released forces of "spiritual destruction" upon the continent of Africa, "just as definitely as a bombardier releases his bomb over his objective," Newell S. Booth, Methodist Bishop of Africa, declared today at the Christian Youth Conference of North America.

JUN 29 1944

"Western secularism and the veneer of sophistication are being substituted for the deep penetration of religion into every aspect of life which has been so characteristic of African culture," he declared.

World Problems Highlighted

The youth conference opened yesterday, with nearly 1,000 delegates from the United States and Canada attending, representing 42 Protestant denominations.

Booth's address highlighted a symposium on world problems. Other symposium speakers were Jean Humphreys Harbison, of Adjuntas, Puerto Rico, and Newton Chiang, Chengtu, China.

The Methodist bishop declared efforts to bring gold, diamonds, rubber, cocoa and other products out of Africa has caused the native to "lose his respect for authority and his loyalty to accept leadership.

"Africa is losing the idea of religious significance of the soil, and the importance of the land as the home of a people and its utilization for the service of all.

Drove In Slave Gangs

"We wanted workers and drove them in slave gangs out of the villages—now we take them out of those same villages to work in our cities and mines, still under control and still working for us without proper compensation."

Social disunity and irresponsibility among Africans must be replaced, Booth declared, by "the peculiarly African sense of social cohesion which gives status to each individual and weaves every member of society into a recognized system of mutual privileges and obligations.

British Spaniel Flown To U. S.

JUN 29 1944

Chicago, June 28 (AP)—A black cocker spaniel, whose master at an air base in England was an Indiana farm boy, is romping about his new home on an Indiana farm after a plane trip from England authorized by Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the United States Army Air Forces.

In England the dog—"Fla"—was the inseparable companion of Sergt. Robert K. Bell, 23, who was killed last December 23 when his Liberator crashed after a raid on Germany.

Bell's sister, Mariette, a nurse in Chicago, had asked General Arnold if Flak could be sent to her parents, telling the General that the dog would console them "as part of Bob that still is living.

Marvin Jones Cites U. S. Food Records

Dallas, Texas, June 28 (AP)—Marvin Jones, War Foods Administrator, said here tonight: "More food has been produced in the last three years than any nation ever produced in any three years in history."

JUN 29 1944

Jones did not mention current politics, but in an interview preceding the [illegible] speech said: "Food is not a political matter and its distribution to the American people under the rationing system or to Allied nations under lend-lease will not be affected in the least by the Presidential campaign or any other political campaign."

Under the support-price system on more than 40 commodities, Jones said, farmers have a gross income of more than $20,000,000,000, which he declared was the largest income farmers have ever had.

A LIBERATOR BASE IN SOUTHERN ITALY, JUNE 27-(DELAYED)-(AP)-
A LIBERATOR WAS JUST LEVELING OUT FOR A RUN OVER AN OIL REFINERY IN AUSTRIA.

THE BOMB BAY WAS OPEN AND THE BOMBARDIER WAS WAITING TO PULL THE RELEASE WHEN AN ANTI-AIRCRAFT SHELL BURST BENEATH IT, SEVERING THE BOMB SHACKLES AND RELEASING THE LOAD OF EXPLOSIVES.

"AND THAT WAS ONE SHELL THAT BOOMERANGED," SAID SGT.LOUIS C.PLATH, 419 NORTH 17TH ST., MCALLEN, TEX, "BECAUSE THE BOMBS FELL RIGHT IN THE MIDDLE OF THE TARGET."

SOMEWHERE IN THE BOSNIAN MOUNTAINS, JUNE 22-(DELAYED)--WHEN THE GERMANS CAPTURED MARSHAL TITO'S HEADQUARTERS AT DRVAR THE YUGOSLAV NATIONAL ARMY OF LIBERATION IN THIS PART OF BOSNIA WAS SOMEWHAT

30.24— 16657

DISORGANIZED BUT IN LESS THAN A MONTH IT BEGAN TO FUNCTION NORMALLY AGAIN.

JUN 29 1944

HEADQUARTERS OF THE CORPS WHICH PROTECTS THIS REGION CONSISTS OF A SMALL WOOD JUST BELOW THE SUMMIT OF A MOUNTAIN FROM WHICH IN CLEAR WEATHER YOU CAN SEE AN IMMENSE DISTANCE ACROSS SOME OF THE NOBLEST HILLS AND VALLEYS IN EUROPE. IT IS BOUNDED ON ONE SIDE BY AN ALMOST VERTICAL DROP INTO A NARROW THICKLY-WOODED VALLEY AND ON THE OTHER BY LONG SLOPING FIELDS OF LUSH GRASS.

SO CAREFULLY WAS THE WORK OF DESTRUCTION DONE BY THE GERMANS IN THEIR LAST ATTACK THAT THOSE PARTISANS WHO SURVIVED NOW LIVE--OR RATHER EXIST--IN THE OPEN FOREST OR IN WHATEVER BIVOUACS THEY HAVE BEEN ABLE TO MAKE FOR THEMSELVES AND THEIR CHILDREN.

MORE PEOPLE COULD BE HOUSED MORE QUICKLY IF THERE WERE NOT A DESPERATE SHORTAGE OF MATERIALS WITH WHICH TO PUT TOGETHER THE ABUNDANCE OF TIMBER AVAILABLE.

NAILS IN PARTICULAR ARE WORTH MORE THAN GOLD.

A FLEET OF ALLIED AERIAL TRANSPORTS ESCORTED BY SPITFIRES FITTED WITH LONG-RANGE TANKS STREAMED INTO THIS LOVELY VALLEY TODAY, BRINGING SUPPLIES FOR MARSHAL TITO'S YUGOSLAV PARTISANS.

THE FLEET CARRIED A JEEP TRAILER, THOUSANDS OF ROUNDS OF VARYING-SIZED AMMUNITION, WEAPONS, CLOTHING AND FOOD FOR ONE CORPS OF THE NATIONAL ARMY OF LIBERATION. THE FLIGHT WAS A SPECTACULAR DEMONSTRATION OF ALLIED AERIAL MIGHT AND SKILL.

ON THE FLIGHT HERE WE PASSED OVER THE GERMAN-HELD ADRIATIC COAST AT A TEMPTING HEIGHT EVEN FOR LIGHT FLAK AND OUR ESCORT OF FIGHTERS MOVED CHALLENGINGLY FAR BELOW US. BUT THE COUNTRYSIDE WAS DESERTED AND IT WAS NOT UNTIL WE HAD DROPPED THROUGH THE CLOUDS OVER THIS VALLEY THAT WE SAW LIFE OF ANY KIND.

JUN 29 1944

MEN WERE SETTING OUT OUR LAND MARKS AND LIGHTING WIND FIRES IN THIS PRECARIOUSLY-HELD STRIP OF PARTISAN TERRITORY.

CROWDED AT ONE END OF THE IMPROVISED LANDING GROUND WERE SCORES OF DRAB FIGURES AWAITING THE RESCUE WHICH OUR ARMADA PROMISED THEM. WOUNDED IN THE LAST GERMAN ATTACK, THEY HAD BEEN WAITING IN THE WOODS FOR THREE DAYS SO THEY MIGHT BE EVACUATED TO BASE HOSPITALS IN ITALY.

AS THE AIRCRAFT CIRCLED WITHIN THE HILLTOPS MORE PEOPLE FLOWED FROM THE PINE FORESTS--A STREAM OF HUMANITY, HOMELESS, HUNGRY AND DEPENDENT FOR THE MOST PART ON THE SUPPLIES WHICH SUCH ARGOSIES AS OURS ARE ABLE TO BRING FROM A MORE BOUNTIFULLY SUPPLIED WORLD THAN THAT WHICH THE GERMANS HAVE LEFT.

LESS THAN A MINUTE AFTER EACH PLANE TOUCHED DOWN IT WAS BEING EMPTIED OF ITS PRECIOUS STORES. OUR ESCORT REMAINED IN THE SKIES ABOVE, WHEELING CONSTANTLY LEST THE GERMANS SHOULD COME--AS THEY SOME TIMES DO.

ABOVE ALL THE PARTISANS HERE NEED FOOD. SEVERAL MEN HAVE DIED OF HUNGER IN THE LAST FEW WEEKS. THEY ALL HAVE BEEN LIVING ON GRASS AND MEAT--WITHOUT SALT. THERE IS A CERTAIN AMOUNT OF MEAT, FOR THE FLOCKS WERE CONCEALED WHEN THE GERMANS PASSED THIS WAY. BUT MEN CANNOT LIVE ON A DIET OF BOILED MEAT WITHOUT ANY SALT. SOME DIE WHEN THEY TRY TO LIVE ON IT TOO LONG.

JUN 29 1944

WHEN DISCUSSIONS WERE GOING ON BETWEEN THE BRITISH-AMERICAN SUB-MISSION HERE AND THE CORPS COMMANDER AND HIS STAFF ABOUT THE QUANTITY AND PERCENTAGES OF MATERIAL TO BE BROUGHT IN IF POSSIBLE IN THE COMING WEEKS, THE HIGHEST PRIORITY AND THE HIGHEST PERCENTAGE WERE GIVEN TO FOOD.

CONTACT BETWEEN THE CORPS AND THE ALLIED MISSION IS MAINTAINED BY A YOUNG UNITED STATES CAPTAIN AND A BRITISH SIGNAL OFFICER. THE LATTER OPERATES THE RADIO.

AS THE TRANSPORT PLANES WERE EMPTIED OF THEIR CARGOES SUFFERING AND EXHAUSTED MEN WERE TAKEN ABOARD, SOME OF THEM ON STRETCHERS. THEY WERE BEING SENT OUT IN A LAST HOPE THAT PEACE AND TIME MIGHT RESTORE IF NOT ENTIRELY CURE THEM.

BEFORE THE AIRCRAFT DOORS WERE FINALLY CLOSED, BOOTS, GREAT COATS, OLD CAPES AND SHOES SHOWERED FROM THEM TO THE GROUND. SUCH ARTICLES IN YUGOSLAVIA ARE TOO PRECIOUS TO BE ALLOWED TO LEAVE THE COUNTRY.

ONE BY ONE, IN PERFECT TIMING AND FORMATION, THE PLANES RACED INTO THE WIND. THEY CIRCLED US ONCE, DIPPED THEIR WINGS TO SAY GOODBY--AND WERE GONE INTO THE CLOUDS FROM WHICH, LIKE A GIFT OF GOD TO THESE HUNGRY PEOPLE, THEY HAD DESCENDED LESS THAN HALF AN HOUR EARLIER.

chungking, june 28--(AP)--regardless of the outcome of the new japanese drive to conquer the pey peiping-hankow and the canton-hankow railways, china's will to resist will NOT falter under any circumstances, minister of information lian han chao said at a press conference today.

asserting that japan would w NOT be ww able to conquer china if she staked all her forces in the attempt, chao said that the chinese could NOT share the view of some observers that the fall of hengyang, vital rail junction ~~that is the immediate japanese goal, would~~ might prolong the war another year or two.

the informatio minister disclosed that the chinese government had made "some very definite proposals" for settlement of the communist problem, and is awaiting the community party's reply.

"the government has consistently followed with all sincerity the resolution to reach a settlement through political means," he said. "a settlement through political methods is simple. as long as the communist party agrees to abide by the law and w as long as its troops obey the order of the supreme command, all questions will be solved automatically."

U.S.PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS,PEARL HARBOR,JUNE 28 (AP) EVENTUAL VICTORY FOR AMERICAN FORCES ON SAIPAN, EMBATTLED KEY ISLAND IN THE MARIANAS, SEEMED ASSURED TODAY BUT THERE STILL WAS HEAVY FIGHTING TO BE DONE.

JUN 29 1944

SUCH WAS THE SITUATION AT THE NEAREST INVASION POINT TO TOKYO AS REPORTED BY REMBERT JAMES, ASSOCIATED PRESS WAR CORRESPONDENT AT SAIPAN.

JUN 29 1944

YANK ASSAULT FORCES HAD CONQUERED MORE THAN HALF THE ISLAND. THEY HAD ELIMINATED THE PHANTOM ENEMY WHO COULD BE HEARD BUT NOT SEEN AS HE RESISTED FROM CAVES ON NAFUTAN PENINSULA AT THE SOUTH-EASTERN CORNER OF THE ISLAND. THEY HELD THE FULL INITIATIVE AS THEY PUSHED THE NIPPONESE SLOWLY BUT STEADILY NORTHWARD.

OVERHEAD AMERICAN PLANES DRONED IN FULL COMMAND OF THE AIR, SUPPORTING THE GROUND FORCES BY BOMBING AND STRAFING ENEMY CONCENTRATIONS AND POSITIONS. NO LONGER WERE THEY HAMPERED IN THEIR USE OF ASLITO AIRFIELD BY NIPPONESE WHO HAD FILTERED IN AT NIGHT FROM NAFUTAN RIDGE TO DAMAGE PLANES OR FIRE AT THEM WHEN THEY TOOK OFF THE FOLLOWING MORNING.

MARINE PATROLS PENETRATING TO THE CENTER OF BURNED-OUT GARAPAN, MARIANAS CAPITAL, FOUND MANY JAPANESE AMBUSHES. HOUSE-TO-HOUSE FIGHTING STILL WAS IN PROGRESS.

AS MARINES AND DOUGHBOYS SCRAMBLED DOWN THE NORTHERN SLOPE OF MT.TAPOTCHAU, DOMINATING HEIGHT AT THE ISLAND'S CENTER, THEY WERE WITHIN SIGHT OF THEIR GOAL. THERE HAS BEEN NO REAL COUNTER-ATTACK FOR THREE DAYS BUT AN ENTRENCHED ENEMY WAS AHEAD, JAMES REPORTED. THERE WERE POSITIONS TO OVERCOME WHICH THE JAPANESE HAD 27 YEARS TO PREPARE.

WOODED SLOPES AND CANE FIELDS STRETCHED TO THE EAST AND WEST, FORMING THE BATTLELINE THAT BISECTED THE ISLAND.. HIDDEN WERE THE MANY ENEMY STRONGPOINTS IN THE ROCKS AND CAVES.

AT THE FAR NORTHERN END OF SAIPAN WERE DEFENSE INSTALLATIONS THAT THE NIPPONESE STARTED BUILDING WHEN THEY TOOK OVER THE MARIANAS IN 1914 IN THE NAME OF THE ALLIES. THEY CONTINUED TO HOLD THEM -- UNDER A PLEDGE NOT TO FORTIFY THEM -- UNDER A LEAGUE OF NATIONS MANDATE

SAIPAN, JUNE 25-(DELAYED)-A DOZEN PBMS, AWKWARD FLYING BOATS, MADE POSSIBLE AMERICAN ACTION LAST WEEK IN THE GREATEST SEA ENGAGEMENT OF THE YEAR.

JUN 29 1944

THEY FLEW THOUSANDS OF MILES TO LOOK DOWN ON THE JAPANESE FLEET AS IT FLED FROM AMERICAN WARSHIPS.

THESE DOZEN PBMS ARE PART OF A NAVAL AIR WING GROUP COMMANDED BY CAPT.CLARENCE O.TAFT. ROUGHLY A WEEK AGO, HE SENT FOUR WEST TO SAIPAN WITH ORDERS TO LAND NEAR THERE AND FOLLOW ORDERS. THEY ALIGHTED ON OPEN SEA WHILE AMERICAN LANDING VESSELS LAY OFF-SHORE AND TROOPS WADED TO THE INVASION BEACHES.

JAPANESE SHELLS OCCASIONALLY LANDED AMONG THEM. THIS SQUADRON, COMMANDED BY LT.CMDR. WILLIAM SCARFINO, FORMERLY OF SACRAMENTO AND CORONADO, CALIF., WAS ORDERED TO COVER A CIRCLE OF SEVERAL HUNDRED MILES IN RADIUS. THIS SEARCH TOOK SOME PLANES WITHIN A FEW HUNDRED MILES OF THE PHILIPPINES, OTHERS TO WHERE THE JAPANESE FLEET WAS ALMOST CERTAIN TO BE.

IT WAS THERE.

THE FIRST TO SEE IT WAS LT.H.F.ARLE, ROUTE FOUR, BEAUMONT, TEXAS. TEN MILES FROM THE PLANE AND 500 MILES FROM SAIPAN, SHIP AFTER SHIP PASSED IN VIEW OF ARLE AND HIS RADIOMAN, G.B.MILLER, BRISTOL, VA.

ARLE KNEW A HUGE AMERICAN FIFTH FLEET WAS WAITING TO KNOW WHERE THESE JAPANESE WERE. AT THAT POINT, MILITARY TRAGEDY STRUCK.

MILLER FRANTICALLY TRIED ONE FREQUENCY, THEN

MULLER FRANTICALLY TRIED ONE FREQUENCY, THEN ANOTHER. NOBODY ANSWERED. ARLE WAS FORCED TO THE HARSH CONCLUSION THAT THE RADIO WOULDN'T WORK BECAUSE OF ROUGH LANDINGS ON THE OPEN SEA.

JUN 29 1944

HE TURNED THE PBM TOWARD SAIPAN. THE PBM IS BUILT FOR ENDURANCE RATHER THAN SPEED AND THE FLIGHT SEEMED AGONIZINGLY SLOW. ARLE GOT IN EARLY THE NEXT MORNING.

BUT THAT TIME LOST GAVE THE JAP FLEET OPPORTUNITY TO PUT NEEDED DISTANCE BETWEEN IT AND THE AMERICANS.

TWENTY-FOUR HOURS LATER, TWO OTHER PILOTS OF THE OVERWORKED SQUADRON--MOST OF THEM HAD EACH FLOWN ABOUT 25 HOURS SINCE THEIR ARRIVAL--HAD THE SAME THRILLING VIEW.

LT.S.E.GORDINIER, FORMERLY OF ESTHERVILLE, IA (HIS WIFE LIVES AT 2530 20TH STREET, ROCK ISLAND, ILL)

JUN 29 1944

FLEW OVER THE JAP FLEET ABOUT 9:30 P.M. THE JAPS FIRST THOUGHT HE WAS ONE OF THE 358 PLANES THEY HAD SENT OUT THAT DAY TO RAID THE AMERICANS AND PROBABLY WERE SHOT DOWN TO THE LAST MAN.

(THE JAPANESE CARRIER PLANE RAID OCCURRED SUNDAY, JUNE 18)

WITH U.S. FORCES ON SAIPAN ISLAND, JUNE 16-(DELAYED)-(AP)-THE PACIFIC WAR MOVED INTO JAPAN'S BACK DOOR WHEN AMERICAN ASSAULT TROOPS FORCED THEIR WAY ASHORE YESTERDAY ON SAIPAN IN THE SOUTHERN MARIANAS ISLAMDS.

FOR THIS IS A JAPANESE ISLAND, WITH JAPANESE DEFENDERS AND WITH FOUR-FIFTHS OF ITS 23,000 CIVILIANS JAPANESE. EVEN ITS CATTLE ARE SOME STRANGE MIXED NIPPON BREED.

FROM THE WESTERN SIDE, WHERE TRANSPORTS DISEMBARKED TROOPS, SAIPAN LOOKS LIKE A CHUNK OF CALIFORNIA -- A 1,500 FOOT MOUNTAIN IN THE CENTER WITH A RIDGE ALONG THE MIDDLE AND TOWNS DOTTING THE BEACHE

I LANDED AT A PIER OFF THE TOWN OF CHARAN-KANOA, 100 YARDS FROM A BURNED AND SHATTERED SUGAR REFINERY. THE TOWN AND ISLAND HAD BEEN UNDER HEAVY AERIAL AND NAVY ATTACK FOR THREE DAYS AND ASSAULT TROOPS HAD BEEN ASHORE SEVEN HOURS.

JUN 29 1944

ON THE BEACH, IN FRONT OF A WRECKED WHISKY PLANT, A BLACK STEER STOOD SO STILLNIT LOOKED LIKE A STATUE, ITS EYES UNBLINKING. A TANK LIGHTER COXSWAIN GAVE THE ANIMAL THE ONCE-OVER AND DECLARED:

"THEY SAY THERE AIN'T NO SUCH THING AS SHELL SHOCK. BUT I BET THATSTEER COULD MAKE THEM CHANGE THEIR MINDS."

MONTEVIDEO, URUGUAY, JUNE 28-(AP)-THE RECALL TO WASHINGTON FOR CONSULTATION OF NORMAN ARMOUR, U.S.AMBASSADOR TO ARGENTINA, HAS AROUSED CONSIDERABLE SPECULATION IN ARGENTINA, ACCORDING TO WORD RECEIVED HERE TODAY.

JUN 29 1944

SOME ARGENTINES ARE SAID TO BELIEVE ARMOUR'S DEPARTURE IS A PRELUDE TO A CONCILIATORY MOVE WHICH WILL LEAD TO RECOGNITION OF THE PRESENT ARGENTINE GOVERNMENT AND TO THE RESUMPTION OF NORMAL DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS.

OTHERS INTERPRETED IT AS AN INDICATION OF A STIFFENING UNITED STATES POLICY.

IN EITHER CASE THERE APPEARED TO BE GENERAL AGREEMENT THAT THE STATE DEPARTMENT HAD REACHED THE CONCLUSION THAT THE PRESENT IMPASSE, WHICH HAS EXISTED FOR NEARLY FOUR MONTHS, MUST BE TERMINATED SOON ONE WAY OR THE OTHER.
